Joanne Shelley Davis reports several significant events. Bob was promoted to production manager of a new emulsion plant built by his company, Rohm & Haas. Jody was elected president of Levittown-Lower Bucks Branch of AAUW and attended two conventions in the spring with more to come. They and the three children spent a week at a lake in the Catskills and another at Kitty Hawk Beach, North Carolina, on the Outer Banks.

Sarah Jane Smyser Naylor is still nursing part time at North Hills Passavant Hospital. She shared nurse-counselor duties at Junior High Camp Fairfield near Ligonier with Barbara McVicker Martin. She and the family vacationed on Allegheny Reservoir and Jack Lake, Ontario, Canada, fishing and boating. Geff's mother retired in October and came to live with them, a welcome addition to the household.

Muriel Spindell Tonkin called instead of writing and it was so nice to talk with her again. Her husband Sam had a difficult year with rather extensive and serious surgery, but, after a long convalescence is doing very well. They spent the winter in Florida and visited in Pittsburgh and Cleveland. This summer they were in Hillsdale, New York. They went to Europe and England this fall for a wedding and hoped to see Charlie Nauert Stohr.

Doris Warner Brown and her family welcomed their first boy, and moved into a new home they built. She went to a lovely luncheon at Judy Linowes' with many Chatham girls in February. She also saw Sally Campbell who came to Washington, D.C.

Sally White Autenreith should win a medal for being the class member writing from the longest distance. I received a post card on September 10 which was mailed August 6 from Lautoka, Fiji! Hal, the children (Jim, Eric, Arch, and Wendy) and Sally left Annapolis November 9, 1968 on a trip in their own 42-foot yawl and hope to return in July 1970. They expect to be out of the Pacific by December and plan to spend some time in Bali and Kenya. It has been quite exciting for them.

I had a good year both in work and play. Pediatrics will never be at a loss for patients, but it is fun. I had my first trip out west when I flew to San Francisco in February to meet John who was at a convention. We saw all the sights and then drove with a friend over Donner Pass in 20 foot snow drifts to Reno and Carson City, Nevada. We spent July at the beach and our place was just missed by the hurricane. Will started first grade and Mindy is in nursery school. (Two car pools and work are for the birds!)

Next year if you can't write, phone me if you can. It's fun to talk and maybe we can hear from everyone. My number is 1-404-355-1598.

PARTICIPATE!

Camp Redwing (Girl Scout Camp Renfrew) was the scene of a small, a thoroughly unplanned Chatham Reunion. I saw Jane Simpson Irvin who was dropping off her daughter, as I was, for a week of camping. She sends her "hellos" to everyone. No new news but greetings from Isabelle Allias, Lois Sherry Schworm and Barbara Maloy Titelman.

Lois Bradley Fegley's husband has been transferred to Pittsburgh from Nassau USSteel and they are happy to be back home in the States. Their third son, Kevin, born in Nassau, will have dual citizenship until he is 18.

Nancy Ford Bunzli also returned to the United States after a year and a half in Spain just a month before the birth of her fifth child. Nancy says it's good to be home.

Dr. Eddy, who spoke at a Chatham luncheon in New Jersey this spring, is still being quoted by Mary Louise Matz Shombert. Mary Louise, who has her oldest child in junior high and youngest in kindergarten, has many plans for the coming year.

Speaking of kindergarten, Rose Spohn kindergarten class will number sixty this year. Rose is active in the PSEA and NEA.

Another teacher and mother of two school-age children is Carolyn Hirschberg Gorman. Althea Hockensmith Lozick received a phone call from Carolyn this August. Carolyn and Ted were returning from a trip to Florida and were weathered in at Cleveland Hopkins Airport on the way home to Virginia. Althea reported a busy year of travel including Brazil, Sao Paulo for Christmas and New Years, and then Bermuda in the spring. Althea also works for Maidenform, Inc. and does volunteer work with kindergarten children screening for perception problems.

Laura Hammer Inglis and husband have moved to Columbus where Bill has joined a group of internists. They hope to stay put for many years to come.

Harriet Rosser sent her news from Rhode Island Clambake and had just recently returned from a Delta Kappa Gamma Society conference of which she is the chapter president. She's also vice president of the local Teacher's Association.

Christine Simmons has finished her "formal" medical training and is now a pediatric hematologist at the New England Medical Center Hospital. She has a special interest in clotting disorders and h been doing research and clinical work in hemophilia and allied diseases. Being a firm believer in relaxation, Chris recently returned from a trip to St. John's in the Virgin Islands with batteries recharged.

Mirian Santisteban Wysocki, M.D., called me from California to report the birth of her daughter. What a thrill. I haven't seen her since graduation. She specializes in gynecology and returned to her practice in two weeks.

Life is settling down for Marilyn Lencer Applebaum who says adjustment to Israel and the Middle East was quite hectic. They're building a home in Zahala, Israel and hope to be settled by December. "Israel teems with tourists . . . I would be delighted to welcome any Chathamites."

Still in love with Paris is Pat Yount Hudson. She's busy developing an English Library in her children's French school. Her telephone number is Mer. 56.50 and she hopes you'll call if in Paris. Pat had just returned from six weeks in the United States.

Mary Anderson Sheehan's husband was made a general partner of Singer, Deane and Scribner last March. The almost first person she saw on her vacation at Hilton Head this summer was Jerry Corba Wilson.

Celebrating their tenth wedding anniversary in April, Barbara Young Hopkins and John returned to their honeymoon spot in Sea Isle, Georgia sans children. They also traveled on to Florida for several days. Summer was spent at poolside with short trips to Lancaster, Pennsylvania, Ocean City, New Jersey, and Ohio.

Lois Potts Adelson and Maryanne Tappich Barnes are still busy in politics. Lois says she labors for lost causes like Eugene McCarthy and anti-A.B.M. Groups. Maryanne is managing a successful local township commissioner's campaign. While south last winter, Maryanne saw Angie Ottino Stahl. In January Maryanne and Bill will be off to big game hunt in Africa.

Barbara Sbatto Freeman and family paid a short visit to Bo Bolger Collett on their way to Boca Raton. John Freeman enjoys his work with Ryan homes in Ohio. Bo had a short trip to Pittsburgh and Sewickley for a family get-together.

Another telephone number to call while in Rome, Italy is that of Johanna Holroyd Piccardo. (834495) Johanna and George were on their way to the United States in September, but says she's more apt to see Chatham-mates in Rome.

A water-logged year was the news from Elsie Gage Balano. Spring vacation in Venice and a summer trip via ship to seven ports of call in the Mediterranean, a trip to the United States spent on the Maine coast, and back to Europe by the North Atlantic route. They will be in Europe two more years. Elsie had tea recently with Alice Jones Winner '51.

Billie Fullenworth Sampson abandoned golf for ceramics in the summer heat of Virginia. Both children are riding in competition now. Last year they spent three weeks touring the Hawaiian Islands. A pre-school trip to Ocean City this summer, and hopes for a return visit to Mexico in February complete the Sampson's itinerary.

Audrey Shanaberger Kellermeyer and family spent the summer months in the Caribbean. Bob received a Rockefeller Grant to do research there and everyone went along for fun. Audrey says she'll never forget the islands' beauty. She sent a picture that was breathtaking.

I had to laugh when I read the note from Jane Miller Sumner who claims camping is not her bag: she prefers matched luggage, et cetera. She, Gardner and the girls spent a few days in Pittsburgh mid-way through a camping-driving trip and saw Marilyn Bickmore Boleky. Jane will keep her oar in this year editing the Richardson Unitarian Church Newsletter.

Many thanks for all the exciting news and good wishes. I can sincerely say it's a thrill to hear from you all. My year will be busy with substitute teaching, chairing Home and Garden Club, being recording secretary for the local parent-teacher group which broke from the national, being a Brownie Leader, and singing alto in the Woodland United Presbyterian Choir. My best to you all.

This year our class celebrated its 13th reunion in the group of four classes, '56 through '59. Mentioning the reunion particularly on their cards and how good it was to be back on campus were Meg Floyd Kaufman, Sue Scott Fenstermaker, Sonya Klein Vernau, Judith Pitasky Markstein, and Carole Meanor Piggford.

No news but best wishes to all the gals came from Carol Schmitt Schug, Betty Knox Jesse, Carol Crissey Hill, Caroline Mapp Cuneo, Peggy Pattison Moore, Barbara DeLaney Brown, Margaret Siviter Emery, Lois Katz Blaufeld, Mary Bailey, Joan Wilkinson Zook and Mary Alice Irwin.

Trudy Margolis Kahn, Shirley Zierer Byers, Patricia Egry Curreri, Christie Walter Rinehart and Joanne Cochran Ellery spent part of the summer traveling through the states with their families.

New homes have occupied the decorating talents of Esther Rothman Greenwald, Barbara Evans Danver, Marilyn Waid Stilley and Joanne Sterling.

Kept busy with their new arrivals are Sally Weise Hall and Joan Weinhold Moes.

Grace Nardulli Regutti and Carl had a grand trip to Mexico City and the Yucatan during the summer, and Marilyn Miles Oliphant and Stephen celebrated their 13th anniversary in San Francisco.

Joanne Hammonds McDonald (Washington, Pa.) and Ann Hawthorne Lewis (Newport News) invite any alumnae passing through to visit them.

Elm Musson Brower and Roger have finally found their island, St. Vincents, where they will spend the month of December.

While in Florida, Nancy Hannon Gordon visited Sally Hall, and Carole Williams spent some times with Mary Jo McKee Groppe in Illinois.

Sunny Koehler Peterson reports that Dick is Prospective Commanding Officer of U.S.S. Bluefish SSN 675, the nuclear powered submarine.

Karl and I are still reliving our grand tour of Greece. Now, with all the children in school and plenty of free time, I must be content to fill my time profitably during the school year. It was nice to hear from those who replied. I hope next year to hear from many more.

Cally reporting:

Although busy working with Head Start and Scouts, Libby Binkon Petrolas found time to help John's campaign for Pittsburgh City Council.

Barbara Asche claims she's "done nothing worthy of note" this past year except to try to learn to swim in the apartment pool. Pat Tanton wouldn't believe it!

After teaching in a diploma school of nursing during the summer, Nancy Galley returned this fall to teaching at the Allegheny County Community College. Pat Kappel Loyd and her children visited Nancy in July.

Pat Gardner Macdonald has been happily wandering to Texas, Florida, Georgia and New York City this summer.

Peggy Burgette Newman and Obie are in the midst of a do-it-yourself kitchen project and also busy with the arrival of their second child. Peggy had a pleasant surprise when Carol Koko Ward called her from Crown Point, Indiana. Carol would welcome classmates who might pass through her rural area.

I, Cally, have been busy moving, teaching 19 delightful fourth-graders, and beginning graduate work at Penn State University.

Jan reporting:

This year much of the news was about our reunion. Those who weren't able to come sent their regrets, and those who did attend had fond memories of a wonderful weekend. After the dinner, our class had a get-together at Pat Tanton Blayden's apartment at Gateway House. Thanks again from our classmates to Pat and Jimmy—their warm hospitality was the highlight of the reunion!

Joan Herman Coleman writes that she had visited Chatham in 1964 and "was shocked at the changes which must be even more dramatic now!" She is busy with PTA, Cancer Care, and substituting occasionally. The Colemans spent a "deliciously lazy summer" with all of the children in camp and hope to take them to Aruba again during Christmas vacation.

Claudette Smith Cooper's children are growing and she is still keeping the home fire's burning with hopes of going back to part-time nursing in a year or two. Ross is now the office and warehouse manager at Crucible Steel.

The most newsworthy event for Carol Moran Russell this year was Bob's transfer to IBM's Group Headquarters in White Plains and their move to the "active and friendly city" of Wilton, Connecticut. Carol has visited with Barbara Sackles Bernstein and Barbara Goodstein Selbst. Our class thanks Carol and Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow for being such efficient secretaries.

This has been a hectic year for Airlin Lee Kim and her family. Jay has been promoted to vice president of Shearson, Hammill on Wall Street. This summer they traveled across country and are now waiting for their new house to be built in Glen Cove, Long Island. The Kims miss the Hawaiian weather but are happy to be back East where so many of their friends live.

Our sympathies go to Bobbie Weitsman Marks on the sudden death of her father. Bobbie now has Steven in second grade, Amy in nursery school, and Jeff still at home to keep her company.

Sandy Whitmyre Young will be teaching again in the Head Start Program. Last year she had the pleasure of working with Hazel Elwood McClure '34. Her new activities are being president of her church's Women's Association and helping out with her son's Cub Pack.

Dede McFarland Wilson moved from St. Davids to Bethesda in June when Bruce was appointed special assistant to the Assistant Attorney General in Washington. The children like their new school and neighborhood and the sight-seeing trips around the city. Dede was "happy to be taken along" on a trip to Las Vegas where Bruce went to speak. After reading the reunion "summary," she couldn't get over the number of children our class has contributed to the population explosion.

Ann Schechter Powell received an award this summer in Steubenville, Ohio for her dissertation on "The Use of Euphemism in the Works of Marquis de Sade." She is an advisor to a local chapter of SDS.

Barbara Sanford enjoyed seeing everyone at the reunion, coming all the way from Dallas! We were sorry to learn of the death of Barbara's father upon her return to Texas this summer. Her mother stayed with her for several weeks and they both enjoyed a week at the Bermuda Inn, a spa in Lancaster, California.

Directing a nursery school program for 3- and 4-year-olds provided a very stimulating but hectic summer for Barbara Sackles Bernstein. She and Tom enjoy working on their home and as Sackles wrote, "there is a lot to do in a 55-year-old house!"

This has been a "nautical" summer for Claire Rubenstein Sachnoff and family, being the proud owners of the R. Clyde I. They cruised up and down the Allegheny River and even camped out twice with the children. The Sachnoffs also spent three weeks in Acapulco last winter and are looking forward to a return visit this year. Claire enjoys coming back to Chatham every Saturday while her two girls take dancing and piano lessons on campus. Wendy, her oldest, also attended the Chatham Day Camp.

Marilyn Steinman Roth is enjoying her work as the librarian at St. Margaret's Memorial Hospital. Her trips this year included one to Conneaut with the children and visits with Ellie Feibush Kimelman and Betty Jo Bergad Greenberger in New York.

No news but greetings from classmates at the reunion come from Pat Martin Kennedy, Betty Ann Maruca Wolke, Betty Lou McCoy Yermack and Phyllis Prinzno McShea.

Claire Sachnoff and I have done shows together before but we both agreed that writing the revue for the Chatham reunion was the most fun. We renewed old friendships at rehearsals and couldn't have had a more appreciative audience—which even included a kiss from Dr. Eddy! Many thanks to Mrs. Swisshelm for being her usual charming and cooperative self. As for me, I'm just as busy as ever with community activities, my only problem being that I can't seem to say "no" to volunteer work. We spent the Christmas holidays in Marco Island, Florida, and the summer around our pool in the backyard, usually being splashed by children of every size and shape! Susan and Louis, who are in competitive swimming, keep us busy driving to practice and meets.

Thank you for all of your interesting letters and dollars for our sagging treasury.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU. GIVE TO THE CENTENNIAL FUND.

Susan reporting:

MAK (Mary-Anne Koening) Pomputius says, "Life could be quiet and easy, but I like it hectic and chaotic per usual!" Bill took his clinical and anatomical specialty boards in the spring, and is working with an ex-Harvard professor and pathologist at Laroche and H. C. Frick Hospitals. Ten-year-old Billy is adding German to his French at the laboratory school of Carlow College, and Mary-Alice has completed her first year of piano at the ripe old age of 3½.

Brenda Hogue has kept Chatham in the family by marrying Charles H. Ganier, nephew of Martha Ganier Garretson, class of 1925. The Ganiers spent their first two weeks cruising in the Caribbean and have settled in Waynesburg.

We are all grateful to Bobbie Hesse Tabachnick and Ellen Clark Bode for helping to balance the female population with the birth this year of sons. This makes Bobbie's third. The Tabachnicks vacationed in Nassau this spring. The Bodes moved to Richmond where Ellen sang the part of Mrs. Darling in a six-week run of Peter Pan (flying and all!).

Judy and Herb Weintraub and their three little ones moved to Evanston, Illinois, this summer. Herb is associate director of the department of anesthesiology at Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. Margaret Cooke Skidmore sounds as if she is going to have a busy fall. Following August in Maine, Margaret continues her duties as a Chatham Alumnae Trustee and, in addition, is scouting for the admissions office in a new program in the Chicago area with Mary Loughran Fell. Being grade chairman at Christopher's school and nursery school board member at Elizabeth's school—on top of moving—should keep her going.

Faith Magdovitz Willis is now a full-time assistant professor at Agnes Scott College in Atlanta. Tom is in his second year of a surgery residence at the Emory University Hospitals. The Willises (Tommy is now one; Sarah, two) found time for a wonderful vacation in Trinidad and Tobago this summer.

Lucy and Ray Gilligan bought an eighty-year-old farmhouse (completely re-done) thirty minutes from Milwaukee and find the clear air, woods and horses a marvelous place for their three girls. Lucy is president of the PTA, on the board of the nursery school, and director of the yearly fashion show for the symphony. On a trip to Pittsburgh, Lucy saw the Hollanders and Marilyn Grady Candler and family.

Anne Glass is up to her neck in the effort to advocate and support community ownership of community mental health services in Philadelphia. She was to be in Boston in early November to present a paper. Anne is finding pre-sixteenth century music a welcome and uniquely sane event in her life at this point.

Ralph and Barbara Eckel Goettler sailed to the West Indies this winter on the Nieuw Amsterdam, returning to work with the Children's Hospital Auxiliary and the Republican Party. Barbara is joined by Bobbie Friedman London, Barbara Kurtz Brody, Arleen Boyda Porter and Nancy Cohen Stein in saying hello to all.

Sandy DeBroff Roth is happily settled in a new house in Youngstown where Ronnie is practicing obstetrics and gynecology. In addition to furnishing the house, Sandy is marking English papers at the high school and is happy to have Ruth Cooper Klodell and Barbara Stein Heumann as neighbors. Sandy also met Athanasia Metro Tioukas who is now living in New Jersey, married to a physician, mother of a little girl and teaching.

Carole (Koepke) and Keith Brown always seem to be into something interesting. This year they both went through sensitivity training with five friends, and Carole is now re-learning to read with a system called ITA, as their eldest hits first grade. The Browns are moving to Bethlehem where Keith will be responsible for a seminary for the laity, family life retreats and studies, college youth and adult education for the First Presbyterian Church. Carole reports that the Youth Ministry of the North Hills has become a permanent arm of the Ministerial Association and they are delighted.

Berenice McGrew Fitzgerald's twins are now three (imagine!). Berenice reports that Jane Patterson called on the way to London for a vacation following her first year as a practicing doctor.

Ann Curry Haux finds life pretty great: George is selling computers, the four girls are smart and beautiful (of course) and she is (at last) back in the old art bag—and for money. Ann is doing commission work in pen and ink but mostly in wood sculpture. They had a lovely seaside vacation and eliminated the old shovel problem by trading the horse for a sports car.

Amy Markus Kellman and Sy moved to Pittsburgh. Amy is taking her column for Grade Teacher with her.

Nancy Levensdorf Recht, who spent a "rather hectic" summer being "parents" to three teenagers, sends regards to all—as does Sue Gordon. Sue came out of "retirement" this year to take a job with a textile importing firm, the benefits of which were several trips to Europe (already).

Ed and Claire Judd Schweringer are looking forward to a trip to Boca Raton, Florida, in November and to our reunion in June.

"No monumental news this year, only the discovery that I've been around for a while," writes Jinny Long Springen, whose "clothes-washer is having old age symptoms," whose oldest daughter doubts her wisdom, and not all her college skirts button easily. Jinny, you're not alone. . . .

Lee and Roger Davidson are leisurely exploring England this fall. Roger had been on a round-the-world buying trip and Lee met him in London. This spring Judy and Phil Laughlin and two daughters, Beth and Ann, visited the Davidson's in Bermuda and had a fine time, from all reports.

Joe and Tela Cohn Zasloff have a lovely little girl, Ann, born in December. I can vouch that she might be the prettiest little thing around since I was lucky enough to visit with them several times. Joe worked for the Rand Corporation in Washington again this summer, and Tela—with full security clearance and all—helped Joe with his work on the Viet Cong.

Andrea Lopen Jolles is working for the Interracial Council for Business Opportunity and just returned from a business trip to Chicago. Andrea and Ira enjoyed several exotic trips this year. I am still going strong with my civil rights activities, concentrating this season on the problems of Charles Evers and his colleagues in Mississippi.

Kay reporting:

Seems that the two big categories for most replies this year are "travel" and "job changes."

In May, Joan Shultz Shively flew to Pennsylvania with her two children to spend a week with parents before she and Jon went to Europe for three weeks. Joan attended a symposium of the United Nations International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna. Since their return to California, they've made the most of that state's many attractions. Joanie wishes us "Love, Peace and all those groovy things."

Traveling around the midwest with and without their two children is a pastime of Todd and Morissa Bernstein Lundy. They should get together with Lanie Souza Matthews, who must be an agent for the Arkansas Tourist Bureau. She has camped and/or fished nearly every creek and river in the state with Bill and daughter Leslie this past year. Says the Ozarks are beautiful. Lanie is teaching fourth grade since Leslie began school last September.

Jane Sanford threatens resorting to fiction to liven up her card which this year could only report a visit to the Virgin Islands (highly recommended) and Puerto Rico (somewhat disappointing).

Bette Nadel Balk and Phil traveled to Israel and Greece this past year.

A late note from Anita Gessler Hecht was written enthusiastically just after her return from South America. She'd visited Ecuador, Peru and Brazil, where she saw her grandparents in Rio.

Jane Patterson was off for a five-week vacation-cum-conference in England. She's been on the staff at Kaiser Hospital for the past year, and finds it an ideal combination of group practice and teaching in the resident program. But some nights in Delivery, she wonders if ANYBODY is taking The PILL!

After her vacation this year (she finally saw the Pacific Ocean), Joan Munroe moved to the Pathology Department at Wisconsin to learn electron microscopy and to begin a project which will continue in Indianapolis. Many of us have seen the Pacific, Joan, but those microbes . . .

After Paul Arnold completed his graduate work in December, he accepted a job as trust officer for a New Haven bank. He and Anne (Turner) bought a Travel-master trailer and have camped in seven states. In August, they took along a twelve-year-old underprivileged boy from Pittsburgh. Their son David has brought a new dimension to the "terrible two"—thanks to him they're on a first name basis with Emergency personnel at Yale New Haven Hospital. From India ink drawings and wood engravings she has done of the Chatham campus, Anne has created very attractive note paper. A plastic-wrapped package containing 10 prints (6¼" x 3½") and 10 envelopes sells for $1.25, and can be ordered directly from Anne.

The Schweigers (Dottie Schall) have also gone north. Jim was made a junior partner in the CPA firm of Main, Lafrentz and Company and has moved to their Boston office.

Sampling the sometimes questionable joys of home ownership for the first time, Audrey Rosen Sandson and Gerald are back in Pittsburgh after two years with the National Institute of Mental Health in Washington.

Though still in Washington, Gayle Thomas Harris spends a lot of time with her two-year-old in the world of Winnie-the Pooh et al. She's still at the same job, except that it included a five-week detail at the White House this spring. Impression of the crew there is completely Democratic.

Yseult "Easy" Snepvangers has abandoned her job in publishing in favor of graduate credits in education. She hopes to teach kindergarten, and is happy to be going back to school.

One classmate into teaching—one out. Anne McChesney Smith Wright is enjoying her newly freed time and looking forward to a mid-March departure for Germany, since Gene has received a Humboldt grant from the German government.

Claire Tober Sullivan received her master's in social work from the University of Pennsylvania and was married in the Germantown Unitarian Church in May. Her husband is a psychiatric social worker with the Veterans' Administration in Philadelphia.

After her wedding in October and a vacation in St. Croix in April, Gail Peters Fox is back to teaching third grade in Fairfax County, Virginia at a school which is trying programs for individualized teaching and other innovations.

Anne Weiner Mates and her new husband are both busy with their jobs, he as a salesman and Anne as an employment counselor.

You've heard the psychology which has a dieter attach a photo of a shapely person to the refrigerator door? Your reporter is considering clipping some of your cards to her engagement calendar! Like Charlotte Todd DeLuca, Glenda Rich DeBroff, and Debby Rothman Phillips:

With children aged 8, 6, 4, and 2, Charlotte teaches full time in Aliquippa, is almost half way to her master's in education, and is active in the local AAUW. Her husband Matt is a cost analyst for Jones and Laughlin.

Glenda has received a scholarship at Pitt's Graduate School for Library and Information Sciences and should get her master's in June. She's a "story lady" and elected secretary for the board at the Irene Kaufmann Center and Fall Flower Show chairman. The DeBroffs had a "fantastic" three-week trip to Switzerland, Austria and Italy.

Debby enjoys life with an energetic three-year-old in Princeton. She is opening a Center for Behavior Therapy with a psychiatrist. Along with an exciting private practice, Debby does training and supervision of psychologists and psychiatrists at the School of Psychiatry at Temple University.

Before daughter Lecia's arrival, Marcia Rubinoff Rosenthal did some free lance public relations work—including a Bridal Fair for KQV Radio, Pittsburgh.

In addition to news of Alexa Mary's birth, Carole Smith Petro writes that a friend of hers saw Ann Curry Haux with her paintings at an art show in Skaneateles and found them the best in the show. Carole has run into Jean Mullen O'Neill, whom you remember from our freshman year.

Our sympathy to Ellen Snodgrass Owens, whose father passed away in April. It's been a strange year of the giving of life and the passing of life for "Jeep," whose son Reed was born in February.

Dibbie Spurr Holloway's card was unique. She finds encountering armored cars, personnel carriers and tanks on a walk to the Post Office quite awesome. Despite the ugly situation in York, Dibbie's life continues much as usual.

Quick greetings from: Ruth Pincus Gujarrati with announcement of the birth of her daughter; Laddie Lochner Krutten with fond memories of a vacation on the northeast coast; Donna Vignevic Painter with plans to return to teaching in a private nursery school; Barbara Stone Hollander with a new address and a position on the board of the League of Women Voters of Mt. Lebanon; your reporter with a fervent plea for more replies next year!

Ginger reporting:

Linda Clinton Eaton's three little girls are thriving in the country air. Periodic visits from Vicki Hartung provide gentle relief from the usual routine.

Keeping busy with new homes and new babies are Maxine Basson Vasquez, Susan Berg Veit, Carol Black Radack and Joan Schafer Tatum.

Susan Baird Blake and family have moved to Pittsburgh where David is on the faculty of the Graduate School of Business at Pitt.

Nanci Bennett Thieme hoped to get back to South America for several weeks when Al was there on business in the fall. Nanci keeps busy with her activities in the Democratic Party and League of Women Voters when Al is away on these long trips.

With the children in school and her husband entering law school at night, Sally Clarke Veil hopes to put her new-found time to good use on the many projects she has been wanting to do all these years. Fred was recently promoted to manager of industrial relations at the Sinclair-Koppers Kobuta plant. Sally has seen Betsy Whitaker several times. She is in social work at Pittsburgh's Presbyterian-University Hospital.

With time out for freezing, canning and gardening, Wendy Barton Christner has gone back to working part time. The Christners all took a camping trip this summer and now Wendy is looking forward to the short vacation she and Dick are taking alone.

Faith Buchner is enjoying her new apartment near Philadelphia's Art Museum. She sees Helen Hirsch Bostock and Ethel Woelfel Fiderer frequently, having recently spent a weekend with them at Faith's parents' farm.

Barbara Bunker Faughnan sees Debbie Phillips, '60, often since their husbands work in the same group at the RCA labs.

With a new baby in the house, Dottie Christman Lilja has curtailed her activities to just taking care of children and her League of Women Voters activities.

I had a long, long letter from Carol Jo Bullen telling me all about life in Japan and her work with "Up With People." In the past year Carol Jo has had the opportunity to travel to the Philippines, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Korea. She was back in the United States in June to attend her sister's wedding and attend a conference. Despite Japanese being a difficult language, Carol Jo is beginning to be able to understand, speak and write it. She hopes she will see some Chathamites at "Expo '70" in Osaka.

The past year has been a hectic and fast one. I am still working at the Institute of International Education, administering Ford Foundation Fellowships for Foreign students. Allan and I had a terrific ten-day rest this summer at North Carolina's Outer Banks. We heartily recommend the area for anyone who just wants to lie in the sun, read, sleep and rejuvenate.

Barbara De Angelis Helmsstadter gets into New York City quite often and has gotten together with Judy Mitchell. Barbara's husband Dan has a new position with Random House where he is in charge of college sales.

Barbara reporting:

Among those members of our class who moved this year are the Sphons (Judy Halko). Dick was transferred and they now live in Kentucky. Their third daughter, Jennifer, was born at just the right moment, according to Judy. She just missed one hockey game. Rene Georgian Boulis and her family have moved to New Jersey where Matt has gone into practice with two other pediatricians. The Libbings (Jane Hardimon) have moved into a new house in Plymouth. Actually, Jane says it is an older house with a huge yard close to the center of town and they are looking forward to spending time fixing it up. Jane's husband Fred has been a negotiator for the local teachers group, and Jane reports that she has given up her phone, living and dining rooms to be headquarters. In addition to being answering service, Jane also participates in a cooperative nursery school which she and several of her friends have organized. Joan Karakitsos Vasiliades has also organized a cooperative play-school with her neighbors for her daughter, Eleni, who is 2. William, now 4, is in school full time. The Vasiliades spent two weeks this summer cruising the Caribbean with their two children.

Lisa Elers McCaren is keeping busy with her new daughter Kathryn. The McCarens will be in West Virginia next year when they attend government school there and Lisa is looking forward to seeing many old friends in this area. Judy Hallock Silver is also a new mother this year when they adopted David Walter, born August 16th, a brother to Kimberly who is now two. Judy's husband Dave has been promoted to manager of procurement for IBM in Kingston. It is a 45-minute trip from Poughkeepsie but they have no plans to move at this time.

Marcia Hammond Deem was the assistant director at a day camp in Oakmont this summer and her two oldest children were able to go to camp there at the same time. In addition, Marcia received a scholarship from her church, where she directs the 5th-grade choir, to attend a music workshop in Jumonville. Marcia says that she came back with a pair of finger cymbals to keep her autoharp company. Marcia sang the role of the mother in "Amahl and the Night Visitors" in a production which her church put on last Christmas.

Harriet Gray is in her second year of post-doctoral work in the physiology department at the University of Miami. She says that she is keeping very busy and hopes to be able to do some college teaching in the future. Julie Helgesen Keiluhn is returning to school to work on her master's in art. Julie is also teaching art at three elementary schools in Providence. Their son Jon is two now, getting big and very lively. Katie Kerrigan Miller is also a student these days and is looking forward to graduating with her Master of Education from Indiana in January. It will be a family occasion as her mother will be completing her B.A. at the same time. Katie is also still teaching biology in the Rockwood Area Schools. This summer Katie, Sealy and their daughter Frannie took a trip west with her parents and they were able to see the Golden Spike Memorial at Promontory Point, Utah. The Millers also visited Fran Dunlap Marciano and her husband in Rochester.

Vicki Hartung is alive, well and living in Pittsburgh. Its hockey season again and weekends usually find Vicki up on the field behind the gym playing hockey with the Pittsburgh Field Hockey Association. Vicki also took up skiing this winter and mastered the snowplow and snowplow turns quite successfully. Vicki's car tried it, too, this spring when it went down the ski slope at Laurel Mountain with less satisfying results. (Anyone need spare parts from a 1966 Rambler station wagon??) During the last days of her vacation, Vicki marched in the Black Coalition Demonstrations in Pittsburgh with Jim and me. We were all lucky enough not to be arrested or hurt, and it was an eye-opening experience into the processes of the preservation of law and order in Pittsburgh. My husband Jim is finishing his doctorate at Carnegie-Mellon this fall and we are looking forward to moving some time in the near future. We are planning a combined interviewing and skiing trip west at Christmas time.

Lila reporting:

Connie Merlino Tamburo and Vince have become active in the Pittsburgh Opera Guild. Connie invites all to visit the "Operatunity Shop" in Oakland any Wednesday—all proceeds go to the Pittsburgh Opera.

Karen Leyonmark Geary's little Leslie is enjoying the attention of the "older men," the six-year-olds, on the block and her parents are experiencing the "pleasures and pains" of home ownership. A business trip to San Francisco prompted Karen to write, "San Francisco was everything I had ever heard it to be and more!" I can only agree.

Elaine Kessler Rubin writes that Phil is busy getting his new dental office in Beverly Hills ready. She lunches with Jeannette Mikkelsen Lamar frequently, as she works in Beverly Hills. Elaine says she spends most of her day chasing fifteen-months-old Jill!

Heather Muir Meacham reports that it was 104 degrees in Oklahoma this summer when John took his orals. Thankfully, all went well and John is now Dr. Meacham!

Jo Mitchell Soltman is now "installed in suburbia," but the apple and cherry trees have brought out the "farmerette" in her and their cupboards are filled with homemade jellies and apple sauce. She and Herb enjoy the "all too infrequent visits" of Terri Abrams Zions and her family when they visit Pittsburgh. Jo still corresponds with classmate Sue Vernon Leinwand, who is now living in Cambridge, Massachusetts after four years in Puerto Rico. She looked forward to spending an evening with Pat Sinn Bloomgarden in New York this fall.

Arleen Koegler spent a second, fascinating, hot, and dusty season with the Carnegie Museum at the Tel Ashdod (Israel) dig. She is now back at the University of Hawaii completing her master's in education.

Kathleen Otto McDowell had just returned from a fantastic month-long camping trip up into Canada and the Maritime Provinces. Included on the trip were their dog, the baby, and two inexperienced adult campers. She still maintains that "we're ready again, anytime!"

In October Mary Loughran Fell spent several days at Chatham for a special training seminar to prepare for extensive alumnae work with prospective students. She enjoyed a relaxing week with Zoe Warwick Sherman in Pittsburgh in May, then had a hilarious time when Vicki Hartung spent a week with the Fells in August. She comments that "Vicki is still the same zany character!" Mary is up to her ears with League of Women's Voters work and has been appointed to the executive council of the Jewish United Fund of Chicago.

Julie Loubris Hanson is still living in Philadelphia, but thinks that she will be returning to Pittsburgh after John finishes his dissertation. She continues to enjoy her child welfare work.

Nothing much has changed in the lives of Dottie Mar Villers, Lynn Leister Rojahn, Ann Kleinschmidt Newlin and Rhoda Yarnus. They all, however, send their regards.

Yours truly is still teaching and loving it more each year. After my work day ends I play golf with Bob till dark, experiment with new recipes, and enjoy tasting new wines with each meal. Bob has recently accumulated a great wine collection. I share his enthusiasm about wines, but unfortunately not his fine palate. I spent a great afternoon this summer with Sue Berg Viet at their new home in Oakland. She's become quite a doting mother. A highlight of my year was a visit by Sally McGuigan Dauer. I spent an entire day giving her a grand tour of the San Francisco Bay area. Our husbands joined us later for a great evening in the city. Sally told me that Judy Malmquist Banz had joined the ranks of motherhood this past year. Thanks for all of your responses. I hope to hear from more of you next year!

Terri reporting:

Two advanced degrees indicate that our classmates are still furthering their education. Penny Ulman Schwartz received a master of arts degree in romance languages in June, 1968 from Johns Hopkins University, and Carole Sprinchorn Colter received her masters' in education in the special field of instructional media—library science from the University of Florida in June, 1969. Penny and Michael are busily decorating a new apartment but had time for a reunion with Carol Black Radack and Dave after the Radack's two-year stay in Hawaii. The Colters spent this summer in the Bridger National Forest in Wyoming where Bill had a job as a civil engineer. By now they are settled in California where Bill has an Automotive Safety Foundation Fellowship to study transportation engineering at the University of California.

Sara Westlake Delmar and Ken announced the arrival of Shawn, making the third Delmar under two years old! That kind of performance deserves recognition! Of course, having twins Shea and Shari helped up their total! Nevertheless, when Ken is not teaching music at night at Drexel or playing band jobs on weekends, or being sales manager for Crystal-X Corporation, the Delmars find time to retreat en masse to their 200-year-old farmhouse in the country where, for relaxation, they garden, care for seven ponies and swim. Ken had a hand in the moon landing, since he sold the plastic bags to NASA which went to the moon to bring the samples back! Sara is on the board of directors of the local library, she sews, does decoupage for fun, and goes antiquing when she can.

Several alumnae of the class of '62 have continued to work in their chosen fields. Mildred Stewart McGough keeps her secretarial skills "practiced" by taking some Kelly Girl assignments. Mildred and Cooke took time from being new homeowners to vacation in Ottawa in early May. To round out her schedule of decorating and gardening, Mildred worked as a volunteer at St. Margaret's Hospital and Kingsley House. Judy Schenk Eley retired from her fascinating assignments as a Tele

Sec "temporary" (including one in a monastic) to type husband John's dissertation. Midway through the typing task, daughter Karen entered the Eley's lives. John, Judy and Karen are now in Bowling Green, Kentucky where John is assistant professor of government at Western Kentucky University. Amy Parker Doty "escapes" (he word) from her three adorable children to the lab one day a week. She is doing medical research at the University of Rochester Medical Center. Dick and Amy are also working with the junior high youth group at their church—a rewarding but time-consuming labor of love! O Ellen Schreiber McBride's two days of each week from mothering and housewifing, she does freelance photo research in Manhattan. Dick McBride has a new job this year as manager of employee benefits with Walter Kidde Company. Zoe Warwick Sherman filled an entire card with her activities. She has continued with substitute teaching and also teaches small classes in oil painting and seasonal decorating. She is making Christmas decorations to sell, doing commission paintings, and active in hospital auxiliary work. Zoe reports several reunions with classmates. Mary Loughran Fell and daughter Kary spent "a virtually sleepless, talk-filled week" with Zoe, Peter and three-year-old Chris. Zoe has also seen Vicki Hartung and Nancy Galarde Taylor. Zoe extends a welcome mat to all at Sherman's A-frame cottage on Deep Creek Lake in Maryland. Summer weekends and some weeks are spent there water-skiing and "soaking up the RAIN!"

MONEY DOESN'T GROW ON TREES. GIVE TO THE CENTENNIAL FUND.

Nancy Stein Elman is still teaching at the University of Pittsburgh, and Mary is now sole proprietor of Elman Associates (real estate and insurance). The Elmans have been to California and Canada this summer which Nancy calls "traveling a little." particularly liked the way life becomes (with hope) for all of us; she says, "Somehow this seems to be a 'life goes on' stage—steady but good."

Gail Payne Bryan is having a "Dream Come True Year." She and Craig, plus Craigie, Laura and David, have been building their dream house on 30 acres of land with an acre lake! Even choosing cabinets, tile, etc. is exciting and the project was to be finished by November. While the house has been in progress, the Bryans have taken trips to Daytona for the auto races and to Virginia Beach to visit friends.

Having children in school produce mixed emotions for two classmates. Susan Sohnlein Harsh says having Mike in first grade makes her feel old, while Gretchen Wright Gantzer has the opposite reaction with Amy in first grade. Sue and Dor Harsh have continued to fill their trophy case from rallies. Gretchen and Jack have moved from Syracuse to The Ocean (Rhode Island) where Jack will be the manager of market analysis for Leasona Corporation. The Gantzers planned to sandwich a week of vacationing in Maine in the midst of their move.

Alice Carson Scott had a short visit with Sue Sohnlein Harsh, talking over old times while three-year-old David Scott entertained three-year-old Lisa Harsh.

Marshall and Linda Ruttenberg Ackerman are soaking up the intellectual and cultural environment on the East Coast now that Marshall has begun private practice in orthopedic surgery in Washington, D.C. Barbara Rogers Agosin is now senior reference librarian at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Barbara's husband, Manuel Agosin, is an economist with the United Nations.

Another New Yorker, Pat Sinn Bloomgarten, is not only still writing, painting and refurbishing old furniture, but is also a vice president of P.T.A. (Jimmy is now 7½) and does public relations for the National Council of Jewish Women. Barry and Pat took a spring-time trip to Hawaii and hope to return again soon!

Gail Siegrist Naftel writes that their neighbors can no longer call the Naftel residence the "Wightman Street Eyesore" since they have now remodeled and painted their house. Jim's job keeps him away from home lately, but the Naftels got to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands last summer and visited the Rojahn's (Lynn Leister Rojahn). This year, Florida is their vacation spot.

Ethel Woefel Fiderer is now in Philadelphia where Gerald teaches at Temple University. Their "silly" daughter Tanya's favorite playmate, according to Ethel, is Faith Buchner. The Fiderers also see Anne Glass and Karen Batt.

After teaching in Bedford, New York for the past four years, Alice Yankura decided to stop procrastinating and go back to school. She is at Wichita State University on an EPDA fellowship. By June 1970 she should have a master's degree in history. Part of the summer program was a three-week tour of Europe. This was Alice's second visit—she toured on her own for seven weeks three years ago.

After a two-week vacation in New Jersey, I (Terri Abrams Zions) was gratified to come home to a mailbox full of replies from my section of the class. Despite Mrs. Swisshelm's apology in the Recorder last fall, I was afraid my correspondents would think I had forgotten them! This year, I was pleased to be asked to take over the presidency of the Chatham Alumnae Group in the Buffalo area, yet another way of keeping in touch with Chatham. We, too, have a first-grader in our family. David is nearly six, but Michael, 4, and Becca, 16 months, keep me busy enough so that I feel neither "young" or "old"—just pooped! In the past year, we have traveled to Florida, New York and Pittsburgh where we spent a delightful hour touring the new "mansion" of Herb and Jo Mitchell Solman. Stan and I have become regulars at the turned-off Niagara Falls, and we are close enough to Toronto to drive up for the day. The University atmosphere (Stan is associate professor at the School of Management at the State University of New York at Buffalo) is stimulating and exciting and we are always involved in something! Until next year...

Carolyn reporting:

It seems like everyone is on the go! For most, this year has been one of moving or traveling and, as always, seeing other classmates. Among those pulling up stakes is Harriet Bass Little. She and Tim have reluctantly bid farewell to Vermont (only temporarily, they hope) and have bought a house near Rochester, New York where Tim begins work this fall on his Ph.D. in history at the University. Harriet writes that on one of their trips back to Marlboro College she was pleasantly surprised to discover Nancy Moore Orlando and family— and snowed in (in 5 feet) at that!

The summer was also moving time for Dorothy Cohn Porper who left Pittsburgh for New York where Bob is doing an oral surgery residency at Jacobi Hospital.

After putting all her belongings in storage, Grace Emly spent September in California—most likely a well-deserved vacation—after receiving her master's degree in experimental psychology at Western Michigan University. For the moment Grace's plans for a job and location were indefinite.

Carole Dela Motte is at a new address, too—she has moved to a new apartment where she says at last there is room for her piano. The events of the past year have been very important ones for her—she received her Ph.D. in clinical psychology and has received a joint appointment as senior instructor in the School of Medicine, Case Western Reserve University and staff psychologist at the University Hospitals in Cleveland. She adds that it is a newly created position, and she is excited about being free to develop it according to her own interests. Congratulations Carole!

Then there were those who spent the summer months traveling. Another year of teaching at Friends Seminary in New York City and working toward her master's in education, Nancy Beal treated herself to a Spanish holiday on the Costa del Sol.

Barbara Caplan spent her second summer in Israel living in the resort town of Natanya and studying Hebrew at a school designed for intensive language study. Barb writes, "The spirit of Israel is quite infectious—a beautiful place to live."

Suzanne Clewell is beginning her second year of teaching in Frankfurt. She is still as in love with Germany as ever and between excursions to quaint towns and a summer visit to Scandanavia, Suzanne still finds time to take an evening course at the University and give aid to several German student teachers. She is looking forward to seeing Bruce and Marcia Mann Butler during their stay in Frankfurt where Bruce will be involved in international law.

Every best wish to Colette Duerre Labanas! On hand for the wedding was Linda Nevin who flew to Athens especially for the occasion. Colette and Demetri, who is president of Teleflex Corporation, plan to make Athens their permanent home and graciously extend an invitation to anyone passing through.

For Dorothy Fulton Evans this has been a year for visiting with former classmates. On a trip to the West Coast, Dottie stopped in Denver to visit briefly with Karen Blomquist Struckman and has seen Martha Richards Cummings several times. Dottie writes that Rob is working full time now toward completing his master's at the Graduate School of Special Education at Pitt. And Dottie has been working full time with rehabilitation of the mentally retarded, while still finding time to play a vital role in community organizations.

Joan Bailey notes that although she is married to Charles Sawyer, she is still using her maiden name professionally. She is teaching and completing her thesis in philosophy. Her husband is a professor of natural science and philosophy, and a photographer. They camped around Northeast U.S.A. and Canada during the summer.

As always, it was good to have news from some of our associate members. A long and delightful letter came from Catharine Barley Paiste who writes that while last year was a "joining and doing" year for her, she has decided this will be a "dropping out and relaxing" one. Having a job and an increasingly active preschooler is quite enough, says she. Kitty also mentioned that she sees much of Mark and Grace Wilson Sundelin and their son Andrew.

Kathleen Coyle Guenther had a visit last spring from Garland Mackroth. Kathy, George, and their three boys plan to move to Washington, D.C., soon as a result of George's appointment to the Department of Labor.

Karen Elliott sent a brief note to say "hello" and pass along her new address.

As for the Wards, this past year has not been without our share of moving vans and super highways either. We have happily returned to civilian life and four months earlier than originally expected! With only four weeks notice we hurriedly packed our belongings, bid farewell to the Coast Guard and Governors Island, and set out in September for "home" (Pittsburgh) where Dave began work with a law firm. At this writing our new house in Upper St. Clair is nearing completion, and we are delighted at the prospect of living only a few streets away from Doris and Sally TerBush Drescher. Our most important news of the year came last fall with the arrival of our first-born. We (as all parents) think our little Katharine is something very precious, indeed, and find each day holds something very special for all of us as she discovers the world around her.

Many thanks to all who replied and best wishes for the year ahead.

Linda reporting:

It's always such fun to hear from Chathamites and after five years many still try to keep in touch. Julie Givner Reppenhagen is now "landed gentry" with her five acres in rural Connecticut and it is quite a wonderful change from bustling Long Island. She remains active on the board of the Junior League and in Girl Scouts and hopes to substitute if she can find a sitter for two-year-old Kristin. She would love to hear a familiar voice or see a familiar face, so anybody in the Danbury area give her a call. She enjoyed a visit with Nancy Munson McCormack and her family for Labor Day.

Battling the soaring Arizona temperatures this summer was Millie Grossman Zacher. General Electric sent the Zacher family, including dog, to Phoenix where Jules trained for his new job as a computer specialist. They were impressed with the beautiful mesa country and enjoyed trips to the Grand Canyon, Lake Mead and Las Vegas, where the blinking lights fascinated two-year-old Jill. Back in Philadelphia, she "clings" to Phyllis Fox Catas as everyone moves away. A new neighbor will be Janet Keissling Boese who returns after an exciting year in Paris. Dave and Pat Prycl Klahr visited last spring and they celebrated the Klahrs' 5th anniversary in a little restaurant in the Latin Quarter. They hope that by the 25th, they can afford Maxim's!

A cheery note from Wendy Haskel finds her still working as a psychiatric social worker outside of Boston. No mention of skiing this year—after her broken leg! Another social worker, Judi Krasner Barabaro, is doing group and individual therapy for institutionalized delinquent girls while George, a psychologist, completes his internship counseling the mentally retarded.

Keeping busy with new babies and enjoying their domesticity are Ruth Ibbotson Connell, Claudia Grogan Brenneisen and Margie Frye Wilcox. Merle Gotthelf Fishman writes of her marriage to a Baltimore attorney.

Still bravely weathering the hurricanes is Mary MacConnell Ferry, who periodically packs up and moves to "higher ground" with hopes of having a house to return to. Luckily, Camille didn't hit New Orleans with full gusto and she only lost a few tree limbs and the back yard fence. Having finished her third year of teaching, she is now concentrating her energies on decorating her new home.

After a year in Detroit, Marian Friedman Siegal is happy to be back in the Boston area. Bill is an instructor at Tufts Dental School and is in an association with another dentist. Hopefully, he would like to open his own practice next year. Needless to say, the highlights of the Siegals' year was the arrival of Adam. She would like visitors in the Boston area to stop in. Another Bostonian, Elizabeth Fellows Klemm reports that she is delighted with her two boys; the eldest, Ted, goes to nursery school. Skip has changed jobs and is with a new Boston company called Audiovision. Beth went to an Alumnae Club meeting last fall and saw Marty Fay Africa and Grace Wilson Sundelin.

Congratulations to Sue Johnson who recently wrote and developed an American government course for high school freshmen. The course is serving as a model for several other school districts in New Jersey.

Janie Hanman Perrin was overjoyed when she wrote, as Ron was returning from overseas duty in Korea. "It was a long hard year of separation," Janie reports, but she kept busy with substituting and working for various community organizations. Leslie, her eldest, is 7. It hardly seems possible! Ron has taken a three-year residency in radiology at Montifore Hospital. Once the Perrins are settled in a normal routine, Janie hopes to teach part time and do some graduate work.

A note from Lucille Hillman: "After many years of happy silence, I must step forth and announce that I am on Chatham's payroll. My position is a year-and-a-half old—Director of the Alumnae Fund. In other words, I'm raising money for Chatham for the Centennial Fund. Spent an enjoyable week in Montego Bay, Jamaica with Becky Rife, plus I have enjoyed seeing numerous classmates on my travels for the College. For those of you who can, stop in and see me in my old room in Beatty Hall—it's now my office. We'll chat and take a tour. You won't believe how Chatham has changed (for the better) since we were here!"

The Bardonners are equally delighted with the completion of their military tour and bid farewell to the enchanting South West. John opened an office in general dentistry in Allison Park, sort of a family affair—his sister is his hygienist. I am equally busy with my two little girls, Courtney and Nicole, and enthusiastically look forward to spring when we build our new home.

Marty reporting:

In a brief note from Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson she wrote that she and her husband Bruce had accepted a team offer to direct the music program at Westminster Presbyterian Church in Lincoln, Nebraska beginning September 15. They will be working with 300 people in 5 choirs.

From Marcia Mann Butler's father we learned that Marcia and her husband are living in Europe where Bruce is specializing in international law.

Maghera, North Ireland was the summer home of Nancy McBride French, her husband Don and their daughter Amy. Don was participating in a ten-week exchange pastorate program. While there, the Frenchs enjoyed a month-long, 2500 mile trip around England and Scotland in an Austin Mini.

"I am finding motherhood keeps me busier than any job ever did," wrote Mary Ann McCormack Tucker. We send congratulations and best wishes to Mary Ann and her husband Jay on the arrival of James Linden Tucker III.

Nancy Munson McCormack has been busy with her two daughters, Erin and Shannon. The McCormacks again participated in the Fresh Air Fund Child program by having a seven-year-old Puerto Rican girl with them for the summer. Nancy has also been in touch with several other Chathamites including Julie Givner Reppenbagen, Marty Faye Africa, and Barbara Caplan.

Just as associate class member Marjorie Murdoch Bass and her family were beginning to settle into their new home in Delaware, Ohio, P.P.G., husband George's firm, transferred them back to Pittsburgh where they had to get settled all over again. Marjorie's twin daughters, Betsy and Cathy, started kindergarten in the fall. Her one-year-old son Charlie keeps her busy at home.

We send best wishes to Susan Offill Killgallon on her marriage. Her husband William is the director of the Ohio Art Toy Company. The Killgallons moved to Bryan, Ohio in September.

This past January found Angela Patrizio Smith and her husband Wally on vacation in Florida. Another trip took them to Bear Lake in Canada for a three week stay during the summer. Angela has taken a year's leave from teaching but plans to continue tutoring and to do some substitute teaching.

Nancy Pierson Tolley and her husband John resigned their respective positions in April and then embarked on a trip around the world which included a camping trip across the United States and visits to Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia, Bali, Singapore, Thailand, India, Ethiopia, Kenya, Egypt and England. The Tolleys are now settled in England where John is continuing his master's studies at the University of London. Visitors will be welcome!

We send best wishes to associate class member Bonnie Podolsky Theiner and her husband Micha on the birth of their son Immanuel Hai. Bonnie is an instructor at the College of Jewish Studies on a part time basis and Micha is an assistant professor of biochemistry at the University of Pittsburgh School of Dental Medicine.

Two hundred inches of snow last winter was part of the news from Suanne Pollack Singer. Suanne and her husband are stationed in Michigan's Upper Peninsula where Howard is an Air Force doctor. Suanne's son Eric started kindergarten in September while Andy is a "rough and tumble" two-and-a-half.

Patricia Prycl Klabr and her husband David are back in Pittsburgh where David is an associate professor at Carnegie-Mellon University and Pat is attending the Graduate Library School of the University of Pittsburgh.

After their graduation from the American Institute for Foreign Trade, Tracy Quarry Gill and her husband David vacationed for a month in Mexico and Hawaii and then moved to Lima, Peru where David is working as an investment analyst for the ADELA Investment Company. Tracy is studying Spanish so that she can begin working in the barriadas of Lima.

Working for the Welfare Department of the District of Columbia as a social worker has been keeping Becky Rife busy. Becky wrote that she was in Europe last spring and returned in the summer for a two-week vacation in the British Isles.

Robb and I (Marty Richards Cummings) are now living in Cleveland where Robb is continuing his residency program in obstetrics and gynecology at University Hospitals. I am working at Cleveland Clinic as a credit interviewer. I enjoyed seeing Chathamites Dottie Evans Fulton and Carole Dela Motte during the summer.

Nancy reporting:

This seems to be the year for the Class of 1964 to contribute to the population explosion. New babies filled the news of so many returns! JoAnn Rymer Lightcap spent an eventful year starting with Ann's arrival and the purchase of an old house in Latrobe. They have since completed the "face-lifting operation" and JoAnn finds that the baby, the house and two dogs keep her too busy to miss teaching at all. Janet Saperstein Slifkin reports that they have moved to a new and wonderful apartment with a backyard to make room for Joshua. Barbara Silverman Freed, Alan and son Mark are settled in their new home where Barbie is enjoying being a suburban housewife and mother.

Natalie Selkovits Lustig has received her master's in library science from the University of Pittsburgh. Congratulations, Natalie. Congratulations, too to Linda Weinberg Rosenzweig who finished her M.A. in history at Carnegie-Mellon. Linda spent an interesting year at Chatham working in the education department. During the first semester she observed student teachers in the elementary program and then, during second semester, she taught the course on the teaching of math and science in the elementary school. Linda was delighted with the opportunity "teach" at Chatham.

Linda Simmons Bacon was finally able to join her globe-hopping husband for a four-week trip to Australia, Southeast Asia and the Orient last spring. It was a marvelous trip and allowed Linda to discover Hong Kong, which she found "totally absorbing" . . . "a chance to see communism and capitalism existing, side by side in open competition."

After tracking down our wandering Peace Corps volunteer Lolly Smith Howard, I found her at the University of Wisconsin where husband Roger is a graduate student in African history. Lolly is busy-ing herself as a "peripatetic" photographer.

Sarah J. TerBush Drescher is busy these days with her new daughter Stacey. Another busy mother, Elizabeth Watson Merchant reports that she and David enjoyed their summer in Albany watching Jennifer and their three kittens grow together. David is assistant director of the Overseas Service Program for the State University of New York. They will be in the Albany area again this year and invite classmates to stop by.

Grace Wilson Sundelin has returned to the classrooms, part time, to begin another master's in counseling at Northwestern. Mark spent last year as a law student at Boston University and their son Andrew has been busy participating in Dr. Jerome Bruner's experiments at Harvard. That is quite a family—all three in college at the same time!

I received several interesting replies from our associate alumnae. Karin Rumstedt Babb is still too busy to do everything. Paul is in second grade and Al is in his second year of law school. Suzanne Ward Flanigan and family returned to Philadelphia with a promotion for Barry last fall. Judy Wentworth Mullan has a new job as a pediatric caseworker, which is not too surprising since her husband is a resident pediatrician at Jacobi Hospital in New York. Judy is studying part time at Columbia School of Social Work in community organizations. She found medical research "remote for the problems facing people" and is enjoying her casework position. She offers an open door to any Chathamite in the area. Joanne Winer Miller has a new job, part time, as a psychologist with the Pittsburgh Public Schools. She also has a new son, Robert, to keep her busy.

And I, Nancy, also traded the classroom for the nursery with the arrival of our first child last spring. Larry has a new job with a pharmaceutical company. He and Steven keep me happily occupied although I do miss teaching a bit. We had a visit from Linda Young; she was still working with IBM and on her way to vacation in Wyoming. Thanks to everyone who responded. We would enjoy seeing anyone passing through Connecticut.

Susan reporting:

Martha Coyne Scott has a new job with Child Welfare Services and is a recent bride. Richard graduated from Princeton and is a lawyer with Scott and Neely.

Barbara Crick Klingsporn and Harold returned to the United States August 29 with mixed emotions. They had such an enjoyable and educational time in England and were able to do some sight seeing.

Leslie Caplan Itskowitz' husband Alan is in his last year of residency in internal medicine.

Anita Cadwallader Horowitz and Marty plan to move back to Pittsburgh, now that Marty is in business for himself.

Sue Cohn Brenner and Paul had a wonderful vacation in Hawaii and saw several Chatham friends.

Even with a new addition, Jane Coulter Burger has been kept busy. She taught last semester and has continued working on school research and evaluation projects.

Nancy Dechter has been busy in her job as project director for Audience Studios, Inc., yet she finds time to design most of her clothes and write songs.

Jackie Cain Miller is working for the Venezuela Government as a social worker. Philip is setting up consumer cooperatives.

Jerilyn Donahoe has a new job with Town Consultants, Inc.

Her husband's transfer has re-located Lynn Burkhouse Obenyer. Stan will do graduate work at the University of Denver.

Suzy Callas Francis and Dave moved to Rochester, Minnesota in September. Dave will be doing medical research for IBM at the Mayo Clinic.

As for me, Susan Coleman Heckman, I have been enjoying new surroundings and meeting new people. Jim is busy in his first year of being a doctor, working every other night. Though I will not be teaching I will be busy with a new job as course assistant in the Graduate School of Business. Thanks to the people who answered the questionnaire. I hope to hear from more next year.

Karen Goff received her master's of education in English from the University of Pittsburgh in August. Tired of the cold winters, she has left Pittsburgh for Miami, Florida to teach at Hialeah Senior High School. She keeps in touch with Barb Wallace, Ann Quenin and Debbie Little.

Marty Friday Roberts is now working on her Ph.D. in social psychology at Boston University after working during the summer as a psychiatric social worker in an experimental unit at Danvers State Hospital in Massachusetts. Tom was in an Army reserve unit that was sent to Vietnam last October, but was returned in July, much to Marty's relief.

Sally Goedicke Payne, divorced in March, 1968, is presently at the University of Colorado in the philosophy doctoral program, but is seriously considering dropping out.

Irene Fraser left for Cali, Colombia in August for dissertation research (political science at the University of Illinois).

Ambitious, also, is Raquel Halty Ferguson who has been given a teaching fellowship and is beginning studies in the Ph.D. program in romance languages at Harvard. She and Bill were busy this summer teaching at Northeastern University in Boston and working on the Ferguson Press.

Bobbie Hewitt Orloff and Jon are still in Pittsburgh but have plans of leaving forever and settling in Portland, Oregon. Bobbie is still doing social casework and enjoying it, but is anxious to quit and have a chance to play "wife." Children are not too far in the future—just beyond a European trip with a side trip to Rus-news. She and Dick had a 5-week honeymoon touring Canada, western U.S., and the Rockies. Sandy is still working for VISTA which keeps her traveling a great deal, and she has been serving also as an OEO member of the President's Committee on Talented Youth in the Federal Service, which was started as an attempt to make federal employment attractive to youth. Her husband will be working part time while training for his commercial pilot's license. He has a private license and Sandy says flying in those little planes is great, "sort of like driving a Volkswagen in mid-air."

Dona Kwall Smith is Associate Director of University Housing for Personnel at Pitt, is teaching an undergraduate ed psych course and preparing for ed psych doctoral comprehensives! Her husband John is still Assistant to the Chancellor at Pitt. She saw both Carol Levin Hill and Jan Thomas Wolf while they were visiting in Pittsburgh.

Penelope Langston Zollinger writes that life seems to be "disappearing under a mound of diapers and baby bottles," but she saw Barb Wallace and Carole Early Cupps at Christmas. Bill is a resident at Cincinnati General Hospital and on call every other night. In October they were to move to Panama City, Florida where Bill is a Captain in the Air Force.

Vivian Lazur Brantley and her husband Bill are looking forward to his release from the Army next April. At the moment Viv is employed as a bacteriologist at A & P National Fish Division in Boston.

Carol Beth Levin Hill has her hands

Bonnie reporting:

Alice Graham Weber writes that things are at last returning to normal—last year she taught school while Paul served fourteen months in Korea. He returned in May and after a belated "honeymoon" at St. John in the Virgin Islands, he returned to work as an accountant for Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corporation, and Allie is returning to Baldwin High School in addition to finishing her master's at the University of Pittsburgh.

Kathy Hoover Hill received her master's from Rutgers in June and then spent two weeks in London and Paris. Presently she is working as the children's librarian in the Morristown-Township Public Library.

Marnie Elder Hodil has been enjoying her job at the Frick Collection and looked forward to attending Celia Paul's wedding in October.

Isabel Hausner finds working as research assistant to the Indonesian Ambassador to the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations most exciting. Her job is essentially that of a speech writer and on occasions, serving as social aide. She lunches frequently with Lolly Lowery Derryck, '67, who works upstairs at the Afro-American Institute.

Kathy Hopkins Macher continues teaching, this time advanced placement junior and senior English, while Don completes a rotating dental internship at West Virginia Medical Center after having received his D.M.D. degree from the University of Pittsburgh in May.

Ann Greenhouse Klein writes that Steve has graduated from Ohio State University Medical School and is working hard on his straight medical internship at the Ohio State University Hospitals in Columbus. Alan Mark has been keeping Ann busy and entertained.

Judy Howard Reilly has temporarily retired from teaching. She has been busy fixing up her new home and enlarging her animal population to include a wire haired terrier and new Quarter Horse mare.

Carole Early Cupps has also retired from teaching first grade after three years to be a homemaker. She has been enjoying Toledo, has been playing tennis daily, sewing, knitting, reading, and occasionally relaxing.

As for myself, Bonnie, I am about to embark on my second and last year at Columbia University School of Social Work after a year's absence and some time of adjusting to New York and the pleasures of marriage.

Marjorie reporting:

Ruthie Klein Kaplan reports that the big news for her and Bob is their new house. She is still working at Ohio State's student employment office, and last spring they took a trip through the Smoky Mountains.

Sandy Kretz Callahan always gives me much pleasure with her long newsy letters. This year her marriage (after only 8½ years of courtship, she says!) is the big full taking care of little Jennifer. Ed gets out of the Army in January and they expect to settle in Atlanta or Pittsburgh.

Rebecca Mark Orlinsky has a new job teaching 15 3- and 4-year-olds in the Day Care Center in Columbia, which she reports is great fun. Zeke is a lawyer with the state's attorney's office in Baltimore, and he has been a member of the Columbia Village Board. They spent three fantastic weeks in Israel, London and Copenhagen this summer.

Shadbano Mirza Ahmad deserves congratulations—she completed her M.A. in sociology at the Delhi School of Economics in May. She plans to submit a Ph.D. thesis in the next 3 years to the West Asia Study Centre at Aligarh University. She plans to study one of the Arab tribes near Mecca, Saudi Arabia and will have to do field work there, so she has recently enrolled in Arabic courses. In June Shad and Sohail vacationed in the cool foothills of the Himalayas, a welcome change from the temperatures of Aligarh which range from 106-111°F! Shad extends greetings to all and says she wishes she could have attended the June reunion but from India it's a bit of a trip!

Judy Parry Pike has returned to the U.S. after her 2 years in the Peace Corps in Tunisia. She and Harl spent 6 weeks traveling in Germany, Austria and Czechoslovakia before returning. Harl is attending the Luther Theological Seminary in St. Paul this fall and Judy is looking for a job in "birth control, social work or teaching." She would love to see any Chathamites who happen to be in the Minneapolis area.

Heather Martin Price writes glowingly of her new daughter Megan who, she says, was quite an elephant at 9½ pounds. Beth is almost four and "full of a million questions." We extend our sympathies to Jim, whose mother died unexpectedly this spring.

As for me, Margie Morrison Hofer, I am still personnel secretary at New Canaan's Board of Education, but am tentatively planning to join the ranks of the teaching profession myself starting in January. Bill has had a new job since last January. He is now one of the design team preparing exhibits for the U.S. Pavilion at Expo '70 which opens next March in Osaka, Japan. We are of course hoping he will be chosen to go to Japan to help oversee construction but it's not definite yet. Keep your fingers crossed for us! Thanks to all who wrote—wish I could have heard from everyone.

Sherrie reporting:

Nancy Persson Klock has lots of exclamation marks next to the question—what are you doing?—!!!!!! Peter Gary commands a great deal of attention, along with his older sister, Kimberly, while Pop, Gary, continues working in the management services department of Ernst and Ernst.

Jim and Ann Plummer Crawford are sharpening their skis for a little schussing on the local hills this winter, since they have just moved to Denver. In the meantime, there is nothing like painting and re-decorating a new house to keep busy.

While Paul tackles his second year at the University of Chicago Law School, Jeff Potter Silver will continue working as a field representative in Illinois for community action agencies, under the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Two new Boston converts are Ann Quenin and Debbie Little. "Q" is working in the television advertising department of Jordan Marsh, a large New England department store chain. Ann and Debbie spent two months this spring making the grand tour of the USA, coming back in time to make the New Hampshire scene of Helen Read Steele's June wedding, along with Lynette Burley McNally, Anne Clarke, Jean Wiest Chamberlain, Laura Oliva and Sherrie Smith. This is Helen's second year teaching physics and chemistry at Ashland High School, and on weekends Mrs. Steele revs up her two-wheeler and jaunts about New Hampshire.

Dave is doing his internship at the Oakland Naval Hospital, so Nancy Ruehl Gallagher is hoping to find a teaching job in the San Francisco area. They left for California the day after Ruehl received her M.A. in guidance and counseling from Catholic University, and have been doing the town with Susan and Paul Brenner (alias Cohnie).

Nancy Russell Ross wrote that her hands have been more than full caring for their two young daughters. Holly is now two-and-a-half and Becky almost one—enough said! Richard is continuing to supervise the hardcore unemployment program at Westinghouse.

Another California medical wife is Sheila Sadin Nevins whose husband Don is a second-year resident in psychiatry at the

DON'T BE BASHFUL. ASK FOR A PLEDGE CARD.

University of California Medical Center. The Nevins spent two weeks in May visiting in Florida and New York, and were planning a September vacation in Hawaii. Between moving into a house, taking sailing lessons, and training Joshua, their Irish Setter puppy, Sheila sounds like there is never a dull moment.

Pan American is still providing an exciting life for Cathy St. Clair; what would you do if you discovered a baby cobra running loose on the plane? Cathy mentioned that she had seen several Chatham faces around San Francisco this year.

After an April wedding Andra Sandson Condon "retired" from the data processing rat race at AT&T and will begin tutoring homebound students in the fall, while working for permanent New York certification in the MAT program at Manhattanville College. Jim is a sales engineer for the Brush Beryllium Company.

As usual, Carol Sheldon wrote a long and fascinating account of her year—I wish I had room to tell all. After a "rugged year of teaching in the ghetto," Carol will be at the Bannockburn School in nearby Montgomery County, teaching second grade. This summer she participated in a four-week workshop for teachers in the Leicestershire (County, England) Philosophy and Method of Teaching and found it to be one of the most meaningful experiences she has ever been involved in. Thanks for all the news, Carol.

Jim and Sandi Smith Mueller are back in Flagstaff, following a year's leave to Northwestern. Jim is a salvage archeologist for the Museum of Northern Arizona. The Muellers have very much enjoyed the Hopi and Navajo Reservations and are planning a winter tour of the reservation posts to acquire some Navajo rugs. Anyone traveling through Arizona is invited to stay with the Muellers.

Lesley Smith McGregor sends greetings.

As for me, Sherrie Smith, I started my third year of teaching art in Stoneham, Mass., after finishing my master's degree this summer at B.U. It was a fabulous year for anyone with skiing on the brain—we're hoping for a repeat this season. New England, and the Boston area in particular, seems to have charmed an incredible number of Chathamites, and if you happen into Harvard Square you are likely to see as many familiar faces as you might have in the Snack Bar. Please don't hesitate to call one of us.

Renny Mazo Cohen continued this year doing social work at the Franklin County Welfare Department in Columbus, and Dennis is interviewing for internships.

Mary Bruce McCulloch Mitchell and Dave had a delightful trip to New York and had a chance to see both Bonnie Markey Seasonwien and Mike, and Roger and Pam Byerly Stuckhart. Otherwise, the Mitchell's Shaggy dog, Hoover, kept them busy.

Sage reporting:

Judy Stone has a new job at the Colorado State Library distributing talking book machines to the blind and physically handicapped, and started Law School at the University of Denver in September, studying Urban Poverty Law. Judy sends a big "How's by you" to all and says that she would love to hear from anyone who is passing through the Denver area.

Sue Taylor's new job in Boston is that of pension analyst with New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. She has become a sailing enthusiast in her spare time.

Horton and Jan Thomas Wolf are tired of New York living and yearn for Pittsburgh again, but Horton's job with the 21st Century Restaurant Corporation keeps them in the east. Jan reports that she sees Joan Lessing, '67, often.

Naomi Waterston has returned from her teaching position in England and is now teaching in Fairfax County, Virginia. She worked this summer for the O.A.S.

Betsy Van der Voort Aland sent a marvelous letter telling of a most exciting year traveling with husband Jay in Europe. May '68 to January '69 were spent traveling on their BMW, and then from February until May they worked in Hamburg, Germany. They managed to see most of Europe. Betsy reports that some of their most exciting moments were "being caught in the student riots in Paris, caught in a flood in the Pyrenees on the way to Andorra, and being in Yugoslavia during the Czechoslovakia crisis." Back in Pittsburgh now, Betsy is acting at the Red Barn Theater in Allison Park.

Barb Wallace is really enjoying her new home in San Francisco, where she has taken a job as a pediatric out-patient social worker (try saying that one rapidly!) at San Francisco General Hospital. She loves the west coast but seems most thrilled to finally being out of school.

Linda Whimyre sends word from Malaysia, where she is completing two years as a Peace Corps volunteer teaching math. That life has been very good to her and, as she says, "I hope also a bit good for the people I have met." Linda expects to be back in Pittsburgh by Christmas.

Lynn Williamson Lawrence and husband Rick have left Cambridge for "smoogier parts, (i.e. New York City)," where Rick is working in the international division of the First National City Bank. Lynn says that she is a lady of leisure for the moment but she thinks she will soon be working gal again.

Patty Williamson reports that her job has given her a great opportunity to travel. She was at Marty Coyne's wedding earlier this year.

News comes from some of our associate members as well. Pat Mullen is now in a teacher training program for ballet at Harkness House in New York City. She is also tutoring students in their correspondence courses. Pat received her M.A. in English in June.

Joan Stahlbrodt Lewis, who also finished her master's degree this June, was rewarded for her hard work by her husband Roger with a trip across the country. Joan is teaching fifth grade again this year.

As for this reporter, the past year has been a full and rewarding one for Mike and me. The arrival of our son Peter brought an end to my career as a biophysicist and the beginning of a whole new pattern of existence for us. Mike has been working almost incessantly to complete the last things for his Ph.D. (projected termination date is November). We've seen many Chathamites in the past year, and we enjoy hearing from many more.

Mary Ann reporting:

Hi! This is Mary Ann coming to you from Houston, Texas, believe it or not. This is quite a change for me but so far I like it real well, despite the climate. I moved here in August and have been working as secretary for two attorneys and sharing an apartment with Diane Savage.

School seems so far in the past to me that it's hard to believe that some in our class are still plugging away. De Ann Beach Burrows is attending graduate school in rehabilitation counseling at Boston University School of Education. Becky Conrad Hahn and her husband Larry are both graduate students, she in reading and Larry working a master's in elementary education. Karen Curto is studying psychology at Bryn Mawr College and spending a lot of time working with 46 pigeons. Carol David is now a junior English major at the University of Pittsburgh. Gail Davis Reiner and Charles are another husband-wife graduate team. Gail has been awarded a fellowship toward a master's in sociology, and Charles has a fellowship toward his Ph.D. in clinical psychology, both at the University of Florida.

Kathy Chalmers spent the summer of '68 studying criminology at the University of Hong Kong, but has now given up the student life and is working in the foreign investments department of the First National Bank in Baltimore. Betty Adams is also in Baltimore and loves her job as assistant to the volunteers at Greater Baltimore Medical Center. Sally Barnett has moved and has a new job as a research assistant at the American Institutes for Research in Washington.

Oi Fan Chan Linsley also loves her job in the Corporate Banking Group for the First National City Bank in New York. Since their marriage in August, she and Tom are living in a renovated brownstone with 13' ceilings. Tom is attending law school at Columbia.

Edna Bergman Lopkin is also working in New York as a Child Welfare caseworker. Her husband is a medical student.

Kathy Carlson Schuchat and her husband are busy working on their house and playing parents to their three kittens, named Cognac, Champagne and Butterscotch Ripple. Vera Berkowitz Greenberg is also house-involved—they are putting in a basement.

Marcia Binstock Swartz was the matron of honor in Leslie Miller Egger's wedding in Philadelphia.

Yvette Bourgeois, a fellow Texas resident, has been exploring and is going to live and work in light shows in San Francisco. She's trading the "quasi-country commune" life for the "ultimate in psychedelia."

Goldie reporting:

Teaching seems to be the common denominator among the alumnae this year as last year. While Susan Esterman Borish and Cathy Horowitz Saltzman lived hundreds of miles away from each other, they are now both teaching for the Neshaminy School District. Cathy teaches third grade, and Sue is an eighth grade English teacher and a master's degree candidate at Temple University.

Jill Dworkin Eisner, who was not a native Pittsburgher but lived here for a year, has moved again. Her husband has taken a job as an account executive with WJW-TV in Cleveland. Jill is teaching sixth grade in what she calls a "very progressive school district." They're even sending her to camp for a week.

Harriet Dye's teaching position is a little more unusual. She was supervising a Red Cross tutorial program for Ghetto children and is now teaching first grade in Chagrin Falls, Ohio. She received her master's degree in June from Tufts and is busy still in planning, for her wedding on December 20, 1969.

Gail Fishberg is team-teaching in a middle school in Princeton, New Jersey. While taking her kids on a trip to the United Nations, she ran into Isabelle Hausner, '66. The entire class of '68 expresses sympathy to Mrs. Fishberg and Gail on the sudden death of Mr. Fishberg.

Two non-teachers, Pat Elio Cash and Judy Herbst Goozh, both have interesting jobs. Pat is working for the Department of the Army, Sixth Army Medical Laboratory, as the supervisor of its special chemistry section in foods. While Pat is with the Army, Dennis has been deferred due to his job with Standard Oil of California. Judy is working for a health insurance lobbyist. She and Steve had a two-week vacation in England early in August.

Shelley Israel spent a year in France, working, studying and traveling with Pam Davis. Now she is back home and looking for a job where she can use her French on a daily basis.

I, Goldie, finished my master's degree in August and had a great job with the Monroeville School District. Then came the strike over the question of amnesty. It has now been settled, but I put the "unemployed" time to good use getting ready for my wedding and new apartment. I was disappointed that I did not hear from more of you, but was surprised to discover how many had already heard about my engagement. Word really travels quickly among the grads. Hope you all have a good year.

Zelda reporting:

Everyone seems interested and thrilled with their new jobs. Jennifer Lewis is right in the middle of a job training program for the disadvantaged that has just begun at M.I.T. She says the trainees are working on being lab technicians. In her spare time Jennifer is taking some courses in American Studies.

Chris Joyce is working at the Studio Arena Theater in Buffalo where she is teaching active drama to fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth graders. In addition she is working with Children's Theatre which is giving performances for under-privileged kids in the C.O.R.E. areas of Buffalo, and she's been making television commercials for the local area, AND went to Betsy Bosson's '68 wedding June 21, 1969.

Bobbie Livingston Reitzes is teaching third grade in Arlington, Virginia, and loves it.

The studious types include Ellen Lehn studying psychology at Brandeis, Mary Knipmeyer, studying anthropology at Catholic University, Kathy Kratt Neeley, splitting her time between working and taking courses in library science at Cornell where husband Jim is also in graduate school, and Alice Kessler, working for a master's degree in elementary education at Boston University.

After getting married in December, Paul and I went to New Orleans for our honeymoon (Paul wanted to see the Sugar Bowl), and New Year's Eve on Bourbon Street has to be seen to be believed. Debbie Rosch and Ellen Goldbloom Kigh '67, were attendants.

Final query—why do so many Chatham grads wind up in the Boston-Cambridge area?

Georgia reporting:

Once again I find myself bringing you all of the news from those who responded to our lovely green circulars. There are still some of us in graduate school. Kathy Osmond is finishing her M.A. in political science at Pitt and is looking forward to starting her Ph.D. program. Barbara Morgan Spiegelman started work on her M.A. in library science by going part time this past summer, while Stanley is doing reactor core design work at Westinghouse Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory. Chilton Richardson is teaching biology at Chatham and going part time to Pitt in biology. Suzanne Sausedo Krause is a caseworker for the Suffolk County Department of Social Services and is also taking courses towards her M.S.W. Her husband Ira is a community organizer. Marsha Otterman teaches kindergarten and is working towards an advanced degree in elementary education at Pitt. Pati Pronovost Loughrey teaches in Mt. Lebanon, and is also working on an advanced degree in education at Penn State. Her husband Joe teaches at St. Mary of the Mount, Mt. Washington and studies law at Duquesne. As for myself, I finished my M.A. in history this past summer, and am starting on my Ph.D. (American history), while teaching an American history survey course at Pitt.

Mexico. She tells me that she is using a "bi-cultural approach," in that both Navajo and English are used in the classroom. Pam Poch Fetter is far from the "lone prairie." She works for Chase Manhattan Bank in the personnel department. As I write this, she and John are in Europe for a three week holiday. Kelley MacIsaacs is in Washington working for the District of Columbia Redevelopment Land Agency. Meg Sandridge Sturgis is a legal secretary and research assistant for Goltra, Kline and King in Columbus, Indiana, while husband Tom is a student at Indiana University, Bloomington. Jan Miller Kahler is working as a staff assistant at Kaufman's while Randall attends graduate school at Pitt. Leslie Miller Eggers is still working with IBM here in Pittsburgh. Her husband is assistant professor of mathematics at Beaver County Community college.

Audrey Pysb Theis will be living in Indianapolis this year while Steve does his surgical internship. He received his M.D. in May from Pitt, and plans to specialize in orthopedic surgery. Last, but not least, Ann Robinson Risch reported that she and husband Leslie expected to spend part of the fall camping on the eastern seaboard and also visiting friends and relatives. She hopes everyone from Chatham is well and happy, and I second her in that sentiment.

Thanks to all who responded. It was great to hear from you.

Ellie reporting:

Marriages, graduate study, and new jobs would seem to summarize the news of '68 Chathamites.

Faith Yoho Jaycox received her M.A. in English from the University of Pittsburgh in August and has now begun work for the Ph.D. at Minnesota where her new husband is a law student. Her wedding, like so many others this last year, was a small Chatham reunion; OiFan Chan Linsley, Ellen Schreiberman, Kathy Osmond, Lois Murphy Skelka ('69), and Molly Miesse ('70) were guests, and Cherie Stanglein Bliwise and Patty McBride served as attendants.

Cherie Stanglein Bliwise's bridesmaids included Faith Yoho and Ellen Schreiberman.

At the moment she is Assistant Manager of Organization Planning, Wage Administration, and Personnel Research with Bamberger's in New Jersey, where her husband is Manager of Systems and Production.

Connie Sujantek Simons is a librarian at the Cleveland Public Library; she completed the program of the Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences at the University of Pittsburgh in June. Laurie Weiss Rothman was her honor attendant at the July wedding, with Ann Kessler, Ellen Lehn, Nancy Le Vasseur, and Kathy Perrone ('69) as guests. Husband Michael is teaching in Cleveland's inner-city schools.

Laurie Weiss Rothman, working in community organization, has transferred from Columbia to the School of Social Work at the University of Pittsburgh. Her husband continues his grad studies at Carnegie-Mellon.

Barbara Stern expects to receive her M.A. in the education of the emotionally disturbed from Teachers College, Columbia University, in January. Leslie Tarr Laurie will be expecting her master's in community organization at Columbia by June under a fellowship from the National Institute of Mental Health. In addition to commuting to New York City for classes once a week, she is working with Planned Parenthood in Philadelphia. Through a Mellon Fellowship her husband, a doctoral candidate in history at the University of Pittsburgh, is doing research in Philadelphia for his dissertation.

Ellen Witt writes that she is doing research for psychiatrists at the National Institute of Mental Health. Jody Tilghman is working in the department of pediatrics at Johns Hopkin's Hospital in Baltimore. Eleanor Wait, working at Western Electric and producing films in the public relations department, has enjoyed lots of U.S. travel in connection with her job; she's also been kept busy giving some free-lance speeches and taking night courses at NYU. Mary Templeton is job-hunting in New York where she has an apartment with Debbie Rosch and a friend from Boston.

Jackie Yates Silson, studying political science at the University of Pittsburgh, had a change of pace last summer when she, her husband, and dog camped out in a tent for eight weeks in Ann Arbor, Michigan, while Jackie attended an Inter-university Consortium for Political Research. Her husband is a student in architecture.

Mandy Timney and Helen Sparks have done their share of traveling this year. Mandy went to Europe where she ran into Cindy Martin ('69), Marcia Seeler ('69), Ellen Goldbloom Kight ('67) and her husband, and Judy Murray Walle ('67) and her husband. At the moment she is changing jobs and looking for an apartment in the Boston area, a favorite haunt of Chatham alums, as she reports it. Helen spent her vacation in Acapulco, Mexico, and has also been wandering along the east coast of the U.S. She is now an associate scientific programmer at Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory in West Mifflin, a job she thoroughly enjoys; she's also planning to begin work on a master's in computer science at the University of Pittsburgh.

The call of the classroom still seems to be keeping some of us busy. Fern Weiner Canter, one of our "old-marrieds," is enjoying her new home, but describes son Hal as "tearing her apart." She is an English reader at Allderice and has also begun to tutor, while David Tunis Philips is teaching seventh and eighth grade English in Bridgeport.

Our gal in Switzerland, Marianne Schlittler, has been working at the historical museum in Basel; she wears all kinds of hats, from that of restorer to that of secretary. But she missed New Jersey's Route 22 so much, she had to visit the U.S. early last summer!

And yours truly finished the M.A. in curriculum and instruction at Ohio State in June. Last summer I began work on my Ph.D. in the same field. After a wonderful breather visiting home, Washington, D.C., and New York City, I've resumed my exile in Columbus where I am a teaching associate in the College of Education. Decorating my new apartment has been keeping me from quaking too soon over the ever-closer general exams. My best to all until next year when we again gather items for our socially acceptable gossip column.

● After a successful first venture last year, Chatham students have scheduled a second Resident Colloquy for the weekend of February 12-14. During that period a large and diversified group of people will come to campus, live in the dorms, and engage in non-stop conversation. The purpose of Colloquy is to provide a time of discovery, to test values and convictions, to learn from differences of opinion, to become aware by becoming involved both individually and communally.

● For the second year Mrs. Clifford S. Heinz, Trustee of Chatham College, will entertain alumnae at the Surf Club in Miami, Florida. The event will be a dinner on Sunday, February 14, 1971 in honor of President and Mrs. Edward D. Eddy. All alumnae and their husbands living in the Miami-Fort Lauderdale area will receive invitations, and Mrs. Heinz would like to include, also, those alumnae who will be vacationing there in February. The Director of Alumnae Affairs requests that vacation addresses be sent to the alumnae office before December 31. Please indicate whether an invitation mailed early in January should be sent to the home or to the vacation address.

● On November 22, 1970 at College Park, Maryland, Elizabeth Platz will become the first woman to be ordained into the ministry of the Lutheran Church in America. Miss Platz, a 1962 graduate of Chatham College, received her bachelor of divinity degree in 1965 from the Lutheran School of Theology at Gettysburg. She has accepted a call to serve as Lutheran chaplain at the University of Maryland where she has been serving as an assistant to the university chaplain.

● The major portion of this issue of the Recorder is devoted to a presentation of the new academic program—INNOVATIONS . . . pages 3-7—in order that all alumnae may be informed about the new departures in curriculum and their implementation.

INNOVATIONS...

The New Curriculum

¶ Following a year-long study by the faculty, students and administrative staff, Chatham College has adopted a new academic program which frees the student from traditional requirements and gives her an opportunity to design the course of study which best fulfills her personal interests and abilities. Such an approach is possible only in a college like Chatham.

¶ Under the New Curriculum, the requirement for graduation is the satisfactory completion of a choice of 34 courses, including two interim programs and a tutorial. The interim program will provide a month-long, differently structured and especially intensive work in a field of special student interest. The senior tutorial—an individual study project designed by the student and a faculty advisor, and requiring competent oral and written articulation—will now be the only formal academic experience common to all Chatham students.

¶ No students have exactly the same educational goals, nor do they learn in exactly the same manner or period of time. The New Curriculum provides the flexible context necessary for individual growth. During the first ten days of the fall term, Chatham freshmen are permitted to attend classes without registering for them. This gives the entering student an opportunity to determine by classroom experience those courses which best fill her educational objectives.

¶ In the New Curriculum the student—working closely with her faculty advisor—determines whether she will pursue a traditional or an innovative program. In choosing her course work, she may decide on a traditional departmental or interdepartmental major. She may elect a multidisciplinary major such as American Studies or Black Studies. Or she may decide to create a mosaic of course work, one not actually centered on any particular major or problem, but appropriate to her personal intellectual requirements.

¶ To assure that the student has ample experience in the methods of scholarly work, certain unconventional course formats have been created. One such course is the Freshman Seminar, a topic-and problem-centered approach to learning designed to involve small groups of students in research and in consideration and articulation of a common problem. The Faculty Symposium serves as another kind of innovative course. In lieu of traditional classwork, two or more faculty members may schedule a symposium to discuss a subject relevant to their disciplines, or to test and formulate scholarship in which they are engaged. Appropriately qualified students may enroll for credit in the symposium, and actively participate in the process of scholarly investigation, discourse and argumentation.

¶ It is impossible to overestimate the importance of the faculty-student relationship in the success of the New Curriculum. For his part, the faculty member is freed to determine new courses in obedience to his academic interest rather than to the requirements of a standardized basic curriculum. He will teach what he genuinely wants to teach, in the way he wants to teach, in the way he wants to teach it, just as the student is free to chart her course of study. In such an atmosphere, faculty and students come together to share not only information and methods but enthusiasm. And while the new academic plan makes clear the responsibility of the student, success depends equally upon a conscious program of faculty advising to help her maintain the coherence and direction of her work.

The New Calendar

¶ The underlying assumption of the New Curriculum is that students and faculty members are participating scholars. The New Calendar provides them with an open, manageable timetable in which to share and individually pursue their academic concerns.

¶ Chatham College's new academic calendar consists of two terms of 14 weeks each separated by a one-month interim term in January. The form of the interim courses will range from directed study to work and travel programs, including student exchanges with other campuses. Students will be expected to spend two of their four interims in advisor-approved programs, although they are encouraged to participate in all four interims.

¶ The New Calendar will continue to allow Chatham students the opportunity to enroll in courses in the five other degree-granting institutions in Pittsburgh, and in exchange programs with other colleges in the United States and abroad. New exchange and overseas programs are being developed.

The New Grading System

¶ Under Chatham's revised grading system, each student may determine which method will be most useful and appropriate to her work. She may choose to take a course for a traditional grade (now limited to A, B and C, with U for unsatisfactory work), or with the agreement of her advisor she may elect to be graded according to a pass/fail system (by which she will receive either S for satisfactory work or U for unsatisfactory work). In certain instances, the pass/fail system will be an option chosen by the teacher of a particular course to which the applications of traditional grading would be inappropriate.

¶ The student may choose to do any portion of her work under either grading system, but in the awareness that those planning graduate or professional study, applicants for fellowships and awards, and those planning to take a junior year abroad or study elsewhere in the United States, may find they need specific grades.

The New Student

¶ The New Student is a woman eager to learn in a consistent relationship with faculty eager to teach. She is prepared to make increasing demands of herself and of the college where she chooses to live and work. She accepts responsibility for her sense of what is important, and is prepared to join in a faculty-student relationship to choose the best course work, schedule and system of grading her requirements of herself and of the college demand. She will work along the lines of her chosen balance between the traditional range of curriculum and grading, and the range of innovation she deems vital to her expanding interests.

¶ The singular point is that her education is in her hands; her primary educational responsibilities are to herself and to the academic environment in which she has chosen to live. She will be supported and encouraged by her teachers and advisors. By the effectiveness of her choices, by the range and adequacy of her work and the insistence of her demands upon herself, her fellow students, and her professors, she will determine the fulfillment of the wide promise of the New Curriculum.

The New Advisory Program

¶ The need for a strong advisory program became evident very early in the planning of the over-all change in the academic program. What was a curriculum-oriented program has now become student-oriented. The educational objective is no longer to lead the student along preordained roads to learning within the limits of prescribed areas. Now the objective is to develop the individual potential of each student with a course of study uniquely designed for her, using any or all of the available resources of the college.

¶ An open curriculum implies a wide range of choices for the student. While she is free to exploit her own potential, nevertheless the absence of curricular requirements means that she has no formal curricular guidelines. Since few students come to college with clear ideas about their academic choices, this could create a bewildering situation for a student. If she is to plan a meaningful, coherent course of study to implement her educational aims and to pursue it with enthusiasm and confidence, she will need thoughtful advice. Academic advising of a high quality is essential to the student in the development of her education under this system.

¶ The flexibility of the new curriculum, augmented by the new advisory program, should help each student come closer to the attainment of her own educational goals and add to the intellectual excitement and commitment by the college.

¶ The development and direction of the new advisory program has been the responsibility of Mrs. Doreen E. Boyce, assistant professor of economics and recently appointed to the position of assistant provost. When asked to make some early observations on the program, Mrs. Boyce said, "Only a few weeks of the academic year have passed—far too little time to afford a basis for evaluation of advising under the new system. However, already it is evident that the voluntary nature of the new system is emerging as one of its strengths.

¶ "An aim of the program is to build advising upon a foundation of established student-faculty relationships. For an upperclassman, this means that by giving the student a chance to choose her advisor, she will tend to choose a faculty member she has already come to know and respect or one whom she feels shares common interests, for example, in her major field. Advising is a voluntary commitment for each faculty member, thus assuring the student that each advisor is filling this role both because he wants to and because he is free to do so.

¶ "For the freshman, the common ground upon which the advising relationship is built is the Freshman Seminar in which she chose to enroll. The faculty member who teaches that seminar also acts as advisor to the students enrolled. This appears to have been very successful in this first semester, and the entire experience has been so enthusiastically reported that four additional Freshman Seminars are planned for the spring term."

The New Interim Program

¶ By virtue of a distinctive organization of the academic calendar, the interim term provides the opportunity for new departures in the curriculum of the College. It allows both student and teacher to overcome the frustration of divided attention and pressured schedules. This opens the possibility for study at a depth and in ways not usually possible. The interim is especially suited for innovative approaches; learning is no longer tied to the geographic boundaries of the campus nor confined to the fixed time of the lecture hour.

¶ Four basic types of programs will be offered: group projects, individual projects, on campus, and off campus. On-campus group project offerings include such courses as Introduction to Architecture and Architectural Pittsburgh; Drugs—biological and environmental effects of drugs, cigarettes and alcohol; The Experimental Film; Jazz through Improvisation; Law and Morality; The Afro-American; Ethnic Groups and Revitalization; and other courses of equal interest and diversity. Also on campus, the interim offers an excellent opportunity for a student to undertake an intensive independent study project of her own choosing and designed to take advantage of the special circumstances which the interim affords, particularly the extended and exclusive involvement with one subject.

❏ Off-campus programs involving travel and field experience will be offered regularly by Chatham faculty, each course offering to be approved by the student's advisor, a faculty sponsor, and the Interim Director. A few of the courses to be offered in 1971 are Marine Biology at the Pigeon Key Biological Field Station of the University of Miami in Florida; The Study of the City: Pittsburgh; Living and Teaching in American Subcultures; European Language and Culture, studying French or German while living with a family in Europe; and Spanish in Mexico at the Hacienda El Cobano, Mexico. Individual off-campus projects can include reading and research programs involving use of other libraries and facilities, work and study or intern experiences, or travel study programs with accent upon opportunities and resources available only through travel. All interim courses earn a single course unit of credit, and a student may enroll for only one course in order to permit exclusive concentration upon one topic of study.

The People In Charge

❏ The success of a new academic program depends primarily upon three factors: the program itself must have strength and merit; it must be directed by competent leaders; those leaders must have the cooperation and support of all who are concerned with the program.

❏ Chatham is exceptionally fortunate in all three areas. Preliminary reports from faculty and students indicate that the new program has had a good beginning. It will require a longer period of time to prove its real strength, but at this early stage it seems to be meeting the needs of the students and faculty. And cooperation with the four members of the administration and faculty who have been charged with the direction of the program is certainly the order of the day.

NORMAN W. CHMURA, who has been chairman of the biology department since 1965, became Chatham's first Provost last spring. One of the major responsibilities of his new post is the direction of the academic program with all of its innovations. Having served as a member of the Ad Hoc Committee on Curriculum during its year of deliberations, he has assumed this responsibility with full knowledge of the basic aims of the new program. He keeps in direct touch with all academic affairs by serving as member ex officio of the standing committees on curriculum, tenure, academic standing, admissions, financial aid, the interim program, and study abroad. And, in spite of the fact that the duties of Provost consume most of his time, Dr. Chmura manages to keep his identity as a teacher by conducting a Freshman Seminar on Issues in Human Ecology.

❏ Dr. Chmura received his B.S. degree from Western Reserve University, the M.S. from the University of New Hampshire, and completed the Ph. D. at the University of Maryland. He was a member of the faculty at Carnegie-Mellon University before coming to Chatham. Dr. Chmura holds professional memberships in the American Society for Microbiology and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

DOREEN E. BOYCE serves Chatham in a dual capacity, as chairman of the economics department and in her new position as Assistant Provost. In addition to her teaching schedule, she directs the new Advisory Program. Mrs. Boyce received her bachelor's and master's degrees with honors at Somerville College of Oxford University, and has done post graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh. Before coming to Chatham College in 1963, she lectured in economics at the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, Republic of South Africa. She is chairman of the curriculum committee, a member of the Future of the College Committee and of the faculty executive committee, and member ex officio of the academic standing committee.

¶ Mrs. Boyce is a member of the American Economic Association, the Economic Club of Pittsburgh, and the Organization of Administrative Women in Education. She serves on the Board of Trustees of The Ellis School, and is a member of the Board of Directors of Microbac Laboratories, Inc. (environmental control). One of her particular interests is the economics of developing countries, and she teaches a course on International Economics and a seminar on Macroeconomics.

RICHARD L. MORRILL is the Director of the Interim Program, no small task in this first year of the new calendar. The development and coordination of such a wide range of new possibilities—concentrated study, experimental projects, travel and field experience, student exchanges and interdisciplinary programs—has required months of concentrated effort with the help of the faculty and students.

¶ Dr. Morrill was graduated magna cum laude from Brown University. He holds a B.D. degree from Yale University Divinity School where he was awarded the Tew Prize, and received his Ph. D. from Duke University where he held the James B. Duke Fellowship. After teaching and serving as Chaplain at Wells College, he came to Chatham as Chaplain and assistant professor of religion in 1968. In his teaching schedule Dr. Morrill conducts the freshman seminar on Exponents and Critics of Religion, teaches a course on Phenomenology of Religion, directs independent study in religion, and is one of the three-member committee on the tutorial in philosophy and religion. He serves, also, as a member of the faculty executive committee and member ex officio of the study abroad committee.

FRANK G. POGUE joined the Chatham College faculty in 1969 as instructor in sociology, and last spring was appointed to develop the Black Studies Program, a multidisciplinary major open to all students.

¶ Mr. Pogue is a graduate of Alabama State University, and has a master's degree from Atlanta University. He was a lecturer in sociology at Duquesne University before coming to Chatham. At the University of Pittsburgh, where he is currently a doctoral candidate, Mr. Pogue was the NDEA teaching fellow and president of the Graduate Association of Sociology Students.

¶ Named Teacher of the Year at Philander Smith College in 1965-66, Mr. Pogue was included in Who's Who in College Education the same year, Outstanding Men of America, 1968, and the 1969-70 Dictionary Biography. He is the author of The Ideal Professor which deals with the improvement of college and university teaching.

¶ As a member of the sociology/anthropology department faculty, Mr. Pogue teaches Introduction to Sociology and Social Stratification. New perspectives in learning are to be found in the courses being offered for a major in Black Studies. In addition to the established courses considered as relevant to Black Studies, several new offerings have been developed, each one scheduled under its related department. They include Teaching in an Urban Setting, Yoruba (language), Black Nationalism, Marxism and Black Ideology, Psychology of the Afro-American, and the interim course on the Afro-American.

BOOKS

Five publications have come to the editor's desk during the past several months—one by a member of the Chatham faculty, three by alumnae, and one about an alumna.

The South Reports the Civil War by Dr. J. Cutler Andrews, Professor of History, (Princeton University Press) $15.00.

Dr. Andrews spent ten years gathering material for and writing his new book on Southern Civil War journalism, a companion volume to his The North Reports the Civil War which appeared in 1955 and which won the Kappa Tau Alpha award for outstanding research in the history of journalism. In a feature article in the Pittsburgh Press about the new book, George Swetnam wrote, "Far from being a tedious tome, The South Reports the Civil War reads almost like a novel and should be a big favorite among buffs of the field."

Dr. Andrews obtained much of his material from old newspaper files in many university libraries and historical societies. He made use, also, of the manuscript letters of generals, civilian leaders, and newspapermen, both in libraries and private collections.

A series of grants from the Chatham College Central Research Fund enabled the author to accumulate a library of Southern wartime newspapers on microfilm, which are now the property of the Chatham College Library. This invaluable collection, one of the most complete of its kind in the country, will be available for the use of Chatham students and others.

The book was the subject of a live television interview on which the author appeared in Washington, D.C., and it has been extensively praised in reviews in Publisher's Weekly, the Saturday Review, the New York Times Book Review and the Washington Star.

Beyond My Catnip Garden by Alice MacKenzie Swaim, (The Golden Quill Press, Franconia, New Hampshire) $4.00.

Mrs. Swaim, an associate member of the Class of 1932, came as a young girl from her native Scotland, where she was a member of the famous Clan MacKenzie. More than 2,500 of her poems have appeared in this country and abroad in eight previously published volumes. They have been included in anthologies and featured in many magazines. Mrs. Swaim has received awards from outstanding Poetry Societies in Pennsylvania, New York, Idaho and California, and in 1960 she was the recipient of one of the Borestone Mountain Best Poems Awards.

The three sections of Beyond My Catnip Garden—"Before the Season's Turning," "Passing Scene," and "Beyond the Garden"—present a wide variety of thought and personal glimpses, expressing in beauty and maturity the noble spirit of the poet.

Iris by Andrea Moorhead (Limited edition of 250 copies, available through the author—Box 59, R.D.3, Averill Park, New York 12018) $1.25.

Iris is the first published collection of poems by a young poet, Andrea Dubs Moorhead, who was graduated from Chatham College in 1969. The small book—twenty pages, paper cover—has been made especially attractive by the design and typography by the author's husband, Robert Moorhead.

Andrea Moorhead's senior tutorial on The Social Philosophy of Saint-John Perse, the contemporary French poet, involved the translation of his poems and influenced her own writing. The emphasis of her poetry is almost entirely imagistic rather than discursive, and although the verse forms appear to be free, the rhetoric is almost classical.

Trumpet at the Gates by Jan Widgery (Doubleday) $6.95

The second historical novel by Jeanne-Anna Ayres Widgery, Class of 1941, is set in England at the end of the 14th century when Richard II and Henry IV contended for the throne. At the time the nation was about to be plunged into the Wars of the Roses. As in her first novel, The Adversary (Doubleday 1966), a dramatic tale of 9th century England, Mrs. Widgery has provided an accurate setting for the story of a young man who searches for a pattern of meaning in the midst of the failure of an established social structure—a striking parallel to his 20th century counterpart.

When her first book was published, Mrs. Widgery said she lived three lives—home and family (her husband and three daughters), teaching (chairman of the English department at the Winchester-Thurston School), and writing. She continues to live in this pattern, with summer travels to relieve the tensions and broaden the horizons, or to "soak up the atmosphere" during a summer spent in England and Wales.

Sea and Earth: The Life of Rachel Carson by Philip Sterling (Crowell) $4.50.

Mr. Sterling, co-author of several biographies, was commissioned by the Crowell Publishing Company to write a biography of Rachel Carson for young readers as part of the Women of America series. When he came to the Chatham campus to do research on her college years, he was surprised to learn that the Director of Alumnae Affairs had been a classmate of Miss Carson. For this reason I must depart from editorial third person and comment as an individual who was able in a small way to assist Mr. Sterling in his research, providing college records, clippings, pictures, personal recollections, and some of Rachel's earliest pieces of writing. I was able, also, to refer him to former roommates and close friends who furnished many of the anecdotes which later came a part of this charming and readable book. Mr. Sterling has succeeded in portraying the true spirit of Rachel Carson: the dedicated scientist, the gifted writer, the determined defender of the natural world of the sea and earth.

Chatham College Confers Honorary Degree on Distinguished Alumna

At Chatham's 98th annual commencement, Sunday, May 24, the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on Louise Graham Brown, Class of 1925. In presenting Mrs. Brown for the honor, Dr. Frances Eldredge, professor of English, gave the following citation:

"This afternoon Chatham College honors one of its distinguished alumnae.

"In our day we hear vigorous—often strident assertion of the rights of women, the need for the liberation of women. In this context it is valuable to remind ourselves that over the past century there have been women who have not needed to demand liberation, simply because they have never felt bound. By their native talents, their liberal education—especially in the women's colleges—and their strong sense of social mission (more than one women's college might well have the motto "Not to be ministered unto but to minister")—by virtue, then of talent, education, and vivid social consciousness, they have gone about as free women who have pressed their projects until tenacity, and sometimes superior tactics, have won the ends they drove toward.

"The woman Chatham College honors today has a 20 year record of devoted and competent public service. All this is about to be recognized and crowned by her being installed next month as President of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Taking her B.A. from Pennsylvania College for Women in 1925, Louise Garham managed graduate work at Columbia University, marriage to Mr. Earle A. Brown, bringing up two children, and being active in alumnae affairs, leading to her election as alumnae trustee in 1957. Meanwhile she became increasingly active in the affairs of Pittsburgh, Allegheny County, and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

She has served as an advisor to various national organizations and as director to state organizations; she has been a member of Governor Lawrence's 35-member Committee on Education, and a delegate to the White House Conference on Children and Youth.

"Meanwhile also, she has the long record of work in women's clubs, moving successively through presidencies from the local Wilkesburg Club, the Allegheny County Federation, the Southwest District Federation, and then, from 1962 onward, through a series of the highest offices in the General Federation, where she is now about to be installed in leadership of the largest women's organization in the world, with its 11,000,000 members. As Shakespeare's Portia exclaims:

*How many things by season seasoned are
To their right praise and true perfection.*

"Louise Graham Brown, your college is happy to honor you today. In 1970 it is entirely out-of-fashion to say of one's self as Portia four centuries ago was able unself-consciously to say:

I never did repent for doing good Nor shall not now.

But it is not old-fashioned that others recognize your continuing accomplishment. For your unflagging demonstration of the power of a free and liberally educated woman to work effectively for community welfare and education and to lead other women in continuing to try to cope with the ills of the world at every level of their communities, and to shoulder ever more fully responsibilities of freedom, Chatham College today confers upon you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws."

The Chatham Alumnae Association is proud that one of its members was chosen for this high honor, and extends its very sincere congratulations to Mrs. Brown.

College Action on Recommendations from the 1969 Alumnae Council

The program for the Centennial Alumnae Council on November 20, 1969, was concerned with the role of the Alumnae Association and its individual members in the future of the College. The result of the discussion on that day, a year ago, was a report and two recommendations which were addressed to President Eddy, the Future of the College Committee, the Ad Hoc Curriculum Committee, and Miss Peggy Donaldson, Director of Admissions. A summary of the report, a statement of the recommendations, and the subsequent action by the College are presented here.

During the past year, in keeping with the look-ahead theme of the Centennial, the Chatham Alumnae Association has been studying its role in the future of the College. The results have been two-fold:

1) We recognize that as an Association and as an integral part of the College, our principal purpose is to serve the College. To this end we re-dedicate ourselves to continue this service through financial aid, work with prospective students, alumnae club activities in designated areas, alumnae-student relations on campus, and the promotion of the interests of Chatham College and of education.

2) We recognize, also that the spirit of service should be reciprocal and that there are ways in which the College can be of great service to its alumnae.

Two of these services are presented here as official recommendations from the Alumnae Council with the request that they be given careful consideration by the individuals and the committees to whom this report is addressed.

Recommendation 1

That the College establish a policy whereby courses are open to alumnae who go through the proper channels of application and acceptance, and with an established fee per credit course.

The current trend indicates that many college women, when their children are old enough to be in school, are embarking on careers of either full- or part-time work. Some go directly into jobs that require no further preparation. Others recognize the need for a refresher course in their major field or for a course they did not take while in college. Those who live away from Pittsburgh are able to enroll in such courses at colleges and universities in their areas. We feel that Pittsburgh area alumnae should have this privilege at their own college. What we are recommending, specifically, is that a policy of open registration be granted as a service to Chatham alumnae.

Open Registration for Alumnae

Fully endorsed by Peggy Donaldson and her admissions staff, Recommendation 1 was presented to the executive staff of the College for action. The following statement was presented to the 1970 Alumnae Council on October 29:

With increasing interest in the area of continuing education for women, as expressed by both faculty and alumnae, the executive staff and admissions staff enthusias-

That the College provide more adequate and more comprehensive career counseling for both students and alumnae, and that the title of the Placement Director be changed to Director of Career Counseling to indicate the function of that office more realistically.

It has been announced several times in the past that career counseling was available to alumnae through the placement office, but those who have sought help have been discouraged by the meager results. They did not come with the idea of securing specific jobs; they came to seek help in how to look for a job, to find out what fields of work are available for their particular abilities and preparation and whether or not further training would be necessary. They have come away without answers and with a feeling of disappointment in their College. It is this situation which prompts us to call attention to the unsatisfactory service of the placement office to both students and alumnae.

Career Counseling

Last spring the former Placement Office was combined with the Financial Aid Office, and Miss Peggy O'Hara, Director of Financial Aid, added the title and duties of Career Counselor to her responsibilities. At the same time, by action of the executive board, the Alumnae Association created the office of Coordinator for Career Counseling. Following her election as a director on the executive board, tically support the recommendation of the 1969 Alumnae Council that the College open courses to alumnae who go through established channels of application and enrollment, and with an established fee per course.

The recommendation does not mean a change in existing policy, just an affirmation and public announcement of the College's interest in encouraging and, in fact, welcoming Chatham alumnae and former students back to the Chatham academic community. This pertains to the new Interim term as well as to the Fall and Spring terms.

Alumnae applying to Chatham should file an application with the Admissions Office together with a full transcript of college level work completed at Chatham and elsewhere. The application fee will be $5.00 instead of the regular $20.00 for alumnae who have earned a bachelor's degree. Former Chatham students who have not earned a bachelor's degree and wish to work toward a degree will follow the regular procedures required of freshmen and transfer students, including the payment of the $20.00 application fee. The admissions staff will meet and talk with interested alumnae individually about the procedures, the various course offerings related to their goals and interests, and arrange for the alumnae to meet with the appropriate faculty member(s).

The enrollment of alumnae into particular courses will be governed by the number of students (undergraduate, degree candidates) presently enrolled in the course(s) in which alumnae plan to enroll, and with the permission of the appropriate professor.

The fee structure will follow the existing policy for all Chatham students—full- and part-time, degree and non-degree. For students enrolling on a part-time basis (two or less courses), the fee per course will be $250.00. For those enrolling on a full-time basis (three or more courses), full tuition will be charged.

Miss Donaldson suggests the new Interim term as an ideal opportunity for alumnae who wish to enroll for a single course. Concentrated as it is into four weeks of full-time work on one course, during the month of January, it might be easier for an alumna to schedule than the customary full semester course in the Fall and/or Spring terms. Full information is available in the admissions office.

Mary Anderson Sheehan, '54, was appointed to fill the new post. This action was taken as a positive effort to implement the establishment of the kind of counseling service which had been recommended.

Soon after taking office in June, Mrs. Sheehan embarked on a program of enlisting the help of Chatham alumnae who are engaged in a great variety of careers. The first step in the program was to send a questionnaire to approximately 500 alumnae in eight major cities—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, Chicago, San Francisco and Pittsburgh—asking them to provide such pertinent information as college major, past and present employment, graduate degrees earned or in progress, and to indicate their willingness to serve as a counselor if called upon by a student or an alumna.

The initial response was excellent. The information has been correlated into a cross-reference file located in the alumnae office, but available to the college Career Counselor and, through her office, to both students and alumnae. It should be clearly understood that what is being offered is a counseling service, not actual job placement. It is possible that one might result from the other, but that is not the primary purpose of the program.

Career Fair

An alumnae-sponsored Career Fair was held on campus last spring. Its purpose was to acquaint students with the kinds of careers in which alumnae are engaged, and to bring a group of alumnae to campus to meet with students. One feature of the Fair was the opportunity for a student to indicate her desire to talk or correspond with an alumna in her particular field of interest and location. Mrs. Sheehan has answered these requests by using the new cross-reference file to match the student and her interest with the proper alumna. An interesting bonus to the program is that many husbands have indicated their willingness to participate, thus broadening the scope of job categories.

Mrs. Sheehan urges that all outstanding questionnaires be returned to the alumna office as soon as possible. The success of the program depends on alumnae cooperation and participation.

On Coeducation

Chatham College, along with almost every other single-sex private institution in the country, has been looking at coeducation as a possible solution to the growing problem of financing the privately endowed college. Some colleges have already taken the step by admitting male or female students to their once all-male or all-female campuses. Chatham has chosen to take a longer, harder look before making a final decision.

Delegates to the 1970 Alumnae Council on October 29 were privileged to be present at what President Eddy termed "an historic meeting of faculty, students, alumnae, administration and trustees." The five constituent groups of the Chatham community were called together to hear the reports of five members of the Future of the College Committee who visited Connecticut and Vassar Colleges for the purpose of studying the effects of their recent change to coeducation.

The members of the touring committee were Mrs. Doreen Boyce (faculty), Miss Gail Whitman (student), Mrs. Jean Marshall (alumna), Mr. Robert Barr (administration), and Mr. George D. Lockhart (trustee). Each member attempted to investigate the reactions of his or her particular group to coeducation on the two campuses. This is the second year of admitting male students at Connecticut, the first at Vassar.

All of the committee members were very objective in their reports. Their observations indicate that most students claimed to be satisfied with the new arrangement, that males are inclined to be more aggressive in class discussions, that male applicants are receiving more financial aid benefits than the women, that no changes have been made in the size of the faculty at either institution nor in existing dormitory facilities. Male applicants have been drawn by the existing strengths of the colleges and have not increased the enrollment in the sciences as had been expected, and the schools were not always their first choice. Perhaps the most revealing discovery is that as male applications have increased, female applications have decreased, and the total number of students at both colleges has remained the same as before. For this reason, the financial problems have not been solved.

Alumnae giving has not suffered at either Connecticut or Vassar, which brings Mrs. Marshall to the conclusion that the majority of college graduates are willing to accept and

Chatham Alumnae on College Board of Trustees

The recent election of two alumnae to the Chatham College Board of Trustees increases alumnae representation on the Board to seven members.

Three of the members are elected by the Alumnae Association, one each year in the spring election of officers for a three-year term. These alumnae trustees serve also as members of the executive board of the Alumnae Association.

Currently serving as alumnae trustees are Margaret Cooke Skidmore, '60, of Chicago, whose three-year term ends in June, 1971; Evangeline Seitanakis Beldecos, '52, of Pittsburgh, elected in 1969 for the term ending in 1972; and the most recently elected member, Marion Swannie Hall, '45, whose term extends to 1973. Mrs. Hall is Manager of the Design Program and the Department of Arts and Sciences of International Business Machines Corporation. She is a director of the American Institute of Graphic Arts and a member of the Arts Advisory Council of the New York Board of Trade.

Two former alumnae trustees, Martha Glandon Luthringer, '24, of Springfield, Illinois, and Mary Virginia Brown Bowden, '36, of New York City, were invited by the Board to continue their services as full members. Mrs. Luthringer has been a member since 1960, and Mrs. Bowden since 1969. Mrs. Bowden is senior economic analyst for New York Life Insurance Company.

Attending their first meeting in October were the two alumnae who were elected this fall by the Board of Trustees, Marjorie Hanson Honig and Sheila Rush, both members of the Class of 1961. Mrs. Honig, currently Lecturer in Economics at Douglass College of Rutgers University, is a doctoral candidate in economics at Columbia University. She received the M.A. degree from Columbia University School of International Affairs, African Studies Program. While a student at Chatham, she was president of student government.

Miss Rush, a 1964 graduate of Harvard Law School, is a member of the Committee on Housing and Urban Development of the Bar Association of the City of New York and Associate Director, Community Law Offices. She served for three years as a staff attorney in charge of housing litigation for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, Inc., and in 1967 she became attorney to the Architect's Renewal Committee in Harlem.

Job Advisory Service

For Pittsburgh area alumnae who are interested in part-time job opportunities, continuing education programs, and significant volunteer projects, there is help available at the Job Advisory Service (JAS) office located almost next door to the Alumnae Office in Beatty Hall.

JAS was formed in 1969 by a group of volunteers from the Women's Alumnae Club Council of Pittsburgh (Chatham Alumnae Association is a member), who recognized the need for part-time work, study, and volunteer opportunities for women in the Pittsburgh area. Although it occupies a room on the Chatham campus, it is an entirely separate non-profit organization.

The JAS office is staffed by volunteers—several are Chatham graduates—and is open to the public three days each week, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. There is no charge for the service.

JAS performs a three-fold service: 1) to women who, through JAS, are able to use their training and skills and develop new ones; 2) to employers, who find JAS a unique source of vital womanpower; 3) to the community, whose needs will increasingly be met through JAS training, employment, and volunteer projects. It is a clearinghouse for current information about local college and university programs, part-time opportunities for paid professional and semi-professional employment, and creative volunteer projects. It provides an advisory service for women seeking information on part-time jobs, study, and volunteer work, and for employers and community agencies seeking such talent.

In order to increase its effectiveness and to broaden its services, JAS has four basic needs: 1) volunteers to work on the many phases of its expanding program; 2) employers who are willing to develop jobs to utilize part-time workers, and who will look to JAS for women to fill the jobs; 3) colleges and universities to provide more realistic opportunities for women to study part time; 4) community agencies to work with JAS to improve standards and opportunities for volunteer work.

Further information about all phases of the service may be procured by calling a member of the volunteer staff during the stated office hours. The telephone number is 441-8200, ext. 256.

NEW ADDRESS

Martha Gibbons Millsbaugh (Mrs. Lynn W.), Sorenson Convalescent Hospital, 7931 South Sorenson Avenue, Whittier Ca. 90602

Frances Boale Belding spent several winter months at Vinoy Park Hotel and two weeks in Sarasota, Florida, where she enjoyed seeing old friends. Summer in Pittsburgh with "a good many parties, has been delightful."

Rebekah Crouse Costanzo and Melba Martin Ingersoll send greetings and love to all.

Gertrude Frame Patterson and "Pat" took no distant trips this year, having concluded that they know of no nicer place than home. A most unwelcome and persistent visitor—Hong Kong "flu"—called on them last winter and stayed too long.

Rosemary Geary and her sister spent some time in Florida last winter and anticipate a trip to California soon.

Martha "Fairy" Gibbons Millsbaugh, because of a diabetic condition and minor strokes, has disposed of her car, rented her home and is now living at a hospital near church, home and friends, where she has excellent care.

The "Royal York" has become "home" to Margaret Lee and she reports that in addition to Melba, Rosemarie and Frances, four other Chatham alumnae are living in the neighborhood. She says, "In spite of that seventy-sixth (birthday, I expect) coming up next week (Sept. 9), I can still say 'Grow old along with me.'"

Jeanne Mabey Smith gratefully writes of good friends filling with love and kindness her difficult days of adjustment to living alone. She sends best wishes to all.

I was greatly pleased to receive a greeting from Seba South McCaw. Her mother—at ninety-nine years of age—was, several months ago, nursing a broken hip.

Mildred Nicholls Kohman had a delightful trip to the Scandinavian countries last spring. From June until early fall she sojourned at Lakeside, Marblehead, Ohio.

With her daughter Helen and two of Helen's children and grandson Jimmy Daugherty, Helen Steele Truxal spent a delightful three weeks in Europe, mostly in Greece. Later, she and the Daughertys had a jaunt to Williamsburg, Virginia and a visit with daughter Helen in Massachusetts. Enroute home, they stopped at Mark Twain's home in Hartford. Helen's letter brings sad news of the recent death of David, our Kathryn Robb Dunn's husband.

Mary Stratton had a "quiet summer" until August 11 when she underwent eye surgery, from which she is recovering.

Last December, Adella Stewart Anderson attended the wedding of her second granddaughter in Connecticut. A guest of this Friends' Home, where your secretary now lives, recently visited Methodist Manor House, Seaford, Delaware, Adella's home, and, as does she, vouches for the comfort and very pleasant life there with, among other features, travelogue and general interest pictures.

Grace Woodrow is looking forward to greeting all classmates at our fifty-fifth reunion next year.

For your secretary, the past year has been pleasant in this very comfortable Home. Several months ago, four long-time friends from my home town of Carnegie surprised me by "dropping in" for an evening's visit. Dorothy Stainmacher, a Dilworth Hall friend, drove over in June from Leisure World, New Jersey, for a day's visit with Jane and me. In August, I spent a weekend with niece Jane and family at Bethany Beach, Delaware, and later, niece Patsy and family of Alliance, Ohio, visited us. Also, Nephew Russell, on leave from his work in Saigon, paid us a long-anticipated visit. At present, we are trying to nurse back to health our sister, Helen Hourdequin, who arrived, very ill, from Jekyll Island, Georgia.

Here are some excerpts from Kamala Cornelius Asirvatham's letter:

"I often think of my good old days at P.C.W. and get homesick. How I wish to see my classmates but it isn't possible. I'm sorry that so many have left this world. I can never forget the members of my class.

"Time changes and we are thankful for all the lovely experiences of our college days. I often think of dear Miss Coolidge, Miss Root and Miss Marks who were so good to me during my college days. I enjoyed the history of Art with Miss Elizabeth White. I remember how I used to walk in to Miss Craig's Art Studio and enjoy her class now and then. The good old days will never come. Times have changed so much.

"My third daughter Padmini is planning to come to U.S.A. in three years—after her daughter finishes her high school. She is in an English High School here. My daughter is very keen to send her daughter to college in the United States. I wonder if my granddaughter, Jyoti Madura by name, will have a chance to be admitted to Chatham College in September 1973 or 1974. It will be wonderful if she could get her education where I studied. 1973 seems far away but it will be nice if you could give me an idea of scholarships. Do you think Jyoti will have a chance? "I feel very lonely without my husband so, like you, I visit my daughter in Delhi for a month or two."

Mollie Davidson Nass reports that all is well now after a few visits to the hospital. She fell off a chair and injured her right foot, also was treated for anemia. We're glad all is well now.

Charlotte Hunker Hays' granddaughter from California came to Cleveland in April and drove down with Charlotte to North Carolina and stayed until July.

Ruth Kauffman Morrison said, "Our lives have been saddened this year by the loss of two of our family by sudden heart failure: a nephew thirty-one years old and a brother-in-law seventy-two. The first one had much to live for and was so gifted."

Ruth Long sends greetings to all 1918 classmates. She keeps busy and enjoys herself.

Winona Sterling Hopwood reports: "Harold and I are still shuttling back and forth between Florida and Pennsylvania, though we gave up the roadways for the airlines some time ago. The years have passed so quickly it is difficult to realize that this is our Golden Wedding Year and that we have three grandchildren in college this fall. Our older grandson will be a senior at the University of Florida. The next one, Carolyn, will return to the University of West Virginia as a sophomore, and the younger boy will join Bill in Florida to enter Junior College there. We seldom return North in time for college reunions so I enjoy news of friends and classmates in the Recorder.

Your secretary keeps well and busy. I spent the month of July with my daughter and her family in Traverse City, Michigan, with one weekend in Hart. One evening while in Traverse City we drove to the National Music Camp at Interlochen, and heard Van Cliburn in concert there. It was lovely. Thanks to all of you who replied.

As reunion chairman, Helen Horix Fairbanks was in touch with everyone and she has prepared the news for this issue. Helen had replies from all class members except Rita Criste, and the following were present at her home for dinner on Friday evening preceding Alumnae Day on campus: Elizabeth Davidson, Elizabeth Fleming, Katherine McFarland, Ethel Perry, Mary Stevenson, Virginia Wilcox Gilbert, Gladys Wilson Green, Catherine Barnhart Long, Doris Fredericks Toney (from California), Dean Helen Marks, and Marjorie Caughey Musgrave.

We thought we all looked young and gay—probably the class of 1969 didn't agree. It was a fun evening with lots of reminiscing. A letter from Julia Aspinwall Dunlap in Florida reminded us of water fights and other such nonsense of long ago.

Julia, Bill Crane Peebles, Peg Hare Hurst-Brown and Gladys Fournier Todd couldn't come because of family illnesses, but they were all well personally. We are sorry that Imogene Armstrong felt she could not make the trip all the way from El Paso. We missed Betty Shipley Brainerd and Elsie Herron Atwell who had just returned from extensive travels.

There was much talk of grandchildren, too numerous to name individually but all doing well. Hope you all come back for the 55th.

NEW ADDRESSES

Dorothy Burleigh Courtney (Mrs. James O.), 144 North Court Avenue, Somerset, Pa. 15501

Helen Gross Alderman (Mrs. Marquis T.), Route 5, Box 472-E, Hot Springs, Ar. 71901

Elizabeth Wilson Lorenz (Mrs. Lloyd M.), 5555 Gulf Boulevard, Apt. 415, St. Petersburg, Fl. 33706

Helen Allison Dunbar has had a long illness again this year. This time it was a siege of shingles, but we are happy to hear that she is much better now.

Margaret Berryman Loustutter had a good winter until she developed detached retinas in February. An operation and the use of laser beam makes it possible for her to drive but reading still is a problem. Beany still hopes to keep on with his work for another year.

Betty Dean Boots attended Pitt Dental Graduation as her cousin, Dr. Jock Boots, was given an award of Alumnus of the Year for work he had done in Korea and China. Betty is still busy with church and club activities. In October she will review "Everyday Life in New Testament Times" for her missionary group.

Dorothy Burleigh Courtney reports that they have sold their house and are living in a six room apartment with a tiny walled in garden. "Quite a change in living," says she "but so much easier." They still have the cottage for the grandchildren and had the usual busy summer. The youngest grandchild celebrated her first birthday with them. Marion Frank Patterson visited for a week which gave time to catch up on Chatham news. Dot spent an enjoyable ten days at Hilton Head Island with the Pattersons.

Virginia Coggins McNally's letter was a pleasant surprise. She retired September 1st from her post as personnel director of Suburban General Hospital in Bellevue. She says she plans to loaf but I am sure she will become involved in things as we all do. We certainly will look for you, Virginia, at our 50th reunion.

Bonnalyne Connelly asks, "What is there to talk about when you have no grandchildren?" No word from Ina who has the grandchildren.

Rose Gorzo Rapach says at this stage and age, news is confined to one's family. She would enjoy more activity, but her husband's health puts restrictions on that. So, as with most who are grandparents, they travel to visit the children and their families.

Anne Jay writes that her flowers have never been nicer and she has been at home to enjoy them. We are sorry to hear that her mother has not been well. Last winter she and a friend had a house on Palm Island in Sarasota. She will be driving with Peggy to Arizona where Peggy will set up a reading program in the Window Rock area. Anne will fly back later.

Ruth Keck Schell says they keep busy, are enjoying good health and their fourteen grandchildren.

Anne Kiskadden Griggs and Tom had a marvelous time in late April and May—drove through Portugal by car, which was delightful, then joined a Spanish tour group for seven interesting days in Morocco, visiting Tangier, Rabat, Casablanca, Marrakech and Fez—and then spent a few days on their own at Reed's in Maderia.

Florence Neumaker Knapp and Byron spent the winter in Florida except for five days in Washington where they attended the wedding of their oldest granddaughter on March 31st. They were planning to spend six weeks in Germany and Austria, and had tickets for the Passion Play. Newny asks if anyone ever drives through Warren. She says, "The fall is mighty pretty up here."

Susan Scott Tucker was honored by being written up in a Paris Art Magazine illustrating one of her paintings. Congratulations, Susan! We are proud of you. She exhibited in the shows of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh, the Pittsburgh Watercolor Society, and the Three Rivers Art Festival. The Tuckers were looking forward to a Mediterranean cruise in September.

Jane Taylor spent the summer at home playing some bridge and doing hospital sewing. During a visit at Chautauqua she met some of my New Castle acquaintances.

Betty Wilson Lorenz likes their new beach apartment in St. Petersburg. Going in the Gulf or pool is like a vacation. They stay close to home mostly, but did go to Winter Park for a weekend.

Ella May Wilson Clark wrote from Garden City, Long Island, where her son Roger lives. He works for a French Company now entering the American Market. Ella May enjoyed visiting the Kiski campus where there are many new buildings, including the Library with the L. M. Clark Memorial Wing in Nature Science. She finds life without a partner a continual challenge to overcome selfish loneliness.

Your secretary keeps busy in Springdale staying with my 90-year-old aunt. Occasionally I manage to get to New Castle to look after my own affairs. In April I spent three weeks in Naples, Florida, and most of August in Falmouth. My sister was ill, so watching the Nantucket ferry boats from the livingroom windows was as far as our excursion went.

NEW ADDRESSES

Barbara Coit Templeton (Mrs. D. Stewart), 1355 Sage Drive, Dunedin, Fl. 33528

Esther Miller Kagan (Mrs. Henry), Sedgwick Gardens, Apt D-121, Philadelphia, Pa. 19118

We have had no news from Barby Templeton since her move to Florida on August 1, but we have received news of Gertrude Mixer Henry's busy life. She is in the second year of a five-year appointment by Governor Rhodes to the Board of Lorain County Community College in Elyria, Ohio; has rounded out eight years on the Board of the local Red Cross chapter, specializing in service to military families; and was instrumental in the establishment of the Lorain County Visiting Nurse Association. Gertrude's husband is active in Republican politics. She visited her daughter whose husband is stationed in Iran, and met up with Gertrude Ray Mann, '33, whose husband was there with Westinghouse at the time.

Billie Hibbs Williams is happy over the arrival of her first grandchild, Megan, and over the fact that her daughter has moved back to Pittsburgh.

Among our world travelers are Martha Glandon Luthringer and Carolyn Lohr Steele. The Luthringers went on a three-week safari in Africa last fall (1969), and this year they are spending two months in the Orient. The Steeles spent June in Ireland, Scotland and England, followed by an extended visit by their seven-year-old grandson.

A lovely note from Esther Miller Kagan from her new home in Philadelphia tells of months of work on her husband's papers and books following his death in August, 1969. She says, "I decided loneliness (I knew it) was the worst living curse—so I moved [to an apartment] across the hall from Sally . . . I must face reality and try to make a productive life for myself. Living with such a man as I did, having such exciting and stimulating experiences, leaves me even more incapable than I thought. But try I will—and hopefully." Esther reports that son Jonathan, 27, and his wife live in Baltimore where he is a resident in ophthalmology. Son Jeremy, 24, and his wife live in Los Angeles where he is a Fellow at the American Film Institute. One of his short films will be shown at the opening night of the 8th Annual Film Festival at Lincoln Center in New York. During the past summer Esther and Sally visited old friends in Yugoslavia and England. She asks to be remembered to old friends, and says, "Maybe one day soon I'll return to visit."

Hedwig Pregler has returned to Duquesne University for a third year, her second year of supervising student teachers. Leamore Allen caught a BIG fish on her trip to Canada. Grace Davis Mechling, on a tight schedule as therapist, was able to get Lew to his 50th high school reunion in Uniontown, and both hope to get to Florida after Christmas.

Constance Clarke Russ, May 31, 1970

We deeply regret the passing of Constance Clarke Russ, a loyal associate member of our class, and wish to express our sympathy to her husband, children, and two sisters who live in Pittsburgh. Some of us did not have the privilege of knowing Constance for she transferred to the University of Michigan where she was graduated with the class of 1926. She was associated for many years with the Greenwich Welfare Department and was, at her retirement in 1967, assistant welfare commissioner. Her other interests included AAUW, Kappa Delta Alumnae Association, League of Women Voters, Greenwich Woman's Club, and the First Congregational Church where she was active in the Women's Guild.

Mary Ailes Sechler has had an interesting year: a "first" cruise to Bermuda in May, but back in time for Alumnae Day. However, the June highlight was her son's marriage. In July her youngest daughter moved to Winnetka, Illinois, where she already had a sister living. With a son in Pittsburgh, and her oldest daughter in Indiana, Pa., Mary is kept busy circulating. In fact, she may not be back yet from Winnetka where she went early in September.

Abigail Cresswell reports that her "retired" life is busy and interesting with part-time work in the Ellwood City Library, church work, Woman's Club and bridge. She says, "Betsy, my cocker spaniel and woman's home companion, and I manage to keep the home fires burning."

It is with deep sorrow that I bring you the news from Louise Harcom Einstein that her husband died last February. He wasn't feeling well at Christmas, but taught through January. February 1st he went to the hospital for a checkup, the 9th they operated, and the 18th he died. It was an especially virulent type of cancer of the liver. Louise is still teaching and she says, "It keeps me busy, which is a salvation, and I shall manage, I suppose, as others have done, but I don't like it at all." Then Louise went on to remind me that our 45th reunion is coming up next June and of how we used to look at the "girls" and wonder how anyone could be so old! She concluded with a quotation: "It's not how old you are but how you are old." I shall consider this the first notice of a date you all have next June 5th, so put it on your calendars, girls!

Catherine Sayers is contemplating another long trip this coming year, either Japan in the fall or Yugoslavia and the Greek Islands in the spring. She is torn between the two but maybe our reunion date will help her decide. The unpleasant news in her letter was that she had been laid up for seven weeks in the summer with an acute attack of gall bladder and a gastric ulcer. She was her usual efficient self, however, in getting both at once and having her sickness overwith, and now she is "hale and hearty."

Caroline Timothy Mountford has joined the ranks of the retired after 28 years in the library of Wells High School. If she thinks she is busy now "getting in shape to lead a life of ease and travel" she had better be forewarned. It is our fate to wonder very soon how we ever had time to work. Its so easy to say "yes" to everything that comes along when one's life is not circumscribed by a job.

Estelle Silverman Small has returned from a trip to the Scandinavian countries and Spain and Portugal. It was a return to Scandinavia for her after 12 years, and she was again struck by the beauty of the peninsula and the charm of its people. After two years as a widow, Estelle will be particularly sensitive to the difficult period that Louise is living through so courageously now.

As for your secretary, she just keeps going along in the same comfortable rut: calling foreign wives Monday to see who is coming to the Tuesday afternoon gathering at the First United Methodist Church; Monday night fitting them into cars which deliver them to and from their program; and the rest of the week recovering from the ordeal and attending to affairs at home just one leap ahead of a crisis situation. Mother had her 97th birthday last March, is well, loves to have our friends come in, but won't leave the apartment. We read aloud which we both enjoy and recently finished having a happy time with our wonderful Rachel Carson's The Sea Around Us.

Mary Jane Paul has accepted the invitation to our June reunion.

NEW ADDRESSES

Anne Blessing Leslie (Mrs. Merle R.), 114 Abbeyville Road, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15228
Suzanne Finlay Heller (Mrs. John L.), 702 West Indiana Avenue, Urbana, Ill. 61801
Isabel Hoffman Cooper (Mrs.), The Village Green, Apt. 333, 4200 N.W. 3rd Court, Plantation, Fl. 33313
Helen Parkins Fry (Mrs. Robert M.), 7424 North 61st Street, Scottsdale, Az. 85235

Best wishes to all from Kay Caldwell Mayer who spent a week in Virginia Beach with a brother and his wife, and visited relatives in Pittsburgh.

Peg Cousley is enjoying her retirement from teaching and has become involved in many activities, Woman's Club, church circle, sewing, tutoring, etc. She and Suzanne Finlay Heller attended the Alumnae Council last fall. She spent two weeks at Chautauqua and a week at Millersville at the Retired Teachers Recreation Program.

Mary Crawford wrote to Ruth Mary that her brother's three boys were all back from overseas duty and they had a grand reunion at Christmas. Mary retired October 31, 1969 and is enjoying her freedom.

Lib Davidson Lee is still playing a big part of politics. She has been appointed Secretary of the Republican Executive Committee of Allegheny County and has been Republican Vice Chairman in Sewickley for twenty years.

Ruth Dennis did not take the prize trip to Florida that she won, but gave it to a niece and her husband living in Schrevelton, Mo.

Suzanne Finlay Heller and John enjoyed being in Pittsburgh last year, leaving in April to visit Mary in California; then to Urbana, and on to England for the rest of the summer.

Dot Floyd Warren was in Europe again this summer with a group of teachers (taking a course in London) then travelled to Russia.

Sid Friedman Bigg visited the children and toured Hershey and Gettysburg with some of the grandchildren—very exhausting for Grandma and Grandpa.

Fran Fulton McClymonds and John visit in Oklahoma a couple of times a year to see their three grandchildren.

Helen Gordon had a happy reunion with old friends late in the summer of 1969 in a cabin on the north shore of Lake Superior, in the Minnesota Arrowhead country. She received in May 1970 the Women's Advertising Club's top honor, the Silver Medal Award, given to a woman who has contributed to the advancement of both advertising and the community. This is given in cooperation with the American Advertising Federation and Printers Ink, a trade magazine. Helen established Helen Gordon Advertising in 1950 and handles ten consumer and general business accounts. She is a life member of Women's Ad Club and a past president, also a former director of the Fashion Group and a charter member of W.E.A.L. (Women's Equity Action League). She serves on the public relations committee of the Cleveland Y.W.C.A. and has volunteered for the Welfare Federation. A nice write-up and picture was in the Cleveland Press. Quite a busy gal, Helen and congratulations from us all.

Isabel Hoffman Cooper, in a letter to Ruth Swisshelm in the alumnae office, reported that the organization for which she was working ran out of money, cutting short her job which should have gone on for two years. However, she intends to remain in Florida and has moved to a new apartment.

Nora Lewis Harlan provided some news of two former '28-ers. Evelyn Pearson Davis lives in Pyster Bay, is widowed, has two step-children, and spends most of her time traveling—summers with friends at Martha's Vineyard, winters in Florida, and other times abroad. Mary Russel Hapgood and Nora meet frequently at the Twentieth Century Club. Nora and Jim spent last fall in the British Isles. This year they are in California visiting their son and his family.

and looking over retirement places. Their younger son has a place in the Adirondaks so some time is spent there. Nora sees Jule Lustenberger Adams often. Jule still plays tennis and is the oldest living member of the Garden of the Gods Club in Colorado Springs.

Betty Malcolm Clemens' son Malcolm and his family are in Brussels, Belgium for two years.

We extend our sympathy to Betty whose mother died on September 23.

Alice Mahood Torrens went with a friend on a 15-day AARP trip to Hawaii in April, stopping on the way home in Minneapolis to see her son and his family. He moved in June to Tacoma, Washington, where he is Food Director at Pacific Lutheran University. Alice spends several hours each day with her very alert 95-year-old mother who is in a nursing home nearby.

Kay Owen, who retired from teaching in June and visited cousins in Michigan and Illinois during the summer, has not decided what she will do this winter besides resting and perhaps some travel.

Mildred Parrill Gilmore's husband is semi-retired, and she plans to retire from teaching next June so they can enjoy more traveling. They expect to go to the Bahamas for Christmas.

Betty Piel was in Pittsburgh this summer staying a few days with the Steinmillers.

Peg Port Arens substituted at the high school this year, and went to Switzerland and Holland in May. Her two sons and their families (5 grandchildren) spent their vacations with Peg on the Cape.

Betty Porter Steinmiller and Del are the proud grandparents of David Forrest Frederick who was born in September, 1969, and came to live with Sally and Bob in November, 1969. They have been to Detroit several times to see them, and also to Baltimore to visit Mary and Don Stout.

Bessie Rosen Birshstein's family is well and she is still a business "gal"—women's wear. They are still debating the mini, midi, maxi problem, but have decided on "wear what you like." Thanks for the advice, Bessie. She and Joe have traveled, too, to London, Rome, Copenhagen and Israel. Her husband is an avid Stonewall Jackson fan and is considered an authority on the general. He also is involved in a Citizenship Training Program. Their daughter Barbara is finishing her Ph.D. in science at Johns Hopkins. She was in France in August attending a science institute, one of two selected from the United States.

Ruth Mary Wilkinson and Honor were in Pittsburgh at Easter time and enjoyed seeing the snow after four years in Florida. They brought their minister and his wife back for a visit. In July they went to New York and home via Pittsburgh.

A letter from Ruth Work Miller and Bob came to us in June saying they had sold their cabin on Ahmic Lake and bought another one nearby. "Time is a-flitting and we aren't getting any younger, so come up." Betty Porter Steinmiller and Del went up on July 28th and we arrived on August 1st., stopping in Dayton and in Detroit to see Sally, Bob and little David. We had spent a week in Florida with Barbara and her family. Betty and Del left the 4th to go home and on to Chautauqua. We left the 10th and spent a few days in Pittsburgh with Betty and Del. Ruth and Bob have a beautiful place and large enough for the three boys and their families.

There was an article in last years Recorder about Doctors. In case some of you do not know, Barbara Stephenson Bruner, '52, is our daughter and we are very proud of her. I want to thank those who replied to my cards and to those who pledged to the Centennial Fund. Peg Cously helped with writing and calling:

DEATHS

Clara Moore Stuart, June 13, 1970

Margaret Schwan, May 9, 1970

Both Bobby and Peggy suffered massive coronary attacks. Our deepest sympathy is extended to their families. Books have been placed in the Chatham Library in their memory.

Our special thanks go to Peg Loeffler Loftus who served as our reunion chairman. We filled three tables at the luncheon. Later we spent a very pleasant afternoon on campus reading notes from those who were thoughtful enough to write and writing a note to our beloved Miss Dysart. Six husbands joined their wives for the president's reception and dinner. Those attending the evening events were Marian and Ed Schap, Adelaide and Robert McLaughlin, Lucille and Jerome Strauss, Ethel and Dick Grabe, Peg and Frank Loftus, Mary and Fred Nelan and Dot Thompson Seif. All reported a wonderful 40th.

Incidentally, in case you use the reunion place mats as reference for class addresses, there are two errors. Mary Woodworth Nelan's new address appears in the list above, and Margaret Post Griffin's should read San Anselmo, not San Carlos.

Gerry Anderson Daum was sorry to miss our reunion, but Sarasota is just too far away. The Daums have purchased a campmobile and plan to tour the south-eastern states.

Catherine Backofen, having received a library degree from Carnegie, has retired after thirty-five years in the public school system. She plans to enter technical library work this fall. Catherine has returned from five weeks in Europe where she saw the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

Madeline Barnhart Mandy reports that her husband was ill last winter, but is coming along nicely now. They were able to visit their daughter and four grandchildren at Chagrin Falls during August.

Annamae Beatty Dreibelbis has resigned from the public school system and accepted a position at Bright Wood Academy. Although her husband is still recovering from injuries received in an accident, they enjoyed a trip to Sea Level, North Carolina.

Pauline Bickhart Garrett missed the reunion because of a business commitment. Polly and Frank toured the Orient last October.

Myra Boor Fuller and Denton have been busy restoring a home that is more than 150 years old. It is called "Five Mile House" because it was once a wagon stop five miles from Cumberland on the National Pike. Their daughter Martha is at Alfred College in New York state where she is a technical assistant in micro-biology.

Miriam Bulger visited friends in the Virgin Islands last year. She also spent two months in the British Isles, visiting relatives in both Ireland and Scotland. She recommends that the best way to travel is to hire a car.

Vi Chadwick Rosso traveled most of the night so that she could attend our 40th reunion. She also attended a Rosso family reunion the weekend of July 4th. Vi has all three sons in school this fall. The son who had been wounded in Vietnam entered Westchester, David is at Temple, and John at the University of Pennsylvania. Vi's first grandchild, Jennifer Anne, was born on September 24 to Edwin and his wife Nancy.

Dorothy Collins Pierce is serving her third year as president of the Women's Association of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society. It now has more than 1,200 members. Dot would welcome into the group anyone who might be interested. Bill is now president of Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corporation, and son Bill is a free lance photographer in Princeton.

Betty Daugherty Dennis writes that her husband Fred is retired and that life in Santa Fe is quite exciting. Daughter Donna lives in San Mateo, California with her husband and three children. Son, Fred, a naval lieutenant, lives in Long Beach, California with his wife and five children. Betty considers herself lucky that daughter Lynda, her husband and son Danny live in Santa Fe.

Louise Dickenson attended our reunion, visited her sister in Washington, D.C., and then had her sister as a summer guest.

Eleanor Diskin Houghton is now a legal Floridian. She says they do not play golf and are not interested in boating, but are very happy in the sun. Last year they enjoyed two cruises, one in the Caribbean, the other to Bermuda. They continue to spend their summers in Maine.

Dorothy Fisher Maury spent last spring with her sister in Coral Gables where they were joined by another sister from Houston, Texas.

Mary Frye Llewellyn decided not to attend our reunion because she and Allen had been in Pittsburgh in May on business. Their daughter spent last summer at Cape Cod and enjoyed it as much as Mary enjoyed Woods Hole when she was a student.

Justina Gill Beggs hated to miss our reunion, but was busy with final exams at school.

Marian Haines Schap had a busy summer with visits from her sister, Ed's nephew with his two boys, a summer course, and a twenty-two day tour of Scandinavia.

Winnie Hartman Whiteman and her husband were fortunate enough to choose the two worst weeks of last winter to spend in Mexico City and Acapulco.

Mart Henderson Lewis missed our reunion because of the illness of her mother, who is ninety years old.

Adelaide Hyndman McLaughlin boasts of a new grandson born on June 11th to her daughter-in-law, Sue, and son Bob. They live in Boulder, Colorado, here Bob is going to school after four years in the Army. Adelaide enjoyed the Folk Festival in Kutztown, Pennsylvania.

Lucille Jackson Strauss is busy getting the revision of the book Scientific and Technical Libraries ready for the publisher. She admits having taken time out for a four-week vacation, ten days of which were spent in Czechoslovakia. She especially enjoyed a small town in southern Bohemia. Lucille is teaching the course in chemical literature at Penn State again this fall.

Mary King Guckert has resigned as librarian at Fulton School, and is very happy to be a full-time housewife.

Martha Leathers Stewart stole time from the golf course in Brookville to attend our reunion.

Ethel Lehmann Grabe spent two weeks in California with her oldest daughter who lives near San Diego. Ethel's three girls and a boy have presented her with four grandchildren—three boys and a girl.

Nancy McIlwain Sweet sent an interesting brochure describing the colonial home constructed in 1824 in which she lives. She extended an invitation to her classmates to stop and visit if we should happen to be anywhere near Chezy, N.Y. Her extracurricular activities include two granddaughters, Debbie, 3, and Shari, 1. Nancy hopes (as do we all) that her hip operation this past year will be her last.

Mary Mears DeWeese returned August 25th from Vineland, New Jersey. Mary's husband is now selling real estate and insurance with T. J. Lewis Company in McKeesport. Mary and Marie Bowser Lower manage to visit each other and have continued a constant friendship.

Mary Louise Miller Pitcairn is recovering from a broken bone. She visited her daughter and two-year-old grandson, John F. Robb the 3rd, at their lovely home in Chautauqua, N.Y.

Marcy Murray decided that it was more important to go ahead with an ear operation than to be with us at reunion. Marcy is serving as acting president of our Southern California Alumnae Club.

We wish to extend our deepest sympathy to Meredith Murray Heckman whose husband Joe died July 12th. She is finding comfort in thirty-eight years of happy memories, her three daughters, their husbands, and eleven grandchildren.

Veronica Netopil Morrone has retired from her social work. She visits in Europe, especially in Vienna where she has friends. Veronica worked in a bank in Vienna before she came to America.

Eleanor Nevins Rubenstein had a busy summer. She visited a spa in New Jersey, took in the New York theatre, and contacted many of you. Eleanor enjoys her two grandchildren, Rebecca and David.

Elizabeth Palen Cullen does volunteer work at the library. On June 1st she returned from a trip to Europe where she spent one week in Vienna and two weeks in Yugoslavia. Betty has three granddaughters.

Louise Peterson Jamesson, who retired from teaching, spent two weeks in New England last summer and is planning a trip to the Greek Islands and Turkey.

Margaret Post Giffin has stepped aside from her position as curriculum director to that of a teacher of the educationally handicapped. Her mother is recovering from a serious operation. Peg, her two daughters, and their families continue to spend their vacations at beautiful Lake Tahoe.

Sara Reamer Matlack made reservations to attend our reunion, but could not make it because of her health.

Dorothy Reitz Claney reported that her husband is recovering from a heart attack and that she had broken both of her wrists.

Dorothea Ryman Neilson attended the reunion luncheon and let us know that she plans to retire. In spite of arthritis in both hands, Dottie got in touch with many of you. Thank you, Dottie.

Ann Saxman Underwood missed the reunion because her youngest son, Charlie, was being graduated from Shorter College, Rome, Georgia. He is now living in Chicago. Daughter Ann is not too busy with her three children to prevent her from studying for a master's at Pitt. Son Tom, a bachelor, lives in Detroit. Jim, Jr. lives with his family in Latrobe. Ann has taken up needlepoint and painting.

Elise Searing Loxterman returned August 22nd from three weeks in Europe. She visited Munich, Innsbruck, Salzburg, Vienna, Budapest, and Lucern. A new granddaughter last May brings her total to four granddaughters and two grandsons.

Alice Sheridan McClain expressed a hope that she will be able to leave the New York area when her husband retires. They have three grandchildren.

Dorothy Thompson Seif has just returned from down under. She spent a week in Sydney, Australia, flew the Great Reef Barrier, and visited in New Zealand and the Fiji Islands. Dot presented our class gift ($605) to the Laberta Dysart Scholarship at the reunion luncheon.

Louise Vallowe Spinelli visited her daughter in Denver, Colorado. She plans to continue teaching.

Lois Watt Cooper, after attending the reunion, visited in Sea Island, Georgia. She plans to spend the winter in her apartment in Fort Lauderdale, Florida.

Mary E. Woodworth Nelan enjoyed a trip to the Hawaiian Islands with the Syria Shrine. Mary also spent some time at Berkeley Springs for baths and therapy for injuries sustained in a fall last Easter, and in August entered the hospital for treatment. While there, her husband was in a car accident and was taken to another hospital. We hope both are recovered by this time.

We thank all of you who responded to the request for funds for the class treasury. If you still wish to contribute, it is not too late.

DEATH

Mary Cooke McGough, November 21, 1969

We extend our sincere sympathy to the family of Mary McGough, who died less than a year after her husband's death. Mary's son Cooke is married to a Chatham graduate, Mildred Stewart, '62. Our sympathy goes out, also to Lillian Hunter Stoecklein whose husband died suddenly in New York on August 31, 1970.

Congratulations to Dottie Russell on being selected for Who's Who of American Women this year. She directs social service at Columbia Hospital in Wilkesburg.

Travel took classmates in all directions. Sally Miller Brash went with her sister, Esther Miller Kagan '24 to Rome, Yugoslavia and London. Jane Norman Widdowson, whose son was married in October, vacationed in San Francisco. Katherine Lee Sisco journeyed from Dearborn, Michigan, where she and her husband are active in music groups, to Pennsylvania, New York, and New England. Ruth Miller Page and Fred enjoyed a June trip to Hawaii. Alice Bair Albright visited friends in Florida, and saw Marion Stone Howard in her new home last Christmastime. Marian Brindle Miller and Fred, who had such a wonderful trip to the Orient last fall, were planning one to Spain and Portugal this year. Carolyn Bickell Morris, happily continuing in good health, and Art enjoyed a trip to Tucson and San Francisco last November.

Greetings came from Betsy Dearborn Souren, who has two sons in college and three grandchildren; and from Lillian Lafferty Wills, who is as busy in Florida as she used to be in Pittsburgh. Lil has made three trips north to visit children and their families.

Bea Andrews Dimsdale and Lawrence are also as busy as ever in their Arizona retirement, she with League of Women Voters and he with legal aid work.

Peg Eisman Muranji enjoys her church work in Petrolia and Fairview—says she has done everything except preach!

Rita Lefton Pincus, busy with church and community affairs, is especially happy that her younger daughter's husband is safely home from Vietnam.

Sally Brash is teaching at Harcum Junior College and Allen's Lane Art Center. Her son is one of the better young poets, his work having appeared in Atlantic Monthly, Best Poems of 1968, and other fine publications.

Mary Frances Tarr Peat, Jean Mueller Knetsche, Margaret Price Guyton and Jo Herrold Sponheimer responded with greetings but no news.

Mary Lou Hockensmith Murdoch is able to enjoy her three grandchildren more often, now that her daughter has moved back to Pittsburgh.

Sara Stevenson spends vacations in Pittsburgh when she is not teaching Latin and English in Indiana, Pa.

Caroline Brady Wilson is an enthusiastic worker for the West Virginia Highlands Conservancy, trying to have the Otter Creek area declared a wilderness and preserved for the benefit of both wild life and people. In this age of pollution and destruction, more power to you, Caroline.

Your correspondent, Alice MacKenzie Swaim, has had her ninth book of poetry published, Beyond the Catnip Garden, and was honored by having both television and radio programs about it as well as newspaper interviews. Also this summer, following her husband's retirement, they moved into a lovely apartment overlooking the Susquehanna River in Harrisburg which they are enjoying tremendously.

The balance in the class treasury is $32.41, and dollar contributions are always welcome to keep us solvent for class expenses. Checks should be made payable to Chatham Alumnae Class Account and sent to Ruth Swisshelm in the alumnae office. The savings account for our reunion gift to the College now stands at $260.

DEATH

Jean Walker Fox, March 10, 1970. We were saddened by the sudden death of Jean from a massive coronary occlusion. She had just completed her work at Carnegie Institute in connection with getting her late husband's book to press, and was planning to round up a job for herself. A gift in her memory has been made to the Chatham Library.

Peggy reporting:

Berenice Beamer Williamson had a delightful trip to Florida and cruise to Jamaica last fall. Her first granddaughter arrived in late winter, and then in May her husband had a cardiac arrest and is now recuperating at home. However, Berenice says if they start to count the good and the sad things that happened in their family the past year, "We consider ourselves blessed." I guess all of us can say amen to that.

Peggy Donaldson reports that she was busy during one week of her vacation renovating her house, and the other week she spent at Chautauqua, New York. She hopes that a merger of her insurance firm with another one will not mean her early retirement.

Hazel Ellwood McClure says they like England, but miss their friends and loved ones. We join with her in mourning the passing of her mother in August, and rejoice that she has a new grandson. She says they travel to the Continent now and then, and expect to be in England some years. We are again invited to get in touch with her if any of us go to London.

Eleanor Ewing Wilson (Nookie) was in California the month of June enjoying her grandson and being on hand for the arrival of a granddaughter, Michelle. The rest of the summer was spent at their cottage on Lake Erie. Son David, who is in the Navy, will be home after two months in Cuba and last winter in Antarctica. That's the service for you—no regard for seasons and places!

Marjorie Gibson Shoemaker had a lovely trip to Mexico by jet plane with stops at Mexico City, Taxco and Acapulco. She reported everything was fine except the drinking water. She attended the national meeting of Presbyterian Women at Purdue, and is now getting ready to fly to New York with her daughter to sightsee. (My, how the life of a minister's wife has changed!)

Synnove Haugbom always has an interesting life. She is the Curator of the Treat Gallery, Bates College in Lewiston, Maine, and spent four months getting ready for the sesquicentennial textile exhibit there. The brochure she sent was most interesting—various mills, etc. had demonstrations of weaving, hooking, embroidery, stitchery, batik, and lectures on textiles in colonial America and fabrics in 19th century New England. Synnove says she enjoyed a visit from Marion Starkey Hamlet and other friends. She hopes to go to Norway at the end of the year to update her research, but she has not had time to do her dissertation work or to take a vacation. Good luck with both, Synnove.

Rose Hollingsworth Stambaugh enjoyed a trip to San Francisco last year, visiting her grandson who is now four. Her three sons are all in college—one studying law, another getting his master's in elementary education, and the third in building construction. Her daughter is a senior in high school.

Ann Irwin Hoffman received two very hard blows at the same time, and the class wishes to extend sympathy—her husband Clair died, and the same weekend Ann received news that her son Eric's leg had to be amputated. Eric was in Vietnam, but is now at home and goes to Valley Forge Hospital at intervals. Son Mark is in his third year at Miami University in Ohio.

Josephine Johnson Rennick's son John was graduated from the University in June and was married the following week. Of their five children, only one remains at home—George who is a senior at Oak Ridge High. Josephine has one grandchild. An item of interest to all our class is that Dr. Anna Whiting is working in a laboratory at Oak Ridge.

Madeline Lee Sale says they are leading busy, happy lives, close enough to New York that friends stop to see her and her husband when they go to New York on business or vacations. They had a fine vacation in Jamaica last November, and a month in the southern states in April.

Luise Link Ely is getting ready to move to Florida about the first of December, after having been in Newton Square just about a year. Luise baby-sat with one grandchild while her daughter Lynn had her second baby (in Pittsburgh) in August. She mentions selling a child's story about WORMS, and we shall have to get that book. Don't know if it has been published yet or not.

Mary Jane reporting:

Mary Louise Martin enjoyed a wonderful bus trip to Cape Cod the end of July.

Alice McCarthy Bowman and her husband moved from Mississippi to Memphis for business reasons. This has been a year of weddings for them. Daughter Patti, who is in University of Tennessee Nursing School, was married in June. Then No. 3 son, Rush, Jr., married in August. Oldest son Peter teaches art in a college in North Carolina; and second son Thomas and wife are moving to Greenwood, Mississippi where he will be in Legal Aid.

Anne McCullough Frey reports a wonderful vacation in Fort Lauderdale, and a robbery on the day they returned. Trips to Detroit to visit her four step-grandchildren and to Stratford, Ontario for the Shakespeare Festival proved delightful.

Ruth Miller Allen and husband Frank have had two extended trips—one to the Northwest and Canada, and the other along the East Coast visiting all the off-shore islands—during the past year. This period of semi-retirement occurred between the selling of their card and gift shop and the completion of a new shopping center where they will start another—their fifth in Florida. Best of luck in your new surroundings!

The sympathy of the class is extended to Bernice Montgomery whose mother passed away in December. We were also sorry to learn that because of a heart condition, Bernice has had to resign her teaching position in Butler Junior High School. She has been enjoying the frolicking of the Appaloosas on her sister's farm near Knox, Pa.

Charlotte Patterson Rose had two weddings this year. Daughters Jean and Janet were married within a month of each other. Jean, who had just been graduated from St. Andrew's Presbyterian College in Laurinburg, North Carolina, will be living in California, but Janet will be near her parents. Son John has lived in South Miami since his marriage eight or nine years ago, and is head of the computer department at South Dade Junior College. Charlotte and Cal have two grandsons.

A visit from the French contingent delighted Dorothy Schenck Van der Voort and husband Bob. Ellen and her children were in the States for six weeks, and her husband for three. All had a two-week vacation in Florida since Bernard was especially eager to see it. Perfect weather added greatly to their enjoyment of the wonders of that state.

Eunice Shatzer Stentz's family remains almost unchanged with her daughter and two sons in North Canton, Ohio, and her son and his daughter and son in Tampa, Florida where he is taking further studies at Southern University of Florida. Eunice and Ed returned in July from a month's tour of the Far East, including Expo'70, Manila, Taipei, Hong Kong, etc.

Marion Starkey Hamlet writes that her household, like many others, is too rushed to enjoy the pleasures of middle life. Her octogenarian parents are with them part of the time. All three children had summer jobs, and have returned to their respective schools: Deb, a junior at Mt. Holyoke; Jeff, a senior at the Loomis School; and Sue, a junior at Chaffee, the girls' co-ordinate of Loomis. Marion and Frank enjoyed a trip through northern New England where they were so pleased to see Synnove Haugbom at Bates College and admire her fine textile exhibit at the college gallery. Last spring Marion had the joy of accompanying some of the high school faculty and students on a tour of Greece and its islands, especially Rhodes, thus fulfilling a long-time desire to actually see some of the classic ruins and works of art.

Helen Walker Empfield still finds her job at the Chicago Public Library "great." She and Jim left the end of September to visit his family in Phoenix. Their family is well, busy, and spread around. Bruce is in California; David in Maine; John at Shimer College in Illinois; Mary in Evanston; with just Bill at home. Mary's new baby girl brings the total grandchildren up to three. Both grandparents rejoice that Mary and her family live within walking distance.

Margaret White enjoyed vacationing with friends in Colorado.

Our sympathy is extended to Ellen Yeager Husak and her family in the sudden death of her only daughter-in-law, Janet.

As for your secretaries, Margaret Goldberg Maxwell enjoyed a trip to South Carolina in April and left in September for a trip to the northeastern United States and Canada. Her three grandchildren are quite the center of interest. Mary Jane Young thoroughly enjoyed a trip to Scandinavia, Oberammergau, and the Salzburg Music Festival. She returned to the States on one of the new 747's, thankfully arriving before the wave of hijacking began.

NEW ADDRESSES

Mary Virginia Brown Bowden (Mrs. Gordon T.), 300 East 33rd Street, Apt. 8-M, New York, N.Y. 10016

Charlotte Ley Glover (Mrs. Harry A.), Greenview Arms, Apt. 3-B, Route 130, Greensburgh, Pa. 15601

Jane Throckmorton Meyer (Mrs. William A.), 154 North Bellefield Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213

Marian Johnson Woodfield divides her time between a new home on Lake Soxaway, North Carolina and a condominium in Delray Beach, Florida, from which she can see the ocean and the intercoastal waterway. She is busy with hospital thrift shop, knitting, and decoupage. Three of her children are settled in careers and the fourth, Sally, attends Wittenburg University in Ohio.

Frances Ferguson O'Callaghan also has homes in Florida and North Carolina. Fran works for the local newspaper as a girl reporter. The O'Callaghans stop on their travels to visit their son, Robert, in Atlanta, and daughter An, in Fort Lauderdale.

Jane Griffith Potter's daughter Susan plans to study architecture after having graduated from Washington University. Charles is a junior at Colgate, and Carolyn is a high school junior.

Mary Virginia Brown Bowden enjoyed her work with the Falk Ecology Study Committee last spring which took place on the Chatham campus. In August, Mary Virginia and her husband went to the Scandinavian countries and Russia.

Miriam Brunt Smith moved to Bryn Mawr to be closer to Haverford State Hospital where she is assistant to the director of social services.

Joan Dodds Shrader spent her vacation in Ocean City. Daughter Nancy is a junior at Chatham, and son, John is in law school.

Harriet Bannatyne Moelmann's father passed away in August. Her son Jack is still in Europe with the Air Force. Son Larry graduated from Princeton and is in the University of Michigan Law School.

Jean Maeder Lindsay's son Bill returned in great shape from his stint in Vietnam. While there, he spent his free time rewiring a bombed-out Vietnamese hospital. He is now settled in the Midland area in the insurance business. The Lindsays spent three weeks last winter on the islands of Jamaica, Antigua and Saint Thomas.

Mary Jane Seaton Young's husband Ed is still at KDKA, mainly reporting the "Pirates" and Penn State football. Ed spends much time volunteering in the field of mental health. He is past state president and on many mental hospital boards. Their son Pete graduated from Yale and served two years in the Navy. He is now a second-year student at Pitt Law School. He is married and his wife is in the graduate school of social work. Jane is associate professor of biology at the Allegheny campus of the Community College.

Katrina Utne Brown hopes to get to our 35th reunion. She asked how much she owed toward her share of our reunion gift, which gives me a chance to tell you all that our fund now is over $1000. Please send your contribution as soon as possible. The original plan made at our last reunion was $10 a year for 5 years or $50 a member. Thanks to those who have already paid in full and to some who have contributed more than required.

Ruth Simpson Woolford is still working in a stationary store and party shop. The family has been increased by two granddaughters. Ruth's son Sam is a sophomore at Brown. Occasionally Ruth gets to Pittsburgh to visit with her 92-year-old mother and 94-year-old aunt.

Mary Jane Carmichael Garvin is proud that her youngest, Jane, is now a freshman at Chatham living in Woodland Hall. The Garvin's enjoyed a trip to Hawaii in June, attending the Million Dollar Round Table Convention.

The Garvins, the Moelmans (Harriet Bannatyne and John) and the Lees (Helen Lindsay and Ed) were together several times during the past year: in Ft. Lauderdale in the spring, at Normandie Lee's wedding on June 6 (she graduated from Chatham on May 24), and at Harriet's father's funeral services in August. Lola Wright Crawford also attended the Lee wedding.

Come to our 35th reunion on June 5th. At our last reunion there were more out-of-towners present than those living in western Pennsylvania. We had fun seeing old friends, and this time we hope many more will join us. We have all changed, especially Chatham, so do come and see all that is new.

Helen reporting:

We of the class of '38 should start our own travel bureau—it seemed from your replies that no ship, boat, jet or auto moved unless one of us was on it.

Kay Arnold Dague and daughter Patricia visited me (that's hinterland Appalachia) in November for a too short but wonderful visit. Kay's children, Pat, David and Rusty went west this summer, Rusty having completed his stint for Uncle Sam. Kay is, in her own words, "involved in this 'n that" which includes seeing Dee into his eighth year at school.

"Avast there, me hearties" is Mary Baldwin's cry as she returned this July from the Windjammer Cruise out of Camden, Maine.

Winifred Bliss Endres' note told of a trip to Europe in May with attendance at the Passion Play, a visit to New York with Gene Detweiler Davis and the Pittsburgh Playhouse Group, and two months at their home in Chautauqua, New York. Meantime, Winnie's daughter Jane went to Europe, also. Morrie, Jr., was off to Vietnam, hopefully to return by November, and Bill returned to Mercersburg Academy as a senior.

Chita Cate Beal finds it difficult to keep up with her far-flung family. In June she became a "London housewife" for three weeks while she helped son Terry furnish a large "flat" and loved the experience. Daughter Jean arrived in London and borrowed Terry's car to drive to Spain where she worked in a camp during July, and in August studied at the University of Salamanca. Daughter Nan arrived in Pittsburgh in July, borrowed a car to drive west, and then traveled through Mexico. Son Peter visited Canada but is now at work in Pittsburgh. Chita's husband Bill has teamed up with Roger Latham on a movie.

Marge Chubb Randall says, "My year of travel is over and I return to teach my second-grade Mexican-Americans. Last fall I travelled in Canada, through eastern U.S., Florida and Mexico. Later my husband and I spent four months in Morocco, Portugal, Spain, Greece, Austria and Germany traveling by freighter, plane, train, bus, cruise ship and car. Oh yes, a lot was on foot, too."

Cotty Cottrell Deemer has three children happily married and two grandchildren. Bruce, her son, graduated from high school and will serve six months in the Army Reserve this fall.

Liza Coates Elliott actually wrote her card in an airport. She reports that she comes to Pittsburgh fairly often. In June Liza and Paul attended two commencements, with visits to Cape Cod and Maine between ceremonies. Their son Peter is in Chicago working and attending graduate school, while Tom is still in the Boston area. Liza's last line is a classic—"Paul and I maintain a residence in Michigan, and sometimes we're both there."

Your other class secretary, Mary Deemer Nagel, attended the national meeting of United Presbyterian Women at Purdue in July while George and Harry were at Scout camp. Son John graduated from the University of Pennsylvania where he was commissioned as an ensign. He is studying at the Nuclear Power School in Maryland. Mary Lou is at home and planning to be married in October. Charles attends Davis and Elkins in West Virginia—so, you see, Mary is busy traveling, too.

Helen Finkel Eger is pausing in her travels to teach senior high English and history as well as beginning her study for a master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh. Terry is working at Harvard, and Jan studied in Japan this summer prior to his senior year at college.

Florence Gibbs Momeyer and her husband, Glenn, are going to Europe this fall. Meanwhile, she continues as Associate Executive Director of the Retarded Children's Association. Floss and Glenn proudly announce the birth of a first grandchild born to Rick and Susan. Rick teaches philosophy at Miami University; Doug is an attorney in Chicago; and Alan is starting graduate school in social work at Pitt.

As Dotty Hauk Bryen says, she can be found at the door "suitcase in hand" when there's a trip to be taken. Last winter she and Jimmy went to Mexico. During mid-August there was a trip to Hilton Head Island, South Carolina, and then to Charlotte, North Carolina to drop Becky off for her third year at Queen's College. Next spring the Bryen family will jet to Europe. Between trips Dotty, as part of the Adult Basic Education Tutors program, tutored a young German girl.

An exciting trip to the Orient and a joyful meeting with their son Mike, who flew to Hong Kong from Vietnam, was only part of a busy year for Dottie Hunter Haas. To add to their happiness Mike returned from Vietnam later, and Gary was married in February.

There were no long journeys for me, Helen Johnson Montgomery. Perhaps next year will be my year to travel. Sam continues his music education at West Virginia University. Our daughter, Susan, took her master's degree orally in a University of Wisconsin building while riots took place outside. With her master's in history she is teaching in the high school in Delevan, Wisconsin.

Ruth Kleitz Buel delayed her vacation trip until this fall. Her daughter Barbara was a "Zum-Zum" girl at the Three Rivers Stadium this summer before she returned to Pitt for her final trimester. Virginia, a senior in high school, is busy with school activities and awaiting acceptance at the college of her choice.

Bea Lynch Perrin, who moved to a Fifth Avenue apartment this year, took a trip to Puerto Rico to recuperate from the moving and refurbishing. Bea said her poodle is getting used to elevator-riding—which is a trip for a poodle, you must agree.

Thanks for answering—and now over to Mary . . .

Mary reporting:

Barbara McCormick Tener and Ed enjoyed their annual vacation at Bay Head, New Jersey. Daughter Kathleen, a candidate for the doctorate in economics from Harvard, is an economist at Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, and was married to Roger D. Smith on Decoration Day. Daughter Constance is teaching French in the Montross, Virginia high school.

Eleanor Meanor Croyle and Bob are playing a lot of golf even in the 95 degree heat. Barbara and her husband live nearby, Bob, Jr., and wife Ann are stationed at Ft. Bragg, and Phil is studying at Baylor Medical School in Houston after three years at Stanford.

Thelma Nieser is kept busy at Westinghouse, but not too busy to say "Hello."

Peggy Perry Huessner and Dick took their family to Japan, with stops in San Francisco and Honolulu. They all loved Japan, the clean Japanese, their extreme politeness, their deluxe service, even the "Kamicaze taxi drivers." At Expo 70, the children became photographer's models for the dark-haired natives, and the four also were deluged with requests for autographs. "We didn't think we were celebrities," and "Yes, we would go again!"

Chriss Price Cannon has a new address almost in the heart of Chicago. One of her closest neighbors is Hugh Hefner, the fabulous "bunny man." Perhaps Chriss will be a "mother of the hutch." She is glad to be close to her son and his wife.

Sally Reese Warrick retired from her library job and enjoys being home. Dick Jr. was discharged from the Army, and both he and his dad commute to work in Pittsburgh from Washington, Pa. Sally had a delightful surprise visit from Martha Jean Bradley Stelmach (P.C.W. x'39).

Mary Margaret Schmitt reports that she declined an invitation to serve as chairman of the local Academy of Religion and Mental Health for the coming year.

We extend the sympathy of the class to Florence Shields Kevan in the death of her father, William A. Shields.

Helen Thomas Nevin is happy she can "navigate" again. Her fractured ankle is healed. Son Tom, a 2nd Lt., and his wife are at Port Rucker, Alabama. Grandson Jody is in third grade.

Edith Thompson had a wonderful trip to Europe in August, the Grand Tour in 22 days. To London, then by plane to Amsterdam, and from there by bus through western Europe, seeing Rotterdam, Brussels, portions of West Germany, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Austria, Monaco, Italy, and France. Every day was full of new highlights, bust most beautiful of all was the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

Ruth Clark Nelson and husband Edward are observing the 25th anniversary of his parotrate at the Emmanuel Baptist Church in Portland, Maine. Ruth was privileged to represent Chatham at the inauguration of the president of Nasson College in Springfield, Maine.

From "two miles up the beach from President Nixon in San Clemente" comes word from "Punky" Cook Clifford, the first in a long list of 1940 nomads. She left her A.A.U.W. and real estate activities for a trip to Florida, North Carolina (to visit their oldest son who's in the Coast Guard), then on to Pittsburgh for the first visit in twelve years. Too bad it couldn't have been at reunion time!

Hail! to golfer Peg Dunseath Wilson—a hole-in-one at North Park Golf Course! Fresh from this triumph, she toured and golfed in Michigan, including sightseeing in Fort Dearborn and Greenfield Village, shopping in Petoskey, luxuriating in the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, and the excitement of riding in a dune buggy.

Betty Eastwood McConnell says she still enjoys island living in St. Thomas where her husband Jim is now Canon of All Saints Cathedral. Betty is teaching 5th grade in a ghetto area Catholic School which has a charming mixture of native, British Island, French and American. Her daughter is a New Orleans housewife with a year-old daughter. One son is in 10th grade at St. Andrew School, Boca Raton, Fla., and the other a 4th-grader in St. Thomas.

A new address and a nice long letter came from Jane Hanauer Kirk, who has left Beaver Falls and her favorite bridge partners to join the duplicate enthusiasts in nearby Canton and Akron. Jane said her daughter, an R.N., and son-in-law work in the local hospital and built a home in the Kirk backyard so Jane could easily spoil the three grandchildren. Her son lives in Fairfax, Va. and has a daughter 2½ and a son 7 months—too far away to spoil. She says "hello" to everyone and extends an invitation to drop in in Orrville. She joins all of us in finding the thought of 30 years devastating.

The Trapps (Caddie Lou Kinzer and Charley) had fun entertaining a Finnish graduate student in their home this summer, and Caddie Lou hopes next reunion will bring forth the "rest of the troops."

Rachael Kirk Bobo's nomadic adventures took her to Trinidad and Tobago in December and a long awaited 3-week tour of England in May and June.

"Had the luxury of going on vacation by myself" says Pat Krause Kosco, "attended the National Convention of Mothers of Twins at the University of Colorado and am ready to move west—what country! My five are in four different schools from elementary to college." And she's president of her church guild. Her question, "Anyone for instant insanity?" Her signature, "Twincereely."

The list of Madge Medlock Watt's activities is so long you can tell both her children are married. One lives 30 minutes away and the other in San Francisco. She is 2nd vice president and advance planning chairman for the Historical Society of Early American Decoration, on the museum committee and co-chairman of an exhibit in New York City at the Museum of American Folk Art. She is in a garden club, active in Eyes for the Needy and in the hospital auxiliary and refinishes furniture. In her spare time she plays tennis—year-around. She planned to drive her mother to Florida in the late fall.

Doberman Pinschers and teaching occupy Ann Hamilton Miller Mayer. She learned to ride horseback this summer and says, "If I could afford it, I would probably have as many horses as I have dogs . . . but I can't so I won't."

Meo Ostergard Lutz celebrated her father-in-law's birthday instead of her 30th reunion. Her particular interests will be with a musical club and child welfare board this year.

"Our summer trip," says Frances Shoup Brant, "was one of contrasts and comparisons." From her Pennsylvania mountain home in Ligonier, her journey took her to the Virginia Blue Ridge Parkway, the gypsum sands in Almagordo, New Mexico, the fascinating Carlsbad Caverns, the Chihuahuan Desert with its interesting plant life, the Navajo Reservation, the Arches Monument in Utah and the Rockies in Colorado—and back to teaching September 1.

Paul and Audrey Horton Skillman had a grand summer visiting their children and grandchild—from Bridgewater, Connecticut to Duncansville, Pennsylvania. Now they have returned from three weeks in Scotland where they traveled by rented Volkswagen, took a bus tour to the far north, and enjoyed festival time in Edinburgh.

I think Loyal and Cay Thompson Mitchell take the "consecutive miles" nomads' prize. With their two teenage sons they bought a car in Germany and drove 8000 miles on a six-week European tour covering 10 countries and 5 principalities. Otherwise Cay approves of her seven-month-old granddaughter, long hair for men (even her husband's, who startled her by having curly hair all these years without her knowing it), and a European diary illustrated with postcards. She disapproves of long skirts and Women's Lib which brings the female down to the level of men.

Nelle Rose Richards Offutt was sorry to miss reunion, but June was the beginning of a busy summer. Tom graduated from high school and entered University of California in September. Jane graduated from Allegheny College, was married on August 21 to Charles Bierbach, a second-year law student at Pitt, and is working on her master's degree. Nelle Rose made her fourth back-packing trip on the Appalachian Trail with daughter Mariann's Scout Troop. Their two oldest are in service—

Jim flying for the Navy and Bill in Vietnam—and Bob is at Lake Michigan College. Still golfing, Nelle Rose won the championship at St. Clair Country Club this summer.

A niece was Eleanor Hackett's companion on a trip to all of the Hawaiian Islands. Serving as membership chairman for the Gaelic Arts Society, which she joined before going to Ireland, Eleanor says the meetings and programs help her to relive her wonderful vacation there.

I know you will all join me in offering our very sincere sympathy to my co-secretary, Jean Curry Burt and Bob whose twenty-year-old son Allen died suddenly in June.

Thank you all for increasing our treasury and our knowledge of your doings. We were glad to have response from Nancy Over Bowdler, Jane Scott Bruntjen, Inez Wheldon, Mary Wolf Gamble, Janet Brennan Aull, Virginia Stahl Walker, Jane Viehman and Peggy Christie Graham—but how about some news next time?

It's been a long, hot summer and, for many of us, that "half-century mark" has reared its ugly head—but from the trend of the news, it hasn't slowed too many of us down one bit! I'll bet we could still win the Class Day Song Competition two years in a row!

But to quote Ethel Herrod Blackburn: "With the approach of my first half-century, I ponder the changes in the next." No news, just philosophy.

Our class had only one representative at the June Alumnae Day, but Claire Stewart Burkhardt hopes we can all get together for their new coming up in '72! She and Richard toured northwest U.S.A. and Canada this summer, and had a ten-day visit with their daughter Sally (1969 Chatham graduate) and her husband in Vancouver, British Columbia. They brought their No. 3 daughter, Cynthia, back with them in their new VW camper. She had spent two months with her sister and is a senior at CMU. Their oldest daughter, husband and one-year-old Renee Claire, came to visit from Nassau, Bahamas, for a week. After that, a graduate student from Japan was their house guest for a week before starting classes at Pitt. And now it's time to get into the usual fall and winter activities!

Thiel and Tim entered Notre Dame as a freshman. Her "swinging 16-year-old daughter," who is a junior in high school and a Senior Scout, had just returned from paddling on a 90-mile canoe trip. Her high school sophomore son is the official grass cutter, and Maureen is seven and in third grade. Her conclusion was that just keeping track of the kids keeps her busy!

Betty Steffler Baker's big news this year is of her daughter, Kathleen, who graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Miami University and was married to Bruce E. Harrison from Lancaster, Ohio. Kathy is working on a Scripps Foundation project at the University while Bruce completes his senior year. Betty is taking a vacation from teaching this year, and Dick is well into the usual end-of-the-year rush in calendar manufacturing. Son Richard is still a bachelor and writing for the Ohio Education Association magazine.

Another philosopher, Alice Provost McCutcheon, allows that we are all a year older and, hopefully, a year smarter. Son Bobby is a sophomore at Duke; Connie is a senior at Fox Chapel High School and the cheer leader captain; Jon, a freshman at the same high school, plays the cymbals in the band; and Andy, a fourth-grader, does all the things a nine-year-old boy would normally do, except that he also worries about having to fight in a war when he grows up! Let's hope this new "Peace" generation can figure out a better way to settle international conflicts by that time!

Nancy Scott Ralston reports assorted trips this year—a long week-end on Paradise Island, Bahamas; spring vacation at Sanibel in April; and summer vacation, as usual, at Van Buren Point. Daughter Dede is traveling much more than her parents as stewardess for Delta Airlines.

Three in college keep Marjorie Wood Yearick and Ralph a little breathless this year. Chip is a freshman at Carnegie-Mellon University, and in his first class each member was handed a tape recorder to keep all semester and use as a textbook. College has changed a little since our time! The plan to take their new little sailboat down to Cape Hatteras to have a "go" at the ocean while the weather is still nice.

Jean Patterson Bliss was "mother-of-the-bride" this year for daughter Ginny who was married at Chautauqua in June and is now living on the Monterey Peninsula, so Jean and Scott are looking forward to a trip west. Barbara Caldwell Copeland and Jim, and Jean Faris Watt and Gib were at the wedding to help celebrate. Son Scott Jr. graduated from Mercersburg Academy and has gone to Ohio University.

I told Janet Murray Newton that only one-third of her reply space was to be used for "grandma-raves" for oldest daughter Barbara's new baby girl, so this is what she wrote: "Robin Reed, born August 5th, weight—8lbs. 2 oz., with all possible dimples, etc., is wonderful, remarkable, intelligent, accomplished, precocious, rollover, sleeps all night, eats cereal, blows bubbles, burps, cries, smiles (gas pain?), looks like her mother (?), her father (?), herself (?), and is too far away for us to get our hands on her. The rest of us? We're O.K. too. Just happen to know that Betty is a senior at Penn State, Ann a junior in high school, Peggy in junior high and Robbie in grade school, still plugging away!"

Glad to report that Margaret Anderson's father is much improved after an operation on his hip. "Maiky" was in Europe for three weeks in July with the Delta Kappa Gamma tour to the Passion Play and two weeks in Scandinavia. She also attended and enjoyed helping in the Centennial Fund Campaign.

Any '42-er going through New England would be welcomed by Margaret Graham Lothrop. She has joined the Bridgeport Branch of A.A.U.W. and enjoys it very much. One lone chick, Doug, is still at home and a junior in high school. Oldest son, Dave, is in Texas, and daughter Virginia in California. Earl, Doug and Margaret spent their vacation in California seeing part of their family, and were anticipating a visit with Dave this fall.

More details about Florence Succop Klotz's big event of the year! Marilyn Edith, Florence and John's eighth child and third girl, was born on February 21st. Her oldest brother got his Ph.D. in physics this summer and is teaching in Bozeman, Montana. Their oldest girl went off to Rice University and is really missed at home! Nancy and Alan are in 4th and 9th grades. Dick is an engineer and lives at home. Ken teaches at the University of Wisconsin and Martin is a senior at Yale. Florence's husband John visited Africa last spring and has written a book on ecology.

Our golfer, Phyllis Keister Semple, was off to Spain with husband Bud to the Eisenhower World Cup Golf Matches in Madrid. All countries of the world, except Russia, were represented by three golfers on a men's team and a ladies' team. Phyllis says even China sends golfers and some day maybe there will be golf courses in Russia! If there are, I am sure Phyllis or Bud or one of their children will win a tournament there!

Dorothy Vale Roberts writes that Cecil is designing machines for Anchor Hocking in Lancaster, Ohio. Pamela is back from a summer sent as a "Pelican" at Star Island, the Unitarian Conference Center, off the New England coast. She will be a junior at Ohio State this fall in anthropology. Heather is back from a session at Summer Science Camp on Summer Island in Lake Michigan. Dorothy is in her fifth year of teaching—from third grade to eleventh and twelfth grade English and journalism to second grade. By summer 1971, she hopes to have dual certification in education.

Our travel agent, Jane Chantler, made a familiarization trip to New Orleans the week before Mardi Gras; spent a week on the Netherlands Antilles Island of Curaco in May as vacation; and a Labor-Day weekend to explore Daytona Beach and visit her brother; plus another trip this fall to a yet undetermined destination! She adds that she doesn't travel much—someone has to watch the store! After working hours, Jane is advisor to the Butler Teen-age Republicans, has joined the Soropromist Club, and writes publicity for the Butler County Council of Republican Women, one minute mission speeches for the church 52 Sundays a year, and a monthly travel column for the Union National company magazine "Eight-Twelve." Wonder when she eats and sleeps?

The news that traveled farthest was from Jessie Shook Allen in Kahuku, Hawaii, who reports that she is still teaching—this year a second, third grade in a "3 on 2" combination. The Shooks had another wonderful trip to northern Canada in their camper this summer and five weeks with her parents. They are looking forward to a happy winter in that beautiful fiftieth state!

Mother-of-the-groom, Barbara Maerker Baum, reports that Dick was married in June with all the festivities. Lots of fun and confusion with a high-school graduation the same week and the 18th birthday for Carol on the wedding day. Barbara says she had trouble remembering who was celebrating what!

Jean Burchinal Purvis is now organizing a Community Action Committee for the Prevention of Drug Abuse. Their son Tom is a sophomore at Butler High School, Sally a sophomore at Syracuse University, Bob a junior at Wesleyan University in Connecticut, Bill a senior at Haverford, and Joe is married and probably going to medical school after some graduate work in physics. Jean would love to see anyone who goes through Butler. Anyone?

Our class extends its deepest sympathy to Joan Myers Rankin who's husband, Harry, died suddenly on October 14, 1969. Life changed rather rapidly for the Rankins this year. Joan and the boys have moved out of the manse into another home in Houston. Joan went to driving school and got her license which she said was a big accomplishment for her. Jay is a sophomore at Warren Wilson College and working as a lab assistant; Jamie is in 10th grade and continuing his music studies at CMU. He and his Campus Life Singers won first place in the music competition at the Youth for Christ Conference in Ocean City this summer. Paul is starting junior high this year, and Joan is taking graduate work in Christian Education at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, and trying hard not to show her generation gap!

A very sincere, although belated, message of sympathy is extended to Joyce Wallis Brode, whose husband died in August, 1969.

Ruth Demmler Benner and Dave had a wonderful trip to Florida, given to them by their children for their twenty-fifth anniversary. They flew to Miami, rented a car and leisurely explored part of the state, but spent most of their time in the ocean or swimming pools, getting delightfully tanned and absolutely water-logged.

Carol Bostwick McCannon writes that their son "Wicky," a sophomore at Clark University in Massachusetts, kept her busy this summer towing cars and parts to Cape May, where he worked, for his 1951 hearse. It works perfectly now—probably because "Bossie" named it "William Randolph"—but none of the kids ever heard of this "Establishment" gentleman!

"Not too long 'til our 30th!" writes Jane McClung Sincell, who's looking forward to reading all the news. Their daughter Pamela and her husband are living in Kirkwood, Missouri; son Jim working before returning to S.I.U., husband John still with the same company, and Jane returning to her part-time job at North Shore Country Day School. They spend most of the summer on the Winnetka beach, except for several weeks at Ocean City.

No wonder the news letter was late getting out this fall—the Cline's had a busy spring and summer! Our friends gave Harold and me a beautiful twenty-fifth anniversary party in March (complete with cake, old pictures, etc.). Our daughter Karen, a physical therapy major at Thiel, got engaged in April; Harold and I started golfing week-ends in May; and Tom, a junior in high school, started golfing so he could be miserable with the rest of us! We had a boy from Thailand in July and a boy from England for the month of August. After five years of International visitors, we feel qualified as American Tour Guides and specialists in the Western Pennsylvania Area—and besides that, it's fun! We took our English son with us to Nags Head for "holiday," then toured Virginia and Washington, D.C.; then came home for long weekends at weddings and trips around the state. Still doing the usual "Establishment" things and enjoying them! Harold gave a fabulous surprise dinner party for my big birthday in August (I'm 39, and holding—just like the rest of you)! My one great accomplishment is living through a year with a new collie-shepherd pup that thinks she's people!

Have a happy year—and plan a trip to Pittsburgh for our Chatham Reunion in June '72.

DEATH

Joanne Knauss Fitzpatrick, March 2, 1970

Helen reporting for Jane:

Because Jane Humphreys Agriesti found herself in transit between Granville, Ohio and Johnson City, Tennessee, this section of the class report is compiled by Helen Smith. Jane's husband accepted a job as automation engineer with North Electric Company in Johnson City, and at Recorder news time Jane was thoroughly occupied with selling the Granville house—just two years old. Charles, Jane's eldest is at Ohio State. Her next four began school on schedule in their new neighborhood. Ten-year-old Bruce stayed in Granville to help sell the house, delighted to have a temporary reprieve from classrooms.

Betty Bush Sinclair's card brings us up-to-date on her busy and happy family. Oldest son John graduated from Guilford College in May; second son David is a junior pre-med student at Carolina; third son Dick plays on the Hickory High School football team; fourth son Bobby turned into a teenager ("Can I go through one more?"); and 10-year-old daughter Margaret brings much consolation. Betty finds her part-time work

We caught Aida De Bellis Pacella in "a writing mood" this time, just as she was with a Cooperative Christian Ministry very finishing letters to son Roger at Slippery Rock and daughter Diane at Shenandoah College. Her son Steve is a senior at Baldwin High. For five years Aida has been a exciting.

secretary at a construction firm. She estimates five more years at that job, then she and husband Pat have plans to relax and travel. This summer she talked to Louise Yeiser Threan, '45, and passes on Louise's address: Apartado 663, Santa Domingo, Dominican Republic.

"Where," opines Ruth Laird Grant, "have the years flown?" (The annual advent of the Recorder news has a way of eliciting opines like that.) On taking thought, Ruth finds herself the mother of a married daughter, Christine, and of a son, Russell, who is a sophomore at Wheeling College. Her daughter Leslie is a day student at a school for retarded children. She and Russ, "at ease on Sagamore Hill," graciously invite "all who travel through the beautiful state of West Virginia" to visit them.

Shanen Rose Rachel Bloom, a Chatham freshman, is a winner of the Louis Caplan Human Relations Award. She is also the eldest offspring of Evelyn Glick Bloom who, we trust, is enormously proud. Shanen graduated from Hillel Academy where Evelyn's three other children are currently Blooming.

Patty Leonard Bodle is hereby notified that Barb Findley Copeland is ready for a tennis challenge. Barb writes, "I've launched on an orgy of self-indulgence now that the chickens have flown the coop. Tennis anyone?" Reporting that her family is playing a lot of tennis, Patty asks, in some exasperation, "Did you ever run a tennis tournament! ?xx! ?" One of Barb's chickens, James, Jr., graduated from Princeton in June and is "gingerly" exploring employment opportunities. Her daughter Anne is a sophomore at Florida Presbyterian College. Patty is shaking August beach sand from everyone's belongings, and is helping to get a Fine Arts Guild off the ground in High Point, North Carolina. Her son, Bob Jr., is a junior at Virginia Tech; daughter Trish is now a high school senior.

After two family weddings, Ruth Lynch McFarland "relaxed" with a few days of backpacking in the High Sierras. (Hardly an "over the hill" response!) In the space of two weeks, Ruth and Bob surrendered their two eldest sons to wedlock, thankful to be parents of grooms; "I'd never have made it with brides," says Ruth. But daughter Lois will be an old hand when the time comes; she was a junior bridesmaid at both weddings. Ruth is now president of the local chapter of the Westmont College Women's Auxiliary and is working on scholarship benefits. Bob, still with the Atomic Energy Commission, has occasional trips east, and often stops to see Nancy Raup Palmer and Jim.

Kelly Jones Clowes had a fine time touring southern England in the spring. (Thus reminding your reporter of Browning and a favorite malapropé—"Home Thoughts from a Broad.") Kelly also reports a weekend with Marion Monks Campbell and a just-missed meeting with Mickey McCullough Lohmeyer.

At the end of a year in Springfield, Virginia, Jean Bacon Smith reports reasonable acclimatization to the "classic suburban life" of Fairfax County. Jean has joined the local PTA and AAUW and is now looking around for other avenues of community participation. She sent Ingrid off to kindergarten this year. Eric is a third-grader.

At class news time, Evelyn Fulton was on a five-week itinerary of one-night stands in Kentucky and Tennessee, interrupted appropriately by a week of meetings in a convent in St. Louis. She swears this will be her last such rugged road stint. She continues to find solace in prodigious knitting, and has added another cottage craft—moniliform (beads). Evlyn says she is a "conservative" member of the women's liberation movement. She recently celebrated liberation by participating, with two other women, in the digging and laying of a 70-foot drain designed to cure a water problem on her driveway. (The right to dig ditches has somehow been left out of most equal rights literature; one wonders why.)

While in St. Louis, Evlyn took advantage of lower phone rates to check in with Lu Ann Isham Staley, and found Lu Ann preparing to take an examination for a real estate sales license.

One of the year's highlights for Amanda Harris Stamas was her son's graduation from West Virginia Wesleyan. The draft lottery permitting, he was to enter law school in September. Mandy's daughter Vicky is a college junior, and plans a graduate degree in the teaching of blind and deaf children.

Gladys Bistline Belz "copes" with two teenagers, and keeps her cool by teaching piano lessons. (Which would certainly blow mine.)

Now that Jeanne McKeag Steele has a daughter married and working, one son graduated from Ohio State, and her youngest, Charlie, in his third (and final) year of an accelerated program at Ohio State, she has enrolled full-time at OSU to get her master's degree in nursing education. Jeanne has been acting director of nursing at St. Ann's Hospital, Columbus.

Nancy Maxwell Patterson and her husband have retired from the Air Force and settled in Orlando, Florida. Their eldest son Brian is a college student in Virginia, is married, and has presented the Pattersons with a grand-daughter, Nancy Jill. Son Brad is going to college in Orlando, and Jeff is in high school there. Nancy and Pat visited Patty Leonard Bodle at High Point in the spring.

Gladys Heimert Aye put a beautiful throw-away line at the very end of her card: "I will be doing my usual volunteer work plus the addition of a class in yoga." (If you're able to write to us next year, Heimie, let us know how it is when you reach the meditation stage.) The Ayes' son Ralph is a junior at Dartmouth. He worked on a farm in the Vermont mountains last summer, increasing not only his muscle power but his appreciation of nature. Daughter, Pam, a freshman at Wooster, spent the summer working in her father's office (orthopedic medicine) and learned a lot about "the impatience of people." Proving what most of us could vouch for after 26 years—a great deal of education takes place outside the classroom. Selah.

I hadn't seen Joanne Knauss Fitzpatrick for a long, long time, and so when I received the saddening word of her death, my mind made the trip all the way back to PCW and our days together there. And maybe that's just as well, because while some of you have more recent memories of Joanne, all of us can share remembered dorm and campus glimpses of her direct, twinkling eyes and offside smile, hear again her low-keyed, bumpy voice delivering wit and wisdom in not too many words, sense in memory the depth beneath her casual mien, recall gratefully the warmth and loyalty she gave her friendships.

Ann reporting:

Getting older may have some disadvantages, but the Turnocks are enjoying the benefits. Nick and I have traveled a bit more than usual this year, sometimes with and sometimes without the children (isn't it wonderful to be able to walk out the door and wave "bye-bye" to them?). We had a marvelous jaunt to Jamaica, a visit to Chesapeake Bay, and two trips to the South. And Nick built me a contour bowler-chair to fit under my favorite private retreat, an old apple tree at the end of the orchard. Ann Jr. is well-settled and very happy teaching at the Colegio Americano in Bogota, South America. Christine is a senior at Penn State; Jim drove all over the country last summer and is now preparing to re-enter college at Pitt. Paul is a senior in high school; Laura and Julie are both in junior high.

Martha McCullough Lohmeyer notes that "another phase has begun;" She and Paul had just returned from Portland, Maine, where they attended the wedding of their son Jim, a junior at the University of Maine. Susan works for a publisher in Baltimore, and Tom and Barb are the only ones still at home. Martha is enjoying her part-time career, working for a film producer.

Betsy Meader Downing says, "Time marches on—our concerns change in value and intensity. This has been a year of intellectual stimulation, new ideas to test, new personal orientations for us all. Our eldest daughter will marry in December and our group will be smaller or larger, depending on where Debby and her husband are. They will live in Connecticut, on the Navy's business for a time. We are all working hard on the preserving of our environment and the ethic of non-growth and a less man-centered universe."

Betty Monroe Musselman had just returned from six weeks in Europe. Her son went over to study, and she "went along for the ride" and had a fine time. Her daughter Peggy is in her second year at Mary Baldwin College in Virginia, and her husband is busy traveling for his company. Betty herself will be teaching school this year.

Mary Lou Reiber Peter reports glowingly about her granddaughter, who is now almost five. Barbie is still teaching school. Diane and her husband have moved to Turlock, California, where John will teach political science. Eva is going to college, and youngest son Doug is thirteen. Mary Lou hopes to be back in Pittsburgh next June for her parents' fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Helen Heath Smith submits her usual sage statement: "Re: Hunger and Ecology—Enlarged vegetable garden this year. Almost frightfully fruitful. No nasty sprays, of course. And I breathe less. Re: Population Control—I have done my best and sadly, my best has been good enough. Re: Drugs—Have been sorting drugs for overseas shipment to medical clinics. Bleary-eyed with psychedelic shapes and colors. Delighted with imaginative packaging. Get my own kicks from aspirin laced with occasional Rolaid. Re: Politics—Work on Chamber of Commerce legislation committee. Keep up cozy correspondence with Washington and Harrisburg. Hide equal rights button in desk drawer; do not want equal rights; want superior rights I've become accustomed to. Re: Inflation—Vacationed one week in State Park instead of three weeks in Caribbean. Good grief! Also rolled own cigarettes two consecutive days. Miscellaneous: Trips to New York brightened by occasional visits with the Lohmeyers. Recent jaunts, however, were Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas . . . unbrightened. With office at home now, have become bird-watcher; get excited about black-billed cuckoo, etc. Wouldn't have given black-billed cuckoo a second glance twenty years ago; lower metabolism now."

Betty Spierling Arentson waited 'til the last minute for some earth-shaking event to happen, but says "life goes on as usual." Her daughter entered Marietta College; her son is in junior high. All are fine and busy.

Marion Springer Edmunds took Lindsay up to Mt. Holyoke to begin her freshman year, and comments, "She's following in my sister's footsteps there." Son David is in tenth grade at Mt. Lebanon High, and Marion is anticipating that "the rigamarole of tests and college choosing will soon start all over; it seems much more complicated than it was in our day."

Mary Lee Ullom Hoy has enjoyed trips to Nassau and Ocean City, and was preparing to leave for Scandinavia in September. Daughter Nancy is a sophomore at Hood College in Maryland.

European travelers abound in the news. Lulu Copetas Blazakis would have made Miss Dysart proud of her since she scouted out many historical sites during their family's six-week tour. Joan Titus Dunlop was off to Finland to join husband Dick, whose new book "Great Trails of the West" will be out in April.

Chickie Sawders Laisy planned to evade air pollution and vacation in Scotland, and Sally Smith Cross enjoyed a London trip.

Speaking of London, we had a delightful letter from Carol Thorne King whose life in London reads like a book—safari to Kenya, ski trips to Austria, vacations in Budapest and Amsterdam to name but a few.

Weddings of offspring are news this year, too. Ginny Uber Haug's daughter will be married in June and Ginny is a grandmother three times over.

Helen Hunter White planned an August wedding for daughter Judy, and another of Linnea Lunstedt Evans' daughters was married on August 14.

Sally Villing Hughes' son graduated from college, was commissioned in the Navy, and married in August. Grace Savage Freeble's married son is in medical school.

Peggy Korb Smith and Jean White Markell are alone for the first time in many years this fall with all the children away at college. Flo Ostien Chew sends her last little one off to first grade so she'll be alone until about three o'clock. Betty Beck Wiedenman sent three off to college, but her 6th-grader will keep Bob and her from getting old. Personally, sixth graders add lots of years to my life—but I love them.

Marty Yorkin Berman and Eva Caloyer Nassikas will each have a daughter graduating from Chatham next June.

Micky McKee Barnes is working as a reference librarian, and saw Mariellen Roche Duval last year for a great gabfest.

Helen Gilmore Reinhard saw both June Sinewe Moffitt and Mary Ann Yockey this summer. Doris Sisler White says "Ah, memories," too, for she saw "Weezie" Myers Duerring and "Parkie" Gambridge. She also told us that Joan Nusbaum Cone, '49, has moved near her.

Arline Levinson Rosenberg's son is at Harvard, not Howard, as came out in last year's Recorder. That was probably my fault. You girls know that typing just isn't my thing. Arline is in touch with many college students through her work and assures us that she is very optimistic about the youth of today.

Our sympathy to Marjory Couch Lynn whose father died this year, and also to Ginny Uber Haug whose mother passed away. Marjorie's husband, who had open heart surgery in March, is hoping to return to work this fall.

Two of Doris Fairfield Jamison's children were on foreign study tours this summer. Their family vacationed in Florida, and Marge Mistrik Sweeney's family headed for California. Harriet Hoffman made a 4000-mile tour of eastern Canada. Lucy Dorsey toured New England and is planning a trip to Italy.

Betsy Ross Pervorse, Mary Wells Karlson, Jeannie Thompson Johnson, Pat Cochran Brown, and Kitty Lancaster Cone send their best. As "Rowie" Schroth put it, she's not having a baby, a grandchild, or heading Women's Lib in New Jersey, but is looking forward to our 25th.

Speaking of 25th, Evie Matthews Reece and Al celebrated their 25th by a lovely trip to the Caribbean.

Jane Field Taylor claims a record, too, for she does not have a change of address.

Ronnie Staples Jorgenson is proud of her daughter who has joined the Women's Marine Corps.

Lois Jean Jackson Ritenbaugh spent her "vacation" in West Penn Hospital just as Hud did last year. She says that's the last holiday they plan.

I did not hear from as many of you as usual this time. I hope that means you are saving all your "goodies" for our 25th Reunion next June. We'll choose a new secretary at that time so let me thank you one and all for your great letters. I enjoyed hearing from all of you so very much. I'm still teaching, my sons are at Akron University where I plan to take some courses this year. I'm also very pleased to have my niece in this year's freshman class at Chatham. Please try very hard to make our 25th. It will be wonderful to see you.

Ginger reporting:

Mary Aiken Brown reports very exciting doings around the Brown place: children involved in college and school work; family "togetherness" on ski trips to Vail, Colorado, and camping at Deep Creek; "tons of tennis"; and lots of sewing, crewel work, and church work!

Betty Albach Weamer also sends news of children in college and school, all of them deeply involved. Betty is taking time off from teaching to do some postponed research. The fall foliage is beckoning the Weamers to motor along the backroads when Andy isn't building a barn so that by spring they can have their horse at home.

A phone call from Marianne Boggs Campbell to me at my office was certainly exciting for me. I infrequently get calls from Cincinnati. Marianne is thrilled over several things: first her up-coming twentieth wedding anniversary, and, second, her installation last spring in London as president-elect of AWRT (American Women in Radio and Television)! Incidentally (!) she met Princess Margaret while there. Next May she will become the president of that organization in Washington, D.C. She told me how happy she was to get a call from Marie Cohn Chiles who lives in Houston when Marianne was there on a speaking engagement.

Jean Forncrook Armstrong claims that her excitement is created by her children, two of whom are in college now and the other in eighth grade. The strain of the long illness of Jean's father has left its sad mark on the Armstrong family, and we all extend our sympathy to Jean over the loss of her father. Anyone who knew Mr. Forncrook understands in some measure how great the loss must be. Jean takes great pleasure in being "just a housefrau," but let me tell you that she raises this position to an art!

Jean Hadfield Smith said she feels "like a gum band—stretching from nursery school to college." Guess who has her hands full? Jean and I used to see each other up in the wilds of Zelenople at Camp Carondowanna when our older girls camped there. It is sad to think those days are over so soon.

Enjoyed a "Nothing new—just the same old routine" note from Mary Ann Houck Brown. Atta-girl, Mary Ann, I love ya!

Parenthetically I'd like to insert here that Elizabeth Johnston Scheide, clinical psychologist and Supervisor of Special Education for Allegheny County Schools, has just been named by Kaufmann's Advisory Board in a series of tributes to outstanding women in business.

As with many of the others, Jerry Kimball Well's news began with what the children are doing. Eldest, Linda, is student-teaching in high school biology, while the boys range from college down to high school. Jerry is working half-time as staff assistant for the 4-H at the University of Kentucky, a job which gives her the free time to do other things. She hears fairly regularly from Sally Geary Hansen.

Speaking of Sally, she is busy with her Fiddle Shop sheet music department, flute lessons, and Christ Church—which all adds up to BUSY!

Carol Lenz Houck reports a hectic, discombobulated, and sad year. First of all, her father died suddenly last October, and even after a year it does not seem possible. Many of us know what a loss this can be and send warmest thoughts to Carol. Camping, weddings, canning, a new poodle puppy—all adds up to no generation gap in the Houck family. Oh, yes, and a full-length mink coat under the Christmas tree from husband Don. Couldn't you simply hate a gal like that?

Nornie MacMillen Morris has two college boys and one high school boy, all doing fascinating things—like going to Brezgenz, Austria, and traveling all over Europe, and being involved in sports. Nornie is a paraprofessional at the Eric G. Norfeldt School. She and George had a trip to Bermuda—"a real paradise."

That's thirty for this time. My "career" continues sporadically. I am the registrar of a new secretarial school in Pittsburgh called the Sawyer School of Business, a subsidiary of International Industries for those who follow the stock market. Our older daughter is a sophomore out in Arizona, while the two younger ones are high school junior and senior respectively. Sorry I did not hear from more of you; hearing from you is after all what makes this job worthwhile and interesting. Our savings account now contains $335.19. Checks for twenty-five dollars or more will be gratefully received! !! Say whatever happened to . . . ? Best wishes to all, Ginger.

Joy reporting:

Anne Wallace Huntmer said it. "Old is—for someone else—haven't time." She was one of many to vehemently deny my charge, and I was delighted. Anne is living in Davenport for a couple of years while Bob and G.E. build a nuclear power station and bring light to the Midwest. She's looking forward to returning to San Jose (song title?), but for the time is managing a new fabric store. Yummy! Head count is two seniors and a seventh-grader.

Further details of senility come from assorted tennis players. Betsy Ross Kuhn, a gratifyingly prompt correspondent, by the way, is sporting a new tennis racquet. She also swims a lot, summer and winter. The Kuhn family made a sentimental journey back to Rochester for the first time in several years to enjoy a catch-up session with old friends. Jessie Gilbert Chew and her family visited at Christmas, and Betsy's brother John and his family returned from La Jolla, California, for a visit. Besides, she and Les enjoyed trips to Sturbridge, Massachusetts, and Tanglewood. The children are twelfth; ninth; and third-graders, and all's well with the Kuhns.

Another tennis buff, Randy Ullom Doig, has been playing doubles with Jessie Chew. Randy vacationed with the family at Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, and had an opportunity somewhere along the way to take a quick look at Chatham, for the benefit of herself and children.

To enlarge upon the subject of self-improvement, Marge Reckard combined a wonderful summer in San Francisco and Honolulu, soaking up sunshine and shedding twenty pounds. Now nothing fits, but she'll get no sympathy from me. Congratulations, though.

Bobbie Mueller Baylor is student-teaching at Mt. Lebanon, and will be certified as a German teacher in December. Anyone looking for an eager but inexperienced German teacher? Her husband has found a different sort of hobby—firing black powder muskets in competition. Not too surprisingly, they spent their vacation in South Carolina and Virginia, beachcambing and Civil War battlefields. Ever seen the Maryland First Line Regiment?

Suzy Sutton Hepler and her family joined the American Host Program, and for two weeks entertained a young English and geography teacher from Germany. They enjoyed showing her the sights, including some Pittsburgh "musts" and that were new even to them. Riches are right here on our doorstep!

You think you're not getting old! I was almost convinced, then along came news of two weddings. Shirley Morrow Hedenburg's daughter Suzy was married in August, after which the family adjourned to New Hampshire to recoup. Her Don is enrolled in the forestry course at Penn State, and the youngest is a high school sophomore. Shirley is a resource teacher, and Jack is with Gulf.

A special note to Donnie Vail Rea: Mary Ruth Forney Snyder writes from California that Donnie's namesake, Don, was married September 12. Daughter Cindy is entering Art Center College of Design, and Patty, California Lutheran College. Robby, a fourth-grader, is a sportsman.

Donnie, herself, is breathless from the struggle of getting two girls off to college, Gini to Edinboro State, and Joanne to Campbellsville College, in Kentucky. After taking a good look at Kentucky, she and Walt and the dog are settling down to a new routine.

Jane Picard Pursell responded with a wee note. Her first girl is off to Western Illinois University, and Janie is back to kindergarten.

Ruth Zucker Bachman has been ill most of the past year, with two month-long hospitalizations. She's feeling better now, and to celebrate, the family made a vacation out of their son David's departure for the University of Wyoming, where his study of wildlife conservation is a natural extension of a lifelong interest in nature. Back to that vacation, they visited the Tetons, Yellowstone, Denver and Rocky Mountain National Park, and Madison, Wisconsin.

Helen Obermayer Sellers vacationed with her family in the Virgin Islands, hopes to survive the first "getting-into-college" year with Joe, and get David out of junior high. Otherwise, all are well and happy.

Henrietta Meyer Garrett describes a suburban scene, children aged ten and twelve and a summer of tenting, sailing, and learning to swim. (Another part of our stay young program.) In answer to your question about College Boards, Henrietta, you heard right. They will be suspended as a Chatham entrance requirement for a trial period of three years. And thank you kindly for your accolade.

Eleanor Robinson Hastings sent a late and breathless card, having just moved in time to get the two of them off to college. Fredricka is a junior at Mary Washington and Ed a freshman at the University of Wyoming. Robby, with that much news, you should write, late or not!

Nothing new from Ceil McKay Geddis and Charlotte Exley Eck, but a welcome word of greeting to all. Ceil has numbers four, and final, in kindergarten, and Charlotte is enjoying Mary Liz, almost a year old now, and big brother Henry Howard. Just think of all those years of PTA ahead!

My life during the past year has been a sampling of the above paragraphs about you. Both of our boys are now attending Western Maryland College, and I have adjusted satisfactorily except when it comes to groceries, and that wasn't a matter of tapering off. I did wreck my car in a rather spectacular manner this summer, but escaped with nothing injured but my pride, so I've thankfully decided I must have some purpose for being here.

Thank you all for your kind replies and comments, and to you, Susie Hepler, for your check for the anniversary fund, which now stands at $365.19, a long way from our goal of $2000. If you can help, send to the Chatham Alumnae Class Account, % Alumnae Office. See you in '73.

Dolores Baney Conley's note came too late for last year's news, but, since it contained the balance of her contribution to the special class fund, I am mentioning it as a plea to all of you to send me your contributions—1975 will be here sooner than we think! I received a card from Dolores this year, and one from Mary Bovard Schwartz—no special news, but greetings to all.

Nancy Beamer Stewart hasn't moved—just a new box number. Daughter Lucy and Nancy both enjoy school, nursery school and teaching third grade, respectively. Between the Stewart's trips and those taken by Nancy's parents, their motor home has covered almost 25,000 miles in a year.

Lee Corey Hanson is spending several volunteer hours a week in the Job Advisory Service office at Chatham. Although J.A.S. is not sponsored by the College, Chatham has provided office space in Beatty Hall near the alumnae office. The Service was organized by the Woman's Alumnae Club Council (our Alumnae Association is a member) to find part-time job opportunities, paid or volunteer, for women who wish this type of employment. Lee is also secretary of the Pittsburgh Obedience Training Club, and has a class of 92 purebred dogs each Sunday afternoon in Schenley Park. Lee and Bill spent some time this summer at their "retirement" home on the northwest coast, and are working to ready their Pittsburgh home for future sale.

Ruth Fabry's father died in October, 1969, and we extend the sympathy of the class to Ruth and her mother. Ruth enjoyed trips to New York last spring and Hawaii and southern California during the summer.

Sue Ferris Trounsett and family are enjoying their new home with a pool and brook. The move occurred when Don's division of IBM was transferred from New York City to New Jersey.

The Ammons (Katie Fisher) had two trips to Pennsylvania this year, one for her parents' golden anniversary and the other for a summer vacation. Daughter Leah was married on September 12 to Jesse Wayne Dreggers, a Stetson University junior. It doesn't seem like 19 years since Leah was the youngest guest at Barbara Illig Rabenkamp's wedding in the NEW Chapel! Leah is continuing her studies at Daytona Beach Junior College, Douglas is a high school junior, Amy an 8th grader, and Matt a 1st grader (PTA all over again!) Don's community theatre group, Debary Players, presented "Bells Are Ringing" in which he directed a cast of 60, aged 5 to 75. Katie's duties as supervisor of the West Volusia County Division of Family Services now include those of Senior Citizen Ombudsman.

Clair Foster Myers is a grandmother (!) to Kimberly Sue, daughter of Susan and Ronald Slagle who live in Angola, Indiana where Ronald is in graduate school at Tri State College. Daughter Sharon, who spent the 1967-68 year as a Rotary exchange student in Sweden, is a sophomore at Allegheny College. Daughter Jodale is in 6th grade. Husband Dale is doing well following an emergency appendectomy.

Last year's letter from Marty Hamilton Strotz, which arrived too late for publication, included news of son Chip at Case Western Reserve University, son Bob at Mercersburg Academy, daughter Lauren, 16, at home, and a new business—a Chrysler-Plymouth dealership.

Doris Haver Cunningham, in part-time work since 1966, has earned 19 credits at the University of Maryland toward a degree in home economics education. Other family statistics show Doris working part time for an insurance agency, husband Jim an engineer with the Weather Bureau, son Mike a senior in high school, and daughters Diane and Cathi in 9th and 3rd grades.

The Hess family (Merny Hamilton) has put time, $, and drudging effort into the small beach house they bought last summer at Bethany Beach, Delaware, but they all love it, especially the girls—Lisa, 12, Susie, 11, and Jake (yes, Jake), 9. Penny Jones Grob talked with Merny when she came to visit her father.

Nancy Hughes Evans' husband John is now assistant superintendent of the Rocky River Public Schools, and Bob and Linda are in 8th and 6th grade, respectively. Nancy teaches 4-year-olds in a church sponsored nursery school.

Jean Kaiser enjoyed a wonderful 4-week vacation in England and France with two friends from Pittsburgh. Despite her having to travel by wheelchair, they were able to do everything they planned including boat rides on the Seine, the Thames and the River Avon. Now back to saving for another trip, Jean is taking an evening course in Afro-American history at a local junior college.

Betty Langer Feathers and her family are understandably proud of Eric, who was the top scorer in the entire state of West Virginia in the Golden Horseshoe Examination—a statewide test based on West Virginia history. A summer trip took them to St. Louis.

Lois Mars Mignogna and family vacationed in Tionesta and visited son John in Toronto where he was working as a model. He is now working for two New York modeling agencies while studying television acting at New York University. Daughter Rachel is doing well in 10th grade.

Gail McConnor Mumma reports another transfer—a return to Germany where they are living in Heidelberg. Susan, 14, Barbie, 12, and Bill 11, are enjoying all the sights they saw before but were too young to remember. Gail and her husband, now a full colonel, have taken only one trip so far—to Holland—but the children, with Scouts and friends, have visited half a dozen countries.

We extend sympathy to Rita McEldowney Spalding whose father died last October, less than two years after her mother's death. Rita served last year on the decorations committee for the Chatham Centennial Dinner, and currently is co-chairman of the reunion committee (don't forget that we have a group reunion with 1949, 1951 and 1952 on June 5). Continuing her art work, Rita has been accepted as a member of the Pittsburgh Watercolor Society, is a candidate member of Associated Artists of Pittsburgh, and teaches a class in stitchery.

mut is associate professor of anesthesiology and pharmacology at Case Western Reserve University. Thanks to Ann we hear that Ellen Archer Young visited her in March (my letter to Ellen was returned), and that Billie Billeter Whitlinger is in Brazil for another two years where husband Jack is manager of the G.E. lamp division.

Jinx Neal McCreary and Bob, who moved to Arizona last January, are enjoying their pool, and have been exploring their adopted state. Their oldest daughter, Gwen, is a freshman at Chatham this year.

Nina Weaver Peters and family visited sister-in-law Esther Peters Bleikamp's family in Buffalo last summer. They enjoyed a stimulating week at the National Meeting of Presbyterian Women at Purdue University in July. Esther's four children keep her busy, along with golf, piano lessons and church work.

Lennie Rothschild Klein and Mary Jane Crooks Rech continue to see each other at swimming meets where their sons compete against each other. Lennie and husband Bob, avid tennis players themselves, spend much of their time as spectators at sports—son Ronny received the most valuable swimmer award, and older son Gary is on the high school wrestling team.

JoAnn Rounsley was one of 18 teachers in the Easton, Pa. area elected to serve on the council of the Center for the Study of Instruction, whose purpose is to design a more effective curriculum to meet contemporary needs. She has been involved, also, with a pilot reading program. During the summer JoAnn enjoyed a West Indies cruise on the Rotterdam, and in August she flew to Copenhagen and toured the Scandinavian countries.

Betty Schneider DeBono, husband Bill, daughter Lorin, 13, and son Billy, 9, are finding it difficult to be landlubbers again after spending all but ten days of the summer on their boat.

Sally Stumpfle Damm reports that Nancy Tanner Shaffer is teaching chemistry at Fort Hunt High School where Sally's two daughters attend. Small world, isn't it?

Martha Scott Bennett's routine activities, which are centered mainly on raising four children, were pleasantly interrupted when she and Pert Ross Trecartin met for lunch in New York City—but lovely food was neglected in favor of 19 years' worth of conversation.

Mary Lou Tedesco Naser's oldest daughter entered high school this year, and Mary Lou continues as a substitute teacher.

Phoebe Thorne Birmingham, while on a family camping, relative visiting, and college-hunting (for oldest daughter Carolyn) vacation, had a brief glimpse of Dottie McPhee Hunter in Florida.

Jeanne Wilkofsky Bloomstein's daughter Marcia, a 7th-grader, has become the family seamstress. Marc, in 4th grade, aims to be a football player. The family enjoyed a vacation in Holland, Michigan.

After a winter of Penn State night school and Geneva College summer school, your secretary has 21 credits toward certification for elementary teaching. I am enrolled at Geneva night school this year and expect to complete the last 9 credits and practice teaching by this time next year. With my husband enrolled at Penn State for courses toward his real estate brokers license, Ivan in 10th grade and working for a florist, and Stephanie in 4th grade and Junior Girl Scouts, the entire Cowles family is in school.

It has been wonderful to hear from all who responded. On another page of the Recorder, the alumnae office has listed "lost" alumnae. Since there are several from our class on the list, I hope you will provide any clues you may have as to their whereabouts. Don't forget—we have a special class fund, and we have a reunion in June.

Judy reporting:

Pat Baris Davidson reports that with Lynn at Fieldstone High School, Jane in junior high and Barbie in kindergarten, she's getting slightly lazy. Last Christmas the Davidsons took the entire family to California. Since Alan now has a partner in his practice of obstetrics, he and Pat were able to go to London and Portugal last spring.

Imagine my surprise to receive a phone call from Nancy Brady Haught!! The Haughts have adopted Jeb, 1, and with Joel, 5, and Jacob, 4, in kindergarten and nursery school, they would like to add a little girl to their menage. Meanwhile they are planning an addition to their TWO BEDROOM home!!! Jim is now an investigative reporter for the Charlestown Gazette.

With their youngest in kindergarten, Betty Cornell Hirsh and Joe now have one child in each school (imagine those PTA meetings!), and are both active in their church. Highlights of their travels were trips to Hawaii and Bermuda with Joe's company, and a family trip at Easter to a remote Bahama Island. Betty, in between, has kept herself busy with Women's Club, ecology problems and local politics.

The Linowes children are getting too old too fast—Jeff is now 15, Ronnie, 12, Gary, 10, and Stevie, 7. Besides spending my life in the car driving the children around, Harry and I were able to get to the West Coast (Las Vegas, too) and Puerto Rico in the fall, and last June we flew to Italy for a fabulous vacation. While in Milan we had lunch with Carla Ausenda's ('51) mother and spoke to Carla on the phone. Dolores Dean gave us a surprise visit at Thanksgiving time, and we had a marvelous few days together. Pat Hopkins Shoyinka wrote that Sonjo and their two daughters are enjoying life in Ibaden, Nigeria. If anyone gets to Washington, D.C. do call the Linowes—we'd love to hear from you. Meanwhile, keep those cards and letters coming.

Barbara A. reporting:

It was nice to hear from Janet Fitzsimmons Carr whose card last year arrived a bit late for the Recorder. Her news still holds good this year, I'm sure. They have bought a one-hundred-year-old home in the Garden District of New Orleans and are working hard to restore it. She and Bob still have their five-day-a-week TV program on WDSU "representing the family image for our station," say Jan. They are planning a trip to Greece this year and had been to Mexico last year. Their four children, ranging in age from five to fifteen years, keep them quite busy with all their activities.

For a travelogue of our fiftieth state see Doris Fritsch, who reported in upon her arrival home from "two glorious weeks" on Oahu, Kauai, Maui and Hawaii. She is teaching with another Chatham alumna, Ann Shane Perkey, '49, this year, and I bet the children will have a good lesson in geography.

I have two cards from Artie Gianopoulos Helgason with reports from two parts of the world. Last year the Helgasons had just returned from Zurich, Switzerland (news received too late for Recorder deadline) where husband Sigurdur attended a conference for three months. Artie reports it is just as beautiful as the calendars say. At this time they are in Stockholm, Sweden for a year while Sigurdur is lecturing and doing research at the Institute Miltag-Lefler. They and the two children are enjoying a refreshing climate and are meeting very friendly people.

Mary Beth Hoon Pritchard reports from Floodtown, U.S.A., otherwise known as Columbiana, Ohio. It seems that many spring and summer deluges caused flooding of basements and streets. Mary Beth calls it the "Year of the Plumber." They did manage a summer camping trip with children, Ginny and Carl, through New England, and planned a few days in Jamaica this fall. Dr. Len is still looking for a general practitioner to help him out with a busy practice.

We Armstrongs had a vacation in beautiful St. Thomas, V.I. in June. On the way east we had dinner and a good chat with Danita Bravin Bauer and her family in Chatham, N.J. For three weeks in August we had a teen-age boy from England who was part of a large group that came over on a Rotary exchange program. We found him delightful and enjoyed showing him points of interest in Pittsburgh, Washington and Niagara Falls. Again, I hope for more response next year. It's so much fun to read your news.

Elsa reporting:

Tomi Jones Miller and her family have been back in the States since June and have settled in Charlotte, North Carolina. Jack is the director of a research project for the National Safety Council, aimed at cutting down on drunken driving in Mecklenburg County. On their way stateside, the Millers stopped off in Germany, Sweden and Norway for a few days and then visited relatives in England.

After six months of remodeling their newly purchased fifty-year-old house, Martha McLaughlin Ellers and family moved into their home in June. Martha spent three fascinating weeks as one of the "friendly census enumerators."

Nancy McFarland Pollack's alumnae activities have been curtailed for a while with the arrival of James Edward. All are enjoying the new baby, including John, age 12.

G. G. Galey Wigton is currently serving as board member for the Festival of Village Churches, Sewickley Music Club and the swimming pool. Her younger daughter, Galey, entered junior high this year, with Mark in 9th grade and Barby in her first year of senior high.

I wish I could reproduce Barbara Mills Foresti's entire letter for you. Barbara and family are involved in such varied and interesting activities, it left me feeling very non-productive. Working as a family aid, attending ceramic classes, and serving as committee member for many activities at Catholic University are just a few of Barbara's undertakings.

Janet Houston Rhein and family spent the summer at the shore. After busily preparing her three children for three different schools, she was looking forward to a trip to Europe in October.

Mort and I are once more spending many hours this fall on the football bleachers with our two boys, Duncan and David, playing ball for Churchill Area High School. I've also joined my daughter Mary's Girl Scout Troop as an assistant leader. Thank you all for taking time from your busy schedules to drop me a line.

Virginia reporting:

Pat Nauman Kramer and John are presently in Europe, enjoying some rest and relaxation.

Fifi Rougraff has seen Ann Stapledon Keffer and Shirley Gorman Aitken during the year. Stape and her husband are living in Weirton, West Virginia. Fifi's summer consisted of a vacation in Canada and Vermont.

Ann Orner Davidson has started the college catalogue trips for her girls, Debby and Joyce, aged 17 and 16. Her younger children will keep her company for a few years to come. Kindergarten teaching and playing the organ for the Episcopal Church fill the remainder of her time.

As usual, the Vassamillets (Edie Pennoyer) have had an unusual year. Larry was a visiting professor at the University of Louvain, Belgium, and the family accompanied him for six months. Their home turned out to be a villa in the country. On the homeward trip they motored through five countries and marvelled at the scenery. Edie has invited anyone interested in endless stories and slides to visit her home:.

Nora Patterson White is justly proud of her family. Lyle was promoted to full Colonel, and Gordon, a sophomore at Purdue, has an hour spot on radio station WILY and is promotions director of the station. The two of them spent three weeks in Alaska. Susan, 16, was an American Field Service scholarship recipient and spent the summer living with a Portuguese family in Porto, Portugal. She was welcomed as a full member of the family, even vacationing with them in Spain. Nora is vice president of the local AFS Chapter, still teaches senior highs in Sunday School, and is publicity chairman for the Women's Association Fall Festival. She found time to rest with Lisa, 9, at Hilton Head, South Carolina.

Beverly Roush Johnston and Ralph found their "little corner of the world" in Hawaii this past year after a stop in San Francisco. A house addition (family room) has taken up the summer. Side trips to Upper Michigan and Wisconsin and kids away at camp provided a much needed change of pace. Her boys, Ralph and Carl, went with the Boy Scouts to Lake Superior and learned a little of survival in the wilderness. Daughter Jody, 11, can't quite decide between football and femininity.

We Sweets have had a wonderful year—Christmas in Florida with the grandparents, April in Nassau, and July in Hawaii with the children. Jeff, 17, is number one player on the high school golf team and hopes to enter a college in the south or southwest next fall. Dan, 15, is a motorcycle buff, building and repairing but not riding. Becky, who entered 7th grade this fall, is trying to survive having two brothers who preceeded her in the same school. Not an easy task. I guess we are just an average family.

Barbara B. reporting:

Sara Jane Smyser Naylor reports a busy year with church work, PTA board, part-time nursing, and looking after her 7th grade son and her girls in 5th and 9th grades. Goeff and a partner have a 6-acre mini-farm with 16 beehives, apple and peach trees and vegetables, all in addition to their regular full-time jobs. Sara Jane has seen Florence Schwartz DeWalt several times.

Doris Warner Brown is involved with a Junior Girl Scout Troop. She is also occupied with 2-year-old Douglas, and is active in church work.

Jody Shelley Davis and family spent two days in Pittsburgh in August, visiting all the old sights we remember so well and introducing her family to the Chatham campus, and vacationed in Blackwater Falls State Park, West Virginia. Jody is president of her local branch of AAUW.

A note to Ruth Swishhelm in the alumnae office brought sad news from Muriel Spindell Tonkin whose husband died on February 16, 1970 after a brief illness. She says her family and friends have been a great source of comfort, and the class wishes to add its very sincere sympathy. After spending the summer at her summer house, Muriel is back in her New York apartment, hoping to see or hear from classmates passing through town.

Marilyn Wolfert Zimmerman is treasurer of the Wisconsin State Historical Society Woman's Auxiliary. As a result of the very complex tax forms, she is now taking a course in accounting at the local college. I hope to see her on a spring trip to Atlanta.

This has been a quiet year for me with a trip to St. Louis in June, and the beach during July where my two learned to swim like fish. We have acquired an aquarium with 16 fish of various colors and sizes; also a pair of miniature dachshunds who are more trouble than the kids.

It seems impossible that another year is gone. It's been an exciting one for the Ewing's. We can't get over a new little baby in our home. As I write this, we're packing everyone up to leave tomorrow on a business trip with Jim to Virginia. We'll let you know how it goes with a four-month-old baby.

No news but greetings from Laura Ham-mer Inglis, Marie Richards who's working in the accounting office of Carnegie-Mellon University, Marion Orr Michel, Maryanne Taptich Barnes, Nan Norris, Jane Core McCombs and Lois Sherry Schworm.

Meg Berger Canon in her note, suggested, "... it would be good to hear via alumnae news, the opinions and suggestions of our classmates about the state of the nation and the world." Meg teaches junior high school science.

Christine Simmons, M.D. encourages everyone to get involved in the Liberation movement. She was on her way to Portugal and Spain for R. and R.

Home (in Israel) from an exciting vacation in Italy and Switzerland, Marilyn Lenchner Applebaum writes that their new home faces the Sharon Valley and mountains. Her son was Bar Mitzvah and the whole family went to Israel for the occasion. Marilyn's going back to grade school this year as an English teacher.

of the historic Michler Theatre in Altoona, Pa. which she (and many others) helped to restore. Barb's been directing musical comedies there for the past ten years. She was busy getting daughter Liz packed up for boarding school this fall.

Everyone who lives in Europe seems to travel a great deal. Elsie Gage Balano and family took a two-week trip in March to Venice and Rome, and in September they took a hydrofoil down the Danube to Budapest. She says things behind the Iron Curtain are pretty grim. Pat Yount Hudson reports from Paris that they rented a real Norman cottage on the coast of France for a month, and Pat says they really love living there. A long letter from Joanna Holroyd Piccardo who lives in Rome told of trips to the beach at Lavinio near Anzio. Jo's husband Georgio is a professor at the Medical School of the University of Rome.

Vicki Sneathen Petsinger and family spent a week with Billie Fuellenwarth Sampson at Billie's Ocean City, Maryland townhouse. She says the seven children kept them hopping, but they managed to get in a lot of conversation and had a "marvelous" time. Vicki also had a reunion with Nancy Miller Howard and her husband Dick, who stopped at Vicki's on their way home from a medical convention in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Congratulations to Rose Spoa. She was elected "teacher of the year" from Ellwood City. Rose went to the NEA Convention in San Francisco and a side trip to Canada and Hershey.

Nancy Miller Howard and family traveled to the East Coast, Vermont and New York State, and showed their daughter some college campuses, including a glimpse of Chatham.

Joan Brown Thompson is involved in many projects for the Irwin Junior Women's Club and Westmoreland County Association for Retarded Children. She does volunteer work for the clinic and still finds time to sing in the First Lutheran Church Quartet. Her four-year-old son David is a patient at the Greensburg Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

A gourmet cooking class should certainly make for varied menus at Barbara Young Hopkins' home. I see Barb every year at Kramer's for the Pitt-Penn State pre-game festivities.

Billie Fuellenwarth Sampson saw Carolyn Hirschberg Gorman and Lois Potts Adelson at an alumnae coffee in Washington, D.C. last winter. Billie is doing volunteer work for the YMCA and plans to work for the Republican Party during the coming election.

A California trip by car for Bo Bolger Collett and family was their first look at that part of the country. The children loved Disneyland, of course, and they especially enjoyed seeing the Bucs vs. the Astros at the Houston Astrodome.

Getting acquainted with the United States has been fun for Lois Bradley Fegley's family. Her boys loved the snow last winter. This summer they spent two weeks at Nags Head, North Carolina and Gatlinburg, Tennessee. Lois says she enjoyed attending an alumnae meeting in the South Hills area and hopes to keep up with it.

Mary Louise Matvey Shombert's husband gave the baccalaureate address at Douglass College this year. She reports a certain amount of campus unrest, but nothing more than words have been exchanged. In perhaps the understatement of the year, Mary Louise said, "... college life is vastly different from anything I remember."

Many thanks for your dollars and to those who forgot, please send your dollar to the alumnae office for the 1954 class treasury. It was great to hear from so many, but I'd like to hear from everyone. I wrote eighty notes and heard from twenty-four. Math was never my strong subject, but I asked Joyce Tinnemeyer Shaffer and she says it's about a 30% return. Joyce is going to do her practice teaching this spring, but in the meantime is doing substitute teaching. Over lunch recently, we had many laughs and fond memories of Mellon Hall. 'Til next year, a happy, prosperous and fulfilling year to you all.

This past year found many alumnae vacationing in the States and elsewhere. Christie Walter Rinehart visited Washington, D.C. with her family, who enjoyed seeing the moon dust at the Smithsonian. Elizabeth Reed Dann motored to Maine, the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario. Patricia Egry Curreri visited San Francisco, Hawaii, Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Europe—all in the last year. Patricia Miles Claypoole cruised the Michigan and Canadian lakes with Stephen and two sons who are boat enthusiasts. Judith Pitasky Markstein and Donald vacationed in Sea Island, Georgia and New Orleans this winter. Carole Williams took her camera to record her trip to Colorado (where she visited her brother's new pottery shop), Arizona and the Grand Canyon. Janet Schmultz Lee visited Hawaii and Peggy Pattison Moore went to New York.

Sonya Klein Vernau and family went camping this summer. So did Susan Bergman Gurrentz who spent time hiking in Montana with Morton and two of their sons. Susan also reports her fifth one-man show at the "Gallery Downstairs" in Pittsburgh.

Some busy professionals are Suzanne Klopp Seyler whose new job as Inservice Education Coordinator and director of the Poison Information Center at Mary Bridge Children's Hospital keeps her stepping. Joanne Sterling received her Ph.D. in counseling psychology, and is a busy member of the faculty of the University of New Mexico Medical School, and is also busy decorating her newly acquired home. Gretchen Elchlepp Smith is a school nurse this year in the North Hills area of Pittsburgh.

Caroline Mapp Cuneo is looking forward to a year devoted to herself—don't we all at one time or another!

Martha Kovalovsky Frew reports that they are back in Maryland now that Ralph has received his M.P.H. from Berkeley.

Shirley Zierer Byers reports an impending trip to Ireland where her husband will act with a group that has been invited to tour Ireland.

As always there are regards from many to their classmates: Mary Bailey, Barbara DeLaney Brown, Margaret Floyd Kaufman, Joanne Hammonds McDonald, Ann Hawthorne Lewis, Lois Katz Blaufeld, Electra Petrolias Agras, Esther Rothman Greenwald and Charlene Sparks Ferguson.

Karl and I took the children for our annual skiing trip to Holiday Valley during Christmas week. In the spring Karl and I took a trip to St. Maarten. The remainder of the year found me active with organizations now that all the children attend school all day.

Cally reporting:

The best feature of living in Abadan, Iran, is the variety of people one gets to meet. Carole Ashman Biggs says it's been a splendid place to live and feel the meet-ing of Eastern mind-set and Western tech-nology. Next year should find them me-andering back to the States via the Eastern Mediterranean, Europe and the British Isles.

Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow has had a happy and busy year "tripping" to Hous-ton and Pittsburgh and visiting family and friends. An anticipated trip to Japan this fall sounds exciting.

Good luck to Loretta Edwards Troyer as she takes her comprehensive exams in Oc-tober, completing her master's work in medical and surgical nursing at Catholic University, Washington, D.C. Her husband Bill is now on the faculty at the University of Wisconsin Medical School, teaching and doing research. They saw Nancy Galley and Barbara Asche when they returned to Pitts-burgh this June for Bill's (Pitt Medical School) 10th reunion.

Pat Gardner Macdonald and Lin, who was recently made a vice president at Park-er/Hunter, spent a weekend in New York City when they put daughter Chris on a plane to a Maine camp. Later they visited Boston. In August, the three of them spent three delightful weeks vacationing at Sea Island, Georgia.

Teaching nursery school, settling in a new home, and keeping up with her two active boys kept Sally Johnston Woods busy this past year.

Mary Anne Knuth Braithwaite wrote that she had just spent a hectic, fun-filled week at the Delaware shore with Phyllis Prinzo and George McShea, Nancy Knuth and Ron Thoman, plus an accumulation of eight children. Angela Koutavas Mitchell (with our class the freshman and sopho-more years), her husband, Jim, and their three children joined them at the shore for a day.

Our sympathy to Carole Anne Koko Ward who lost her father this past year. She's still a board member of several or-ganizations—LWV, AAUW, etc—and manages to teach a little, too. She was a supervisor for the County's census taking—a unique and eye-opening experience. Currently, Koko is the administrative assistant to the Lake County Republican chairman.

This was a big year for Jennine Johnson Jackson. She was named in the 1970 edition of Outstanding Young Women of America for her leadership of the Community Christmas Center in Tucson. Jared is now with Previews, Inc., and the family is rapidly adjusting from desert to ocean.

I thoroughly enjoy hearing from you each year. I only wish I would hear from every one of you! This year finds me back teaching fourth grade and continuing my graduate work at Penn State.

Jan reporting:

Renovating an old farm house on 28 acres has kept Freddie Richards Harper busy with a paint brush. The children are all in school, and Freddie serves on the boards of the Child Health Association and the Presbyterian Nursery School. She had a chance to visit with Jennine Johnson Jackson last year.

Wendy Hammond Everts and family spend a great deal of time at their second home in Vermont, skiing and swimming. She's been doing a lot of watercolors "and some even sell!"

This summer found Kay Harper Kerr on an enlightening trip to the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Ontario. Now, however, the Kerr family looks forward to a winter of skiing. Kay is also busy as president of the Erie County Dental Auxiliary.

Denise Zadeik Chatfield is active in attempting to bring tax reform to Ohio, particularly in the areas of education and welfare. Her three older children are great baby-sitters, giving the Chatfields time to continue teaching, playing and directing. She enjoyed seeing Pat Jones Wickham and her family this summer.

Pat Martin Kennedy is enjoying her new home in Houston, especially having the Gulf of Mexico an hour away. She was surprised to discover that Mrs. Wally, the librarian at Chatham until 1956, is now at the Houston branch.

"A fabulous trip to California" was the highlight of Barbara Sickles Bernstein's year. This winter she will do some nursery school teaching and pursue her new hobbies—guitar and beaded flower arrangements. Sickles saw Mary Ann Barry Reich in California and has visited with Jennine Johnson Jackson and Goody Selbst in New York.

Mickie Steinman Roth is still enjoying her career as medical librarian for St. Margaret's Hospital. As a part of her job, she attended a conference in New Orleans this year.

Claire Rubenstein Sachnoff could barely fit her exciting year on one small postcard. Last year she worked part time with emotionally disturbed children and in September she became a full-time teacher of children with brain disfunctions. She attended Pathway School this summer and visited Bobbie Weissman Marks while studying there. On the lighter side, the Sachnoffs spent three weeks in Acapulco, sold their boat, and have ordered a new houseboat to enjoy on the Allegheny next summer.

Claudette Cooper Ross and family camped to California and back this summer and returned feeling "its a trip everyone should take. It's a great country!" She also found census enumerating a challenge this spring.

Elaine Rockwood Cummings has been "waging war on the dandelions" in her new suburban home, but was looking forward to substituting and working toward her master's this winter. She also had time to become a certified scuba diver and planned to explore Pt. Royal, Jamaica during the fall.

Judy Moore Goebing has enjoyed the water this year in her new sail boat, and now enjoys three whole hours to herself at home with the youngest off to a Montessori School.

Joanie Herman Coleman started to play tennis again this summer with all of her children off to camp, and the Colemans enjoyed the Berkshires while visiting their two sons. Martha Lasky Sanders visited them last spring.

Speaking of Martha, I wish there was space to print the entire contents of her interesting letter. New York, North Carolina, and Palo Alto were her stops this summer, and she is busy organizing a Chatham Alumnae Club in Atlanta. The Sanders hope to head back to Stanford where Paul will be a research scientist.

Sandy Whitmyre Young is again working with Head Start, and is busy renovating an old building which will be used for classes. This summer she worked with preschoolers in a readiness program, and had a nice vacation in Williamsburg. It's hard to believe that Sandy also finds time to be president of her church group, Deacon in the church, and naturally a helper for Cub Scouts and PTA.

Phyllis Prinzo McShea spent a week at the shore with the Knuth twins and their families—there were eight children in all! She hopes to take a night class or two this year.

The past year has been an interesting one for Sonia Kurtz Matlick. She bought a home one block from the Michigan State campus, and attended a conference in New Orleans. Pat Nixon came to see their new facility for the retarded and Sonia says that the security precautions were something. Grey, her 8-year-old, and Sonia are "thinking snow" since joining the local ski club.

Barbara Sanford's new job sounds challenging. She is now a program specialist working in Public Careers Program, and deals with employment of the disadvantaged and minorities. She's been conferencing in Washington, Kansas City, and San Diego, plus taking trips to Jamaica and to Houston to visit Pat Martin Kennedy.

Betty Ann Maruca Wolke wrote that her family finally did something interesting for the Recorder! Bob took a six-month sabbatical at Pitt and they spent the winter in Puerto Rico where he was a visiting professor of chemistry and a visiting scientist at the Nuclear Center. They explored beaches and collected materials for collages, and went island hopping through the West Indies.

Pat Tanton Blaydon, our advisor, has moved to a new home off the campus and invites the class of '58 to visit. Times have changed since the gym class days—phys ed is no longer required at Chatham.

As for me, I am teaching kindergarten four afternoons a week, and am especially enjoying the two courses I am taking toward my masters' in English at Carnegie-

Mellon University. I also get up to Chatham one morning a week to volunteer in the Job Advisory Service office which is located in Beatty. Claire Sachnoff and I often chat about which one of us is the busiest!

After reading the postcards and letters, I can only conclude that a woman's world in 1970 extends much wider than laundry and finding a new use for Heloise's nylon net. The letters were especially interesting this year—my thanks to all who responded.

Arleen reporting:

With Mark in nursery school, Nancy Cohen Stein has free time to serve as volunteer co-ordinator for Jewish Family Service of Santa Monica in addition to her work with the aged. She extends an invitation to anyone in the Los Angeles area to stop in for a visit.

Tela Cohn Zasloff writes that after spending the summer in Washington, it was back to the University of Pittsburgh for Joe. They're looking forward to the fall publication of Joe's book on Laos, North Vietnam and the Pathet Lao, published by Harvard University Press.

Margaret Cooke Skidmore vacationed this summer with her family in Maine. Although Margaret enjoyed seeing everyone who attended our reunion, she hopes to see more at the next one. (I think that our next one is scheduled for 1973.)

It's been quite a year for Susan Decker. Last fall she became Director of Finance (fund raiser) for Howard Samuels' primary campaign for Governor of New York. Unfortunately, he lost, and Sue took the summer off to travel to Yugoslavia and Italy. Charlotte Hogg joined Sue to tour Israel. Then on September 1, Sue started a new job as Community Services Administrator for Seagrams in the magnificent Meis van der Rohe designed Philip Johnson Building on Park Avenue. Her job is a newly created one and will involve the formulation and implementation of Seagram sponsored programs to benefit the community, including job training for the hard-core unemployed. Sounds like a real challenge!

Barbara Eckel Goettler and Pat Evans Burns is sorry to have missed our reunion. Both are very busy with their families and associated activities. Barb says that ten years out of Chatham finds her happy and content. Pat reports that the Burns family took their annual trip to Florida in March and spent their summer vacation at Beach Haven on Long Beach Island, New Jersey. According to Pat, this is a great family resort.

From Wisconsin, Barbara Friedman London writes that they still enjoy living in Madison despite campus unrest. Ralph is an associate professor and associate chairman of the Computer Sciences Department at the University of Wisconsin. Bobbi's newest interest is tennis, but she admits that she hasn't had much time to put into practice what she has learned.

Betty Goodridge Westgard had a most pleasant summer enjoying their new son and new sailboat. Betty has been busy singing and playing flute in the church choir, and taking a ceramics class; but like many of us, most of her time is spent happily being housewife and mother.

Another busy Wisconsinite, Lucy Gray Gilligan, spent the month of August vacationing in Sturgeon Bay. In addition to four active youngsters, Lucy still finds time to be president of the local P.T.A., vice president of the Waukesha Symphony, and board member of a nursery school.

Travel seems to occupy much of Morissa Bernstein Lundy's time—summer trips to New York and Minnesota and future winter trips to Michigan and Wisconsin for skiing. A trip to California for a visit with Nancy Levendorf Recht and family is also being planned.

Alice Lochner Kruiten and family spent their vacation on Cape Cod. Her oldest child started junior high this fall. After re-landscaping their yard, Laddie now only has to tend eight flower gardens and a tomato patch. (I wonder what she had before!)

As for me, I've found that being a class secretary (that's what I get for going to reunions!) has really been a wonderful way to renew old acquaintances. Thanks to all who replied with cards and letters. It's fun hearing from you, but I hope to hear from even more next year.

The Porters have had a busy year, too. Larry received his M.B.A. last December, and was promoted by Frigidaire to Staff Systems Engineer in Private Brand Operations. Now and then I still find time to take a course or two towards my master's in education at the University of Dayton.

Claire reporting:

The notes this year all expressed a hint of amazement at how quickly ten years have gone. Our children are growing so rapidly, our jobs are more involved, and our activities are ever abundant. Life is truly hectic!

Kay McLaughlin Elder writes of still being secretary of the League of Women Voters of Mt. Lebanon and heading a resource committee this year, while continuing her activities in church and community work. Kay also reports that Beth is fine after spending sixteen weeks in a hip spica cast during the winter.

Sorry to have missed our reunion was Bette Nadel Balk, who also writes of her involvement in charity work, and of being "very much in the throes of decorating" and wondering if it will ever get done.

"We've had a summer filled with swimming—we have to get it all in before Lake Michigan is declared polluted," writes Judy Levine Weintraub. Herb, along with his colleague, is establishing the anesthesiology department at Michael Reese Hospital.

Still active in AAUW and doing orientation of members this year is Nancy Levensdorf Recht. Nancy hopes to attend a future reunion, but 3,000 miles was just too long a trip this year.

A very busy summer was had by the Pomputius family with a move "to the country and a mini-farm complete with pond and stream." MAK writes of having done much redecorating to their nineteenth century farmhouse and that the sky "is really blue." Billy is attending The Valley School of Ligonier and Mary-Alice is at St. Xavier's Academy in an experimental extension of Carlow's ungraded laboratory school.

Dottie Schall Schweiger regretted missing the reunion, but she did get to Pittsburgh for two weeks to visit family. On the way home the Schweigers stopped to see the Statue of Liberty. They will become true Massachusettsites as they are building a home for spring occupancy.

A highlight for Carole Koepke Brown this year, in "The Christmas City," was being Chatham's representative at the presidential inauguration of Dr. Herman Collier at Moravian College. Fond memories were stirred as Carole donned hood and robe.

Doing some research on the "effects of anesthetics on mitochondrial membranes" and thinking of "after the post doc is through" is Joan Munroe. Her vacation this year has been long weekends visiting friends and family. Two highlights of these trips were Mammoth Cave and St. Louis. Joan recommends a meal in Stouffer's River-view, but please remember to put your purse on the part that revolves with you.

Still writing her column for Grade Teacher is Amy Marcus Kellman. She and Sy are once again delighted to be Pittsburghers, and Amy enjoys her job at the Learning Research and Development Center at Pitt.

Faith Magdovitz Willis spent a fine first year on the faculty of Agnes Scott College, and this year will give an alumnae seminar on human ecology as well as teach. Faith is very active in AAUW, speaking at their conference on "The Human Use of Urban Space," and serving as publicity chairman. She recently spent an evening with Margie Marcus Krinzman in Florida and reports that Tom is now a third-year surgical resident.

Marilyn Mercur recently left her job with the Opera Company, only to be asked to return to organize a conference of opera directors. They met for a board meeting of O.P.E.R.A. AMERICA, attended an outdoor performance of "Four Saints in Three Acts" at a mountain winery, auditioned young singers, etc.—all a success. While hunting for that special job, Marilyn is enjoying her new, typically San Franciscan apartment, "complete with fireplace, beamed ceiling, and garden." Her parents have moved to San Francisco and Marilyn would welcome hearing from any of us who are planning a visit.

"Regards to all" came from Ann Meyer Klein, Berenice McGrew Fitzgerald, busy with decorating; Norma Hunt Mable, busy with her new son; and Mary Peck Gallo-way, relaxed after vacationing with her family at their cottage in Canada.

The Schweriner summer started, after the usual hectic year, at the reunion, where Ed and I thoroughly enjoyed seeing all of you who attended. (We hope to see many more in '73.) It then proceeded through two cases of chicken pox and then on to a delightful two months, highlighted by a trip to Ocean City, Maryland. The season ended with the new experience of kindergarten and a convention for Ed and me at Mackinac Island, Michigan. We, too, send our best, and I look forward to hearing from more of you next year.

Jill reporting:

Our class has sent more entrants into the teaching field this year. Nina Rhoades McCullough reports that Bob is in education with a goal that they have been working toward. She and daughter Sharon have run into allergies at their new home. They miss Pittsburgh, or, as older daughter Tracie Lynn (7) said, "But I've known these people all my life." With colder winters and a new school system it will be quite a change, but they have met some nice people and that helps.

Maintaining the same high standards she set at Chatham, Glenda Rich DeBroff completed her master's degree at Pitt in library science, and, after a vacation in New England, she is looking for part-time work. She reports that Nancy Levensdorf Recht was back from California due to the sudden death of her mother-in-law. Glenda already misses the Chatham Alumnae Board meetings.

Jane Sandford took a trip to England, Scotland and Ireland with a Kodak group. She greatly enjoyed London, and says "Hi" to everyone.

Marcia Rubinoff Rosenthal reports that son Lee (3) and daughter Lecia (1) and gardening are keeping her busy. I know how she feels.

Lanie Souza Matthews still loves teaching 4th grade in the Ozarks. They spent the summer traveling from Atlanta to Arizona, and spend their spare time canoeing a-sea in their own ski barge.

Dibbie Spurr Holloway thrilled her daughters Whitney and Kate by giving them a brother. Visits from Ann Curry Haux and Cordelia (Cooky) Suran Jacobs helped to welcome the new 10 lb. babe.

After vacationing at Fire Island, Ysault "Easy" Snepvangers is teaching in elementary school (early childhood), and sounded very excited about her new work.

Sally Swartz Baldus' husband is teaching at the University of Iowa Law School. Besides caring for daughter Katherine (1½), she is working as assistant to the campaign manager in the local Congressional election.

Ann (Turner) and Paul Arnold enjoyed the spectacular scenery of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island while camping this summer. They also take their son David (3) camping 50 weeks out of the year—summers in Massachusetts sailing and winters in Vermont skiing. She is also active in the League of Women Voters and the American Association of University Women.

And for one more Chathamite going into teaching, your reporter has entered the internship program at Pitt and is teaching science in 5th through 8th grades while working for a master's. A typical remark I got when entering into this was "you're going right into the jungle." But it isn't like that at all, though there are many problems. So, good luck to all and let us hear from more of you next year.

Sally reporting:

Terri Abrams Zions had an eventful year with the birth of her fourth child and her husband Stanley's promotion to full professor in the School of Management. Terri has also found time to be welfare chairman for the Amherst League of Women Voters, "editor" of a monthly newsletter for the International Committee at the University, and a board member for the Studio Arena Theatre Women's Committee. Stan has also been busy building a mammoth swingset and playhouse of redwood, receiving a Ford Foundation grant for a poverty study, and working on a book on linear programming.

Lee Baratelli Dietrich has taken a position as a systems analyst with Burroughs Corporation. She and Heinz, who is a corporate research chemist with Owens Illinois, were married in a brief ceremony in Toledo and combined a business trip and honeymoon in Holland. From there they went to a reception with his family in Germany, followed by a week in Northern Italy. They're hoping to move overseas permanently, but meanwhile spend their weekends driving to neighboring states for canoeing, hiking and skiing. Lee says they are at a "great crossroads" and will provide free bed and bread to friends and the needy.

Karen Batt Cohen has retired to keep house for her husband Harold who is education consultant to Perth Amboy Model Cities Program. Carol Bauman Knox and Margaret A. Brown both have new jobs. Carol is teaching biology and environmental pollution at Northfield School. Margie is a resident in pathology at the Medical College of Virginia.

Nancy Bennett Thieme was blessed with two vacations this year, both involving travel to Latin America. While husband Al was working in Brazil and Uruguay last fall, Nancy joined him for three weeks and renewed many friendships. In July they traveled by bus from Al's parents' home in Angelo, Texas to Mexico City, leaving 3-year-old Alfred III with his grandparents on the farm. Again Al was on business, but Nancy re-visited many places she had seen in 1967. Al narrowly missed the earthquake in Peru, having been in the north just two weeks earlier.

Faith Buchner Zarro has had an exciting year with her marriage and traveling. She and Pat, who is a research administrator in the personnel department of the City of Philadelphia, honeymooned in Canada, went to Williamsburg, and back to Montreal in August. Ethel Woelfel Fiderer was a bridesmaid, and Helen Hirsch Bostock and husband, Karen Batt Cohen, Sally Clarke Veil and Betsy Whitaker, a former classmate, were wedding guests. Faith and Pat also had a mini-reunion with the Bostock's and Fiderer's at her parents' farm in August.

Carol Jo Bullen has spent an interesting year teaching and helping with some of the administrative organization for the school in Japan. She says that if any Chathamite or graduate is interested in teaching in Japan, with an opportunity to see the country and learn about the people, language, and culture, to contact her. She has been traveling to Expo '70 in Osaka, Kyoto, Nagasaki, and to Korea to visit friends.

Barbara Bunker Faughnan and her husband spent two weeks in Switzerland, but poor skiing conditions forced them to seek amusement elsewhere. They spent several fun-filled days with Judy Malmquist Banz and her husband in Zurich. The Banz' returned the visit at reunion time at Princeton. The Faughnans have also exchanged visits with Renee Georgean Boulis and Matt. Aside from time spent sailing, skiing, and painting, Barbara is busy taking care of Kelly Jean, who is one and a third years old.

Ginger Campbell Miller and Jane Chittenden Hopkins have no particular news. Ginger's husband Allan has had a hectic summer with labor contracts expiring across the country. Jane's time is filled with 3-year-old Katherine and 2-year-old Elizabeth. She has seen Nancy Fleming Demoise, '61, several times.

I, Sally Clarke Veil, had a busy year keeping up with the various school schedules—Fred in Law School at night, Mark in first grade, and Jodie in nursery school—but we all made it through. We experienced our first childhood disease this spring. Jodie brought chicken pox home to Mark and me. I must admit that the children got through it better than I did. I ended up in the hospital for a week with the pox and pneumonia. I really enjoyed Faith's wedding and the reunion some of us had there. We all spent a very relaxing week at the shore in July and now it's back to the grind again. I enjoyed hearing from all of you. I hope that next year more of you will have some news.

Gail reporting:

Fran Dunlap Marciano has given up full-time teaching to return to school. She is combining her quest for a certificate in elementary education with her efforts to decorate her new home.

Busy mothers who found time to write that all is well include Bonnie Entin Perlman, mother of 5½ and 2½-year old sons; Ruth Goldberg Checker, who is doing part-time home instruction teaching in Montgomery County while her children are occupied in play school and kindergarten; Ginny Golletti Fletcher, who teaches fifth grade in her home-town of Freedom, Pennsylvania, and marvels at having a son in third grade; and Judy Hallock Silver, another new home owner and mother of two.

Capsuling the last eight years, Molly Fletcher Abt writes that she is the mother of three sons, Michael 7½, John 6½, and Jason 2. She and Paul spent a happy year-and-a-half in London before becoming suburban New Yorkers five years ago. Molly is still occupied with doing over the inside of the house which they bought two years ago, and says she is glad for the change-of-pace provided by several weeks' vacation in Maine each summer.

Patti Foss Shaw is working in the L.S.U. Library while husband Pat works at becoming a professor of English. Patti has also been doing time on her master's in library science at Texas and North Texas Universities, and says both will be glad to be out of school and settled down.

The Mitchell family has had an eventful summer. Barb Friedell Mitchell finished her master's in musicology at Pitt while Jim completed his doctorate in computer science at Carnegie-Mellon. They took a month off and drove across country to establish residence near Berkeley where Jim is now working for a small computer company and Barb is caring for their new daughter.

Ruth Ghering Biro and husband, Bill, spent part of their summer at a land development near Seven Springs, in which they have an interest, but now are both settled down again to teaching. Ruth is in library science and children's literature at Duquesne and Bill is a teaching fellow in geography at Pitt.

Judy Halko Sphon, another new home owner, is becoming a true Kentucky horse racing fan. With reported winnings of 10¢ after two track seasons, perhaps she should concentrate on gardening, another of her new interests.

Having also moved south, Marcia Hammond Deem looks back on a happy year as youth choir director for her church. Her activities include putting together a production of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," becoming a "mother-in-a-classroom" in Charlotte, and taking groups of young people spelunking in West Virginia (that's cave exploring).

Jane Hardimon Libbing spent her whole summer on a lake in northern Michigan teaching three-year-old Kenny to swim. She has been very active in her A.A.U.W. literature group and says it keeps a mother's mind from becoming stagnant.

While sitting in my kitchen, Vicki Hartung described her "Chatham summer" and gave me enough information to fill the whole Recorder. A brief run down of her activities includes: a week in Palm Springs at Mary Loughran Fell's "decadent and lovely" house; two weeks of fun and dirty diapers on an island in Canada with Claire Zavarich Thorpe and family; four days spent just outside of Buffalo with Linda Clinton Eaton and her three children; a quick trip to New York City at attend Lee Baratelli Dietrich's wedding reception, from which she went to New Haven with Chitty Hopkins to meet her family. Aside from her travels, Vicki is now head of the catalogue department at Duquesne Library and is in the last year of her master's in history. She is still skiing and has access to a chalet at Laurel Mountain, for those who share her interest.

With our daughter in second grade and our son in nursery school this year, and having gained the upper hand in what I thought was a losing battle against our house, I find myself very much involved with church activities, the most exciting of which is sure to be the lessons I am getting from the director of the Lovelace Marionettes as we work toward putting on a Christmas pageant. All is well with all of us; please keep in touch, and next time, come to the reunion. Those of us who did had a great time.

Mildred reporting:

Katie Kerrigan Miller is teaching biology, general science, and conservation. She received her master of education in biology this year and was kept busy with 3-year-old Frannie. She also entered a Ben-Pearson Bow-hunting Sweepstakes and won a trip to Alaska for her husband Sealy. Sealy opened his own Chevron business in July,

Elaine Kessler Ruben and Phil spent a wonderful July week with daughter Jill on Balboa Island and another week last April in San Francisco. Elaine also made her annual visit to Pittsburgh which she terms "grandparent land."

February found Lynn Leister Rojahn and Ted living in Guatemala City, "If all continues calm," Lynn writes, "this is a beautiful, delightful place to live."

Julia Loubris Hanson and John are back in Pittsburgh. Julia is enjoying "housewife only" routine but was busy planning an August trip to Germany and Switzerland.

Mary Loughran Fell is the Chatham Admissions Representative for the Chicago area and is also an active member of League of Women Voters, a volunteer for Jewish United Fund, and a participant in a library story program with daughter Karyn. She and Joe had a wonderful trip to Jamaica in April and spent three weeks in May in Palm Springs where they saw Vicki Hartung.

Judy Malmquist Banz and Richard are living in Zurich. Judy is busy caring for Laura Catherine, 1½, and Christian Alexander, 3 months. They are trying to see as much of Europe as they possibly can while they are there. Barbara Bunker Faughnan and Judy Wentworth Mullan ('64) visited Zurich in the spring.

Connie Merlino Tamburo enjoyed the class reunion but is sorry so few '62'ers attended.

Jo Mitchell Soltman will teach a Sunday School course in comparative religions this year and will also be active in Pittsburgh Council for International Visitors.

Many thanks to all of you who took time to answer my plea for news. I only wish I had heard from the others!

Zoe reporting:

Hi, and condolences to those who have crossed over the threshold of our third decade. After reading all the replies I tried to find something we all had in common (except for thirtieth birthdays), but activities vary so much that it looks as though reports of the next thirty years will continue to be pretty interesting.

The new form letter inspired Gretchen Wright Gantzer to send her compliments to the chef. She reports that living a mile from the bay helps the kids enjoy the summer. Jack's job takes him to Europe and the Far East several times a year. Naturally Gretchen hopes to join him sometimes. At the moment Susan, born in March, and the Labrador puppy, Ahab, are making life at home interesting.

Sara Westlake Delmar continues to be an on-the-go wife and mother what with caring for Ken, three children, a new puppy, not to mention her farm menagerie.

Pat Sinn Bloomgarden is another active mother. She is editor of the bulletin for the National Council of Jewish Women, and is working with American Mothers Unlimited, a peace group. She is active in a co-op nursery, refinishing furniture, playing golf, and, of course, caring for husband Barry, sons Neil, 3, and Jimmy, 8. Hardly seems enough to fill a day, Pat.

"It's been a great year," says Judy Schenk Eley. The Eleys went camping in the Smokies and even 15-month-old Karen enjoyed it. Husband John was actively involved on Moratorium Day and Earth Week activities on the campus of Western Kentucky University where he is assistant professor of government. Judy keeps out of mischief caring for Karen, sewing and keeping up with the faculty wives club. They enjoyed a short visit with Alice Carson Scott and her two boys.

Penny Ulman Schwarz and Mike plan a ski trip to Aspen and Vail in February. This is following a year of enjoying her new role of mother. Not to be left out, Mike formed a law partnership with three other attorneys in July.

Ellen Schreiber McBride continues as a free lance art editor and photo researcher. Along with a vacation at Lake George, she enjoyed seeing Manuel and Barb Rogers Agosin and John and Julie Loubris Hanson. Betsy Potter Oller is still working at Northwestern. Aside from acquiring two cats, she reports that nothing really interesting has happened, as does Shirley Neely Brown.

Georgette Vernaccini Coombs has illustrated a children's publication for the Special Education Department of the Prince George's County Board of Education. This magazine is given to the children who are on home study. Impressive . . .

Building, moving into, and refinishing homes has occupied many who responded.

Gail Payne Bryan has settled into her newly built home which is surrounded by thirty acres of woodland, an acre lake, ducks, deer, two dogs, three children, and husband Craig who reduced the deer population by one when he shot a stag with a revolver after ten minutes of his first hunting trip, 100 feet from his back door!

Linda Ruttenberg Ackerman moved to Bethesda, Maryland and hopes to remain there for a while.

In July, Sue Sohnlein Harsh moved into a new home in Columbus. Sue recuperated (?) by taking her two older children to the mountains in August. She and Don planned an escape trip to New York City in November.

After living in Wyoming and California, Carole Sprinchorn Colter and Bill are off to Denver, Colorado where Bill will work for the U.S. Department of Transportation. They have explored northern California and the Bay area this past year. While Bill was finishing his M.S., Carole was actively involved with productions for a Point Richmond theatre group.

"Fun and exciting," says Jane Saunders Pauline who is in the midst of building a new house. Barbara Rogers Agosin is in the throes of renovating a Brooklyn brownlyn brownstone. She has been recently promoted to Assistant Chief Librarian, Research Library, Federal Reserve Bank of New York. I hope she doesn't have to write that title too often.

Sherry Trautman Freeman says Yes!!!, she has a son. Roddy has joined his three sisters and is all boy. Among the visiting celebrants was Joyce Helsing Marlowe. Sherry adds that she is now a true suburbanite (read chauffeur), driving Sherwood, Anne and Meighan to swimming lessons, Bible School, summer recreation, Campfire Girls—need she say more?

It was a girl I wanted and that's just what I had. Little Cassie is great. After having her a month early, and in June enduring my second kidney stone operation in two years, I enjoyed a sun-filled two weeks at Deep Creek in August. September brought a warm visit with Mary Lough- ran Fell. After working on table decorations for the Alumnas reunion luncheon and designing a Christmas card for our community's Hospital Auxiliary, I (more or less) gave up the calendar-filling activities of these last couple of years. I'm practicing saying no so that maybe I can start out my thirtieth with a bit more free time. As it is said, I can dream, can't I . . .

Carolyn reporting:

Many of this year's replies brought glad tidings of new family additions. Mary August Taylor sent news of her new daughter, and Dorothy Cohen Porper also writes of the joys of motherhood—Jeffrey has already traveled half-way across the country to Chicago, where Dotty attended her tenth high school reunion, and to Cape Cod for a vacation.

Although Harriet Bass Little's Matthew keeps her hopping, as one-year-olds will, she still finds time to be active in the Junior League in Rochester and the Children's Theatre.

Karen Blomquist Struckman and Russ are delighted with their new role as parents and "keep wondering why they didn't join the ranks sooner." The Struckmans were looking forward to a trip to Syracuse in the fall and hoped to stop along the way to say "hello" to several classmates.

Joan Bailey is teaching philosophy at New England College while finishing the final stages of her Ph.D. Joan also writes, "I'm quite involved in revamping and re-considering American education and have a book on same rattling around in my head." She (and many others) commented on how interested and pleased she was about Chatham's new curriculum changes.

Don and Carol Baker Wildemann are "busy studying as usual." While Don starts his dissertation, Carol is taking courses toward her Ph.D. in educational research plus working in the new Testing Bureau at Pitt. The highlight of this year was two weeks in August spent vacationing in Paris, Amsterdam and London.

And speaking of Europe, one can still find Suzanne Clewell in Germany although she has moved south to the German city of heaven—Munich. She's teaching third grade at the American Military School, and, as usual, has many wonderful tales of travel and adventure over the past year, highlighted by a three-week visit to Russia and Poland and a visit in June from her family.

Joyce Cordella Chew writes that although her two little ones take up a great deal of her time, she does manage to take some graduate courses in psychology at Russell Sage and to sit on the board of Albany's Childbirth Education Association. Joyce tells of hosting a Chatham reunion in August in celebration of Lucille Hillman Cesarone's wedding. "The Chew Hotel held Nancy Redmond, Dill and Kitty Barley Paiste, Tim and Harriet Bass Little plus ten-month-old Matthew, and Mark and Grace Wilson Sundelin and two-year-old Andrew."

Dorothy Evans Fulton sounds as busy as ever. Along with her new position as Director of Occupational Education at Western State School and Hospital, she is attending Pitt part time leading to a master's in special education and rehabilitation, and still maintaining her active role in the Washington, Pa. Branch of the NAACP and the County Health and Welfare Council.

May was a very special one for Eleanor Finger Stryker—her husband Bill returned from Thailand. The Strykers plan to stay in Michigan for two years while Bill goes to graduate school and then move to West Point where he will teach history at the Academy.

Phyllis Fox Catz seems to have a wide variety of things to keep her going every minute. Besides her two daughters and a menagerie of creatures, she is involved in AAUW, the Alumnae Association, and substitute teaching. She also writes, "We're putting the now extinct basic curriculum to work—HD and B and Modern Society—Sandy and I are Democratic committee people in Republican Montgomery County."

"We're both feeling liberated," says Beverly Fretz Nelson now that her husband Chuck has completed his Ph.D. dissertation in international relations. Bev is still working with OEO as education director of a Community Action Agency.

It's always good to hear from our associate members. Catharine Barley Paiste sent her annual newsy letter—how I wish I could include it all. Three-year-old Wyn keeps her busier than ever, and she had another busy winter with thirty-two pre-primary "darlings." Although she decided in June to take another "unpaid sabbatical," her letter sounded as if, come fall, she just might return—with a little coaxing.

Christine Burley sends news of her move to the Philadelphia area where she is working as a visiting nurse with the Community Nursing Service of Delaware County.

All settled in their new home in Bethesda, George and Kathleen Coyle Guenther and three sons seem to be thoroughly enjoying Washington life. Kathy is able to get together at least once a week with Garland Mackroth, and the two of them had a luncheon reunion with Sally Taylor Pleasants and Suzanne Clewell this summer just before Suzanne returned to Germany. After a vacation to Hawaii, Kathy recommends that it's "all and more than what everyone has ever said about it."

Our best wishes to Karen Elliott Griffin who wrote of her recent marriage. Her husband Harrison, is a salesman for Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Inc.

As for the Wards, this year has been an especially busy one—trying to keep pace with our active two-year-old, getting reacquainted with Pittsburgh and vicinity, and experiencing the many monumental projects, decisions, and joys of being new homeowners. It's been delightful being just around the corner from Don and Sally Terbush Drescher—we've spent many a good time together and our little girls have become great friends.

Many thanks to all who sent news of the past year and best wishes to all in the year ahead.

Linda reporting:

Job hunting in Durham is keeping Marty Fay Africa occupied this fall. The Africa's purchased a new home there after their move from Boston. Ambitious Bruce, who incidentally has a Ph.D. in biochemistry, entered Medical School this year.

Doris Haukland Nielssen writes from British Columbia that she is "fulfilling her maternal instincts" as a busy mother to two energetic girls, Ingrid and Sonja. Doris enjoyed a globe-trotting summer beginning with a family visit in New Jersey where she was happy to chat with Barbara Bauman. They continued their travels with a visit to Arild's family in Oslo where the beautiful Norwegian scenery captivated Doris.

Claudia Grogan Brenneisen, Margie Frye Wilcox, and Millie Grossman Zacher report it's Girls, Girls, Girls!—second daughters for each of them. Millie, whose eldest starts school this year, is determined to get her Ph.D. even if it means braving the Philadelphia ghetto by night to take some courses.

When you see a Mazola Oil commercial think of Gwenn Gurnack—she writes them as well as several other leading advertising accounts. Gwenn was appointed senior writer at Lennen and Newell, Inc. Advertising. However, not all of her time is spent in New York. In June, she cruised to the Caribbean aboard the "Rotterdam," and she has taken up fresh water fishing and reports a "nice catch" of Canadian lake trout and small-mouthed bass! Gwenn will be singing alto with the New York Choral Society this winter and on weekends she intends to ski in New England.

Janet Kessling Boese is busy painting and redecorating a spacious home after her return from Paris, and extends a warm invitation to classmates who are in Philadelphia to come for a visit. Girl Friday for the Princeton newspaper is Sue Haskell Clokey who is also busy fixing her new home. Sue misses Pittsburgh and hopes to get back for a visit soon.

A busy year for Judy Germaux Page included the arrival of Lauri in April and Bob's graduation from Southeastern Seminary in May. After a summer of youth work in Washington, D.C., the Pages moved to Texas where Bob began doctoral studies in religion at Rice University.

Marian Friedman Siegel says that Bill couldn't have found a more perfect location for his dental practice—they are just a short drive from the ocean! Nancy Greco Moran and Larry joined them in Provincetown for Labor Day. Another Bostonian is Beth Fellows Klemm whose two boys keep her quite busy although she finds time for the Garden Club and the League of Women Voters. The Klemm's summered in Wolfeboro, N.H. and enjoyed the cool lake waters. Beth proudly reports that Skip has been promoted to vice president of marketing for Audiovision Inc. in Boston.

With two growing daughters to care for and a full-time job, Janie Hantman Perrin still finds time for graduate work at Pitt in reading and language arts. She is very enthusiastic about the reading program she is teaching at Herron Hill High School. Mary MacConnell Ferry hopes to start tutoring at home to keep in touch with teaching while caring for little Beth. Mary reports that although her activities have been child-oriented this past year she did manage to join two discussion groups and to write periodically for the area newspaper. The Ferry's took a trip to the Virgin Islands to introduce her parents to their new granddaughter.

From Oklahoma, Judi Krasner Barbarosh reports that she and George are very involved in their jobs, leading different types of therapy groups. They plan to vacation in California.

Your reporter, Linda Wason Bardonner, has become a "utilitarian artist"—having acquired a new home, I wallpaper, paint, and refinish! I enjoy an occasional day of substituting as I keep in touch with my former kindergarten students and watch them progress.

Marty reporting:

"Bruce and I are working together in a large Presbyterian Church (3000 members) in a music program of five choirs made up of 270 people," wrote Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson from Lincoln, Nebraska. She added, "I am definitely missing the proximity to the campus I had when in Pittsburgh though Lincoln is a university town and not entirely devoid of intellectual activity."

Marcia Mann Butler and her husband Bruce have been living in Germany since May 1969 where Bruce is completing a legal fellowship. Marcia wrote, "During the past sixteen months we have delighted in the historic sights and natural beauties of almost every corner of Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and Liechtenstein. Our most memorable weekend of all, however, was spent in lovely Prague where we became vividly aware of the brutality of the Russian invasion and became even more grateful that we are Americans."

Joining the Sweet Adelines, a female barbershop group, and serving as their costume chairman has been keeping Nancy Munson McCormack busy. The McCormacks again participated in the Fresh Air Fund Child program this summer. Nancy also reported that she has seen Julie Givner Reppenhagen numerous times.

Susan Offill Killgallon wrote, "A lot has happened to us during the past year—our move from New York City, the acquisition and remodeling of our house and the birth of our son Billy. It's been an exciting and wonderful year."

Candy Parrish Bauer and her husband Ed were planning a fall vacation in Canada, visiting Toronto, Montreal and Quebec, when Candy wrote. Ed was promoted to the position of plant metallurgist at United's Canton Plant last April. Their four-year-old son Brian started nursery school in the fall.

"My year of tennis, painting and puttering is over," wrote Angela Patrizio Smith who is now teaching fourth grade at Holton-Arms, a private school in Bethesda, Maryland. Angela added that her freshman roommate, Rosalind Benaroya Poll, had just had a second child, Ryan Albert, and that the Polls were on their way to Germany for a year where Rosalind's husband Mel will be with an opera company.

Also returning to work after a year as a full-time homemaker is Nancy Pierson Tolley who is working at the Royal Institute of British Architects. Her husband John has another year of study before getting his master's at the London School of Business.

Bonnie Podolsky Theiner and husband Micha are participating as part-time instructors in literature, sociology and comparative religion at the School of Advanced Jewish Studies. The Theiners attended the 1960 Class Reunion of Taylor Allderidge High School where they saw many Chatham friends. They also enjoyed a visit in June from Phyllis Fox Catz.

Suanne Pollack Singer's husband Howard was to finish with the Air Force in October and join another pediatrician in private practice in Skokie, Illinois. Suanne added that her three boys really keep her going.

Although their home is Lima, Peru, Tracey Quarry Gill and her husband David, who is an investment analyst with ADELIA, spent only seven months in Lima during their first year there. The rest of the time was spent traveling in Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Uruguay and Columbia. "Our home is open to anyone passing through on her way to explore the Inca ruins," added Tracy.

Ellen Rosenthal Sosnow sent a brief note explaining that right now she is very busy with her babies.

Robb and I, Marty Richards Cummings, enjoyed a wonderful vacation at the Thousand Islands this summer. Robb is now chief resident in obstetrics and gynecology at Case Western Reserve's University Hospitals, and I am now a full-time homemaker.

Nancyann reporting:

News came this year from several busy mothers. JoAnn Rymer Lightcap wrote that two-year-old Ann, hospital volunteer work and tutoring in English are keeping her occupied. Janet Saperstein Slifkin finds that Joshua, now one, is fun and full of surprises. Barbara Silverman Freed, busy with Mark, who is three, and baby Wendy, is considering taking some evening courses at Wayne State University to "avoid becoming totally involved with Mother Goose!"

In the middle of moving from California to Washington, Bonnie Tacshler Casey found time to send news of Mike's new job with Polaroid which has them both excited. Bonnie spent a year working with the Walnut Creek Civic Arts Theatre while she was in California. She was one of the players in Spoon River Anthology. As an offshoot of her work, she helped formulate a church drama group which performed at a church service. Bonnie spent the summer with seventy 9-to-13-year-olds in a drama program where she managed to do three original plays.

After two years of no news, Valerie Valentine Mabbott sent a long and delightful letter from London which more than made up for her silence. She thinks that London is wonderful and exciting—the fact that her husband is "British and bearded" and a writer-producer for an advertising agency there has something to do with her enthusiasm for the English countryside. Val's letter was full of travel tales, including her trips to Paris and last year's holiday in a small French town with fantastic wine, news of her own work at an advertising agency, talk of a Christmas party complete with Lord Snowdon, John and Yoko as celebrities, an announcement of her writing a cookbook and doing some modeling for UGLY (a political science major, no less) and finally, news of her new job as a "creative group head." In short, Val's letter was enough to convince anyone that life in the States is surely dull! It seems that Val is in England to stay. She has even taken some courses in French literature at the City Literary Institute. Although she says taxes are higher and salaries lower, she wouldn't come home, so we will all have to write her for more news.

A short note from Bette Watson Merchant said that she is beginning her master's at the State University of New York in educational communications.

Linda Weinberg Rosenzweig spent a busy year with a new baby and daughter Amy, who is an active three. She and Richard went to the Pittsburgh Bar Association meeting in Bermuda and Nassau and then spent some time on the New Jersey shore with their two girls. They were looking forward to a visit from Mari Sachs Gimbel and her family in the fall.

During last winter, Mary Ann Wrigley Church took more art courses and has now begun work on her master's in education. She keeps busy with her two sons, but found time to do some redecorating and to become active in forming a local Childbirth Education Association since she had Timothy by the LaMaze Method of Childbirth. The whole family has enjoyed sailing on the family boat.

News from our associates finds Suzanne Ward Flanigan the proud mother of three daughters, Carol Lynn, 7, Connie, 4, and Cindy, 1. Lynn Warner Kluter has a new job as a fashion co-ordinator for Higbee's, a suburban store. She is also taking graduate courses in elementary education at Case-Western Reserve and should complete her master's in June of 1971.

Here in Connecticut, things are much the same. I spent a hectic spring filling in for a French teacher who left my old school system. My summer was very enjoyable as I worked in the Yale M.A.T. program as a master teacher. Steven is an ever-active, all-boy toddler who keeps his mother on her toes. Larry and I would enjoy seeing anyone in the area. Thanks to all of you who replied.

Susan reporting:

Suzy Callas Francis and Dave are back in Rochester, Minnesota, after a trip east for Dave to get his degree. Dave is continuing his work in medical research and Suzy is busy working in and for Zero Population.

Louise De Carl Malugen and John spent a two-month honeymoon touring Europe and North Africa. Having graduated from law school in June, she was busy studying for the August bar exam. John is an attorney with a large law firm, but they have no plans to go into a partnership.

Elizabeth Blanton Shelor's husband is a chemistry teacher along with being the varsity football and lacrosse coach at Episcopal High School.

Leslie Caplan Itskowitz writes of two special events: the birth of Amy Rae and the completion of Alan's residency. Alan is practicing internal medicine with a group in downtown Pittsburgh.

Susan Cohn Brenner is "adjusting" to Kentucky after California. Paul is teaching Josh to play the piano, ride a motorcycle, etc. In Susie's spare time she is still trying to break 100 in her golf game.

Christine Benanito has decided to finish her Ph.D. in English literature at the University of Chicago. She taught for the Woodlawn Experimental Schools project from September, 1969-June, 1970.

Jane Coulter Burger is really kept busy with two children and her part-time job as an educational research consultant for school districts and the University of Pittsburgh.

Barbara Crick Kinsporn was surprised, as was her doctor, with the arrival of the twins. Though she has her hands full, Barb believes twins are the greatest.

Martha Coyne Scott and Richard have moved into a one-hundred-year-old farmhouse and are looking forward to redecorating it.

As for me, Susan Coleman Heckman, it has been an exciting year. Jim and I went on a cruise to Nassau in May, Jim finished his internship, and we moved into a townhouse. We will be in Charlottesville for four years while Jim completes his orthopedic residency. I plan to continue my job at the Graduate School of Business. Thanks to all who wrote—I only wish I could have heard from everyone.

Bonnie reporting:

Betsy Kern starts her fourth year of medical school at West Virginia and eventually plans to take a residency in psychiatry after she completes a medicine or rotating internship. Over the summer she drove 2500 miles to California, visiting hospitals to have some idea of where she'll want to intern.

Marty Friday Roberts continues to work hard at Boston University to pass her Ph.D. qualifying exams this October in social psychology.

Raquel Halty Ferguson and husband Bill take generals for their Ph.D.'s sometime between January and May. In the meantime they have begun publishing books. Requel welcomes Chathamites visiting the Cambridge area.

Hannah Gilman has been working as a research assistant at a small company regarding technical education for "emerging" technologies. She's travelled a lot—so far to New Orleans, Atlanta and Denver, and is enjoying living in Cambridge.

Judy Howard Reilly writes that she and son "Jay" are doing fine.

Carole Early Cupps loves being home. She has been swimming, playing tennis, and teaching son Drew to swim. In addition, she is taking some extension courses in elementary education, reading, and child psychology.

Alice Graham Weber writes that she couldn't be outdone by her roommate, Barbie, and had to have twins, too! In addition to mothering, she's getting ready to move to Wheeling where she and Paul bought a three-bedroom townhouse.

Kathy Hoover Hill and Scott had an exciting year in that Scott's job with Esso Research and Engineering sent them to France for three months last winter. Kathy is retiring this fall to relax and start house hunting.

Ann Greenhouse Klein and Steve have moved to Ardmore (suburb of Philadelphia) while Steve does his residency in obstetrics and gynecology at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. Alan Mark keeps Ann busy.

Bobbie Hewitt Orloff and Jon love their new home which is located one hour from Mt. Hood and the ocean. Jon works at Evans Products Company as a member of the corporate development division and is also finishing his Ph.D. thesis. Bobbie keeps busy with four dogs and decorating their house, and also plans to be a guide at the Portland Art Museum this fall.

Debbie Lee Lavetti's husband is a skier and tennis player who was formerly a professional baseball player. Debbie is doing decorating which is both frustrating and challenging for her.

As for me, Bonnie Markey Seasonwein

I finished my M.S.W. in June, and Roger and I had a wonderful vacation in Scandinavia this summer. We've been enjoying traveling and visiting friends in the East. Thanks for the news, and please visit if ever in the New York area.

Marjorie reporting:

Kristin Jellison Casteel is still with Keydata Corporation but has become the supervisor of subscriber service. She and Ralph spent 2 weeks in Missouri—but think it is the "greatest state in the union."

Ruth Klein Kaplan says she and Bob vacationed in Colorado, and she wishes they could vacation a lot more and work a lot less.

Sandy Kretz Callahan has had a very hectic year. After spending 6 weeks honeymooning in Canada and the West, Sandy returned to D.C. while Dick took off for 8 months of flight school in Colorado. When he graduated in May he took a job in the Virgin Islands as a flight instructor at the flight school, so they are getting settled in that warm and sunny land. They would welcome any visitors lucky enough to travel there!

Donna Kwall Smith has been appointed a psychologist with the Pittsburgh Public Schools and is a doctoral candidate at Pitt, while her husband John continues as assistant to the Chancellor.

Cristina Lagueruela Mendoza is kept doubly busy with 1½-year-old Cristina and new little Victor.

Penny Langston Zollinger is living with her family while Bill serves his time as an Air Force surgeon at Cam Ranh Bay. She had nice visits with Beth Marty Welch and Barb Wallace in California and Carole Early Cupps and Sam in Toledo.

Vivian Lazur Brantley and Bill moved to New Jersey where Bill has a new job with Bell Telephone following his separation from the Army. Viv mentioned that they had a delightful trip in the spring to Colorado and Las Vegas.

Carol Beth Levin Hill's husband Ed is another "escapee" from the Army, and is now an attorney with Litton Industries in California. Carol Beth and Ed are also Las Vegas visitors.

Rebecca Mark Orlinsky and Zeke were also vacationers, spending 3 weeks in New England. Zeke is busy with a new printing company in addition to his job with the State Attorney's office in Baltimore.

Berry Marshall Hoak and Dale will be returning to the U.S. in December when Dale will become an assistant professor in British history at Florida Atlantic University. Berry has been abroad for 4½ years in Greece and England and she is looking forward to the sunshine after the "English condition."

Betsy McGregor Cooley and her husband Steve both had their noses in the books this year as Steve studied urban administration at American University and Betsy finished her M.A. in community counseling at the University of Maryland. They had a pleasant break this summer touring Scandinavia.

Best wishes are in order for Nancy McNabb Davis. Her new husband is a 3rd-grade teacher at Chestnut Hill Academy in Philadelphia.

Shad Mirza Ahmad writes that her new daughter Soophia keeps her so busy that she has had to give up her Arabic lessons! But she still finds time to teach sociology at the Aligarh Muslim University while Sohail is a reader in microbiology.

Judy Parry Pike writes that she has been teaching pre-school in a Day Care Center, but she says the next 3-year-old she works with will have to be her own. In the fall she plans to start on her master's in social work at the University of Minnesota. She has also been working at a planned parent-hood clinic while Harl is a seminary student.

Celia Paul South continues as community consultant at Albert Einstein College, while her husband Walter is a housing consultant in New York.

Heather Martin Price spends most of her time keeping up with her two energetic daughters. On a trip home to Pittsburgh last fall she visited with Sage Tower Muma and also saw Adair Douglas.

Renny Mazo Cohen is kept busy by her new daughter while Dennis is kept busy by his duties as a pediatric intern at Shando Hospital in Gainesville.

Mary Bruce McCulloch Mitchell's husband Dave has a new job with the Instrument Society of America, and she writes "new home, new job and new baby girl—what more could we do this year."

As for me, Marjorie Morrison Hofer, Bill's new job and our new Volkswagen Camptmobile have been the high points of our year. After Bill was finished with the EXPO '70 U.S. Pavilion, he happily dropped the miserable commuting life and took a job with an architectural graphics firm in the neighboring town of New Canaan. No more waiting for trains that are 2 hours late! In the new job Bill is involved with designing sign systems for several major airports, including the expansion of San Francisco International Airport. He has been there several times on business, but so far I haven't been able to tag along.

We have really enjoyed our camper and have been away almost every weekend. We spent two weeks in August in Maine, first in northern Maine near Baxter State Park, complete with moose feeding across the lake about 150 feet away, bears, deer, etc., mountain climbing and canoeing. The second week we spent on the coast at Acadia National Park. It was wonderful and we are already planning to return next year.

Thanks to all who wrote—please drop in if you're passing this way.

Sherrie reporting:

A card to the alumnae office brought interesting news from associate member Jane Nobel Maxwell who is in her sophomore year at Hahnemann Medical College. Her husband Mark, who is interested in going into college administration, is working as assistant to the president of Swarthmore College. He received his master's degree in American studies at Yale University, and is presently writing his thesis, the last requirement for his Ph.D. at Columbia University.

When Betsy Pincus Candler wrote she and her husband were excited about the coming arrival of a first grandchild for both the Pincus' and the Candler's. She and Dan stopped in Pittsburgh last spring on their way to the Kentucky Derby.

Between semesters Jeff Potter Silver and Paul have been on the road. In June they visited with John and Marg Paulson Falk in New York, Steve and Betsy McGregor

Cooley in Washington, and Herb and Janie Coulter Burger in Pittsburgh. After Paul completes his law degree at the University of Chicago and Jeff completes her M.A. in urban studies at Loyola, they hope to settle somewhere west of Chicago, and traveled from Portland to Santa Fe this summer looking for the right spot.

In June I had a delightful visit with Hilary Prouty Van Rensselaer and her new daughter, Serena, in Peapack, New Jersey. Between building an addition onto the house, pruning the fruit trees, and playing tennis, Hil has been keeping up her usual pace.

Ann Quenin is still on the Boston scene where she and Debbie Little have played host to a number of familiar faces, including Jane Lagas, Sharon Litchfield and Sabra Burdick.

Tamworth, New Hampshire is another spot that often has a contingency of Chathamites staying with Helen Read Steele. When Helen isn't teaching chemistry or swimming, you can usually find her riding her trail bike, playing tennis, skiing, or fishing.

Dave and Nancy Ruehl Gallagher will be very sorry to leave California for Pensacola, Florida, but unfortunately Uncle Sam doesn't take preferences seriously. Ruehl taught second grade last year and plans to do some substitute teaching in Florida.

Nancy Russell Ross' husband Richard was made assistant director for Manpower Training with the Boise-Cascade Center for Community Development in Washington, D.C. Although he is based in Pittsburgh he travels all over the country. Nancy, Holly, 3½, and Rebecca, almost 2, travel with him whenever they can.

After her August wedding Cathy St. Clair will be a United Airline Stewardess Supervisor, leaving Pan Am and her 747 flights to Australia, New Zealand, and Vietnam. Rudy is working on his M.B.A. at Santa Clara University.

It was nice to hear from Sally Saunders Johnston, who is teaching second grade after receiving an M.A.T. in elementary education from the University of Pittsburgh. After spending the summer of 1969 on a Navajo reservation in Arizona, Sally and Mike, who is a fourth year medical student at the University of Pittsburgh, fell in love with the west and may live there when Mike completes medical school.

Carol Sheldon wrote her usual fascinating letter about her activities and travels. She took a six-week course in Oxford, England, in the primary schools and visited many schools around Oxfordshire. As Carol herself has been involved in initiating changes in her own school, where she teaches 6-8-year-olds, seeing these methods in practice was a rewarding experience. Carol ran into Berry Marshall Hoak in Cambridge. She spent two weeks in London, then on to Ireland for "a week of hitchhiking and myth-breaking."

I have had a busy year teaching elementary art and getting involved in a Title I Project Discovery program. In a warehouse studio, two others and I have started a venture called KiKo Designs, designing and printing fabrics. Maybe next year we can retire and work full time on it.

There is always a steady stream of familiar Chatham faces around the Boston area, so there are lots of get-togethers. If anyone is ever in the area, let us know and we'll show you the town.

Sage reporting:

Ann Sparks Haight finished her master's degree in psychology and worked as a clinical psychologist in a school for mentally retarded children while her husband George was finishing medical school before they moved on to Wisconsin where George is working as an intern in surgery. Ann is now enjoying the leisurely (?) life of a housewife and she has managed to see Sally Saunders Johnston and has heard from Bobbi Hewitt Orloff. Ann's sister Helen (Chatham '68) was married in September.

Clare Stebbins found that finding a job was not so easy as she thought after she finished her MS degree in June. She finally found one as a teacher of high school English and she is also in charge of a water ballet program.

Another master's recipient is Rachel Stein Gragg, and this ambitious gal is now working on another master's in secondary education. Rachel's husband Michael hopes to finish his Ph.D. in chemical engineering by the end of this school year.

Jan Thomas Wolf says that she retired with no regrets last May and now is enjoying her new daughter, Elizabeth, who manages to keep her "busier than I ever thought possible."

Maureen Thomas also has been studying hard and has passed her doctoral comprehensive exams in clinical and social psychology at Penn State, leaving the Ph.D. yet to go. She is also working as an instructor in psychology at Juniata College.

San Francisco seems to be agreeing with Barb Wallace, who continues to work for S.F. General Hospital in the Pediatrics Out Patient Department. Barb has turned into a real traveler, and managed to see much of the west coast. She has also had a visit from Penny Langston Zollinger.

Carlie White is another traveler these days. She went to Finland, Denmark, Iceland and England. When she returns she will be working in the microbiology department of the Public Health Department at the University of Pittsburgh.

In a fascinating note, Lynn Williamson Lawrence described how she and Rick managed to wind up living in Bogota. Their journey to Bogota was via Buenos Aires, Rio, Caracas, Puerto Rico and St. Thomas. Lynn says that all Chatham visitors are welcome.

Patti Williamson has a new job as administrative and research assistant on a federally funded project studying nonverbal behavior at the University of Illinois, the Chicago campus. In addition to this, she has managed to take up weaving and macrame, and has seen many of our classmates who live in Pittsburgh.

As for this reporter, there is almost too much to report. 1970 has really been our year so far. Mike finished his Ph.D. in upper atmospheric physics in March and started his new job at NASA-Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Maryland. All this meant a move for the three of us, and we have moved again, this time into a house of our own that is just perfect. Our son Petie keeps me more than just busy, but watching him grow continues to so fascinate me that I have developed a real interest in physiological and psychological development of children.

Thanks to all who responded to the call for news. I enjoyed your notes and greetings. Lets hear from more of you next year.

Mary Ann reporting:

Hi! It's 90° outside and I'm having a difficult time remembering that it's almost October and time for my annual correspondence. Everyone who responded to my questionnaire sounds pretty busy in one way or another. Academia is still very much a part of the lives of many "alums."

Pam Davis Eldredge received her Ph.D. in French at Harvard and her new husband is a law student at Boston University. DeAnn Beach Burrows is also attending Boston University working for her master's of education in rehabilitation counseling while she is Director of the Rehabilitation Department, State School for the Mentally Retarded. Her husband is an economic research consultant.

Oi Fan Chan Linsley reports that she is still "working for the Establishment and trying to stay alive in the Big City." She will be taking Chinese at Columbia this fall (after working hours) and hopes to be admitted to the Far Eastern Department of Columbia's Asian Institute when Tom finishes law school.

Becky Conrad Hahn and Larry are still going to graduate school and teaching.

They've also taken up skiing and are anxiously awaiting the arrival of snow.

Yvette Bourgeois and Sally Barnett are back in school studying law. Yvette (who is still a "long haired hippie") at the University of Texas in Austin and Sally at Georgetown University Law School in Washington, D.C.

Susan Clifford Hayduchok and her new husband are living in Washington and both working at the Library of Congress. Susan is a cataloger in the German Section and her husband is editor in the National Union Cataloging Publications Project. Alice Ireland Fesmire was the matron of honor in their wedding.

Cathy Beard Davidson and John have also moved to Washington where John has received a teaching fellowship at George Washington Law School. Cathy received her degree from Chatham in May. She and John have adopted a 1½ year old boy, Benjamin.

Vera Berkowitz Greenberg reports that taking care of the new addition to the Greenberg family is a full-time job for her, but she wouldn't trade it for anything.

After giving birth to a daughter, Alysia Michelle, Gail Davis Reiner recommends natural childbirth to all who are interested in having children. The Lamaze technique is wonderful, she reports. Besides taking care of Alysia, Gail is also working toward her master's degree in sociology at the University of Florida. Charles received his M.A. in clinical psychology in June.

Judith Bachrach has a new job that sounds interesting. She's a TV critic for the Baltimore morning Sun. Jane Cooper Dickinson is working as a staff assistant at American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and her husband is a graduate student in economics at Rutgers.

That's all the news from my corner of the world. I'm still living in Houston (with Diane Savage), developing a Texas drawl and the whole bit, so much so that not even LBJ sounds too funny to me anymore. I think Diane and I are the only 1968 Chatham representatives in Houston, but if any of you ever get near here be sure to drop by. Houston is a nice city.

Goldie reporting:

Although Women's Lib is growing more prevalent, some of our classmates are still content to follow their husbands. Leslie Greene Herskowitz is looking forward to Fred's last year of medical school. They're both awaiting the results of the Internship Matching Program and hoping Fred will intern somewhere in the east. Jenny Jessop Becket quit her job as an assistant buyer at Kaufmann's to join Tom with the San Francisco Giants farm system in Illinois. They were back in Pittsburgh in September and Jenny was job hunting. Steve, Judy Herbst Goozh, and latest addition Devon Michelle will be flying with the Air Force when Steve finishes his last year of dent school.

Pat Elio Cash reports that she and Dennis bought a home thirty miles north of San Francisco. It has floor to ceiling windows and a pool. They vacationed in Arizona and also hiked to the bottom of the Grand Canyon, then back out the next day. She described it as "tedious" but really a challenge.

Many of our classmates are still in the teaching profession and seem content.

Harriet Dye Bakalar and Jill Dworkin Eisner are both teaching in the Cleveland area. Present at Harriet's wedding were Barb Willis, '69, Sue Cosgrove Jones and Caroline Roth, '68. Jill spent a relaxing summer, including several weeks in Pittsburgh, while Irwin attended Army Reserve Summer Camp with my husband. Jill and I consoled each other at my apartment pool. Sue Esterman Borish and Warren spent three weeks in Europe this summer. It was a little tough having to face the start of a new school year after their vacation. Warren is an attorney for the public defenders which is all criminal law.

Gail Fishberg has decided to leave teaching and attend graduate school full time. She is attending Boston University School of Education for a master's in education. Kit Fenninger is also in Boston working for a real estate company as treasurer and office manager.

Shelly Israel Mark and Alice Ireland Fesmire are both enjoying the newlywed life. Shelly's husband is a contractor and manufacturer of store interiors while Shelly work for the Pantasote Co. Alice finished her M.S. in math and is programing for Rust Engineering Co. in Pittsburgh. Her husband is working on his Ph.D. in math.

Sam Hoch is a detention counselor for the Arapahoe County Jewish Evaluation Center. If she could, she would take all the kids home with her and take care of them. Eventually she hopes for a master of theology.

Sandy Hochhauser reports that Beanie (Phaedra), the dog raised in Laughlin, is fat, happy, and a mother. Sandy is working on a master's degree in physical therapy at Case Western Reserve University.

It's hard to believe that my third year of teaching has begun. At least this year I'm more organized . . . no wedding to worry about this October. I discovered this summer that Ellen Goldblum Knight and Audrey Smith Banner are living in my apartment development. When Jill Dworkin Eisner came up to visit, it was like a real Chatham reunion. Joel and I are planning a trip to California, Arizona and Las Vegas over my Christmas vacation. We're really looking forward to it. Thanks for replying. It was great hearing from all of you.

Editor's note: No news copy was received from Zelda Lipschutz Gilbert for her section of the class, and there has been no reply to several communications from the alumnae office.

Georgia reporting:

First of all, I would like to extend my deepest sympathy to Pam Poch Fetter upon the death of her husband, John, of a heart attack, March 1, 1970. Pam is currently working at Chase Manhattan Bank in New York as an interviewer, and appeared in a movie, produced by the bank, illustrating a new transfer system for that company. Pam adds that she would like to thank all her friends from Chatham for so kindly visiting her for the funeral, which was held in Pittsburgh.

We have two new "mommies" this year! Jody McIntyre Murray breathlessly sent me the news after my "deadline date" that she and Jack (bless him) participated in a natural childbirth course, and after only three lessons both parents were present at the birth of their daughter. Jody recommends the method highly, and feels that more hospitals should allow fathers to be present in the delivery room with their wives.

Moving on: when asked, "what are you doing?" on the questionnaire, Audrey Pysch wrote down the names of their three children and commented, "Need I say more?" Seriously, she adds that Steve has finished his surgical internship at Indiana University Medical Center, and that they expect to return to Pittsburgh in June of 1971, after he finishes another year of surgical residency.

I also wish modestly to report two marriages which have taken place, both being mini-reunions for Chathamites. Deborah Rosch Blanchard, after receiving her M.A. in Semitic Studies (Columbia University), was married on July 18 to Richard Blanchard, a medical student at the State University of New York at Buffalo. Susan Cosgrove Jones, Faye Singer Rosch, Marty Larkin Komm, Zelda Lipschutz Gilbert, Kammy McCleery MacKurdy and Mary Templeton were all present and accounted for. As for my own wedding, the ceremony was held in the Chatham Chapel. My bridesmaids included Kathy Osmond and Dorothy Zorn (1969). Other Chatham friends there were Barbara Krause Pegg and Greta Gunia Harkness (1967). Jim and I are both teaching at University of Pittsburgh, and slugging it out with our doctorate degrees in history.

Others of us are teaching and/or going to school. Sharon Litchfield is currently working on her M.B. in voice at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, after spending fourteen months in Europe working, studying philosophy, and traveling. Kathy Osmond is doing graduate work in political science at University of Pittsburgh. She is also taking Arabic lessons, certainly a politically relevant language at this time. Pati Pronovost Loughren is into her third year of teaching at Howe School in Mt. Lebanon, while Jay is finishing his studies at Duquesne Law School and teaching U.S. history at St. Mary's of the Mount High School in Pittsburgh. Chilton Richardson has been promoted instructor in biology at Chatham while she works on her Ph.D. degree at University of Pittsburgh. She spent last summer at the Marine Biological Lab, Woods Hole, Massachusetts.

Leslie Miller Eggers has also been promoted to a marketing representative for IBM. Maury is busy with his Ph.D. work in computer science at University of Pittsburgh. Last summer they attended Ricky Ladd's (1970) wedding and saw several Chathamites, including Sue Craycraft (1970) and Jennifer Gearhart Grayson (1969). Barbara Morgan Spiegelman has retired from her job as a Maynard Research Council. Stanley is an atomic design engineer with Westinghouse Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory. Barb is also working on her master's degree in library science at University of Pittsburgh, and helping Mary-Anne Koenig Pomputius (1960) to coordinate the activities of a new Chatham alumnae club in this area.

Last, but by no means least, we have two wide-ranging travelers. Ann Robinson Risch moved from sunny Florida to New Hampshire, where her husband is now an area supervisor for the Anheuser Busch Company. Moving to New England enabled them to visit Linda Taft, who is teaching children with learning problems while living in Boston. Alexis McMillan is office manager with Senator Charles Percy in Washington. This past summer she toured Great Britain and Ireland.

Thanks a million to all of those who replied this year; it's always great to hear the news from everybody.

Ellie reporting:

The atmosphere of responses to our solicitation of news this year would seem to reflect the times we are living in. To be sure, there is mention of personal news such as graduate school, new jobs, marriages, and new babies, but there is also much of what could be called personal responses to national problems—from participation in planned parenthood programs to concern with campus unrest and increased involvement in the growing Women's Liberation Movement.

Included in the latter category, Leslie Tarr Laurie writes that she is putting her Columbia master's degree in community organization and planning to work in her new job as assistant director of Community Organization and Education at Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pennsylvania. She has been working to increase contraceptive knowledge and services for college and working-class women. She has also been working for the repeal of abortion laws in Pennsylvania and has participated in a legal case that will be testing the constitutionality of those laws.

In response to other national problems, Sue Thomas is assistant director of a local environmental organization and is writing for a new area magazine, "The Radical as Professional" (RAP).

Gail Young Browne, working in social psychology and specializing in mother-infant social interaction at the University of Kansas where her husband is a graduate student in clinical psychology, reflected on the campus disturbances in Lawrence last spring. On the lighter side, she mentioned that Mary Cay Knipmeyer was her attendant at her August wedding and that Kathy Carlson Schuchat, her husband Bill, and Gisela Krueger Fashing were also present.

Candy Saly is attending classes at the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown with a proposed major in the fields of psychology and/or Russian language. Jodie Tilghman Tamplin is working as a medical secretary, and Laurie Weiss Rothman is still working in a community mental health and retardation center. Ellen Witt Berken finds herself at the Grants Administration Division of Extramural Research, the National Institute of Mental Health in Chevy Chase, Maryland.

And Susan Schmerer, Connie Swjantek Simons, David Tunis Philips, Fern Weinert Canter, Jackie Yates Silson and Faith Yoho Jaycox all send their greetings.

Ellie Scheirer, your faithful scribe, is becoming increasingly involved with gross societal problems as manifested on the Ohio State University campus. In a series of intense incidents during last winter and spring quarters, many people here, as well as elsewhere, were forced to face squarely a number of crucial issues challenging all of our basic assumptions about human beings in a social setting such as this one. While this challenge has hardly been met, forces are operating to bring about change. I find myself most concerned with my role as a teacher in the undergraduate teacher education program, and to this end I have been "co-authoring" an experimental instructional strategy which will hopefully meet some of our needs in this area and perhaps in others. When I examine my own timetable, I also realize that I am scheduled to take general exams this fall (for the first time anyway!) and to put together a dissertation in the near future.

In closing, a word seems necessary to explain the earlier reference to Women's Lib. Some of our responses reflected a definition of the role of the woman in society sharply different from what most of us have been fed over the years at home and, indeed, in college. If the "Movement" is to gain any significant strength, it would seem that Chathamites should play a powerful role. Onward, Sisters! (Exit off soapbox.) . . .

Diane reporting:

If Chatham has survived the year thus far without the sage advice of the Class of '70 to guide her, the economy too, from what I've read lately, is getting along without recent college graduates. Still, in spite of the ostensibly tight job market, several members of our class are not only employed, but pleased with their jobs.

Vicki Aldridge Ross, for example, suggests criminal justice as a fascinating field. She spent the months before her September wedding working for the Pennsylvania Crime Commission as an administrative assistant. Another "I love my job" came in from Pam Bradley, presently an economic analyst for the Pittsburgh National Bank. Also living in Pittsburgh this year are Linda Caplan Goldman and her husband Foster, an attorney.

Up in New England, Prudence Brighton is working in Lowell, Massachusetts, where she is a cub reporter for the Lowell Sun. Bonnie Brown Mooney and Richard are still in Bridgeport, and Bonnie is a customer representative for the Xerox Corporation (Xerox, huh? Where was she back when we had to copy tutorials?).

The lure of the Big City has apparently ensnared a few of our classmates. Trinka Blicke is working in the articles department of Redbook magazine and sharing a New York apartment with Ellen Gonchar. According to Trinka, Joanne Pedicord lives only half a block away, so it looks as if New York may be getting its share of former Chathamites as well as Boston. Trinka also writes that Sewell is "alive and well in Philadelphia, teaching elementary school."

Summer activities will be only memories by the time the Recorder comes out, but two of the responses to my questionnaires indicate that it was a rather pleasant time for several class members. Sue Craycraft attended weddings all summer, and she reports having seen quite a number of Chatham people, including Ricky Ladd, Barb McEliece, Bob and Pat King Gutcheck, Lenny and Linda Loeb Aronson, Dena Loncoske Boxler, Martha Fix and Dawn Fischer. Now that summer's over Sue is back to the books at Rutgers, where she is studying German literature.

Chris Biel and Tricia Graham spent a "fantastic!" summer driving through Europe in Chris's trusty VW. After a vacation like that, what more could anyone ask for? Well, there's one thing, perhaps: at last information, Chris was waiting for her welfare checks to start arriving. It seems no one would believe that a Chatham education is more valuable than secretarial skills.

Diane Cohen is studying at Pitt for her MAT. In addition to taking education courses, she's doing her teaching internship at Churchill Area High School, not only teaching chemistry, but also serving as co-sponsor for the sophomore class there.

I'm in an MAT program in English, and with over 5000 students on campus here at New Paltz, I'm just about ready to be homesick for Chatham (well, almost). Good things which help to offset the size of this place include having my very own apartment (even though I can't cook) and being only about an hour's drive from two of my favorite places: home to the north and New York City to the south.

My final news comes from Ginger Allen Taylor. She's taking courses in philosophy part time at Providence College, but her best news is that Chris had his C.O. status approved in June. He's begun doing alternate service in a children's home, a job Ginger says they're hopeful his board will approve. And that rather cheerful note concludes the news I've received for this fall. Thanks to all who responded . . . but where are the rest of you?

A note to Mrs. Swisshelm in the alumnae office brings late news of Linda Canan Horn. Since her husband Ron has been re-classified 1-Y, they have applied to several schools for graduate work—he for a doctoral program in metallurgy or an urban science program, and Linda for a master's in social work. At present Linda is finding her job as a caseworker for the Allegheny County Board of Assistance stimulating and rewarding. Ron is taking a course in metal sculpture at the Arts and Crafts Center, so their new apartment "will soon be littered with his masterpieces."

Evie reporting:

Shalom! I'm now in Chicago, attending graduate school in education. I spent the summer teaching in a Day Care Center in Cleveland's inner city.

Summer weddings afforded Chathamites the opportunity for reunions. At Caryn Hall Anstine's wedding, bridesmaid Martha Fix caught the bouquet and Dawn Fischer was the soloist. Other class of '70 guests included Linda Loeb Aronson, Dena Loncoske Boxler, and Susan Craycraft. Caryn is teaching first grade in Monroeville and Martha is working at the University of Pittsburgh while attending grad school by night.

Sharyn Fireman Rubin was attended by Janice Lee and Marcia Binstock Swartz ('68) at her wedding. Sharyn has begun work at the University of Pittsburgh for a graduate degree in special education for the visually handicapped. She wants everyone to visit her if they are in the Pittsburgh area.

With Pam Gast as her maid of honor, Ellen Weller Herf hosted ten Chatham friends at her wedding. Present at the reunion were: Cathy O'Daniel, Pam Bradley, Evie Lewis, Lisa Garber, Trinka Blicke, Jane Marcus, Ellen Gonchar, Bonnie Smith, and Ann Wakeley ('71). Pam Gast spent the summer at Camp Fernwood in Maine and is teaching first grade in Somerville, Massachusetts. Ellen Gonchar is attending the New York School of Interior Design and sharing an apartment with Trinka Blicke. Ellie and Trinka welcome any Chatham alumnae when they are in New York.

Graduate school has called other class members. Judy Foeking is attending Case Western Reserve in German. Katrina Geba has entered a doctoral program in social psychology at the University of Florida. Mary Ann Dievendorf Bickerstaff is a full-time graduate student at Hartt College of Music at the University of Hartford, majoring in opera toward a master of music degree. Husband Tom is a management trainee for Metropolitan Life Insurance.

Melissa Dodge has a job as a secretary-supervisor in the Department of Education and Art History at Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford. She has also been asked to join the Insurance Clubs Entertainment Bureau in the Hartford area.

Sherry Handsman Steiner is acting by night and secretarial by day as husband Julius attends law school.

Debbie Grey Loving and husband Geoff are in Akron, Ohio where Debbie hopes to work for Akron Urban Renewal and Geoff is associated with Kraus-Alexander Construction Company.

Laura Cordrey sends greetings.

Cheri reporting:

Graduate school and new jobs seem to summarize the activities of the 1970 Chatham graduates. Linda Harmon is attending the University of Maryland's graduate school of chemistry, while Peggy Kerestes is studying educational psychology at Lehigh University. Peggy had a mini-reunion in August with Mary Kay Connell, Pris Jameson and Karen Niles at Marilyn Smith Half's wedding at which they were all bridesmaids.

Janice Lee is studying market research in the Graduate School of Business Administration at New York University.

Barbara Jacobs writes that she is stifling in the heat, smog, and polluted air. She is also attending the University of Massachusetts. Her field is English.

Naida Karoly is enrolled in a Graduate Teacher Preparation Program at Syracuse University. She is also working as a resident advisor for the undergraduate school. The entire class of '70 expresses sympathy to Mrs. Karoly and Naida on the sudden death of Mr. Karoly.

Ann Lange is working toward a Ph.D. in philosophy at Boston College. She is

Ellen Judson, a teacher corps intern, plans to get a master's degree in elementary education. She writes that Vermont is great, and that she has been seeing old Chathamites Barbie Fishman, who is getting married, and Ann Bookman, who is in Alaska working on a research project.

Working Chatham grads include Andrea Labik who has an interesting job as a research technician at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh. She is doing work in delayed hypersensitivity. Pris Jameson is working in the bacteriology lab at St. Francis Hospital in Pittsburgh.

Finally, Linda Jordan writes that she bought a new Fiat and is waiting to hear about a job in the Foreign Service.

After settling in our new apartment, I was informed that I was one of the lucky few new teachers who would have a classroom in the city schools. I am teaching third grade at the Schiller School in the Northside. Joel still studies a lot so I visit Diane Himes Ambrose '69 in my free time. I am also happy to report that the last time Zeebie and I walked on Chatham's campus, it was still there—Music Center and all! However, the inside of Mellon, about to be renovated, is spookier than ever. Hope you all have a good year.

Jane reporting:

Well, it's finally time to gather up all my little green slips and compile all the info'. Time has certainly flown since May and here's what some of the '70 grads are doing.

Linda Loeb, now Mrs. I. Leonard Aronson III, is an assistant to an art instructor at the Carnegie Institute. Her husband Len is a graduate student at Duquesne.

Molly Miesse Patterson and husband Dave are both teaching. While on their honeymoon at Cape Cod, they saw Susie Brown Weeks and husband John, and their new daughter Debbie.

Another of the newly married group is Dena Loncoske Boxler who is studying chemistry at Carnegie-Mellon University. After David's stint in the service in California this summer, he will return to Pittsburgh, his position as an insurance analyst, and Dena.

Living at home in St. Louis is Barb McEliece. She's studying medieval art history at Washington University there. Del McMaster is here in Philadelphia with me. She's enrolled in medical school at Temple University.

Rubie Mages writes of a great summer spent as assistant waterfront head at a camp in Maine. The fall sees her in law school at Rutgers University. Back in Pittsburgh from a six-week tour of Europe is Julie Metzger. She's received a fellowship for a master's at Pitt in educational research.

Phoebe Morse is a law student at Boston College Law School, and is working as Head Resident in the Boston College housing system.

Two Chathamites at Simmons are Dede Newport and Karen Niles. Dede's studying library science while Karen's doing graduate work in physical therapy. Karen has been a busy wedding attendant. She, Peggy Kerestes, Pris Jameson and Mary Kay Connell were in Marilyn Smith's wedding on August 15, and will do a repeat performance at Pris's wedding on October 10.

Out in the tri-state area are Cheryl Olkes and associate member Gayle Parker, both in graduate school. Gayle's doing work in English at West Virginia University and Cheryl's studying journalism at Ohio State.

I'm continuing my work in urban education at the University of Pennsylvania, taking courses and teaching in an experimental middle school. Glad to report a mini-reunion at Ellen Weller Herf's wedding in Boston on August 2. The guests and newlyweds will never forget the Chatham rockettes and their rendition of "Those Were the Days"—well, they were, weren't they? Nostalgically yours, Jane.

Susan reporting:

Greetings from my section of the 1970 class list. I'm going to break with good manners, modesty, and tradition (why not?) and tell you all my news first, and then get to the other members of the class who sent their questionnaires to me. Trink Bickle, Cookie Ungar and I seared Chatham's name into the conscience of the publishing world this summer by setting the Radcliffe Publishing Procedures Course aglow with our brilliant work. I haven't heard from my classmate-colleagues yet, but I found a terrific job at Random House as assistant to an editor in the adult trade department. I am subletting an apartment from a certain West End musician who is off winning prizes at the Chopin International Piano Competition, and I really love being in Manhattan, despite unhealthy air and hot crowded dirty subways. There is so much to do here that it takes almost as much time to decide what to do as it does to go out and just do something. This is where very free Sundays and the Sunday Times play an important role in the decision-making process!

Esi Palar writes that she moved to Indonesia with her parents in September, and traveled extensively in Europe before reaching Indonesia. She plans to return to the Washington, D.C. area in September, 1971, and does not know whether she will work or go to school in the interim. She can be reached at the address listed above until she gets a more permanent one. She extends her best wishes to the entire class.

Andi Pratt is working as a psychiatric aide in a city mental hospital, where she is planning to hold discussions with the patients about literature and drama this fall. She is also trying to work in a graduate course at Adelphi, but notes some difficulty in scheduling both classes and job duties. She hints that she might head for England in the spring, but has not made any real plans as yet.

Karen Schultz is also trying to combine a possible job with the Hackensack Public School System with graduate study at Paterson State College in the field of communication disorders, where she will learn how to teach the deaf. Having noted her imminent marriage to Alan Langsner, I can say that she may well be the busiest member of the penultimate section of the 1970 class list. Congratulations, Karen and Alan.

Jackie Savani sent her questionnaire in a bit late so that she could include the official news of her engagement to Rick Mitchell. Jackie is beginning a graduate program in medieval studies this fall at the University of Pennsylvania.

Julia Pollack is starting graduate work in American history at the College of William and Mary.

Wong (Marilyn Scarantino) reports that after a summer of manual labor in Jamestown, N.Y., the graduate program in Hispanic studies at Brown looks very appealing. Her new address is listed above.

Susie Patton writes that she loves smog-free New Hampshire, where she spent the summer teaching English (!) because the University of New Hampshire hasn't decided exactly what to do with its first Music M.A.T. Susie will finish her M.A.T. by August, 1971, and in the meantime will teach part time in Somersworth High School, N.H.

Janis Roseberg Wasserman reports on her marriage, and on her new teaching job in Paratka, Florida. Beth Peterson McNichols sends news of her marriage to Timothy last May 23. Cynthia Plotkin is on the island of Hawaii teaching 2nd grade children of plantation workers. She says she would love to hear from everyone (new address listed above).

Susan Rice announces her engagement to Robert D. Miller, and the fact that she is serving as an Admissions Counselor for Chatham until the end of this semester.

Finally, Pat Peckinpugh reports that she is serving as a secretary and aide to Father Jon Marr Stark at the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Denver. She counsels youths at a "Safe House" that Father Jon started, and says that she's having a "far-out time" in Denver.

If I've omitted anyone who responded to the green sheet, I deeply apologize. Since May I haven't been in any one place for longer than six weeks, and I'm only now beginning to settle into a new job, and a nebulous life style. I keep hoping to find a rut—even a tiny one—but things happen every day, and there seems to be no routine in sight for a while. Please write me at my home address. I'd love to hear from everyone.

Pat reporting:

Sue Sponzilli Harland is a teaching assistant in English literature at the University of Saskatchewan, where her husband Jim is a graduate student in psychology. Sue advises that there are quite a few teaching positions available in the area, and that the Prairies provide relief for anyone who is "sick of the urban scene."

Recently married, Marilyn Smith Half and husband Chuck are both teaching at The Barlow School in Amenia, New York. Ellen Weller Herf is teaching first grade in Chelmsford, Massachusetts. Her husband Andrew is a senior at Lowell Technological Institute.

In addition to teaching biology labs at Chatham, Pam Stock is attending the University of Pittsburgh graduate school for a master's degree in public health. Associate member Connie Wilkinson is acting and teaching with the Center Ensemble at the Arts Center in Albany, New York.

Other classmates are continuing their educations. Sue Thorn is in graduate school at The New School for Social Research in philosophy. Bonnie Smith is at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, for a degree in regional planning.

Jane Yankovic Bandler and Dick have moved into New Haven to be within walking distance of classes at Yale. Jane is in graduate school in romance languages, and Dick is a post-doctoral fellow in psychiatry.

Ilene Sirocca's musical career is keeping her quite busy. She is singing in the Shady-side Presbyterian Church Choir, in the Mendelssohn Choir, and at "Le Bistro."

Margaret Walsh returns from eight weeks in Europe this summer to attend graduate school in English literature at Northeastern University. She is sharing an apartment with Dede Newport, who is at Simmons. Former Chatham student Peggy Kyle Giancola and her husband live in the same apartment building.

Dorothy Beck reports "no news", but sends best wishes to everyone.

Before returning to graduate school in Portuguese at the University of Wisconsin I managed to get some traveling done. Sandy Lettrich and I visited with Bobbi Franklin McKenna '69 and her husband Bob, in Charlottesville, Virginia where Bob was attending the Judge Advocate General's School. The McKennas plan a trip to Europe before going to Fort Leavenworth for a year with the Army. My traveling also included a few days at Chatham with Gayle Wilson and Marvene Jones, '71.

At Tom and Diana Urban Eichler's June wedding, former classmate Lori Gray was a bridesmaid and guests included Cindy Johnson and Carol Botula. Tom is a dental student at Georgetown, and Diana is teaching 7th grade at Cateoctin School in Leesburg. Diana mentions that former Chatham student Cindy Keister Lewis and husband Larry are living in Northboro, Massachusetts.

Despite regular reports of doom and destruction here, I'm enjoying Madison and the University very much. I frequently see Karen Gamble, a former Chatham student. She completed her BA in Portuguese here, and is now working for a Center which does research on Latin America. Thank you all for your news. If anyone is traveling in this direction, please drop in. I love company.

support change if it is in the best interest of their alma mater.

At this moment, coeducation is still an open issue at Chatham. Questions will be asked and answered, polls will be taken, and every aspect will be carefully studied before the final decision is made.

CLASS REUNION SCHEDULE • 1971 through 1981

Have you wondered when your next class reunion will be?

This chart provides the schedule for each year through 1981.

Beginning with the 25th, reunions are held every five years.

Before the 25th, classes meet in groups of four as scheduled on the chart.

In addition to those listed in the 1st column of the chart, the classes of 1916 and 1911 will celebrate 55th and 60th reunions.

The entire Alumnae Day program is open to all alumnae. Plan to attend whether it is your reunion year or not. You will be most welcome.

Cross-College Registration, announced last spring by President Eddy, has become a reality. A marked increase in second semester cross-registration between Chatham and the four other participating Pittsburgh institutions indicates how significant this program may become in the future. In the first semester 19 men and 24 women, a total of 43, came to Chatham from Carlow College, Carnegie-Mellon University, Duquesne University and University of Pittsburgh. In the same period 68 Chatham students took advantage of the program. The second semester has brought 35 women and 29 men, a total of 64, to Chatham, and 108 Chatham students to the other schools. The range of courses is broad, with philosophy, education and languages drawing the larger numbers to Chatham.

The Alumnae-Student Relations Committee sponsored a Career Fair on April 20, 1970, a "first" at Chatham. Some two dozen young alumnae employed in the Pittsburgh area, and representing majors in the humanities, the social sciences and the natural sciences, served as consultants to present students. Also new—two students now represent this committee on the executive board of the Alumnae Association.

The College Watercolor Group has announced a change in prices effective February 1, 1970. Original watercolors of The Chapel, Mellon Hall, Woodland Hall, and The Library may be ordered at the following prices, post paid: unframed, single—$4.50; set of four—$16.50; framed, single—$9.50; set of four—$36.00. The address:—The College Watercolor Group, P.O. Box 56, Skillman, New Jersey 08558. The Alumnae Association receives a profit on each sale.

In The Loving Servants (page 3), Rachel Kirk Bobo has caught the spirit of a half dozen Chatham alumnae who have chosen the field of religion as a career, another chapter in the Recorder series on alumnae professions.

"Sir, a woman preaching is like a dog's walking on his hind legs. It is not done well; but you are surprised to find it done at all."

SAMUEL JOHNSON 1709-1784

Actually, the world hasn't changed too much since Sam's day. True equality for all women is still somewhere out there beyond a landing on Mars. As for the woman preacher, she is still a bit of an oddity, a situation with which Chatham's church professionals seem to have come to terms.

"The problems . . . stem from individuals who must drop stereotypes," explains Beth Platz '62, who is associate Lutheran chaplain at the University of Maryland.

"This is sometimes easy to do on an intellectual level, but difficult emotionally. Therefore there are a number of situations in which many 'liberal' persons fail to react to your function because you are female."

Many people take Paul's admonition, "Women should keep silent in the churches" quite literally, according to Alice McGee Collins '57, especially "the older gentlemen who sit on the decision-making committees of the churches. People are perfectly happy to have women baby sit with the little boys and girls via the Sunday School program. But in the pulpit, NEVER!"

Alice has solved the obstacle of being a preaching woman by being a better preacher than most men. She explains her apparent immodesty:

"I married Carver Collins who was for 15 years associated with the speech and drama department at Chatham. Can you imagine the advantage of having a speech teacher who loves you sitting in church every Sunday?"

"Women preachers find it very difficult to find employment other than in slums, on campuses or in rural areas," adds Lois Ingham Peeler '58, who has worked in two of those geographical classifications, but not as a preacher.

Another Chathamite who has not directly challenged the prejudices against women in the pulpit is Nancy Sherwood Willcox '59, whose career has been in both religious and secular education.

"On the national and state-wide levels, I have encountered few obstacles," she reports, "but I am serving in the areas of education which are still often regarded as woman's work. I do feel that I would encounter a great deal more opposition if I were to seek to carry on more typical pastoral duties such as preaching and conducting services.

THE LOVING SERVANTS

Evlyn Fulton '44

Alice McGee Collins '57

Nancy Sherwood Willcox '59

"Pastoral calling and counseling is a different matter. I have found that there are many times that I can minister to persons, especially women, with more ease than my male counterparts."

"Preaching is probably a waste of time anyway," observes Peggy Suppes Yingling '43, who had complete charge of a small ethnic church for ten months, but who has spent most of the past four years since her ordination in the Christian education field. ("Who can prove it's Christian?" she quizzes. "But I'm very interested in education.")

Beth Platz, who does conduct—and write—services, says dryly, "I find the church open to my role, but not always able to cope."

Evlyn Fulton '44, who is representative in the seven-state East-Central region for the Commission on Ecumenical Mission and Relations of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A., never planned to be ordained. "It wasn't thought of at the time I entered seminary. In fact, I was a member of the first class in Pittsburgh Theological Seminary which gave women any opportunity outside the mission field."

There's no discrimination in her field, Evlyn reports. In comparable posts, even the salaries are the same as men's. "But I don't believe that's true of women pastors and assistant pastors," she says. She is completely happy with her job, which is largely "interpretative." She travels her seven states, mostly by car (23,000 miles in six months), setting up seminars and training sessions, developing programs for church groups, giving whatever help is asked for. And once a decade, perhaps oftener, she will receive a brief assignment overseas. Her latest one was early 1969, when she spent two months in Nairobi as a guest of the Presbyterian Church of East Africa. She spent the time in a school set up to teach village girls the skills they need to earn a living as domestics.

"It's such an exciting time in the world church," Evlyn explains. "We no longer go from America in a patronizing way; we work hand-in-hand with the native church. This is sometimes a hard concept to get across to American women who are historically intersted in missionary work."

Evlyn started out after Chatham with secretarial studies at Carnegie Tech, then returned to our alma mater as registrar for a couple of years. In 1947, she entered Pittsburgh Theological Seminary and won her M.R.E. two years later. Once again, she became a registrar, at the Seminary, and held that post for six years.

In 1955, she went to a girls' school in Egypt, expecting to spend the rest of her life there. But church union was in the air, and Evlyn was called home to begin her job of "interpretation" to the women of the United Presbyterian Church. Besides her compelling work, Evlyn, though single, is a homemaker; she owns her own little house in Monroeville, Pennsylvania.

Our Chatham alumnae in the church professions come from backgrounds of various degrees of religiosity. Evlyn was the daughter of a pastor and her mother was active on the old Presbyterian Board of National Missions and worked on the committee for church union.

Alice McGee Collins, however, was brought up in a "not particularly religious" family, and her brothers and sisters find her choice of career rather surprising. Her husband, however, now head of the drama department at King's College, Wilkes-Barre, is "delighted, because it makes me a more fulfilled woman."

"The unique thing about this job is that, except for Sunday morning worship and about one weekly scheduled meeting, my hours are my own. Hospital visitation can be during the baby's nap. I can be home when my daughter gets home from school."

Of course, no one chooses the ministry because the hours are convenient, least of all Alice. The deep desire to be of service to others is basic.

Alice has 77 of the necessary 90 credits toward the Bachelor of Divinity degree. These were from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. While a student, she served two years as pastor of two United Presbyterian churches in semi-rural areas near Pittsburgh. She expects to complete her training at Moravian Seminary in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Meantime, she has been serving as interim preacher at the Wyoming (Pa.) Baptist Church. In spite of St. Paul and Sam Johnson and all too many laymen, Alice believes that "sensitive, intuitive women are ideal for the ministry and allied jobs, as so very much of their work is with people with spiritual and psychological needs. Women are more natural than men for these fields."

Another Chathamite who entered the religious field from a family where the church was not an especially vital factor is Lois Ingham Peeler. She is married to a pastor and lives at the delightful address of "The Parsonage, Norwich, Vermont."

Lois received her M.R.E. from Union Theological Seminary in New York City in 1960 and served as director of religious education in the East Harlem Protestant Parish and in the Congregational Church of Barre, Vermont. She had been led to the church as a preventive force in the area of juvenile delinquency, and she'd become concerned with delinquency as a sociology major at Chatham.

Her professional project this year is the co-authorship of a curriculum for first and second graders for the United Church of Christ. The new program will be tried experimentally in 1971 and is scheduled for general use in 1972.

Lois' main volunteer interest is serving on the board of ABC (A Better Chance). This plan brings high school boys and girls from disadvantaged situations all over the country to attend the local high school and to receive special tutoring from Dartmouth tutors. If any alumna would like to investigate the ABC program, Lois has much material and would be delighted to help.

Lois has a less scholarly hobby, too. She's a national official for girls' basketball!

All this comes after her life as pastor's wife and mother of Scott, 7, Steven, 4, and an adopted daughter, Susan Sonseeahray, 1, an Apache Indian baby who recently joined the Peeler family.

Nancy Sherwood Willcox stems from a family active in the church, both as lay people and clergy. She began early to teach in Sunday School and take part in the youth program. The church therefore seemed to offer the best opportunity to "use my skills and beliefs in a witnessing and serving ministry."

Holder of the Master of Arts in Religion from Yale University Divinity School, she has had possibly the most varied career of all our graduates in the church. While still in school, Nancy served as minister to a mission church school and director of education for a Congregational Church in Connecticut.

Since, she has been: children's worker for the Minnesota Methodist Conference; third grade teacher in Minneapolis; director of a church-sponsored nursery center; editor for Fidler social studies text books; kindergarten teacher, and minister of Christian education for the First Congregational United Church of Christ in Benton Harbor, Michigan, where her husband is pastor.

This year, Nancy left the Benton Harbor post to become head teacher for the Twin Cities Area Child Care Centers. It is a new venture to provide a stimulating environment for pre-school children in a multi-cultural and racially-integrated program. She'll be planning programs, training teachers and demonstrating teaching techniques. One of the advantages is that her own two children will be able to profit from the program.

Her husband always accepts Nancy's work, whether it is in a secular or religious sphere. Her children have always known a working mother and "seem to feel that all mothers have jobs."

As for the church as a woman's career, Nancy points out that a woman "should not enter religious vocations as a retreat from involvement in society. Many fields offer more adequate salaries and opportunities for advancement, and the local church may be too attached to its established habits of operation to satisfy a woman who needs freedom of self-expression." And, if she's married, Nancy explains from the depths of experience, "If your husband is a minister, you are likely to receive criticism for your own professional ambitions. If you are not married to a minister, the demands upon your time and attention may cause strain in your relationships at home.

"A woman who is well aware of the situation will find both calling and fulfillment in a church vocation."

Religion was always a part of Beth Platz' life, "natural and expected." However, she decided late in her four years at Chatham to enter seminary and then not with the primary purpose of a vocation. She wished to study theology with "an undefined goal." Her field work at Gettysburg College during the final year of training at the Lutheran Theological Seminary made campus ministry attractive as a way to use theological training as opposed to parish educational training.

Lois Ingham Peeler '54

Her work as the second member of the Lutheran chaplaincy on the University of Maryland campus includes conducting services, holding discussions, counseling, supervising and assisting social action programs. As she describes her reasons for choosing the church, one catches a glimpse of what her career means to her:

"The desire to work with people . . . to make a commitment to a style of life that is absolutely essential. To plant new ideas. To help people see things with new eyes. To be willing to grow, tear down . . ."

Peggy Suppes Yingling had been out of school 18 years when she entered Pittsburgh Theological Seminary to study for a bachelor of divinity degree. Married shortly after graduation, she had devoted her time to her husband, three daughters, a great deal of club work, teaching Sunday School and performing other volunteer church duties. She'd been attending church conferences, getting more involved with more important aspects of the work, but the real impetus to a church career came from a seminary professor she met at the conferences.

During four years in seminary, she drove 40 miles each day, but "I was home more than when I'd been doing club work. The children tried to keep from bothering me while I was studying, and it worked out quite well."

Like most seminarians, Peggy served a church while studying—as director of religious education. She then moved to another suburban Pittsburgh church for two-and-a-half years in the same capacity. Then an inner-city church needed an assistant, and Peggy accepted the call. (The family moved into the city along with her.) Just a few weeks after she started, the minister was asked to take another pulpit, and Peggy took over all the pastoral chores for ten months.

"I really didn't want a church," Peggy recalls. "I'm not much of a feminist." Since January of last year, therefore, she's been a consultant in Christian education for a national missions unit. She works with small churches, neighborhood ministries, groups like Kay Club—"trouble-shooting, mostly." She holds teachers meetings, plans retreats and training programs, has built up a large collection of Christian education resource material.

"My job is as exhilarating as a hobby," Peggy says. "I'd probably be doing something like it even if I hadn't gone to seminary. Every day is different."

Peggy is the only one of our church professionals who didn't get any particular help from her Chatham training.

"I was a biology major," she explains. "There's not much carryover!"

The others believe the liberal arts background "opened up the world;" "helped me venture into uncharted positions where old patterns no longer apply and new ones must be developed;" "prepared me equally with the best men students in the seminary."

While all are deeply and joyfully committed to their vocations, they are also sharply aware that the church, along with most of our institutions, is changing.

"The church as we know it will cease to exist," says Peggy Yingling. "I don't know what it will be—perhaps more emphasis on liturgy; people seem to be moving in this direction."

"I think we're going to have a remnant church," observes Evelyn Fulton, "with new forms of worship and congregationalism." And she believes women, who presently make up 60 per cent of church membership, will have a bigger role in whatever church develops in the decades ahead.

"Laymen will unite in worship and study, whether the hierarchies do or not," Lois Peeler believes. "At the same time, we should be working toward the end of wars, the lessening of starvation and the equality of each man in world government as before God."

Nancy Willcox, speaking of her own denomination, the United Church of Christ, says, "I see a liberal, experimental and ecumenical outlook emerging. The church is becoming deeply involved in the social and moral scenes of our day. Attention is being directed away from support of buildings to support of programs for people. The direction I see for the church in the next few years will be an outward witness rather than an inward retreat. This change is already causing a good deal of controversy."

"I think we will continue to see more cooperative efforts among churches and a diminishing of doctrinal differences. For some, the simple facts of economy and the lack of qualified ministerial candidates will make cooperation a necessity."

Beth Platz hopes the church will not be afraid to "do its own thing. By this I mean it should unashamedly proclaim the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ."

"The church cannot hide the gospel behind irrelevant language and forms. The church cannot hide the gospel behind a new humanism. Nor can the church hide the gospel behind 'relevant' expressions which seek to satisfy the young wish to be young."

"The church must take the role of a loving servant whose being is molded . . . by the confession it makes to an historic faith."

Whatever is to become of the church is this turbulent, challenging time, these six "loving servants" from Chatham will be playing a part in its destiny.

Volunteer Power

Lucille Hillman '64

Do you have any spare time? Beyond the responsibilities of job and/or home, Chatham College alumnae are busy women! Surprised? You shouldn't be! In no small measure alumnae questionnaires reveal a vitality for living and an appreciation of "change" in the world around them. Parent Teacher Associations, scouting, Group Against Smog and Pollution, (G.A.S.P.), political parties, League of Women Voters, library boards, school boards, church groups, Planned Parenthood, Y.W.C.A., civil rights, embroidery, painting Chatham College, United Jewish Appeal, women's liberation, swimming instructions, flower arranging—the list has variety and a distinct crusading spirit. Current Chatham students would call us INVOLVED.

Volunteer power at Chatham College has most recently spurred the Alumnae Association on to an "almost completed" Centennial Fund campaign. Nearly four hundred women have devoted precious spare minutes to writing notes, calling fellow alumnae, or urging committee members not "to give up." With this achievement in mind, a number of dedicated alumnae were asked to give their views concerning not only volunteerism in general, but also volunteerism for Chatham College. The following women responded: Patsy Speers Bradley '45, Mary Virginia Brown Bowden '36, Amy McKay Core '43, Mary Loughran Fell '62, Lois Sproull Hinckley '31, Jean McGowan Marshall '41, Eleanore Luthringer Mattson '49, Margaret Cooke Skidmore '60, Helen Heath Smith '44, and Dorothy Schenk Van der Voort '34.

When asked if their families or friendships suffered "because they were doing other things," the majority responded in the negative. Amy Core put it this way. "No, they benefit—for all my interests are not centered on motherhood and housekeeping. It gives my children who are teenagers a freedom to pursue their interests and know that I have interests of my own and am not sitting home feeling sorry for myself." Mary Fell answered that "... they profit, because the more I do, the more I get myself organized, and the more time I have left over. In any case, I believe its the quality not the quantity of time, that counts." Margaret Skidmore candidly admitted that "I'm sure I'm less patient after a full day—say of visiting high schools, and perhaps, I've missed an afternoon of doing something with the children—but on the other hand, the stimulation and change that various activities provide are very necessary for me—and if I'm happy, usually the rest of the family is happy."

and the dangers of saying "yes" too often, Helen Smith pointed out that "... volunteering is cyclic. Few people keep it up steadily over long periods, and they vary their emphasis as well. Consciously or unconsciously, most people retire from the fray occasionally, and this is good—both for them and for the objects of their attention. What IS dangerous is the mushrooming of responsibilities and that is inherent in the acceptance of most jobs." Patsy Bradley noted that her "volunteer activities have developed ... with the growth of my family. When my children were younger, I was interested in things that they were directly involved with—school, church, etc. Now that my children have all left home, I am doing more in areas that I find challenging to me ... I try not to say yes to things I really have no interest in." In evaluating her liberal arts background, and volunteer work, Lois Hinckley stated that it "... aids me as it has and does in every aspect of life, by impelling me to try to attain breadth of vision, to give a truly listening ear to those of different views and backgrounds, and to reason my way through problems."

The Alumnae Association is our vehicle for effective volunteerism at Chatham College. Through this organization alumnae communicate with the campus and vice versa. The strength of our relationship is dependent upon effort. The depth of understanding between "alma mater" and alumnae in no small degree affects this willingness by prospective alumnae volunteers to be of service.

On an individual-effort basis Mary Virginia Bowden believes that "an alumna can stand by to serve the College as she is needed. It may be [as] a recruiter, as a representative to a function in her community, to share her ideas and experience ... and certainly to contribute financially to the College." Dorothy Van der Voort stated, "In my case, I found that one alumna can serve on committees for the alumnae and for the College, thus helping in a small way to establish and carry out policies. Service of this sort can lead to the alumnae presidency, an alumna trusteeship, etc. In knowing more about the College through these endeavors, I can speak more intelligently about it and, hopefully, incline others favorably toward the College."

On a group-effort basis alumnae clubs contribute to the well-being of the College. Eleanore Mattson enumerated the following points: "to help local alumnae [stay] informed about the current 'state' of their college, to aid in recruitment when requested to do so, and to inform the area concerning Chatham." She also noted that "it is difficult to define our purpose in a way meaningful to all alumnae."

The most ambitious group effort to date has been the Centennial Fund. When asked whether they "enjoyed" fund raising and "why" they did it, all ten alumnae responded as if in a Greek chorus. Fell, "I don't enjoy it—but it's so vital that I grit my teeth and continue"; Core, "Yes and no. It's discouraging to ask and be refused and yet asking is necessary. It is easier to ask when I feel an obligation and am asking others who should feel some of the same . . ."; Smith, "No. Because it needs to be done."; Bowden, "I wouldn't do it for anyone else!"; Skidmore, "I personally dislike fund raising . . . I help because I do know a lot about the College and feel I should share this info."; Van der Voort, "Frankly, I detest fund raising and do it only because I am convinced of the necessity and the value of the causes I support."; Marshall, "Fund raising is a necessary volunteer job—when you believe in your cause it isn't difficult, but it is a challenge—sometimes discouraging and sometimes most rewarding."; Mattson, "No. I don't do it if I can avoid it. The proliferation of demands to give makes fund raising a thankless chore."; Hinckley, "I loathe fund-raising . . . When I am backed into doing it, only a sense of duty makes me agree."; Bradley, "Fund raising is difficult for me. I have always turned it down—Chatham is the one exception for me. I guess it's because I feel so strongly [about] the need for this kind of education, and I don't want to see it die." Without dedication, fund raising "the thankless chore," would never be accomplished. Without alumnae backing, the College would be hard pressed to find favor with corporations and foundations. Our role is vital.

Chatham College wants the service of its alumnae—be it public relations, fund raising, or admissions. Jean Marshall summed up the role of the Alumnae Association with this statement. "College alumnae should be the greatest sales force loose on the body politic today except maybe the mouth-wash people! We are needed as liaison between the public and the College; and as, perhaps, the devil's advocate in so far as we voice our opinion to the administration, but never should we dictate policy. We should support the administration;; we should communicate with students, faculty and administration for our edification as well as theirs. AND, of course, we should support the College by raising money."

In his inaugural address President Nixon spoke of an army of volunteers composed of citizens becoming involved on a person to person basis with the problems that face our nation. Volunteer power is not a new concept; it is an American phenomenon. As a people, we have a desire to give of ourselves for "causes" and for the betterment of others. Chatham alumnae are aware, involved, and making their voices heard in their communities and at their College.

HELEN H. SMITH '44

In advance of my first appearance as a temporary member of the Chatham Board of Trustees, I received a number of papers for information and study. Chief among them was a document describing in detail an unidentified liberal arts college laden with problems of polity, personnel, academics and finance. According to the letter of transmittal the Board of Trustees would devote a major portion of the coming meeting to analysis and proposed resolution of the situation in which the beleaguered institution found itself. This exercise was gauged, I suppose, to get the members of the Board into objective trim for dealing with issues either present or anticipated on the campus nearer at hand.

The study paper had the insidious effect of leading me to talk my head off at my first meeting with the august Board. I did my homework with intensive care, got enthusiastic about it, and showed up brimming over with astute observations and brave solutions. That has to be my excuse. I have never dwelt upon the trustees' first impression of me because reflection would unnerve me. They have been unfailingly kind.

Of more interest than my "entrance" was Dr. Eddy's response to one of the several comments I unhesitatingly contributed. In some context, now lost, I asserted that decisions about the life of an educational institution must give foremost consideration to their effect on the student because the student represents the sole purpose for the existence of the institution.

Dr. Eddy said, "Helen, your prejudices are showing." For a split second those seemed like fighting words, and then I realized that he spoke with humor, and that he and probably the entire Board were firmly prejudiced in favor of student well-being.

I relate this personal experience because I think alumnae would like to know that the Chatham Board of Trustees is not aloof from the day-to-day life of the campus, nor from the realities and the difficulties experienced by students. I know there are still some college boards of trustees that sit incommunicado and hand down grave decisions from on high, letting the devil take the hindmost, Chatham's Board is not, and probably never has been, one of them.

The Chatham Board is in frequent personal contact with A Time to Remember . . .

The 100th Birthday Party on November 21, 1969, provided a completely delightful evening for the nearly five-hundred persons who attended, from the pleasant cocktail hour to President Eddy's provocative address on "A Century of Change." And in between . . . the invocation by Dr. Earl K. Wallace; an excellent dinner; a champagne toast proposed by Mr. George D. Lockhart, vice chairman of the Board of Trustees; familiar songs, old and new, by the fine Chatham Choir; then and now pictures flashed on the large screen with Ruth Garland Lesko's ('56) amusing commentary; greetings from Alumnae Association president, Patsy Speers Bradley ('45); the presentation of ten Centennial Awards and the response by Paul R. Anderson, eleventh president of the College . . . all nicely tied together by toastmistress Dorothy Schenck Van der Voort ('34). In the spotlight as the award citations were given by President Eddy were Mr. Arthur E. Braun (the award accepted in his absence by his daughter, Mrs. Paul Ernst), Mr. George D. Lockhart, Mrs. Robert D. Campbell, Mrs. Clifford S. Heinz, Dr. Paul R. Anderson, Miss Mary Helen Marks, Miss Laberta Dysart, Mrs. Alexander Murdoch, Mrs. Albert F. Keister, and Miss Helen Ryman.

Congratulations . . . !

TO Mrs. Earle A. Brown (Louise Graham '25) who was selected as a Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania for 1969, and who in June will take office as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, largest organization in the world (11,000,000 members). Mrs. Brown has served the Chatham Alumnae Association as president (1940-42) and as alumnae trustee (1957-60).

TO Doris Campbell Thomas ('31), Dean of Foreign Students and International Studies at C. W. Post College, Long Island University, who received the Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Chung-ang University, Seoul, Korea "in recognition of outstanding contributions to the promotion of international understanding between our two friendly countries through the development and implementation of our Sisterhood Relationship Program," a formal agreement ratified by both universities in 1963.

TO Mrs. Robert DeBroff (Glenda Rich '60) who has been selected as the first recipient of the Elva S. Smith Scholarship to be awarded annually by the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Pittsburgh. Honoring the memory of one who devoted her lifetime to library service for children, the scholarship was created to assist a student of high academic standing and professional promise who intends to pursue a career in children's librarianship.

TO Mrs. D. Stewart Templeton (Barbara Coit '24) who was honored by the YWCA of Greensburg, Pennsylvania, on the occasion of her retirement from the office of president in January. The surprise program included not only her continuous service to the YWCA since its founding a decade ago, but also her many contributions to the community through her work for conservation with the Botanical Society and the Garden Center; parish, Diocesan and ecumenical service in the Episcopal church; the League of Women Voters; and the Community Action Committee.

TO Sandra Lafe '67, who, as an International Trade Specialist in the Bureau of International Commerce, has achieved a first for her sex in the Office of International Trade Promotion by being promoted to the position of Assistant Export Plans Officer on the Developing Countries Trade Promotion staff. She has returned from three months in Thailand where her specific mission was to develop product theme recommendations suitable for trade promotion efforts in South East Asia. An economics major at Chatham, Sandra completed the BIC Management Intern Program prior to her new appointment.

Our sympathy is extended to Maggie Mae McCullough Huffman whose brother, Dr. Thomas McCullough, died in December, and to Clarissa Blakeslee Ingle whose son, Charles, Jr., died on December 7.

Clarissa reports that, after moving to her old home in Germantown, she had a bad attack of tic delarue, but has recovered and is renewing old friendships.

We, the few of us remaining, seem to be keeping well and busy.

DEATH

Elizabeth Donehoo Stoltz, October 22, 1969
Although Elizabeth attended P.C.W. only one year, it was gratifying that she kept up her interest in our class. We extend our heartfelt sympathy to her husband, three daughters and a son.

Faye Atkinson McCune mentions changes in their neighborhood in Florida—an impressive new technological college, a home-building boom, and a TV tower taller than the Empire State Building. Unless Charles' eye operations are successfully completed, they may have to curtail the traveling which they have enjoyed. Faye tells us that her sister Merle has lost her husband, that Lucile is doing a fine job of caring for her husband since his health has failed, and that she and Charles are now great-aunt and great-uncle.

Lucile Atkinson Baker, who expresses her pleasure over the Christmas greetings received from classmates, tells also of the great good news at Christmas from three young people whom she and her husband have helped through college. One, a Filipino, is now an M.D. interning in a New York hospital. Another, a Chinese, is teaching in a university in Canada and has acquired his Canadian citizenship. The third, a Japanese girl who is an anthropologist, has returned from work in Sierra Leone and is going to Thailand with her husband to work for the U.N. Congratulations, Lucile and Ivan! No wonder you say your pleasure could not be greater if these were your own children.

A phone call from Helen Blair Baumann brought the news that on her Christmas visit with her niece in Old Lyme, Connecticut, she had the experience of being snow-bound in a New England winter and found entertainment in watching the birds in the snow—a treat for city-dwelling Helen.

Christine Cameron Bryan reports some interesting trips and great happiness in being grandmother to ten fine young people. She feels no "generation gap" and is fascinated by their comments on present day problems. She has great faith in the youth of today—and she seems to be in a good position to judge.

Laila Clark Ament traveled to Texas last August to attend the wedding of her granddaughter Donna to Thomas Bolcom, a graduate of Shady Side Academy and the University of Pennsylvania. About the time this issue of the Recorder comes out in May, we shall be congratulating Laila's auntie, Mrs. Dille, on her 106th birthday.

There have been changes for Helen Craig Culley. Upon returning from two months in Vienna last summer, she learned that her property, which she had given to the Presbytery as a memorial to Dr. Culley, had been sold and that she must move right away. A painful case of shingles and the adjustment of living in new quarters have contributed to a very un-peaceful year.

Louise Fletcher writes again from Sarasota, Florida, away from wintry New York where there already had been snow when she left in October. She enjoyed the program at Chautauqua last summer, and continues her contacts with Chatham friends in Sarasota.

From Emma Geiselhart Osterloh came two pleasant items of news. Her only grandson, Robert, returned safe and sound from Vietnam in time for Christmas, and granddaughter Lynne was graduated from Chatham in May. As a surprise to Lynne, Emma was invited to take part in the "moving out" ceremony, pinning the "purple and white" on Lynne and many of her classmates.

Visits from her children and grandchildren are the highlights of Jean Gray Orcutt's quiet life.

Sylvia Wayne Gotham's letter came from Ft. Lauderdale where she and her brother spend the winter. She was sorry to have missed President and Mrs. Eddy's visit to the Cleveland Alumnae Club, but caught up with them at the party Mrs. Heinz gave in Miami for the Eddys and Florida alumnae. Sylvia, Helen Baumann, Laila Ament, and I attended Chatham's one hundredth birthday party together and it was a joy to see Sylvia looking so well.

Mildred Weston Roger's letter from the farm at Gallitzin, Pa., said they were having a "winter to end all winters." Although they have not been out of the country this year, Mildred and Mr. Rogers had an interesting trip to North Carolina to interview the wife and daughters of Carl Sandberg for a biography Mr. Rogers is writing for Harcourt, Brace, and World. His latest book, "Cartoons, Caricatures and Social Comment," came out in October, also published by Harcourt, Brace, and World. Mildred has no new poems to report but old ones have appeared in five more collections since last spring: "Eight Lines and Under" (Macmillan Co.); "Pith and Vinegar" (Simon and Schuster); "The Now Reader" (Scott, Foresman); "The Poem" (Harper and Row); "A Book of Nature Poems" (Viking).

Grace Wilson modifies her statement that she is keeping up her volunteer work at Brooklyn Hospital and at the YMCA by adding "in good weather" which is an observation that most of us could echo.

A strenuous holiday in Maine last summer was followed by some exhausting editorial work for Martha Young McKeon. By the end of October she found it necessary to begin a long period of rest, so she has finally retired. She repeats her kind invitation for any or all of us to visit her.

Your class secretary duplicated her visits of 1968 in Oneonta, N.Y. and Packanack Lake, N.J., and added a Thanksgiving visit to Clarksburg, W.Va. Her only other news is that she will be moving to another apartment this spring, new address above.

DEATH

Katherine Keck Van Kirk, August 25, 1969
The death of Katherine Van Kirk was a shock to us. We recall her vigor and lively humor. There must be fine memories for her children and grandchildren.

Your secretary plagiarizes a class letter to describe us: we have joined no moratoriums; were not mixed in any riots; did sit-ins only with children or for a good rest. We attended church or synagogue, aided in welfare work, and tried to spread cheer. Those near Pittsburgh met at Decade meetings. Only three of us failed to respond by letter.

Leah Claster is well and vigorous. She has visited the West Coast and anticipated a trip to London in March although she is a "senior citizen (ugh)." She grieves over the world's catastrophes, but in futility reads or plays cards.

Martha Crandall Noyes has been baffled by ice and snowy roads, but she has delightful recollections of a trip to Hawaii last spring. A visit to four grandsons gave her a demonstration in perpetual motion.

Agnes Dorman Walling now makes her headquarters in McLean near her daughter, Mrs. Louis Derweiler of Falls Church. She accounts for two granddaughters and a grandson.

Martha Dunbar Say and her husband are enjoying their first year of retirement.

Edna Evans Peterson in Greensburg, Lillian Fisher Lichtenstahl in Miami Beach, and Pauline McCaw Patterson in Dayton send cordial greetings.

Ruth Gokey Walters manages considerable shuttling hither and thither among the younger generations, including thirteen grandchildren. The lakeside cottage is a center of activity. Maybe she relaxes in Ridgewood.

Elizabeth McClelland Crawford and Helen Pardee Nichol, like our other grandmothers, take pride in the travels and appointments of sons and daughters, and even grandchildren. Perhaps this compensates for separation from them by land and sea.

Louise Reinecke Thorne, as usual, can schedule visits among relations across the United States and Europe. Now it will be April and May in England with the Kings and side-trips to the Continent.

Dorothy Stoebener Markell and George still love Florida in the winter, where they reunite with other alumnae.

One big celebration was the one staged by the children of Egbert and Estelle Shepard White at Merryacres in July. Seventy-five friends out of their fifty years of marriage attended the festival. Photographs and reminiscences and greetings were assembled into two albums. These produced chuckles and fond memories when opened by their astonished parents. Estelle's greetings came from son John's in California. She reports the marriage of granddaughter Tamara, and the election of Betty Lockwood's husband to be President of Trinity College in Hartford.

Six of our class of '17 and three husbands made up a table at Chatham's Centennial celebration in November. Reports show that it was thrilling and beautiful, with old and new songs, and amusing and sentimental recollections.

Miss White sends warm greetings to all from Wilmington, Delaware. On her ninetyeth birthday she was the center of a celebration in the midst of many relatives from far and near. She wishes "the same to all of 1917."

Your secretary is now truly retired from library work but she is not inactive. She loves to relax in her home in the village and hopes to see old friends at any time, where she can "eat" them and "sleep" them.

DEATHS

Margaret Wills Dodds, April 1969
Frances Ludwik Latimer, April 1969

It is a shock and sorrow to realize that two of our number died last year. I have no particulars regarding Peg. Frances' son wrote that she had a sudden cerebral hemorrhage.

Edith Pew spent a month in Texas this winter, and with Stella Espy is planning a tour of Central Europe this summer which will include seeing the Passion Play. They have gone on several of the College Club trips, seeing the sights of Washington and the plays in New York.

Florence Fast McIntyre enjoyed a short visit from Lois Farr Hamilton "when they started just where they left off years ago." Her daughters have both moved, one to Corning, Ark. and the other to El Paso, Texas. Florence hopes to visit them this summer. Marcella Geary spent a winter month at Lake Worth, Florida.

Because it takes her longer now to do her usual church, Y.W., hospital and Spanish class work, Mabel Shaffer writes that she is busier than ever. Ella Martin likes her new home and she, too, is busy with hospital and church work with some time for reading and needlework.

Edith Honsaker Schumacher and her husband were in California again for the winter, at Carlsbad-by-the-Sea where they can see whales spouting from their windows. Her son-in-law, now a Ph.D., teaches anthropology at Marquette University.

Another keeping busy with volunteer work is Helen Treloar McGarrity who hopes to go to England in the spring. Marcella Collier Desjardins, just back from three weeks in Hawaii, took a cruise last summer which included Nova Scotia and Bermuda and heartily recommends it. She was in Pittsburgh, too, and enjoyed long telephone visits with Liz and Gladys.

Marjorie Caughey Musgrave reports her grandchildren progressing and that she greatly enjoyed the Chatham Anniversary Dinner, as did Stella and Ella. Lucile, Ada Lou, Mary Reeves and Gladys thought they had no special news, but just to know they are alright is good news. We hope this is true of those who are among the famous silent ones.

DEATH

Marion McDonald Shakeshaft, June 12, 1966

Miss Vanda E. Kerst, our class advisor, is now living at Fairhaven Home, Upper Sandusky, Ohio 43351. Perhaps some cards from class members would help to brighten her days.

Jean Bumgarner, an active worker in community affairs, has just been elected the first woman to serve on the Board of Trustees of her church.

Marjorie Garner Schmeltz maintains an interest in many different areas while working in their office several hours a day.

Lyda Hamilton reports she is just doing some volunteer, church and club work in New Kensington.

Helen Kutscher Petty lost her husband on December 17 and has the heartfelt sympathy of our class. She and Hiram had just retired from active professional lives when a heart condition worsened causing his death. Fortunately, her three daughters and seven grandchildren will help fill the void in her life. At present she is staying with Mary Lou's family at Scott Air Force Base in Belleville, Illinois so that Mary Lou can join her husband, a Lieutenant Colonel in the Air Force, stationed in Vietnam, for his R and R leave in Hawaii.

Sara MacGonagle returned to Pittsburgh after spending twenty-six years in Albany, New York where she was a faculty member of the State University of New York until her retirement in 1964. She has joined the College Club.

Elizabeth Mason Richards, happy with her family life, has been touched by the tragedy which has struck our colleges. Her daughter Caroline is an executive secretary to the Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences at Harvard. Since last April repeated invasions of University Hall have taken place, files broken into, the offices left in shambles and the Deans physically abused. Now, much of the administrative work is done behind locked doors with police constantly on patrol. Few of the vandals are college students of this outside movement which started at Berkeley, California.

Julia Matthews Kirk and Myron thoroughly enjoyed their early summer wilderness vacation of camping and fishing in Canada, but are happy to live in Florida.

Dorothy McCormick Means contacts members of the class in the North Boroughs and visited Eliza for a few days in the fall. She is happy to have her eldest daughter and family back in Pittsburgh.

Martha McKibbin Tatnall, Mary McKinney Wilson and Margaret McRoberts Egbert report no news, but send best wishes to the class.

Marion Moffett Barnes and Nick enjoyed two glorious months at Jekyll Island, Georgia, visiting with Helen Errett Hourdequin, '24, while there. Marion thought the Centennial Dinner was wonderful.

Marie Obie Craig has found a busy niche in Phoenix as a volunteer for the American Cancer Society and the American Opinion Library. She is an active member of the Republican Woman's Unit, sings in her church choir, gardens and keeps house for her stepson who has gone back to college to finish his degree in electrical engineering.

Marjorie Patterson Kaiser is overjoyed to have a granddaughter, Holly Ann, who arrived in Boston on October 17. She is busier now than at any time since she was married. Besides teaching violin she is chairman of the Children's Friend and Service Board, and with her husband serves as advisor, counselor and friend to more than 200 foreign students at the University.

Eliza Peterson reports there may be a class reunion in Pittsburgh this spring. For details contact her or Jean Bumgarner.

Marion Rainey Johnston visited Eliza last fall and frequently sees Dot Means.

Helen Sapper Rider isn't complaining about the weather, but says it is a little cold to get out and do the chores these wintry days on her farm.

Edith Wilds Clark is recovering from a successful appendectomy. The class sends best wishes.

Your secretary attended the Chatham

Centennial in November, and enjoyed a most delightful trip to the Orient last spring with a group of Pittsburgh friends. The trip was sponsored by the School of General Studies of the University of Pittsburgh. Please accept her appreciation for your continued support and cooperation.

NEW ADDRESSES

Elizabeth Archibald Andruss (Mrs. Harvey A.), R.D. #4, Country Club Drive, Bloomsburg, Pa. 17815

Katherine Dashiell Roberts (Mrs. Cyril), Apt. 910 Granada House, 201 North Ocean Boulevard, Pompano Beach, Fl. (After June 1)

Katheryn Kelty Tea (Mrs. Clark A.), 1717-A Bedford Lane, Newport Beach, Ca. 92660

This is our 45th reunion year and I am encouraged by the members who plan to come. Elizabeth Stevenson McQuiston is reunion chairman and she will be writing to all of you. If you have not sent a news letter to me, please send one to her so it can be read at the reunion. Pictures would be most welcome also.

Amelia Aiello Cang sends greetings. She is still head of the foreign language department in the Sacramento school system, and Dr. Cang is still in practice so she will be unable to attend the reunion.

Elizabeth Archibald Andruss and her husband now live in the new home they built prior to his retirement as president of Bloomsburg State College. They enjoyed an extensive trip to Africa last year. Mary Archibald Kline and Betty plan on coming to the reunion.

Our deepest sympathy to Katherine Dashiell Roberts whose husband Cyril died in September, 1969. She will be moving to an apartment in June, but hopes to attend the reunion.

Another classmate enjoying Florida this winter is Marian Frank Patterson in Key Largo. She and Gordon enjoyed a two-month trip around the world last year. Marian comes to Pittsburgh frequently to visit her daughter Nancy in Fox Chapel. While here last summer, she and Louise Graham Brown had lunch with Bee in her new home in Blackridge. Louise will be installed as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in June. A tea given in her honor by the Allegheny County Federation was attended by Bee McQuiston and several other Chatham alumnae. Louise's daughter, Barbara Plumb, has recently published a book on home furnishings.

Katheryn Kelty Tea and Dorothy Kelty Fairchild, after forty-three years separation, now live near one another in Newport Beach. They wish the class could share the happiness they now enjoy in each other's company. Dot's daughter Katheryn, an oil painter of note, lives near, as does Kate's daughter Dorothy. Kate's son, an Episcopal minister, spent a year in Vietnam as a Navy Chaplain.

I received a newsy letter from Lauretta Light Frye. She attended the Chatham dinner last fall and enjoys the special programs at the College. Do find time for the reunion, Lauretta.

Jean MacColl Horton's letter this year was full of news about her travels. Arthur's business takes them all over the country. They spend time also in Cape May, N.J. at their vacation home. Their older son was married in April; the younger one, Rick, lives in Pittsburgh. When at home she is active in community affairs and the Chatham Alumnae group in Philadelphia.

A most welcome letter came from Harriet McCaw Hale. She enjoys an active life and mentioned seeing Miriam McGormley Gordon more since her retirement. They both hope to attend the reunion.

Mary Shane Muir and Marshall are well, happy and busy. Last summer they visited their son John in Hinsdale, Illinois, and while there met my daughter Jinnie and her twin boys. I was so happy that Jinnie could meet a Chatham classmate. Do come to the reunion, Mary.

Frances Rolfe sends greetings and hopes to see us all in June.

Sarah Chisholm Springer and I attended Alumnae Council at the College last fall where we had a visit with Bee McQuiston and Louise Brown and discussed the reunion. I am happy to hear from so many of you who hope to come. This is the last time I will write the news as your secretary. It has been a most rewarding experience—so much fun to receive your letters. See you in June!

DEATH

Lillian Green Surbled, May 31, 1969. We were shocked and saddened by Lillian's sudden death only a few days before reunion which she and her husband, William, had planned to attend. A book has been placed in the Chatham Library in her memory.

Twenty-one classmates enjoyed a wonderful day on campus at our 40th reunion on June 7, and two husbands, Walter Ryman and Glenn Wagner, joined us for the President's reception and the evening dinner. Then on September 13 another mini-reunion occurred when eight of us took a picnic lunch and visited Mary Kolb at her beautiful "High Horizon" farm.

In addition to the local classmates who attended the reunion it was especially nice to see several who came from a distance: Kay Crawford Stancati and Margaret Constans Jones, both from Chicago; Mary De-

Motte Sutphen from Lakewood, New York; Lucretia Bond Wagner who, with Glenn, has since been to Japan for two months and is now in Naples, Florida; and Ruth Lenon Dieffenbacher from Long Island, who is now a special educational assistant in counseling at the University of Connecticut. Sons Tim and Mark have both completed their Army service, and Tim is now working in the pathology department at the University of Minnesota.

Martha Ackelson Smith, whose husband Alan died on April 15, 1969, spent Thanksgiving with daughter Sue in Sarasota, Florida, and then drove north by way of Atlanta to spend a week with daughter Nora.

Dorothy Appleby Musser has two new grandchildren, a boy and a girl. She and Fred spent six weeks last spring in the Pacific Islands. This year they are considering a garden tour of Europe in April and May, and a visit with their oldest daughter in Corpus Christi, Texas.

We extend sympathy to Erma Bachman Stewart on the death of her mother in June, and congratulations on the arrival of a new granddaughter in July. Erma continues her teaching of German in Butler High School.

With the arrival of a grandson in October, Ellen Connor Kilgore and Lee now have six grandchildren. Ellen is doing volunteer work for the community library.

Bessie Friedman Wasser, whose husband Sam was in the hospital when his father died in December, has been very busy trying to take care of their drug store.

Helen Furman Knight sends greetings and says that everything goes on much the same for her, while Jean Huff Bailey is simply enjoying the Arizona sun after many years in Canada.

Ruth Hunter Swisshelm took a two month's leave of absence from the alumnae office last summer so that husband Bob could recuperate from a coronary at their Van Buren Bay home. Ruth enjoyed receiving "NOTES from the FIFERS" as a New Years greeting from Michael and Peg Woolridge Fifer. Among the collection of original poems was one which helped to make the very cold winter seem a little more beautiful:

ICE CHIMES

Where leaves of grasses
Dip into the freezing stream
Small tongues of ice form
And sway, tinkling music
For those with elf ears to hear.

and another with a promise of spring:

MAY MORNING

The sunshine sifts
Through tall cathedral pines to light
The flower carpet glowing on the forest floor,
And where the bank slopes to the stream,
White trillium adorn the altar
Of the morning.

In addition to writing poetry, the Fifers have two grandchildren and acquired a new son-in-law when daughter Barbara was married in October, 1969. In Peg's words, "Our latest accomplishment is a farm pond, deep enough for trout, big enough for a small boat, secluded enough to swim, and right now, cold enough to ice skate on." The Fifer collection was mimeographed by Mary Louise Jones who enjoyed Peg's visit, and who says she is enjoying "growing old."

Junieta Kalbitzer Pollack, whose daughter Julia will be graduated from Chatham in May, enjoyed a trip through Canada last summer.

Mary Kolb appeared as a TV panelist on Channel 4 George Washington Carver Program and the Channel 13 Black Horizons Program in February.

Kay MacCloskey Crocker spends winters in Florida, summers in New Hampshire, and still loves to play golf.

Anne Miller Nolen, who is a substitute teacher at Margate Junior High School, says that "everybody but the substitutes" seem to get sick, all of which keeps Anne very busy.

Helen Myers Knox has retired from teaching, and when her husband retires they plan to travel.

Kay Reebel continues her work as consultant to several VA hospitals and as a member of "too many" committees, and enjoys her jaunts to Florida where she joins her family for the holidays.

Fran Reeder Battaglia had a trip to Mexico in October and makes annual visits to Charles and Cathy and their families in California. Charles is a resident in eye, ear, nose and throat at Los Angeles County Hospital. Frederick Battaglia was born on April 16, 1969 to son Mart and his wife in Lexington, Massachusetts.

Betty Rial Walthour and Frank have been putting fun into their retirement by taking freighter trips, the latest one to Germany in October.

Helen Sawyer Ryman is having a wonderful time "living with Bud," being directress of the Altar Guild at Trinity Cathedral, traveling and visiting her children.

Mary Lou Succop Bell is "enjoying her gorgeous grandchildren." Daughter Louise is in her second year of work toward a Ph.D. in Public Health at Harvard.

Evelyn Thompson Wible and Fran had a lovely trip to California and Hawaii and are enjoying their interesting grandchildren.

Dorothy Warner's reply said only, "Status quo."

Bob and I have enjoyed several nice trips to Dallas, Texas, Canada, Myrtle Beach and Florida. Daughter Jane was married in July, and Marcia is working on a master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh. Thanks to all who responded to the request for class treasury dollars. If you have not contributed and still wish to do so, make checks payable to Chatham Alumnae Class Account and mail to Ruth Swisshelm in the alumnae office.

DEATHS

Claiborne Brown Ziegler, October 5, 1969

Beatrice Lewis, November 11, 1969

Betty Trimble Hemingway, August, 1969

Phyllis Williams Clugh, August 4, 1969

We have been saddened by the loss of four classmates during 1969. Our sympathy is extended to their families and friends.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn's son Dick is a junior at Juniata College. "EB" still does some real estate work, but has resigned from the school board. She returned to Pittsburgh at the time of the Centennial when Miss Dysart was honored.

Edie Beale Asper, still employed by the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation in Juneau, reports that both sons (and young Linn's wife) graduated from school last summer. Linn and his wife are living in Fairbanks where Linn is with Legal Services and his wife teaches kindergarten. Son Jim enlisted in the Coast Guard and in October was off to boot camp in Alameda, California. Edie and Linn are thinking about Europe this year.

Martha Bradshaw Stout is "busy trying to keep busy," in the church, as a volunteer with the Cancer Society, and as a volunteer at Magee Hospital in the Public Relations Department. She plans to take a non-credit course in creative writing at Pitt. Her sons Bill and Don come home often enough to rescue her from the difficulties of maintaining her suburban home alone.

Dorothea Crawford Macy's husband is retired, but they still live in Short Hills, New Jersey, taking winter vacations. Dode does volunteer work, and they have a new grandchild.

LaVerda Dent Moran and Tom have curtailed their activities since his retirement. With three daughters living in three different states, they travel to see the girls and five grandchildren.

Gertrude Ferrero Prather's youngest, Mike, is at Oxford on a Fellowship. As he will be there two years, Trudy and Tom plan to visit him next summer. The Prathers' older son, Joe, is going on a safari next July and Mike hopes to go along as official photographer. Daughter Lynne is still with Playwright's Unit as production manager.

Martha Goffe Lane is head of the science department at Wilkinsburg High School. The Lanes have been spending Christmas vacations in Sarasota, Florida, enjoying golf and the beach. Daughter Janet and her husband live in New York City.

Mildred Harner Foltz and husband Ralph came to Pittsburgh for their annual visit and on their way back to Dallas stopped in Columbus, where they had a vicarious trip to Hawaii via the Parker MacCarthys' films. Mildred has finished a second semester of creative writing and has now started a third. She has had four poems accepted this year, and her hymn of several years ago will be in a new hymnal. To add to their joy, a grandson arrived in October.

Kay James McCann and Ray, on a trip to Mexico, drove to Nogales, Arizona, then down the west coast to Mazatlan and inland to Mexico City, enjoying beautiful scenery, flowers, birds, and meeting delightful people. Strenuous, but they recommend it! Kay is branch chairman and a member of the AAUW State Committee for "Beleaguered Earth: Can Man Survive?" Her special interest is population control. They also visited more of California: Salton Sea, Yosemite, the Gold Rush country, and Point Reyes National Seashore.

Margaret Jefferson is retiring in June from St. Anne's School in Charlottesville and plans to teach in the public schools there. Last summer, Dick and Noushka Turner spent a weekend with Margaret, and Eleanor Dearborn visited with her at Newark Airport.

Last spring, Florence Jones Maddox and William took a six-week trip to the west coast prior to William's retirement, visiting friends along the way and stopping to see son Dave and his wife near Stanford. In October they drove to New Orleans to a convention and visited relatives in Atlanta on the way home. The Maddoxes are thoroughly happy with retirement.

Adelaide Lasner Sachs and Meyer moved to Palm Beach permanently in January. Addie says she "finally has some news that didn't involve grandchildren!"

Lucile Laughlin Logan and husband Earl toured Spain in June with their two "adopted daughters," students at Westminster College. Lucile is happily adoring the new daughters of her nieces.

Margaret Marsh Symonds hopes to retire from teaching at the end of this school year. On a March trip to Florida she and Ken planned to visit Bev Robinson Smith in Naples. They were in Hawaii for the 1969 Rotary Convention. Peg's first grandchild arrived last July.

A note from Linda Munroe Sutherland says, in part, "We, as a class, should remember our Bee Lewis and think of a fitting memorial, for she was our voice." Linda is looking forward to gaining another daughter when her third son is married on June 6. "The older two sons have made me proud of their wives as daughters, and I claim three wonderful grandchildren, two girls and a boy."

Last summer, Anne Ritenour Harbison took her oldest grandson, 11-year-old "Harby," to the British Isles and found it a wonderful adventure. This year, it's his brother's turn and he is trying to talk Grandma into an African safari.

Kay Rockwell Potter's home, now complete with decorating and landscaping, is located on a large waterway off South Biscayne Bay (across from President Nixon's Florida home). Their boat is well protected, but they have quick access to the ocean for cruising up and down the Florida coast and to the Bahamas. Kay and Bill had front-row seats for both the July and November moon shots at the Cape, and came to Pittsburgh in the fall for family weddings and the Rolling Rock Races.

Roberta Rode Johnson and Latimer are enjoying their second winter of retirement in Florida, but still return to their home in Pittsburgh in June. Roberta's youngest, Norman, is a junior at Northwestern, majoring in economics. Another son, Richard, lives in Florida.

Lois Sproull Hinckley completed her term as Commissioner of the town of Longboat Key in March, and is glad to continue her work as President of the Gulf Coast Girl Scout Council. Lois is particularly saddened over the passing of Clai Brown Ziegler, because all Clai's family had passed away and there were so few who could help her. Lois added a good piece of news: Sean Thompson, son of the late Nora Weichel Thompson of our class, was married last winter. He and his wife are living with Nonie's husband who has been unable to walk for many years.

Congratulations to Doris Campbell Thomas, who received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters at Chung-ang University, Seoul, Korea, on October 11, 1969. The degree was authorized by the Ministry of Education of the Republic of Korea in recognition of Doris' outstanding contributions to the promotion of international understanding and the implementation of the Chung-ang Sisterhood Program. She has been Dean of Foreign Students and International Studies at the C. W. Post Center of Long Island University. She is also a member of the Curriculum Committee of the Institute of European Studies and of the Publication Committee of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs.

Lou Turner Crookston and Mac continue to operate the Sea Pearl Apartments in Deerfield Beach, Florida, and they never have been busier. They had hoped to have a vacation last fall by closing for September, but found that they didn't have time to leave!

Olive Wycoff MacCarthy's Christmas card reported a vacation at the shore, social activities, and a short visit from Martha Bradshaw Stout when she was driving to New Mexico to visit relatives. Olive's older daughter vacationed in Africa.

Betty Babcock Hull and Isabelle Patterson Konold ask to be remembered to everyone.

As for me, I must be in some sort of doldrums. Last year, my vacation plans were cancelled by an illness of my own; this year, illness in the family may make some difference. Otherwise, life goes on in a pleasant, happy way.

Thanks to all who sent news. In June of 1971 we will have our 40th Reunion. Perhaps we should try for a site in Florida since so many of our members are retiring and moving there!

Helen reporting:

Marian Baughman Monroe, "knee-deep in bookwork for Vaughn," writes that they spent last summer touring American Air Force bases in Germany, France and England, and they are off now for their third trip to Australia where Vaughn will be working for a month in a private membership club in Sydney. Candy and Jerry have two children. An Air Force major, he is at career school at Fort Benning. Christina is a retailing executive in Boston.

Jean Blar Hodgkin claims, "No News" seems inaccurate and much too negative—so let's say 'No News for Publication.'"

Mary Crumay Kew visited Ann's family in Denver, and reports the birth of a second grandson last May.

Marguerite Cunliff Gape is teaching first grade in a small school at Conneaut Lake, and is taking elementary education at Edinboro in the summer. She hopes to finish her requirements this year.

Genevieve Davis Crawford has been spending much of her time in Ohio with an ill brother. Our deepest sympathy to Gen whose sister died in January.

Jessie Doudna Phillips' daughter, Anne, and husband are living in Washington, D.C. David is a sophomore at W&J, and Johnny, a 14-year-old flutist, marched with his high school band in the Orange Bowl Parade—"the highest point of his life."

Dorothy Edsall Fuller's enthusiastic letter is in quotes, so we may all share her exciting adventures: "Missed last year's news round-up because Ed and I were in the middle of a nine month's 'trip of a lifetime' around the world, and now, a year later, I still can't believe we did it. Leaving home August 1, we spent ten weeks in Europe, attending opera in Bayreuth, Salzburg, and Vienna, attending a UNESCO-sponsored scientific congress in Bulgaria, and visiting my English relatives. The most adventurous part of the trip was a nine-week bus trip from London to Calcutta—across Europe, through Greece, Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan, and West Pakistan, and with a side trip to Nepal. This was rugged, but we really got to see these countries in a way few tourists do. For our visits in Bangkok, Cambodia, Singapore, and Bali we used planes, then flew to, and mostly across, Australia. A major high spot of the trip was visiting a cousin of mine in New Zealand, whom I haven't seen in forty years. An 18-day trip by 'banana boat' through some of the South Sea Islands was idyllic, and a 25-day jaunt by ship from Sydney to Hong Kong, stopping in New Guinea, Manila, and Taiwan was equally enjoyable. Hong Kong was as exciting as we had hoped, and we loved Japan, except for Tokyo. We tapered off with a few days in Hawaii and came home in glory on the California Zephyr. To add to the excitement of an already full year, our daughter Carol was married in August and is now living in Jackson, Mississippi where her husband teaches history in 99.995% black Jackson State College. Carol is one-half of the .005% white, as she takes a master's in early elementary education. I promise I'll never have as long a news item again!"

Virginia Hall McAleese is delighted with their home on Hilton Head Island, and recommends it as a retirement spot. Ginger is teaching in Atlanta and plans to marry in May. Youngest daughter, Anne, will graduate in May from Queens College, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Marjorie Hopkins is still "confronting the confronters" in Great Neck Junior High. Her latest book, And the Jackal Played the Masinko, should be on the market soon. It has an Ethiopian setting and is for ages four to eight.

Phyllis Lebew MacArthur did special reading in summer school in August, then took a holiday in Jamaica. Son Bill moved to Clark's Summit, Pennsylvania, and is at the bank in Scranton. It is farther traveling to see them, but a Christmas visit was accomplished by bus in spite of 24 inches of snow. Phyl is planning a trip to Spain this summer.

Gene Lewellyn Price is trying to make a comeback after a partial stroke last June. In 1953 she suffered two strokes that paralyzed her left side. She keeps busy with some piano students and is trying to make it on her own since her divorce. Our very best to you, Gene!

Last summer, Ruth Ludebuehl Early enjoyed an escorted tour of the Canadian Rockies and a trip up Inside Passage to Alaska by ship; she claims "it is beautiful every mile of the way." In June she and Ruth Nirella are planning a trip abroad. She keeps busy at the library, Soroptimist Club, and as an elder and chairman of Christian Education Committee at the United Presbyterian Church.

During the past year, Louise Metzgar Iams' family has been in a constant state of change. Dan has fulfilled his service and returned safely from Vietnam and is employed as a salesman for a pre-fab building firm near Washington, Pennsylvania. Bill, his wife Pam, and their two children are in Bristol, England, for six months where he is doing chest surgery, arranged through a fellowship with Johns-Hopkins Hospital where he is a resident. Louise and Charles are planning to visit them in May. Nancy and Jack have two boys, a girl, and a recently adopted two-month-old girl. This past year, Louise accompanied Charles on trips to Denver, San Francisco, and New York.

My year has been busy, but a change of pace that we all share when our nest is empty. Sue is a freshman at William Penn College, Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Wes is completing an assignment as Captain Squadron Commander at Lowry Air Force Base in Denver. He is continuing in a military career and awaiting reassignment.

Thank you for your warm responses and, until the spring of 1971, sincere good wishes to all.

Dot reporting:

Dorothy Newell had a wonderful time on a North Cape cruise on the Kungsholm last June, joining the Royal and Ancient Polar Bear Society while there. Because of a fractured collarbone suffered in a fall the end of October, she had to cancel her reservation for a January Around South America cruise on the Gripsholm, and hoped to be out of her harness by mid-February. A new Eldorado will keep Dorothy busy this summer, and by next winter she hopes to be on her second cruise around the world.

A fall on December 30 put Ruth Nirella in the hospital for nine days with a broken wrist. She hoped to be able to go back to school early in February for the second semester and to get the senior class play under way for March 20. She and Ruth Ludebuehl Early plan to leave on June 22 for Oberammergau. From there they will travel by rented car through Austria, the Italian Lake region and parts of Switzerland. This is to be followed by a Cook's Tour of Devon, Cornwall and London.

Carolyn Pierce May and her husband spent two months at Key Colony Beach after an absence of three years, Bob recuperating from an operation before Christmas. Bob, Jr., back from Turkey, has decided to stay in the Air Force and is stationed at Selfridge AFB. Carolyn planned to visit John and Ginny Hall McAleese at Hilton Head in March, and hopes to visit Pittsburgh some time soon.

All of Gertrude Ray Mann's family came home for Christmas, the two boys from Boston, and husband Carey from Abadan, Iran, where he has been working on a huge fertilizer plant being built for the Kellogg Iran Corporation. Late in January he returned to Iran for a final six weeks to complete the job.

Since Edith Rial Benford's husband retired a year ago they have been living on a farm between Somerset and Bedford. Son John, his wife and small daughter live in Greensburg where he is a stockbroker. Son Tom, who lives in Brooklyn, is a plant quarantine inspector for the Department of Agriculture, inspecting plants and flowers coming into the United States on boats.

Ruth Ross, happy in her retirement, enjoyed a 7,700 mile "Four Winds" train tour of the west and southwest last June. She tutors children each Saturday.

Fred and Helen Rowand Dunkle took a brief fall trip to Williamsburg in the midst of a busy year. Daughter Maryann toured the British Isles with an English girl with whom she had been corresponding, and Christina became engaged in November and married on December 26 to Captain Charles A. Shukis, U.S. Army. Helen says six weeks is not enough time to get ready for a Christmas wedding, but they have recovered.

After living in Michigan for 22 years, Jean Shaw Brackmann and Henry still like everything except the erratic weather. Jean has worked with the Juvenile Court for 18 years and Henry is engaged in tool steel sales. Their two grandchildren, David and Tammy Colister, aged 10 and 7, live nearby. Jean and Henry were going to Arizona for a February vacation.

Sarah Stevenson Foster was invited to attend a conference held in Washington, D.C. in January. Entitled "Parenthood in Adolescence," and sponsored for the past three years by the University of Pittsburgh, Yale University and the Children's Bureau of H. E. W., it is an effort to promote comprehensive programs for school-age pregnant girls. This is Sally's field of endeavor with the Los Angeles County Department of Public Assistance.

Lillian Wilson Ruckel and Bill no longer have any children at home since Linda is a freshman at the University of Kentucky and Bob, an officer in the Coast Guard, is stationed at Cape May.

Since moving to Florida, Miriam Young White and Roger have almost doubled the size of their original small villa. Roger is working with FM radio in Stuart, Susan will enter Indian River Junior College next September, and David, Carol and granddaughter Julie came to visit from Syracuse, N.Y.

Betty Clarke's trips have included a summer visit to her old home in Rhode Island, Thanksgiving with her nephew's family in Virginia Beach, and Christmas with her sister, Constance Clarke Russ, x'26, and her husband in Old Greenwich, Ct. Betty enjoyed the Centennial Dinner in November and is a regular attendant at the Chatham Downtown Alumnae Club's monthly luncheon meetings at the Woman's City Club.

Dorothy Gleason Van Wickle and her husband enjoy their visits with Son Bob and family in Marshall, Texas, especially since there is now a granddaughter. As vice president of the Pennsylvania Music Teachers Association, Dorothy planned to attend the national convention in Miami.

Estous Lee Davidson spent October at her daughter's home in Bermuda, taking care of Jennifer and Stephen while their parents were in England. Daughter Lee and her husband, Roger Davidson, are 1960 graduates of Chatham and W&J respectively. Son John's wife Cathy will graduate from Chatham in June.

Ed and I enjoy our smaller home and wonder why we didn't make the move sooner. When Ted and Mary's third child, Susan Anne Millikin, was born in June, we took care of Doug and Beth. Ginny and Hugh, who is with Ryerson Steel, have moved to Mt. Lebanon. We, too, enjoyed the Centennial Dinner. Now we are looking forward to a Florida vacation.

Although Genevieve Shibler Karn, Edith McBane and Martha Stuart Muhlheizer had no special news, we appreciate their greetings. It was great to hear from so many.

Elizabeth Cober O'Donnell (Mrs. William M.), 804 Enos Lane, Godfrey, Il. 62035
Eleanor Harbison Bream (Mrs. C. Gray), 7003 River Oaks Drive, McLean, Va. 22101

Dorothy Taylor, 313 Oliver Drive, Monroeville, Pa. 15146

We are sorry that Miss Shamburger will not be joining us for our 35th reunion on June 6, but we know that she would be pleased to hear from all of us. Her address: Miss Mary I. Shamburger, The Pines, Star, North Carolina 27356

On the happy side, we have news that Eleanora Vigliarolo Mancuso is expecting to be here for reunion. Her time here will be very short, but the reunion is her main reason for coming and she plans to be with us for the entire program. Eleanora also writes, "History repeats itself and I have a daughter who also fell in love with the United States of America and who has been working in New York for the past two years. She works part-time at the Italian Cultural Institute and does free-lance designing for fabric consultants, publishers, etc." We are delighted to hear of Eleanora's coming and hope this spurs many others to spend the weekend at Chatham.

Jean Engel Reppun sent a cheery letter while she and her favorite doctor were on a Hong Kong holiday (en route to Australia) saying, "Our family is growing again with two new daughters-in-law last June and this January. Two boys in college this year, another to go next. Daughter Martha is with Pan American World Airways."

Eleanor Harbison Bream and Gray are at home again in McLean, Virginia. Gray, now retired from the Foreign Service, is enjoying a new career—he commutes every week to a teaching job at Loyola University in Chicago.

Louise Leadman Faller spent six weeks during the holidays in a wheel chair, following a bad fall, but she has made a good recovery and is looking forward to our June reunion.

Helen Birmingham Proctor doesn't get to visit the campus as often as she'd like to now that she's off the Alumnae Board. In January she assisted at a party for prospective students which was held in Bronxville, and thus caught up on the College's current activities.

Sally Aldridge Schaefer has a full-time job at the Chambersburg Hospital managing the gift shop which, in the past 27-month period, brought in $32,000 for the Hospital. Her avocation is landscape design work. Her married daughter and family live in Danbury, Conn. Son Milo is at Drexel in a cooperative course in metal-lurgy.

Caroline Hesse Ender, sending warm greetings to the class, says, "We have made reservations for a June raft trip on the Colorado River, from Lake Powell to Lake Mead, through the Grand Canyon. This means I won't make our reunion this year." We're sorry about that, but hope the Enders have a great trip.

Margaret Eichleay Storer is still teaching kindergarten and expects to receive a master's degree in elementary education at Pitt this year.

Marion Burns Sabina and her husband Roland celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary last August 9. Their daughter Lynn has six children. Son Jack is a phys. ed. teacher and football coach at North Hills High. He and his wife live nearby in West View.

Winifred Jeffries Saxon survived one of the worst winters ever in Upstate New York, we're happy to hear, and sent a note of greetings.

Jane Harmeier Nims will have a very busy first week of June—Dave's 40th reunion at University of North Carolina, Martha Jane's graduation from Duke University, and her own 35th at Chatham!

We were happy to receive a check from Mary Katherine Rodgers Moses but sorry she did not include news. We hope she and others who did not answer are planning to attend our reunion in June and deliver their news in person.

Gertrude Russell Lydic sends news of their two sons. 2nd Lt. Clark, who had been working as a power engineer at Duquesne Light Company since June, was stationed at Fort Gordon, Ga., with the Signal Corps until April when he was transferred to Fort Bragg, N.C. Son Jim is at Bethany College. Gertie is looking forward to a Scandinavian trip in May.

The Christmas holidays were great for Virginia Schweinsburg Hyde and Ed as they entertained their two daughters, their husbands and two grandchildren at their Florida home. Gretchen lives in Rochester, N.Y. and is the mother of 2½-year-old Brenda and Brian, 1. Daughter Janet teaches Spanish and has received her master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh. Virginia attended a luncheon at the Surf Club in Florida given by Mrs. Clifford S. Heinz in honor of President and Mrs. Eddy.

Dorothy Taylor has moved into a new home—not completely finished yet—within walking distance of her work. Her move was necessitated by the widening of the road into Monroeville Mall.

From Florida, Virginia Watkins De Mers sends her best wishes for the reunion but regrets that she will be unable to be there. Genie, in 10th grade and a Senior Girl Scout, is involved in a conservation project at a local Council camp, and Virginia, as Troop Mother, "a dignified name for chauffeur," likewise will be occupied. They will be in Pittsburgh later in the summer.

Dorothy Wood Clarke writes of last year's vacations and projected ones for this year. In Bermuda Dot and Ted enjoyed a reunion with Ted's brother whom they had not seen for some years. They also vacationed in Georgia and New Hampshire in 1969. Travel plans for this year include Hawaii in April and New Mexico in June. Dot has been occupied with her usual activities and hobbies including her weaving, some of which will be exhibited this spring.

It was another grandson for Dorothy Woodward Evans when Michael Henry, born April 19, 1969 joined brother Richard and parents Jan and Bill Parker. Dot and George flew to California last May to help them move into a new home near Irvine. They also visited David in Phoenix. Last fall a motor trip to Texas provided them with an enjoyable vacation.

Bertha Dunbar Speer sent a picture of her 2½-year-old granddaughter, Molly, who lives only four blocks away. Bertha is in charge of an art class at the 20th Century Club and refinishes furniture for the church bazaar each year. She is on the Board of Trustees for Transitional Services, active in the Women's Auxiliary of Shady Side Boys Club, the West Penn Cot Club, a Bible study group and the Presbyterian Home for the Aged. For relaxation in the summer, Bertha and her husband enjoy bowling on the greens near their home.

Your secretaries hope each class member will make a special effort to participate in the reunion weekend activities. Our thanks to all who have contributed to our reunion gift fund.

Katherine Pyle recovered from two broken vertebrae in time to work as a guide at Meadowcroft Village for three months last summer. Meadowcroft is the early American village created by Delvin and Albert Miller near Avella, Pa.

Elsie Dressler Helsel still commutes between Athens, Ohio and Washington, D.C. where she is associated with United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc.

Olive Wilson, as president for two years of the Three Rivers Chapter, Colonial Dames of America of the Seventeenth Century, expects to attend the national conference in Washington, D.C. in April.

Jean Phillips Horn retired two years ago and is traveling with her husband all over the southeast and southwest, enjoying the sights and good food. Daughter Janice's husband is working on his doctorate at Auburn University, and son Jack is an engineer at Coca Cola Co. in Atlanta, Georgia.

Mildred Brown McIntyre and Lowe enjoy extensive traveling in their motor coach and have become area representatives for Ultra, Inc. Their daughter Claudia lives in La Paz, Bolivia, and presented them with their seventh grandchild in November, 1969. Son Charles attends graduate school at Kent State. Mildred writes various articles for their local newspaper as her way to alert and inform their community.

Nancy Diven Seagren recommends apartment living for anyone who has lost his taste for shoveling snow. Son Barry graduated from Covenant Seminary in May 1969 and with his wife is to spend two to three years in Switzerland, serving as house parents in a retreat maintained by the Reformed Presbyterian Church under the guidance of Dr. Francis A. Schaeffer. Son Dean is presently at Fort Bliss, Texas studying Vietnamese. Son Bill is awaiting college acceptance for the fall term.

"Life has been good to us," writes Lois Haseltine Moses, who is enjoying living in New York City. Their family continues to grow—three grandsons and a new granddaughter. Lois and Cam hope their third son will be back soon from the service.

Margaret Brewer Douler's older son, Dave, is working as a designer for Kirl Silver Company in Baltimore. Landy, her younger son, is studying landscape architecture at Penn State.

Two members of the class will be seeing more of each other in the future, as both Betty McCarty Boyd and Sally Anderson Amsberg have homes at Hilton Head Island, S.C. The Boyds spent two and a half months touring Europe by car last fall, staying off the main roads in order to see many charming out-of-the-way towns which tourists usually miss. Betty and Harry have five grandchildren. The Amsbergs' daughter graduates from high school this June, and their son is employed in Columbus, Ohio, following his graduation from college last June.

The past year has been exciting for Betty Kidney Moss. Upon her return from a lovely Caribbean cruise in July, she learned that she had been appointed an Assistant Secretary in The Trust Department of Mellon Bank where she has been employed for many years.

Betty Lewis Williams and Betty Bevan Winkler had a fascinating tour of Wales, Scotland, England, and Ireland last July. The highlight of the trip was the once-in-a-lifetime occasion when they attended the Investiture of the Prince of Wales at Caernarvon Castle. Betty Williams is still teaching in the pre-primary program at Fairview School, Pittsburgh.

Peg Heggie Bryson's son Michael was honored by having his name cut into the Omichron Delta Kappa stone walk between Pitt's Cathedral of Learning and the Heintzelman Chapel. Daughter Jean, who is a freshman at Miami University of Ohio, sat in on a lecture by Dr. Richard Momeyer on "Moral Torium Day," and found out that he was the brother of Al Momeyer with whom she had worked at the Kingsley House summer camp. Both young men are sons of Florence Gibbs Momeyer '38.

Mary Travers Scott and her husband have had an eventful year. Their son Doug was married June 14, 1969 to Betty Schwarzback. Daughter Nancy and her husband (Reverend Glenn B. Jenks, minister of All Saints Episcopal Church in Aliquippa) presented Mary and Scotty with their first grandchild, Christie Lynn, on December 17, 1969.

The big news from Mary Follansbee Buck is that her daughter Sue, whose husband is a member of the Chatham faculty, has a baby boy. Mary's youngest goes off to college in the fall.

Shirley Campbell Berg's youngest, Geoffrey, will graduate from Yale in June, and will go to medical school. The other two children, Gretchen and Peter, are out of school and are working but not married.

Betty Grace Hammer Maxwell took her niece Nancy (daughter of Jean '41) on a river cruise aboard the Delta Queen, last of the stern-wheeled passenger boats. Betty Grace was anxious that Nancy knows something of this type of travel before it becomes extinct, because her great-great-grandfather was captain of a river boat during the Civil War.

Sending class greetings are Miki McBride McMasters, Sally Ingram Diven, Mary Jane Addy Braley, and Martha Branch Culbertson. Martha Potter Koerner's daughter is still in Boston; one son is on tour of duty in Vietnam, and the other is a sophomore in college.

Sympathy of the class goes to Isabel Silvis Sterling, whose young son-in-law collapsed and died quite suddenly in early January. His wife, Issie's daughter Judy, will stay in their home in Belmont, Massachusetts and will continue her work as an astronomy computer programmer at Harvard University. Son Pete, a high school senior, hopes to be accepted to the World Campus Afloat for next year. Issie and Jim are taking a long-awaited trip to Australia in March.

Naomi Sayre Steck was elected to the Board of the Delaware Valley Section of Plastic Engineers. Naomi saw Betty Mahood Arthurs in Miami, Florida last Thanksgiving.

Church activities keep Mary Watson Seed "on the go." She is President of Church Women United, Chairman of Ecumenism in her church and teaches Sunday School. She is involved more than ever in the Community Mental Health Clinic. Both of Mary's children are in college—Katherine is majoring in finance, and Douglas in commercial art.

The biggest change for Eleanor Marshall Watters was getting used to an almost empty house—two sons married and living miles away, and the third one in the Peace Corps in Malaysia—and her husband's change of work, now a consulting engineer on his own. Christmas was different this year, for they were away from home for the first time since 1942, but it was nice, especially since they had their two-year-old granddaughter to enjoy.

Dee Whitehead Heinig is kept busy traveling from the midwest to the east, visiting her children. Suzanne has worked in Boston since her graduation from Lake Forest. Jeff, his wife and two-year-old son live in New Jersey. Don is married and is still hard at work at the University of Colorado Medical School. Besides her family interests, Dee is chairman of the Deaconess Board and serves on the board of the League of Women Voters.

Connie Bell Sedgwick and Frank enjoy spending their weekends at their apartment in Deerfield Beach, Florida. Connie, with mask and snorkle, spent many hours looking at the fish which are in abundance around the rocks and jetties. During the holidays, son Dwight managed to spear enough fish for a couple of meals.

Martha Jane Gerwig Rial and Jack made their annual pilgrimage to New York for the Bankers' Convention. Son Frank graduates from Shady Side Academy this year, and is awaiting word from the college of his choice. Fred is in the Army MP school, stationed at Fort Benning where the My Lai trial is being held.

Although she is working part time (to keep out of trouble, she says!) Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott managed to get to West Virginia to spend Thanksgiving with her father, who has been very ill for many months.

Lillian Taylor Franz says work at Carnegie Mellon is hectic these days because of so many changes. Her mother is still in the nursing home, and Lillian goes there to be with her each day after work. There is little change in Mrs. Taylor's condition. Lillian, Betty Grace Maxwell, Betty Lewis Williams, Betty Bevan Winkler, Betty Mahood Arthurs, Mary Yellig Earley, Louise Leslie Fischer and Naomi Sayre Steck keep a Round-Robin letter circulating. They get together about four or five times a year.

Mary Trimble Brittain and Ray enjoyed a cruise aboard the Kungsholm last year, following spring through the Azores, Spain, France, Guernsey, Holland, Isle of Wight, England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. Ray will retire this year after thirty-three years of teaching at Pitt. To celebrate retirement, Mary, Ray and their youngest daughter, Elizabeth, are planning a four-and-a-half months motor tour of Germany, Austria, Yugoslavia, Greece, Switzerland, and northern Italy, and are availing themselves of the opportunity of returning to Oberammergau to see the Passion Play. Victoria is kept busy with seven-year-old Jeffery and five-year-old Sandra; Alexandra's son Rafe is three.

Elizabeth Bradley lunches with the Downtown Chatham Group at the Woman's City Club once a month. She is still in the Law Department at Gulf and now has five weeks vacation. Last fall she visited relatives in Texas and then flew to Acapulco and took a tour of Mexico.

Does anyone know anything about Elizabeth J. Belden and Anne Fiske (Mrs. William F. Kirk)? If you do, please let us know.

It is gratifying to receive so many answers to our requests for news. Keep the news coming to either of us, and we shall keep it on file until the next issue of The Recorder.

Did you notice that two from our class were mentioned in the Alumnae Recorder last fall? Dr. Katherine Cuthbert Hardee in the article "Doctor, Lawyer," and Jeanne Kalish Samuels, who exhibited in the Alumnae Artists Exhibition.

Our classmate Ruth Davies has distinguished herself in the field of school library work. Her first book, The School Library, Force for Educational Excellence, has been published. She is now working on a second one, The School Instructional Materials Center, which should be ready for publication in 1971. Ruth is with the North Hills School District of Allegheny County.

Mother of five, grandmother of one, Helen Archer Fardig is working part time in the library of the elementary school that some of her children attend. She is also training church people in the new Baptist curriculum.

Elva Bogren Goodwin, who traveled from her home in Hong Kong for the reunion, continued on to London, Sweden and Bangkok before returning to Hong Kong. Her third round-the-world trip! When she isn't traveling or playing golf she's running a "work shop" for the American Women's Association of Hong Kong, which is dedicated to charity. She'd love to see anyone traveling through Hong Kong.

Other overseas travelers were Esther Jackson, Letitia Mahaffey Andree and Helen Starkey Dixon. Esther had a seven-week trip last fall to the Orient, her first to that part of the world. Letitia and her husband visited ten countries in Europe in seven weeks. Letitia is now on the Board of Managers of the United Presbyterian Home for Children at Mars, Pa. Helen and her family visited five countries in Europe. She now has her master's degree, has moved to a new home overlooking Lake Michigan, and is recovering from surgery.

Doris Chatto Kimball's husband Bob was Potentate of Syria Temple, so the Kimballs had an interesting time in Seattle last June at the Shrine Convention.

Peggy Cooper Uptegraff's daughter Judy has been accepted as one of twelve women to enter the Pennsylvania School of Optometry in Philadelphia after her graduation from Penn State. Twins Kathy and Roy III are at Winchester-Thurston and Shady Side. Peggy, Roy and the twins went to California and Mexico last year during spring vacation.

Gene Detwiler Davis reports that her oldest son, Jimmy, who has been in the Air Force two years, spent one of them in Okinawa. Son Bill will go into the Navy Reserve soon.

June Feick, Ivy Heutter McLaughlin and Jeanne Kalish Samuels sent greetings.

Mary Gregg Stockton's oldest daughter is very happy as a Recreation Aide for the American Red Cross in Vietnam.

Virginia Gunning is now Public Relations Director of the YWCA of Greater Pittsburgh, does occasional photography assignments for United Press International, and, besides this, is program chairman of the Women's Press Club and secretary of the Golden Quill Executive Committee.

Helen Harris Davis' parents have joined her in Boston. Daughter Lee and husband have moved back to a nearby suburb, so last Christmas was a real family affair. Helen has been made Assistant Director of Personnel at the hospital, recruiting and hiring for the Nursing Department.

An exciting trip from Houston, Texas to Daytona Beach, Florida, 24 hours ahead of the hurricane, was taken by Totty Hoyt Faison and her family last fall. They were traveling to a Faison family reunion. Besides ten house guests over the holidays, she keeps busy with activities in the lives of her 13-year-old and 10-year-old children.

Jean Keenan Farrill's oldest daughter is married, Jack is at Cornell and Kathy is in high school, while Jean continues to teach second grade.

Mary Jane Kerr Leonard and Rowland have moved to an apartment in Philadelphia where Rowland is now Associate Secretary of Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of Friends (Quaker). Their children are scattered around the world. Son David and family are in Africa, Dottie Jo and husband in England, Linda and husband in Bangkok, and Mary Lou at Whittier College in California.

Our class extends its deepest sympathy to Genevieve Love Smith whose mother died in October. Genevieve gave up teaching at Point Park College to be with her mother through her terminal illness.

Amy McBride Bell and husband John watch Chatham's projected building plans with special interest since John is associated with Bucknell University and is working on a similar project there.

A note from Lillian McPetridge Wilson says that they have two college seniors, a college sophomore and a high school senior who keep "mamma and papa" busy.

Mary Milne Hanson and her husband have opened their hearts and home to three teenage nieces and nephews (two in college, one in high school). Mary, who is also a grandmother, visited her brother Tom last fall and toured Navajo Indian land. John, Jr. is a college junior.

Betty Jane Oliver Barton writes that her small yarn shop loves the vest craze so she is "caught up in a whirlwind of crocheting." Third daughter Keith is marrying a Navy Lieutenant in April which will bring all the others home. There are still three children at home, and they also have six "lovely" grandchildren.

Beth Pensom Fox hated to leave New Jersey but finds that country living is a new experience. All visitors to West Virginia are welcome.

Ruth Ross Duer and Ralph have "an escape hatch from the population explosion" by taking off in their new self-contained trailer to the Trinity Alps wilderness area where they own a couple of acres. She would be "most happy to show any of you around the wine country."

A new home has been "total involvement" for Mary Louise Weber McClenahan and Bill. Bill, Jr. is their only child left at home. Their granddaughter, according to Lou, is too far away in Cleveland where Jane lives. Kathy is back at the University of Wisconsin after summer school at Oxford, and Margie is working.

Mary Bea Weibel McEwen regrets that she missed our reunion, but an eye operation by laser, which turned out to be very painless, kept her at home.

Rose Marie Weller Black's daughter Marjorie is taking her junior college year in Munich. The family is planning to join her there this summer. Her 4th grade daughter and college graduate son are at home.

Ruth Wyant Riggs reports that Dave's early retirement is like a "nice long vacation." The Riggs are planning to stay in Pittsburgh but escape the cold months in Florida.

Your co-secretaries really enjoyed hearing from all of you and seeing everyone who was able to come to the reunion and the Centennial Dinner. Our class had the largest number of alumnae to attend the reunion! Lucy and Don have a grandson, Mark Jeffrey Labbett. Mary Jane and Scott's daughter Diane is married, and their son Scott, Jr., a high school senior, will be off to college next year.

Mary Bertha reporting:

Jeanne-Anna Ayres Widgery, Our Author, has completed her second novel. It is set for publication in August. Note the title, Trumpet at the Gates, then come August, run, don't walk to your nearest book store. Her eldest, Carolyn, is a Yale freshman. Catherine and Claudia are at Winchester-Thurston where their mamma is still English Department Chairman. Our sympathy to Jeanne-Anna upon the death of her mother last summer. After a hectic year she took off during exam week for the Virgin Islands and corrected papers on the beach.

It was nice to hear from Betty Baker Kerestes who is still teaching and keeping very busy. Her daughter will be graduated from Chatham in May, and Betty is looking forward to coming to Pittsburgh for that great day.

Anne Butler Stewart recently became head of the Peabody Collection of Books on Children (psychology, child study, etc.) a part of Joint University Libraries in Nashville. Son David is in Paris finishing his dissertation in history of architecture. Dick, in the Air Force, is in pilot training at Vance Field, Okla., and John is a freshman at University of the South.

Dottie Geschwindt Schieber and Bob are adjusting to apartment living in Indianapolis where Bob is now division vice president of R.C.A. Their youngest will graduate this year and will probably be a June bride, too. Last spring they had a trip to Europe. However, Dottie's most exciting news is being a grandma to two boys.

After the traveling of other years Betty Howard Smith's family is really enjoying civilian life. Beth has been doing her thing for special education! She is regional director for her area and has been trying to form a parents association for the gifted with some success. As a result, she has been asked to conduct a seminar on "Parental and Community Involvement" at the state convention of the California Association for the Gifted, a group of teachers and administrators who are working in the gifted program.

Just home from a Caribbean cruise was Mary Kinter McEldowney. Her big news of '69 was son Clay's wedding on June 28, which was also his mom and pop's 28th anniversary. Best man at the nuptials was Jim Blackburn, son of Ethel Herrold Blackburn, '42. A few weeks earlier, said sons were graduated from Princeton. Kin says the proudest fathers present were Messers. Blackburn and McEldowney.

Still boating in summer and skiing in winter are Natalie Lambing Paige and Peter. Ski trips to Vermont and Colorado are in their plans as well as a new house now being built. Last June they acquired a daughter-in-law and a U.S.A. 2nd Lieutenant when Peter Otis was married and got his commission and sheepskin from the University of New Hampshire. He is now at Ft. Holabird, Md. Douglas and Lee are juniors at Lehigh and Choate respectively.

Mary Linn Marks Colbaugh says, "We are happy to be back with this kind of school again—York Country Day School. Since their daughter now lives in Philadelphia, she and Jack can see their two grandsons often. Mary Linn plans a reunion soon with Jane Shidemanle Cross in nearby Lancaster.

Jean McGowan Marshall reports thusly on her brood's news: Muffin, married and living in Wellesley, Mass., works for New England Bell. Holly is at Massachusetts General and finishing college at Boston University at night. David will finish high school this year. Meanwhile, back at the homestead, she and Butch "just keep doing what has to be done."

Wesley McIntyre Casner and Bob find the mild climate of Dallas great for golf and swimming. In November they enjoyed an Acapulco vacation. December was a happy time when their Ted came home safely after a year in Vietnam. Following discharge in June, he will return to college. Chris and Sandy are busy high-schoolers.

Your pen pal had a great Canadian vacation in October, visiting Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, plus all the Maritime Provinces. Last April on a southern trip we "discovered" Myrtle Beach, S.C., a glorious spot for spring vacation. A summer jaunt to Michigan's Upper Peninsula was foregone because of a sick pussycat, than which nothing can be sicker. This household does not really revolve around Calico, it just seems to. No other news except thanks to all who answered.

Ruth reporting:

Alice Chattaway Kittle and husband Jim became grandparents last October when John and Ann had a son. John graduated from Indiana Military Academy with an officer's commission in August. Jim Jr. graduated from law school in June and passed his bar exam in September. Our sympathy goes to Alice whose mother died in August after an extended illness.

Mae Oettinger Schweinsberg went to the Bahamas during the holiday season, came home, fell on the ice, broke her arm! She has been down with the 'flu' for two weeks, and now is ready to go back to the islands, or any where!!

"Gulliver's Travels is keeping me so busy, I hardly have time to think," writes Dottie Oliver Friday who has nine people working in the office. "I just returned from a long trip to the South Pacific that included Guam, where I visited my son Rick, a doctor in the Air Force, stationed at Anderson AFB. His son Matthew is a year old!"

Gladys Patton MacNeill is teaching American history to eighth-graders this year, and she and Paul are still considering the skiing bit in self defense! Gary graduated from college last June, and is now at Officers Candidate School at Fort Belvoir. Brad is a junior at Cornell, his ultimate goal veterinary school.

Jane Pierce Eaton's son John and daughter Patti were both married in June within three weeks of one another. John and bride Trudy had a huge affair; Patti and her soldier husband "Doc" a medium sized one. "Doc" had been away for six months, arrived just six hours before the wedding, without a license! Patti was to join him in Thailand in April. Jane went to Spain with friends last July, and is now back teaching third grade.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz and family are enthusiastic travel-trailer-campers. David is a fifth-grader, husband John is still with National Cash Register, and Eleanor with the Children's Service Board.

Jane Shidemantle Cross and Bob are still teaching—Bob at Franklin and Marshall College, and Jane at Edward Hand Junior High. Their two daughters (14 and 16) attend Lancaster County Day School.

Our love and heartfelt sympathy goes out to Alice Steinmark Rightor. Albert died just eight months after their marriage.

Elinor Weibel Stoltz says Elizabeth at last is in first grade, and Elinor will do one more year of P.T.A. duty. Then she plans a sabbatical on volunteer work. There was a good vacation in Florida last year, and now the college shopping is under way.

Chet and I were delighted with Helen Weller Tkach's big news. Walter is now wearing his silver star—Brigadier General Tkach, if you please! President Nixon pinned on his star, with many friends and relatives in attendance. Son Jack and his wife flew in from Denver with friends. "I'm still pinching myself," says Sis.

Charlotte Wolf Beckman's son, a Marine Reservist, is home and working but will go back to Toledo University in March. Daughter Mary and her husband are expecting their first child in April. Son Allen, in eighth grade, plays clarinet in the band. Char is vice president of Church Women's United of Toledo, and still active in PEO Sisterhood. Husband Carl is active again in stamp collecting, and busy with his ministry. Sister Lorny and family are living in Germany.

"Greetings from Muscatine, Iowa on the 'Mighty Miss' (Mississippi that is)," writes Susan Wooldridge Fishburn. John is now Assistant County Attorney. Daughter Mary graduated with honors in June, and is nursing in Minneapolis. Alice, a sophomore at the University of Iowa, is engaged to a boy in the Marines and is working for a degree in dental hygiene. Son Jack is a freshman in the honors program at Iowa, and son Bill, a junior in high school, doesn't know what he wants to do.

Your reporter is keeping house like mad—we have "Pond House" for sale so I must keep the place "up to snuff." We will move to Newburg, New York, across the Hudson from here. Chet's business is there and it is going so well he doesn't want to waste time commuting. Pam is making plans to go to Europe to live.

Jean reporting:

Margie Thompson Anderson's oldest daughter is married to a Navy flier and living in Pensacola. Mimi is in her second year at Mt. Vernon in Washington and Suzie, a junior at the Thomas School.

The antique business keeps Mary Campbell Eckhardt busy, but not too busy for a family trip to Japan in June. Robin is a freshman at Harvard and will spend three months in research on the Galapagos Islands.

Edie Cole has spent the winter feeding the birds and losing at bridge! I wonder if she has any hints for us in dealing with the squirrel problem.

Back to school is Barbara Cooper Hepburn. Kathy is married and John starts college in the fall.

Next year Lucille Cummins Connor will have three in college—Patti is a junior at Sweet Briar, Buz a freshman at Penn State, and Cyn will go to Ohio Wesleyan as an achievement scholar. Lucille sells real estate.

It's hard to believe, but Nancy Doerr Wilson will have her second grandchild in June. Both girls are married and live near by. Rick is a junior at the Naval Academy. Nancy and Fred were planning a cruise in March.

"Aloha" from Jane Evans Linsenmeyer reminds us of the perfect visit we had with them last February. They really do live in the most beautiful spot in the world. Jane is currently volunteering as a speech coach five days a week at St. Anthony's, and since Sherry and Todd now go to Punahou, she will work in the body-painting booth for Punahou's carnival. Roy goes to Taiwan again this year to address the National War College. Then the whole family is going on a camping trip to Maui where Sherry will swim in a state meet.

Florence Frey Burnite is now a mother-in-law. Daughter Marty was married in July to a teacher in the Towson, Md. school district. Husband, Dave, who is medically retired, is deeply involved in an international tape-spondence club and also reads texts on tape for blind students. Florence enjoys her work in admissions at the Lutheran Home at Topton.

No news from Barbara Heinz Barone, but Amy Core sent a clipping reporting that Barbara's husband Ray is the new president of the State Real Estate Commission.

Ginny Hendryx Shank reports that three of their girls are westward bound, Lyn to Denver working in a design studio, Sally in Tucson working for the University of Arizona, and Kathy at Muskingum College in Ohio. The three at home are in high school, junior high and elementary school so Ginny's career as homemaker is not in jeopardy.

The Chatham lectures on the Middle East have drawn Claire Horowitz Klein back to the campus. She, Seymour and Evan, 14, plan a spring trip to London. Alan won't be able to go as he doesn't have a long enough vacation from Duquesne.

Miles Janouch Price is ready to start a new kind of life now that both children are in college, Christine at Cornell and Edward at Colorado School of Mines.

Foster-daughter Sallie's wedding last July brought Peg Johnson Milton home from Arizona. Daughter Chris is in Florida waiting to join her husband in Hawaii for R and R in February. Peg is teaching courses in reading instruction at Edinboro State College.

As for us, both boys are in college, Dan at Arizona University and Dick at Kenyon, and Patty is a junior in high school. We hope to see Marian Teichman McKone and Joe soon since they are back in New Jersey at McGuire Air Force Base. Marian hopes to start courses at Temple in the spring. We also enjoyed a visit with Amy Core when she was here for the Herb Society Convention.

Marian reporting:

Hard to realize that a year ago when I was writing up these notes, I was packing for a trip to Mexico. Falk and I spent a few exciting, exhilarating days in Mexico City—then, exhausted, rested up in Acapulco. But it's only a warm memory now. This year's "traveling" will be in June when we have three graduations in eight days: David's from Yale; Dan's from Shady Side Academy; and Louise's from Linden School. The great question is where they will all be next year!

Nina Maley Ross reports that they've settled into their new home. Cindy graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University and is teaching; Sally is a junior at the University of Leicester in England and spent four weeks in Italy, Greece and Turkey. Dick is a freshman at Penn State and Laura is a seventh-grader.

We congratulate Libby Maroney Aiello who received her master's degree in liberal arts from St. John's of Annapolis and Santa Fe in August. Son Bob, after a summer tour of Europe with the Shenandoah Conservatory, is enrolled as a freshman at Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, which his father attended some twenty years ago. Daughter Beverly is in fifth grade. Bill still "commutes" between Los Alamos, Los Angeles and Cape Kennedy sending Vela satellites off into the blue.

Dorothy Marshall Autore writes that her closest contact with Chatham this year is when her daughter Carol mentions David Eddy's name! (They've been classmates through grade school). That's what happens when you stop being class secretary, Dorothy!

I asked for a weather report from Janet McCormick McDole out in Washington. "Because it's so far north, people don't realize that the Puget Sound area has a basically mild climate all year round. Last winter was an exception—for over ten days in January the temperatures stayed below freezing, but this year is closer to normal. Our hostess on Christmas day went out and cut fresh camellias!" Thank you, Janet.

The Recorder gets a scoop! Amy McKay Core will become president of the Herb Society of America in July. She writes "... at the present time I'm serving as third vice-president of the Herb Society of America and will take office as President in July, 1970 when our local unit handles the administration of the organization for the next two years. There will be a chance to travel and meet exciting people in this volunteer office." Best of luck, Amy. We're proud of you.

Connie Meyer Waldschmidt's son Chad was married in August—he's a senior at Hillsdale College, where younger son, Bob, is a freshman. "Chuck and I are just getting older and grayer . . . we still spend our summers at Conneaut Lake."

We reached Dorothy Anne Minnecci McCabe at a happy time—Patti had been spending her month of independent study in Pittsburgh, observing reading and math programs at St. Bede's, Linden, and Winchester-Thurston.

Best wishes to Jeannette Myers Erler and Jack who are celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary by taking a 14-day Caribbean Cruise. "Am dieting like mad because I'm planning to eat my way through the Caribbean."

Marjorie Noonan Ladley says, "My news must be so similar to everyone else's this year it hardly bears repeating." Tom is a freshman at W&J (earned his varsity letter in football); Barbara is a junior at Fox Chapel High; Bob, in 8th grade, has discovered basketball (having grown four inches this past year); and Jane, ten, is an enthusiastic cheer-leader. Buck is still traveling and Marjorie, too, a little. It does bear repeating—sort of reassuring that a lot of us are on pretty much the same wave length.

Janet Ross keeps me supplied with YWCA brochures—this time her Winter Program which covers everything from the art of self defense to bird watching! She also enclosed a very good looking fundraiser for the New North Area Y, designed by Paul Schweiker, for which the goal is $500,000 by March 31. What are you doing with all your "spare time," Janet?

"It is wonderful having my husband home once again, having been gone for over a year in Thailand flying missions," writes Marion Teichmann McKone. They're living at McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey, close enough to Philadelphia that she's taking an art survey course there.

Florence Croyle Beal mentions lots of snow. You've lots of company, Florence! Her son Andrew is engaged to his high school sweetheart and they're both juniors at Carnegie-Mellon. Her daughters, Nancy and Beverly, are enjoying country living and making new friends. Husband Russell is trying to get used to commuting to the office, while Florence is busy getting everything settled in their new home.

Jane McCall Downing is getting mail from far-off places! Her youngest daughter, Patty, is living in Bangkok with her first lieutenant husband.

Dorothy Horne Mollenauer sends best regards to all, and it is great to hear again from Lorny Wolf Regan in Frankfurt, who says, "this has been the snowiest year since we have been here—twelve years now as of 6 January!" The Regans spent four weeks in the States this fall, traveling both ways on the United States. Their eldest, Kathy, finished at Mary Mount and is back with them, working for the Air Force. Susan, their second daughter, is at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia. She will go to the College for two years, then into the University proper for her last two years. Anne is a junior in high school, Ellen in ninth grade, and Mary in seventh.

From my own holiday correspondence I learned that Ruth Gilson Larimer is still teaching kindergarten. Son David graduated from the University of Florida in June and is a sports writer for the local paper, and Bobby is a sophomore in college. Gloria Silverstein Goldberg and Dick slipped away to Yosemite just before Thanksgiving and went bike-riding on the valley floor.

I spoke with Mrs. Hutson at Chatham's Centennial—she was looking lovely and was as vivacious as always. Also saw Miss Marks, looking very well.

DEATH

Edith Succop Dibble, January 4, 1970

A note and the funeral bulletin from her husband, Theodore Dibble, brought the sad news of Edith's death after a four-year illness with cancer. The sympathy of the class is extended to her husband and children and to her sister, Florence Klotz '42.

Many of our class children are either in college or fast approaching it. Emily Noll Zerbe has a daughter at Muskingum, GINNY Alexander McKeag a daughter at Gettysburg, Lois Lutz Pierce one at Ashland, and Louise Flood Egan's oldest is at Scripps. Mim Davis Schillhaus has two girls at Grove City and Grace Benner Crosbie two boys at Carnegie Mellon. Jane Wood Ziercher's son is at Ohio State, Patty Smith Joyner has one at Indiana University, Carolyn Cosel Lampl has a freshman at Harvard, and Jean Dalzell MacMillan one at Wittenburg. Lois Allhouse Harnack has a son at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Barb Collins Millman's son is a senior at Northwestern where Martha Cox Hartman has a freshman daughter. Phyllis Ingraham Stout's daughter is taking her junior year off from Radcliffe to work as a Vista Volunteer in St. Thomas.

Mary Lou Egan Fleming is operating her own employment agency in Harrisburg. She recommends running your own business. Marie Minnemeyer Houston attended the festivities in Richmond for the election of the first Republican governor of Virginia since 1864. Helen Robinson Forsythe is now with Woodside Receiving Hospital as a social worker. Marion Coben is back at the piano. Louise Flood Egan is still writing a newspaper column while working for her master's degree in journalism.

Carla Gregson Dubs' husband Marne is now with Kennecott Copper as Director of Ocean Resources and vice president of their Exploration Company. Carla and Marne were in Scotland last spring.

Jannie Beck Jameson toured Germany and Austria, and Marion Swannie Hall dropped her card in the mail as she took off for Guadelupe. Nina McAdams Handloser enjoys life in California. She and John cruised with twenty other boats from Santa Barbara to Encinada, Mexico and Catalina Island last summer.

Through her sister (Esther. Kennedy Macdonald '47) we have learned that Janet Kennedy is to be listed this year in Who's Who in American Women.

Our class was represented at the Centennial Dinner last November by Alice Demmler, Patsy Speers Bradley and Jeanne McKeag Steele. Reunion plans are shaping up and indications are that we will have a large group. If you don't remember the following classmates, get out your year-book because they will be at the reunion:

Grace Benner Crosbie, Janet Brewster Reynolds, Carolyn Cosel Lampl, Martha Cox Hartman, Mary Lou Egan Fleming, Audry Heston Kidder, Ruth Jenkins Horsburgh, Phyllis Ingraham Stout, Lois Long Kingsland, Lois Lutz Pierce, Petie McFall Schall, Jane Meub Evans, Jane Murray Blair, Emily Noll Zerbe, Helen Robinson Forsythe, Eps Schollar Worley, Patty Smith Joyner, Patsy Speers Bradley, Marion Swannie Hall, Eleanor St. Clair Hurtt, Polly Wilson Ackenheil and Jane Wood Ziercher.

Patty reporting:

Our sincere sympathy to Susan Campbell McConnell on the death of her father.

Greetings, but no news from Peggy Dodge Poindexter, Kay Ciganovic, Helen Brown Michaels, Margie Bennett Sherts.

Ann Lee Alexander reports that life in the library world is enjoyable, and she is looking forward to another recruiting trip through the south.

Ruth Arnold Harmon relates that the children are nicer, Bruce is busier, the dog is friskier, and she's grayer.

Marian Arras Wallace has been busy this winter shoveling snow in Buffalo, as well as teaching and altar guiding.

Louise Baehr Larson happily tells us she is becoming a golf bum—Spain in February—Florida in March—children are well, and sixteen-year-old Chrissie is driving!

Jottie Beeson Schrader and Frank spent a week-end with the Harmons, added a horse to the family, and have taken up skiing. Life with three teenagers is aging, not boring. How well we all know!

Elva Braziell Hively has a son at M.I.T. and a daughter at the University of Cincinnati. She and the family have taken up hiking—Rocky Mountains last summer and White Mountains this fall.

Alice Burns Kasmirsky enjoyed working on the Centennial Fund campaign and meeting alumnae in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area. She had a happy reunion with Mary Alice Morris after fifteen years.

Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh is back in school studying for a master's degree in social work. She spent a weekend with Rosemary and Lucy this summer, and her daughter is a sophomore at University of Rochester.

Sammie Hamilton is an X-Ray technician at Columbia Hospital and enjoys her work tremendously.

Lee Hutton Sage has a daughter who is a sophomore at Chatham, and a son a senior at Syracuse. Son Enos, married with a baby girl, makes Lee a grandmother—which she confesses she really doesn't feel like, especially with a child six years old!

Alice Kells saw Peggy Donaldson in San Francisco last spring, and spent six weeks in Europe last summer.

Esther Kennedy Macdonald was eagerly looking forward to becoming a grandparent in February.

Gene Wallace Kennedy is working at Peck & Peck in the Monroeville Mall. She tops off the list of those with children in college—the three boys in and the fourth a senior in high school.

Mary Lou Michel Tiernan has had a wedding in her family. Twenty-year-old Susan is now Mrs. Robert Hutchinson. Jan (Anna) is a freshman at Chatham. Mike and Snyder attended the Centennial celebration and got to know each other again as adults.

Doris Snyder Hookway (Snyder, y'know) and Ron had their first look at Maine, and enjoyed every minute of New England. She wishes she had seen more of us at the Centennial party.

Virginia LeFurgy Tubbs and Eldred are in New England, too, where he is enjoying research at Harvard College observatory for his sabbatical year. They'll be back in Claremont, Calif., in August.

Lois Power Moore will be back on the college circuit soon as Ed is a senior in high school this year. Tom, Jr., is back in North Carolina after two years with the Army in Germany.

Josie McKendrick Tobie's oldest daughter is a freshman at Ohio Wesleyan, two other daughters are in high school, and Josie is tutoring remedial reading. She asks everyone to try Alan's individual canned puddings—under Hunt-Wesson label. They're great.

Well, gals, that's all the news for 1970. Dayne and I took our girls to Europe last summer and spent a wonderful week visiting our A.F.S. daughter in Germany. Tricia goes to Grove City College next fall, in the footsteps of her daddy and grandpa.

Gloria reporting:

Gloria Molinatto Spellacy sold her house, gave away her dog, has an exciting new job in Atlanta, Ga. She is looking forward to living in an apartment and saying goodbye to Pittsburgh winters! In the meantime, another Gloria has taken over her section of the class for news.

By a circuitous route—Mrs. Petty, '23, to the 1923 class secretary to the Alumnae Office—we have news of Janet Petty Gray who has been "lost" for a number of years. In addition to giving us her address, her mother tells us that Janet's oldest son, Jim, is a junior at Colorado University, second son, Charles, a freshman at Denver Junior College, and daughter Janet a junior in high school.

Norma Trozzo Hopkins enjoyed a golfing week at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina and is planning a Northern European trip for this summer. Hop is principal of his own school now. Norma is in the throes of writing two chapters for an edited book on "Clinical Audiology" and one chapter for a book on "Modern Development."

Barbara Mason still loves Hawaii. Liberty House store has promoted her to cosmetic buyer—quite a change from ready-to-wear but a challenge.

Ginny Toy Schenck has been working at the Wilkesburg Library.

Betty M. McKee is a Major in the ROTC office at First Army headquarters at Fort Meade. She has served two tours of duty in Germany, and was awarded the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service on her most recent assignment at Fort Gordon, Georgia where she was commanding officer of the WAC Company.

Nancy Walters Cobetto accompanied Jack on a business trip to Florida. She has been accompanying and arranging music for Betty Gillett and her husband for the past several years.

Laura Wiley Robertson finds it quite a letdown to be back in Pittsburgh after six interesting years in Rome, Italy.

Dolly Larson Webb's daughter Patty is a senior at Elmira College, and is engaged to a Cornell University graduate from Idaho. John, Jr., is a sophomore at Hillsdale College in Michigan.

LaVerne Lowar Scott's Howard has gone to Grove City College. Vernie and Ginny Schenck got together during the Christmas holidays.

Mary Alice Kline Morris saw Alice Burns Kasmirsky in Florida last May, and met Bob and Elva Braziell Hively in Cincinnati when they were enrolling their daughter, Jane, and Mary Alice was enrolling her son, Steve, as freshmen at the University of Cincinnati. Mary Alice's daughter Marty is a junior at West Virginia University and had the lead this February in "My Fair Lady." She spent last summer singing with St. Louis Municipal Opera and hopes to go back. Mary Alice is still teaching.

Marjorie Mohn Young is happy to be back in Washington where Charlie is on duty at the Pentagon. Margie has five children, from two in college down to a first-grader.

Peggy McSwigan Friday is another with the youngest a first-grader and the oldest in high school. Peggy is using her free time to help out in school.

Evelyn Mock Hirtle's son Tremaine attends Community College and Jon is a senior at Springdale High School. Evie is chairman of the science department at Highlands School District. The class extends sympathy to Evie on the death of her father, Dr. Mock, on February 1, and to Janet Thomas whose father died December 31.

DEATHS

Sally Dougan Augustine, November 8, 1969
Mary Lou Shekell Mellon, May 18, 1969

We are shocked and saddened by the loss of two more of our classmates during the past year. Gifts to the Chatham Library have been made in their memory, and we extend our sincere sympathy to their families.

Jeanne reporting:

Marge Alexander Brinkworth finds it quite different living in the Philadelphia area after calling Sewickley home for 18 years.

Elizabeth Christy Snell's family enjoyed a 5-day ski trip. Tina is a freshman at Western Maryland College, Lindy a 10th-grader, Tom in 8th grade, and Jim a 3rd-grader.

Eva Christy Frangoulis' daughter Connie has been accepted at Allegheny College for September 1970. Michael is in 10th grade.

Janet Crouch St. Clair has been in the Graduate Internship Program at Pitt since last June, is teaching 4th grade at the Model School in McKeesport, and in June will earn her master's degree and teaching certification. Their oldest, Connie, is a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. Billy, 13, and Debbie, 11, are at home.

No news but "hello" from Lu Beery Wenneker, Claudia Bullers Janke and Kathleen Dalzell.

Many thanks to those who replied. I have finished a month's substitute teaching assignment in 3rd grade, and I keep the records for 100 boys and girls in a Saturday morning bowling league. We should all be thinking about ideas for our next reunion. It will be with the classes of 1950, 1951 and 1952 in June 1971.

Betty reporting:

Louise Diehl is National Field Representative for the American Red Cross assigned to the state of Connecticut. She found a charming apartment on the first floor of an old house in Glastonbury—typical New Englandish.

Mary Jane Ewing Sipe's family spent a month's vacation at Chautauqua, New York last summer, and also enjoyed a brief visit from Dodie Seale Warren and family.

Roberta Hanson Helm is president of the Memorial Hospital Auxiliary. Her son Bill, 17, spent six weeks in Spain this past summer, and came back grown up. Her fourteen-year-old broke his arm January 2, starting the year out right, and her youngest is now in first grade.

Barbara Hoge Dansak's son Jeff is learning to drive, and Tracey is in third grade. They all enjoy the fabulous Arizona sunshine.

Not much is new in Polk, but Harriet Kerr Daye is still supervising teacher in a class for trainable retarded. Harry and Sam are both in junior high and Barby is in 5th grade.

Jane Linton Smith reports great fun cruising on Long Island Sound in their 22' boat. Meg, in 4th grade, and Judy Ellsworth, Mary Lou's daughter, are in the same Girl Scout troop. Bud's work is in New York City, and Jane has taught for four years for the Department of Special Services.

Marjorie Livezey Sims, with all four girls in school (1st, 7th, 9th and 11th grades), continues her job as a junior high school counselor. John's new job with AMF requires commuting from Indiana to Vandalia, Ohio.

Jean Mattern Myers works part time for a psychiatrist, husband Madison is still with Scripps's Institution of Oceanography at the University of California at San Diego, and they, with Laura, 11, and Sharon, 9, enjoy truck camper trips to the nearby mountains and desert.

Louise Heineman Harper and Alice Ho Miller ask to be remembered to everyone.

The Weltman household keeps busy too. As president of the Spring Valley Garden Club I am involved in lots of planning and, sometimes, hard work. It was good to hear from those who responded.

Marilyn reporting:

Clara Miklos Hoon expects to receive second master's degree in August—this one from Columbia Teachers College in elementary administration. After 20 years (gulp) in the classroom, she is now the Administrator in a K-4 Primary school with 300 pupils, the job she has wanted all her life. She and her husband Bob spent the Christmas holidays in Jamaica.

Joan Morledge Michaelian is busy with church, PTA, Scouts, PEO, and garden club. Fourth child, Margaret, will enter kindergarten in September.

Timmy Mountford DeFrance is in his second year of teaching 8th-grade English. Her oldest son, Bill, is a freshman at Mount Union College. John, a junior in high school, is exhibiting pottery and mobiles at Butler Art Gallery. David is in 4th grade and Little League. The DeFrance's plan to spend spring vacation in Washington, D.C.

Jo Nusbaum Cone loves being near Washington, D.C., going to the Symphony and sitting in on Congress and the Supreme Court. She is active in the Vienna Woman's Club and the Fairfax Welcome Wagon. Her oldest, Steve, is a sophomore at College and will be listed in the 1970 National Student Register. Artie is a junior honor student at Mt. Hermon and the twins are in junior high. Art's second book (this one on hunting) will be published in the fall of 1970 by MacMillan.

We are delighted to hear from Peggy Quick Gibson in Mexico. The Gibsons have three sons, ages 12, 10, and 7. We are sorry to hear of the death of Peggy's mother in 1963 and her father in 1964. Peggy writes that their hobby is raising Quarter Horses, and they have purchased 8 acres to build a ranch only 25 minutes from the city. She wants to know who is coming to Mexico—says it's about time after all these years!

Carol reporting:

We are all invited, also, to visit Jean Riibiluoma French on their lovely island of Bermuda. Bringing us up to date after several years of silence she reports that daughter Penny is on the freshman dean's list at Trinity University in Hartford, Conn. Randy, 17, will graduate from the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa., this year, and their other daughter attends the Bermuda School for Girls. Jean's husband, a newspaper man, is connected with the Island Press, Ltd., the Bermuda Sun, and the Island Press of Barbados, Ltd. Jean sells advertising for the Bermuda Sun, and goes with her husband on trips to Barbados. Two years ago they were hosts for 100 Carnegie-Mellon alumni.

Two late notes came from Mary Lou Rider, who is a teacher and in guidance at Trinity Junior High School in Washington, Pa., and Ellie Luthringer Mattson, who is completing her term as president of the Cleveland Alumnae Club.

Barbara Shields Sullivan, Bob and 6-year-old Mary Ann miss Pittsburgh, but are beginning to feel at home in Johnstown where Bob is City Manager for H&R Block. They are joining the Church of the Brethren because of that denomination's concern for service to others.

Mary Shumaker Drake and Bobby Watson Wagner are well and send their good wishes.

After moving back to Pittsburgh from Baltimore last July, Katie Tench Pittman and family are getting settled in their new home. Lynn is a junior in high school, and Mark is in 7th grade.

Peggy Thompson Weil mentions how much she enjoyed a very exciting evening at Chatham's 100th Birthday Party.

Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth reports things both good and bad. Going through two operations on the same eye for a detached retina was not pleasant, but 17-year-old Peggy took over the household like a pro. On the good side was a three-week trip to Italy and Switzerland where they visited the places Bob was stationed during the war. Peggy will enter Heidelberg College as a music major in September, and Judy is in 4th grade. Mary Lou and Peggy are in the chorus of "Pajama Game" for the local theater group. We are sorry to hear that Mary Lou lost her mother and the surgeon she worked for within a week.

Jean Tsagaris Karidis is thrilled that daughter Cindy has been accepted at Chatham to enter in September with the Class of 1974.

Ginny Van Scoy Armin is active in the League of Women Voters and A.A.U.W. Her children are Jennifer, 8, Pamela, 6, and Bobby, 22 months. Their part of the country sets records for cold weather, but they enjoy the lovely lakes and woods of Minnesota.

A serious house fire last July made family living very uncomfortable for the Hysers (Candy Walker), and nearly cost them the life of their 2-year-old Mark. We are sorry to hear, also, that Candy's mother died in October.

Because Corinne Welch Patton's children—John, 12, Alice, 8, and Billy, 6—are all in school, she has not been able to say NO this year. As a result, she is currently an officer in two PTA's, secretary-treasurer of a Woman's Club Book Group, and working with the Mt. Lebanon Alumnae Club. With husband Jim a member of the board of South Hills Performing Arts and Music for Mt. Lebanon, she also participates in these groups.

Eleanor Wenning Atwell, hobbling with her leg in a cast from a skiing accident, was looking forward to March when the whole family was to take off on a chartered sailboat from Martinique to Grenada. Bobby, who will graduate in June, headed the undefeated golf team at Shady Side Academy. Amy, a sophomore at Ellis, is interested in silversmithing.

Mizzie Wiles Knight's letter included news of trips to Florida, Montreal and Chicago (where they saw the Apollo 11 crew); her involvements with conservation projects, educational television and anti-Vietnam protests; and their 300-record collection of Rock and Blues. She assures us she's the same Miz we all knew.

Eleanor Shaver Mitchell is learning new things about their business, and is pleased with a new addition to their office in the sky—made by taking off the roof and adding a room with a 10" window. Ellie also directs a children's choir. Their oldest son, Mark, in the Navy aboard the U.S.S. Independence, was planning to be married on February 14.

Martha Sutton Ammon and Jim were off to Greece in March instead of their usual Caribbean vacation. The inner city and race relations are still Martha's vital interest.

Have you ever heard of talk non-stop for a week? Ask Nancy Aeberli Mooney who visited with Ann Gould Moore in Boulder, Colorado. There was a lot to catch up on since their last visit nine years ago. Nancy traveled also to London and Ireland with husband Jim. She took a course in microbiology, is on the Board of Trustees at the Unitarian Church, and is superintendent of the Sunday School. In between, they built a fifty-foot brick wall along the patio, one of those family projects where "Mother" became a Master Mortar Mixer. As for Ann, she, husband Don and son Doug toured the beautiful state of Colorado last summer, and Don and Doug attended the National Boy Scout Jamboree in July.

As winner of the "Young Columbus" contest in Beaumont, Texas, Ethel Anderson Mesloh's oldest son, Karl, won a 12-day trip to Italy and Tunisia, which included a camel ride, an audience with the Pope, a tour of Venice and Milan, visits with the mayors of Tunis, Florence and Rome. But most exciting was a visit with Gina Lollibrigida at her villa and having his picture taken with her. Quite an experience for a 15-year-old! Ethel enjoys golfing at least one day a week—the beauty of living in the south—and still has a small piano class. Karl is superintendent of engineering and maintenance at the plant.

Gwen Bach Lammert is president of the Markham School PTA, and next year husband Harry will be president of the Alumni Council at Bethany College. Their children make life worthwhile—Steven, 11, a budding scientist, Cynthia, 9, learning the flute, and Amy, a 7-year-old imp.

Working part-time at Allegheny General Hospital keeps Esther Bender Shaffer occupied along with home and community activities. Esther and Jean Graham Hague organized an A.G.H. reunion last summer. They sometimes see each other on duty since Jean works three days a week as 3-11 supervisor. Jean finds that a one-year-old keeps a forty-one-year-old mother very busy and TIRED. Her other three sons are Freddy, 13, Bob, 12, and Billy, 9. Somehow, Jean finds time to be president-elect of her Garden Club. Many thanks to Jean for finding our "lost" Rita Howard who is working in a pediatric clinic in Chevy Chase, Maryland.

Family pools are the big thing for Suzanne Blair Murray and Laura Miksch Diaz. Suzie's family enjoyed their pool all summer, but in November she and Roger took off for a vacation alone in Fort Lauderdale. Both of Laura's daughters learned to swim in their pool, but she finds it more peaceful in the shallow end. The Diaz family took a trip south in 1969.

Anne Crouse Harvey and family spent a week in South Dakota, visiting the Black Hills, the Bad Lands and Mt. Rushmore. Anne got together with Don and Julianna Moore Pollitt in Chicago. Nanna loves the small town atmosphere of Dillsburg, Pennsylvania where she is a full-time librarian for three elementary schools. Don is assistant manager of the fruit and vegetable division of the American Agriculture Marketing Association. Their oldest child, Craig, 16, is spending his first year away at school. Nanna met Alice MacKenzie Swaim, '32, who is a well known poet in Dillsburg.

El Paso, Mexico and Carlsbad Caverns, followed by a more restful week at Bedford Springs Hotel, were family trips taken by Shirley Elliott Johnston. In February Shirley returned to teaching morning kindergarten sessions with two-and-a-half-year old Jeffry as "assistant professor."

While visiting in Pittsburgh last year, Lois Franke Lee saw Wilma Mathewson Pressau, who then returned the visit in California. Lois' daughter marched in the Rose Parade on New Year's, playing saxophone in the Burbank Hill School band, but the blisters on her feet were painful reminders of the honor.

Joan Goodwin Heckel has all four children in junior and senior high school, and is substitute teaching in area elementary schools.

Besides running a home and family Anne Holden Loudon is research editor for Clark, Dodge & Co., investment brokers on Wall Street. Gay, 9, went to England with John to visit relatives, while Andy stayed at home with their 2-year-old and worked. Exciting was the word for it when Andy attended the premiere and festivities for the "Battle of Britain" picture. All of Johnnie's battle buddies were there.

We all know the truth but Barbara "Shippa" Hoy Dible and Ivy Watson Baird tell all their friends in Bettendorf, Iowa they were graduated in 1955 so they can stay young a little longer. Shippa likes Iowa and the "easier" way of life, and her health has improved.

Patricia Kennedy Earley sent a picture of her husband and their beautiful children, Jeff, Pete, Janet and Chris. Pat had a brief but delightful visit from "Seggie," her three handsome sons and her mother last spring. In August, on a family vacation on Long Island, they were near M. J. Regel Hagemeister's summer place, sharing lobsters and many laughs with MJ, George and their two children, Bonnie and Robert. Thanksgiving brought Marilyn Black Auchterlonie and family to the Black Family Reunion at her sister's (Barbara Black Bloomstrom, '50) home in Cincinnati, giving Marilyn and Pat a chance to catch up on several years' news. Bob and Pat also had a vacation in Jamaica, B.W.I. in November.

Peggy Kennelly Murphy is happy that her oldest daughter has been accepted for next fall at Indiana State University of Pennsylvania.

Anna Mae Landefeld Eckert enjoyed the family skiing trips in their big trailer.

Louise Larson McGeary and family (Hunter, Hunter, Jr. and the dog) toured North Carolina and Virginia in a Dodge motor home rented from friends.

As part of her work with the League of Women Voters, Mary Ellen Leigh McBride helped to establish a library in the Allegheny County Jail. Husband Albert has assumed a new position as assistant tax counsel for PPG Industries. Ellen, 16, has had poetry published in a national anthology, "Young America Sings," and she is beginning to look at colleges. Robbie, 13, is an ardent horsewoman.

Still working part time and involved with her "kids," Patricia Meyer Kovacs visited Pittsburgh and the campus in October and enjoyed a Christmas vacation in Puerto Rico.

In addition to teaching a nursery school and Sunday school, Adele Pfeifer Ferianc works one morning a week testing eyesight of school children for the Allegheny County Health Department. Linda, Rich and Diane are studying piano, violin and organ, respectively.

Instead of a silver anniversary party with their former wedding guests in Philadelphia on December 26, Doris Seese Bell and Ken spent their "big day" shoveling out of the "big snow" that blanketed eastern New York and Pennsylvania.

After receiving her doctorate in June, Norma Smith Watters and Les plan to head west and northwest by car. Norma is vice principal of Alderice Junior High School.

Audrey Sommers Whigham's 5-year-old daughter Sheila seems to rule the manor—hates kindergarten and wants to vacation nowhere but Ft. Lauderdale since Bob and Audrey took her there last spring.

Family trips took Marguerite Sullivan Hannon to Massachusetts, Florida, New York, Texas, and Montana for a wilderness pack trip, and Jack took the two oldest children with him on a business trip to Europe. To her usual activities, Mugs has added reading on tape for the Blind Association.

Peggy Tucker Thompson, now a part-time student in the Graduate Department of Social Work at Bryn Mawr College, looks forward to a master's degree in three years. Anne de Shazo Robertson's husband and two sons visited the Thompsons when son Scott applied for admission to Swarthmore.

Joann Walthour enjoyed Chautauqua in July and has added weaving to her busy schedule.

Added to all of the activities of two children in grade school, one in junior high and one in senior high, Martha Whaley Webster is directing the 25-member singing chorus for an annual Talent Show. The Websters divide their summers between South Carolina and Nantucket.

Helen Woods Lucas, in her fourth year as principal of Schiller School in Pittsburgh, travels weekends and summers in their truck trailing their boat. Son Vic, a junior at Grove City College, is majoring in physics.

The Drugmands (Joan Young) make trips to snow country even in a blizzard, and 6'3" David has the entire family wrapped up in basketball.

We will try to summarize the delightful Christmas letters from Ann de Shazo Robertson, Dorothy Dodworth Scullin and Marlene Shettel Stovicek.

After completing her Ph.D., Shaze is working as a clinical psychologist in a medical health center. She enjoyed a week's seminar in Dynamics of Family Communication, and a family week of skiing in Aspen. Scott, 16, skipped a year at Mercersburg Academy, bringing graduation a year early and a frantic look at colleges. Chris, 15, is completing his first year at the Hill School. Mark, 13, is in junior high, and Perry in first grade.

Dottie gave the wedding when her mother remarried in October, and in between vacation trips, figure skating and skiing she continues her art work—painting at the Summer Institute of Arts and Sciences, working in fabric and stitchery, exhibiting several times a year. One of Dottie's books is scheduled for a new edition and inclusion in an anthology.

A trip to Waikiki and Maui provided R&R for Marlene and Larry in the midst of their involvement with business and six active children. Jan is a happy freshman at Chatham, and Larry, Jr. is college-hunting. The four younger boys are engaged in all sorts of activities.

Even though they had no special news, we were glad to hear from Eleanor Colvin Wiley, Natalie Eger Novick, Jane Feiler Miller, Marlie Jaffurs, Shirley Kerchner, Patricia O'Keefe Beede, Nancy Perry Vesely, Marilyn Pfobl Donnelly, Elaine Stevenson Bolanis, Bertha Thompson Thompson and Joyce Wilde Rownd.

The Centennial Dinner was fabulous, especially when the "younger generation" (the College Choir) sang our favorite (and theirs) prize song from the Song Contest. Talk about nostalgia. Hope we didn't miss anyone but those attending were Shirley Elliott Johnston, Joan Goodwin Heckel, Mary Ellen Leigh McBride, Rosella Petraglia, Marlene Shettel Stovicek (with daughter Jan) and Joann Walthour.

Your secretaries appreciate the responses but wish there were more of them. Maddie reporting: All's well and hope to see everyone for our 20th in June, 1971. Rosella reporting: I had the thrill of introducing Europe to nephew James Francis (9). We plan a repeat performance this year. Jim is a wonderful traveling companion and just my size too.

Carla reporting:

Kay Avers Headley and family joined the camper owners this year and after a few short jaunts, they anticipate more adventuresome trips. Kay was elected president of her church women's group in December.

In August Barbara Beacham Volk and husband Dick took their older sons to Hawaii for three weeks of truck camper living. Having seen the 50th state, they thought it only fair to also see the 49th. Barb enjoyed celebrating Chatham's 100th Birthday Party with old roommates. A week of good skiing and 14 hours of sleep per day in Vail, Colorado was the perfect way to end January for the Volks.

Between the hours of 1:00 and 3:00 a.m. Sandy Blumberg Sonneborn has done a little free lance writing and has had typical beginner's luck in selling some manuscripts.

near Rochester. Sue talked by phone with Bambi MacDonald Whalen and hopes to visit Bambi in Detroit the next time her husband has a convention there.

Ann Stoebr Grupe is taking ballet lessons and is rehearsing with a local theater group for a spring production of "The King and I." She and daughter Amy Beth, 11, are in third year of Scouts; son Alan, 9, is an aspiring guitarist and drummer. Dick is with Westinghouse Tele-computer Systems Corporation and also teaches evening courses in computer sciences at Point Park College. After a fabulous trip to Las Vegas this winter in celebration of their seventeenth anniversary, the Grupes are now looking forward to a summer of sailing.

Jean Sweitzer Bower reports that they are involved with Indian Guides and Indian Princesses (whatever they may be), Civic Association and assorted family activities.

Unfortunately Elaine Vincic Berman's news was received too late to be included in last year's Recorder. They have been in their new home for almost two years now and Vinnie has become an avid gardener. The Bermans enjoyed ten days in Puerto Rico.

The real estate business, plus her "position" as architectural chairman for her townhouse development, are keeping Judy Welch Layton busy. She enjoys living in Tucson and hopes that any alums who might be in that neck of the woods will stop by and see her. Judy had a good visit with Trisha Wilkinson Bloomfield in the fall. House-hunting seems to be taking up Trisha's time . . . she hopes that one of these days they will be owners of a place near the beach. In the meantime she and Frank are planning a European vacation this summer.

With three children (12, 9 and 3), church work, teaching dramatics for the Girl Scouts, and serving as legislative chairman on the League of Women Voters board, it sounds as if Mary Carroll Williams Hofer is as busy as ever. The highlight of their year was a 3,000-mile trip in their new 22-foot trailer.

Janet Marshall Taylor, Claire McGrael Johnston, Helen Means Pounds, Shirley Myers Simcik and Holly Sherrard DeMart send greetings to all.

As for me, Diane, the status remains more or less quo. Moved into our new home on schedule and my father is now living with us. I'm currently involved with the school fair, typing stories penned by budding second-graders. Our 6th grade trumpeter player did us proud by being the only child from his school band selected for the Area Band. Carl and I spent a fun evening with John and Mary Ellen Donaghue Ploeger ('55) when they were in D.C. last spring, and I enjoyed seeing Helen Halpern Berkson and various others at a local alumnae coffee in the fall.

My thanks to all who contributed to the cause. The donation of books to the library in memory of Kay and Bridgie was the reason that we had to ask for more money this year . . . we hope the same need won't arise again for many years to come! Any and all additional contributions to the class treasury will be graciously and gratefully accepted; checks may be made payable to Chatham College Alumnae Class Account. Best to all.

Jean Dering Bleistein is working in the department of microbiology at the Medical School of Case Western Reserve University since her boys are in school full time.

A trip to California and Palm Springs was enjoyed by Phyllis Hersh Spitz and Dick.

Sally Hoffman Spangler and Jim are the directors of the "Tam O'Shanter's," the well known, all girl fife, bagpipe and drum corps. If any of you know of outstanding parades in your areas, please write to Sally—630 Cloverhill Road, Somerset, Pa. 15501.

Nancy Lutz enjoyed Chatham's 100th Birthday Party, as did Alice Berry Adams, Kay Litzenberger Merge, Nancy Eisleay Dunn and Gretchen Donaldson.

We extend sympathy to Marion Gallup Drummond in the death of her father on December 7, 1969.

Marjorie Beard Kelley, Thelma Fiori Lacerte, Lynn Hann Baxter and Barbara Logan Brown send greetings.

Jeannine English Abel, who continues her music activities by teaching private pupils, also directed a summer theater production of "The Mikado." At news time she was preparing for a trip to Moscow and Leningrad.

Elizabeth Franz Purdum, currently chairman of the Submarine Officers Wives Club, enjoyed a recent family trip to Scotland, Ireland and England.

Helen Halpern Berkson and her daughters are taking ice skating and sewing lessons, and Helen is in her third year as a Brownie leader.

Peggy Harbison Hendrickson's husband is attending the Army's Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth.

Your response to my request for news and your contributions to the class treasury are greatly appreciated. Good luck and good health to you all.

Diane reporting:

Jean Maize Kmetec's brood keeps her busy but she finds time for school, community and voting activities as well as interracial problems. The Kmetecs are gratified over Emil's new National Institute of Health grant for kidney research, particularly in light of the many government cut-backs in research.

Several of us are academically involved one way or another. Madeline Miles has been appointed to the faculty of the University of Vermont as assistant professor in the department of speech. Mary Irene Moffitt is a full-time student again—a Ph.D. candidate at Ohio State. And Alice Sedinger Domineske hopes to finish work for her master's in library science from Drexel Institute this summer. Still involved in Girl Scout work, Alice has a junior troop this year and helps with leader training.

Gloria Palmer Hadsell's husband was elected to the Bethel Park Borough Council in November and two months later was elected vice-president by his fellow councilmen. Gloria keeps busy with daughters Sidney and Heidi, being cookie chairman for a Girl Scout troop and working as a Teacher's Aide.

Susan Smith Schweitzer and family are working on plans for a year-round home to be built this spring on Lake Ontario

Jill Burnham Bowser's husband Wake teaches at Ohio State University in Columbus. Helping with Campfire Girls and Sunday School, editing a newsletter for a local human relations council, and doing volunteer work at a housing center keep Jill busy. She hears from Yvonne Brooks Saxton frequently and sees Gretchen Elchlepp Smith on each family visit back to Pittsburgh.

The high point this year for Marilyn Campbell Kahn was her theatrical debut in the school's "Faculty Follies." She has a student teacher now and wonders whether or not it is a coincidence that they are breaking in a new first grade teacher so soon after the show.

Finding the daytime peaceful with the last boy now in school is Lois Gilpin Pollock. She would welcome a visit from anyone in the area (30-40 mile radius of Philadelphia).

Marcia Glazer Arnold is busy with three daughters and part-time editorial work. They enjoyed a summer vacation at the Jersey shore, and spring trips to New York and Palm Beach after Larry's "tax season."

Pat Gordon Moore's new interest is being a leader for 26 junior Girl Scouts. She ran into Libby Graham Williams in Columbus, Ohio. Their husbands have a hobby in common, Parker Shotgun Collectors. They live less than 20 miles apart and the husbands have known each other for a long time without realizing Libby and Pat were classmates. Needless to say they had their own reunion in Columbus.

Joanne Hoy O'Rourke has been teaching art at a mental health day care center as a volunteer. She has finally resumed her studies in art, taking lessons from a sculptor, and is now associated with a gallery where she shows her bronzes and other sculptures. Joanne is purchasing, with artist friends, a former convent in Majorca, for a summer retreat and 'studio abroad.'

Our "Hello—no news" classmates include Lorraine Hixenbaugh Haas, Marie Kibler Gaertner, Molly Lenhardt Rowden and Marilyn Hill.

After sixteen years the Gauts leave the Penn Central Railroad for the challenge of the Long Island Railroad. I enjoyed my term, though brief, on the executive board of the Junior High School. Thanks to all who responded to our plea for the class treasury. If you are among those who might still like to contribute, you may send your dollar, or check made payable to Chatham Alumnae Class Account, directly to the Alumnae Office where our treasury is on deposit.

Jean reporting:

With New York City only an hour away, Pat McCormick Goodrich can visit the art museums and galleries often. Her husband is now Press Secretary at Drew University and Pat attends art classes there and in New York. She also exhibited in the Chatham Alumnae Centennial Exhibit in September.

Barbara McVicker Martin and her active family are taking up skiing and sailing. Her husband was recently elected to the local school board.

From both Joan Monahan McFalls and Nan Walker Deward comes news of their reunion last spring after 12 years, during which they spent a whole night looking over pictures of the Class of 1955 and reliving the past. Joan is finishing her second term as Junior League president. Nan is moving to Seattle after being busy in California with teaching, AAUW and school activities.

A trip to Europe and India was the news from Mary Kay Moseley Kamath. After touring Europe and attending a conference, she and Sanjiv flew to India where Mary Kay met most of her in-laws for the first time. After seeing much of India, they visited our "lost" classmate, Preema Rajan Sastri. Preema and her husband are in the process of building a new home which Preema designed. They have two sons, 9 and 12, and a daughter 11. Preema has been teaching off and on for the past 5 years.

Leslie Mulvihill Brockett writes about her work with her husband Don—cabaret reviews in the Pittsburgh area, industrial shows in New York, and a cross country tour for CBS. Don also appears on Misterogers Neighborhood, a children's TV show. At the time of writing they were preparing for a Caribbean cruise.

Another skiing family is that of Sally Seiple Tullai; also campers, with trips to Watkins Glen, Niagara Falls, Williamsburg and then Florida over the Christmas holidays.

Marianne Thorne Wright has been doing substitute teaching and is planning a trip to London in June to visit her sister and family. They also plan to visit Germany.

Getting used to the title of Dr. Fredette is Barbara Wagner Fredette. She received her doctoral degree in April and is on the faculty of the Department of Art Education at the University of Pittsburgh. Currently Babs is nursing a broken leg and managing to keep her teaching schedule on crutches.

B. J. Woods Goodwin is working with her husband renting a new 200-unit apartment building. To bridge the generation gap the Goodwins have taken up skiing. B. J. hears from Dotty Erdley Goetz who lives in Upper St. Clair, Babs Freas Cole who is now the Colonel's Lady in Oklahoma, and Reggie McDonough O'Rourke, all associates of our class.

Marjorie Mounts Hartz now knows how her parents felt when she was learning to drive since her oldest daughter has started driving.

After 12 weeks of student teaching 5th grade in the inner city, Ann Cohen Winkelman received her B.A. in elementary education from American University, January 1970.

Greetings to the class were sent from Nancy Lee Rdesinski, Ruth Oberheim Webb, Marion Sweeney Guthrie, Mary Jo Settino and Mary Kay Sanner Hooper who are all busy with family, jobs, etc.

The Rhodes attended the gala Chatham 100th Birthday Party and saw a few of the Class of '55 there, among them Sally Beck Lee and Winifred Dickinson. It was a large group and there may have been others we didn't see. It was a great party—sorry you all weren't there. Once again last summer the seashore beckoned and we were off to New Jersey with a stop at the Gaut's who showed us some more of the sights of Philadelphia. For the past few months I have been working part time and I recommend it as a cure for 'cabin fever.'

Many thanks to all for the tremendous response to the questionnaire this year.

Your new secretaries are delighted to hear from you and hope even more of you will respond next year.

Long lost news from Grace Cherry King includes working as a physical therapist for the Veterans Administration for ten years, and now retiring to enjoy being a housewife and mother.

Dottie Devine Agnew kept busy this year tutoring in algebra, and working with Dolores Cooper O'Neill who is Directress of the ABC Nursery School. Dottie's four children are delighted with their new brother.

Dorothy Dieckman Harman enjoyed a vacation in Florida with Dick and Rosalie Stern Wolfe. Rosalie also reported a wonderful camping trip across the country with the family and a trip to Mexico. Dick was promoted to Manager of Operations and Manufacturing for Luria Bras.

Exciting news from Mary Elliott Donaldson is their adoption of a Korean-American daughter. She speaks glowingly of the happiness this has brought them and their four children.

We are thrilled to report Polly Fleming Wharram's marriage and the publishing of her father's novel which was read on the BBC. A movie option has been signed and Peter Sellers has expressed an interest. Don and Polly spent Christmas in the U.S. visiting family.

Jenny Lou Dunlap Blackmore and Nancy Gellman Rubenstein are both busy with many activities. Nancy is co-chairman of the 1970 Montefiore Hospital Ball and exchanged visits with Barbara Fineshreiber Adler and her family.

We are happy to hear of Kathy Iannuzzo's marriage to Joseph Charles Wasserman, a teacher of mathematics and social studies.

News of other husbands includes Marlene Valentine Daugherty's husband who is now Director of Personnel for IBM; Nancy Kingham Gardiner's husband is Houston Branch Manager of Armstrong Contracting and Supply Corporation; and Jean McIlwraith McCally's husband is an environmental physiologist. Jean is working on an M.S. in guidance counseling at Wright State University.

Ginny Ladish Angulo extends her usual invitation to her classmates to visit her in Bogota.

Sally Schmidt Gregerson is back in the U.S. after two years in Heidelberg, Germany. Bill is in Vietnam where he is the Provost Marshal of the 25th Division. On his return they expect to be in Washington, D.C. for four years. Sally keeps busy with her sons, Red Cross work, president of the area "Waiting Wives," and had a wonderful week in Hawaii on Bill's R&R. She was honored to be a nominee for Army Wife of the Year in her area.

Thanks to Lynn Wilner Hawker and Claudette Smith Cooper ('58) we received a copy of Tee Speerhas O'Connor's Christmas letter from Germany. We wish we could share with all of you the lively report of children, family activities, their 12-day, 2,500-mile trip covering France and Italy in April, and two weeks at the beach in Spain during the summer.

Rhoda Weitsman David reports an enjoyable trip to Toronto with her family and is hoping to get together with Barbara Sickles Bernstein ('58), also of Great Neck.

Lynn Wilner Hawker tells of entering an exciting period—having a teen-age daughter. Lynn and Wally have started a "Hot Line for Teens" where teens call their problems and the Hawkers and other volunteers help them to clarify their problems and work toward their own solutions.

Nan Feldman Gross sends greetings and news that her husband is assistant manager for Connecticut Life Insurance Co.

Mary McNaughton Belcher is busy with her four children, giving music lessons, and doing church and symphony work. Her husband has been promoted to manager in the brokerage section for International Multi-Foods and they will be leaving Cincinnati for Minneapolis.

Caring for three children and serving as president of the Dix Hills Chapter of Women's American ORT keeps Barbara Baker Kreindler busy.

Loving small town life is Jackie Miller VanDoren who sends regards to all and welcomes anyone passing nearby to visit.

Mildred Schulte Pastor and Eleanor Skinner Wainwright are enjoying their new homes. Eleanor's is near Lake Michigan with swimming in the summer and ice skating and sledding in the winter. Her husband is now acting chairman of the Department of Religious Studies at the University of Wisconsin.

Sheila Stevens Otto says she is "puttering around at Toledo University in the Graduate School of Education."

Nancy Teeters Bunce had the most news:—being named to "Who's-Who—Outstanding Young (18-35) Women of America—1970;" being a successful artist in commercial work; and finishing the illustrating of her first book, "Hi-Fashion Sewing and Tailoring" written by Helen S. Jones of Denver, Colorado and published early 1970. Nancy sent a copy of her clever business advertising along with her news.

Nancy Kasper Nixon and Rick enjoyed vacationing with friends in Europe and recalling her stay in Germany twelve years ago. Nancy's witty letter spoke of the traveler's lament, "We took too many clothes, ate too much, spent too much money, and loved every minute of it."

Alice McGee Collins, Carver and the children moved into an old ten-room house in August in which they have started the do-it-yourself fix up. Alice continues to lead a book discussion group for the Wilkes College Faculty Women's Association. Last fall she drove a 150-mile round trip each Friday to attend the Moravian Theological Seminary where she is preparing for the Presbyterian ministry.

Carol Grim LeClere and family are back at their house in Michigan but will be going back to Marblehead in September. The kids are "getting too big too fast," and Carol is busy as a substitute teacher.

Mary Killen Cochran received a copy of Dr. Edgar Foltin's, (Head of Psychology Department in 1957, now Professor Emeritus), article on Crystal Gazing published in the Journal of Psychology. The testing was done over an eighteen-year period both at William & Mary and at Chatham. Mary, Nancy Kingham Gardiner and others did this type of research in their tutorials.

Our sympathy to Tee Speerhas O'Connor, Nancy Teeters Bunce and Rhoda Weitsman David on the deaths of their fathers.

No special news but replies and greetings from Patricia Alogna Reiss, Nancy Cannon Cocke, Barbara Johnston Tredennick, Jane Pattie Vyssotsky and Barbara Madson Shannon.

The Kamins report a wonderful Christmas trip to Miami with our two daughters. Marvin and I took a short jaunt to Los Angeles and were entertained royally by Jim and Jan Goldman Coppersmith and their adorable son Scott. Jan's husband is vice president and general sales manager of Metro Media Television in L.A. From the Chernews, our news includes a new son and the first Recorder in five years in which we are not reporting a new address.

DEATH

Judith Perry Chaplin, October 1969

In memory of our classmate Judith Chaplin, the Class of 1959 has made a donation to the Chatham College Library. In her note of appreciation, Judith's mother wrote, "This gift to the Library would have pleased Judith as she loved books, and after losing her vision continued reading constantly in Braille. Mr. Chaplin and I thank the Class of 1959."

Debbie reporting:

Elaine Bloom Greenberger, knowing how I must feel waiting for replies, answered by return mail and squeezed an awful lot of news onto one tiny postcard. In addition to moving into a larger home in Mt. Lebanon, she and Elliot opened their second store, "The Cheeseboard," in the new Monroeville Mall. Elaine was co-chairman of a highly successful series of gourmet cooking classes, "Creative Cuisine," at the South Hills Village Auditorium. She has also been working full time as a chauffeur for piano lessons, football, tennis and basketball for her sports-crazy sons.

Only good news this year from Judy Davis Levitan, the very best being the adoption of Katy. If she can get herself organized by next fall, Judy hopes to begin Library School. In the meantime she and Mark are renovating their house and considering a second dog to exercise their lazy St. Bernard. None of them can do it.

Marty Jo Campbell Lane writes from Hartford that she can just about keep up with her five children, two of whom arrived since she last reported two years ago. Outside of the rigors of baby care, they try to squeeze in some trips to the ocean. During the summer of '68 Cal went to England on a research grant.

Myrna Deaktor Prince reports a hectic year—chasing after Jon, 3, and Alyssa, 1, a trip to London and Paris in the summer, and a winter trip to Jamaica. She thoroughly enjoyed the reunion, especially participating in the entertainment.

Ruth Cooper Huber says that "life is magnificent" with 3-year-old Heidi, an assorted menagerie, and "losing nearly 20 pounds." She hopes that her wonderful, if sometimes delirious, feelings abound for her classmates, too.

By telephone I discovered that Maria Diniaco Passodelis is decorating her new house, and is somewhat excited about a forthcoming trip to Rome. Also via the Bell System, I found that Cookie Hourvitz Klein is decorating her new "old" house, and working for her master's in education. Cookie reports seeing Phyllis Crawford Mullin, Carol Glass Gottlieb and Shappy Shapiro Stein. They are all neighbors and live fairly close to the Chatham campus.

After 8 moves in 5 years, we Bernsteins have lived in the same house for over three years. I even plant perennials now! Used to be, we weren't around long enough to see the annuals come up. Daughters Beth, in second grade, and Paula, in kindergarten, love the doll house I built for them (really for myself). Now I am building the furniture—fourposter canopied bed, Hepplewhite style secretary, Boston rocker, velvet wingback couch, and many more all scaled to fit the 4" Kiddie dolls. I'm still working (professionally, that is) several times a week, and helping Alan with his sideline business "The Pittsburgh Ice Company." It was wonderful hearing from all who did write or phone. I hope more will respond next year.

Sue reporting:

Lynn Hughes Mayer is busy with Girl Scouts, church, and a community group called FISH.

Diana Montgomery Montgomery's husband Dick is still working for his Ph.D. in chemistry at Pitt. Their three-year-old son Ian, sewing, needlework, knitting, and an occasional lecture at Chatham keep Diana busy.

Elly Roeger Nyhus says that all of Rio is in high gear and they are enjoying South America. She and Paul recently had a three-week fling without their three children in Argentina.

Lois Shook Becker's fame as an artist continues to grow and she's considering a move this summer to New York City.

Marie Smith Smith finds the Washington, D.C. area impressive. She has never been so busy, playing organ for her church, having many private piano students, and recently becoming president of the Potomac Welcome Wagon Newcomer's Club. Marie and Cinnie Berry Vanda keep in touch.

Danna Vance Mitchell took a month and traveled cross-country last summer, with a week in Mexico City the highlight. In the below zero weather of her Syracuse home, Danna has learned to ski.

Sandy Wagner Gross humorously asserts that their home, mortgage, and two sons qualify them for "silent majority" status, except that she is active in the Evanston League of Women Voters.

The Croels and our three youngsters are trying out luxury apartment living in the Chicago area. While in Detroit we were foster parents for babies, and recently completed an interracial adoption.

Ruth Fingeret Weiss found it necessary to resign as class secretary late in January. In view of the fact that the class will be electing new secretaries at reunion on June 6, it was decided not to seek a replacement for Ruth at this time. Instead, her section of the class was solicited for news by the alumnae office and Ruth Swisshelm's report follows.

Judith Allan Mitchel, busy rearing three children (5, 2, 20 months), has amassed 21 credits toward her M.Ed. in English and secondary school education. She and Barry "drank in culture and polluted air" on a winter vacation in New York City.

Robin Askin DeKleine, while in Pittsburgh in October for Carnegie-Mellon Homecoming, heard the Chatham Choir in Honegger's King David. "Beautiful!" she says. An early Saturday morning visit to Chatham found the campus deserted but lovely.

Angie Blumberg Levenstein is leading Family Life Education Groups, a part-time job for United Charities of Chicago, and is the Chatham Club alumnae representative to the Women's College Board of Chicago. Nick, 2½, and house painting take up the rest of her time.

Marianne Byrn Caple and Mary Jennings Quickel saw each other several times before Mary moved to North Carolina—they had the same obstetrician at Emory University Hospital. The Caples love Atlanta but may be making their "annual spring migration to who knows where." A solid week of rain made a complete disaster of their vacation in Michigan.

Harriette Cohen Turndorf writes, "No. news. Just please say hello to everyone for me."

Jim and Barbara Easton Marks enjoy living in Annapolis, their new home in Winchester-on-the-Severn, three boats, and especially their three-year-old daughter Kristine. They hope to have a baby brother for her this year when the adoption process has been completed. Barbara is taking a graduate course and is teaching first grade, the latter requiring a considerable amount of adjustment after having taught at the junior high level.

Marilyn Eckert Winters mentioned pleasant summer visits with the Tomalins (Sharon Norton) and the Springers (Ginny Long), their mid-February move to their new home in Detroit, and involvement with the March of Dimes and church choir. Michael, 5-plus, is in kindergarten, and Holly, 3½, has recovered from a bout with rheumatoid arthritis.

Susan Childs Matheson spent five weeks in Italy, Switzerland and Yugoslavia, partly business for Jim, all pleasure for Sue. The youngest of their three children is now in nursery school. Sue enjoyed meeting other alumnae at a Chatham get-together in San Francisco last spring.

Jan reporting:

Sue Engel Golden and Phil enjoyed a two-week trip to Florida last year. This winter Sue divided her time between family, PTA and Randallstown Jaycee activities, as well as helping Phil with his tanks of tropical fish.

Eila Foster Amdur and Dave also visited Florida last year. Eila is the second grade team leader in a very new, progressive school. She is taking a pie and pastry course, is involved in projects in the school system, and finds that she and Dave have become active participants (including marching in the Moratorium) now that they are in the Washington area.

Karlana Glemser Warnock and Fred went on a week's sailing cruise of the Chesapeake last June and in August toured the southwest. They moved into their new house in April.

Mary Booth Fasset Roberts continues to be active in church, Junior League and community affairs in Elmira as well as being a housewife and a mother to her two daughters.

While attending medical meetings in Chicago last year with Ken, Mary Jennings Quickel visited with Angie Levenstein. The Quickels had a lovely trip to San Juan when Ken was sent by the Public Health Service to investigate an epidemic. Ken has one-and-one-half years to go to complete his training in internal medicine.

Suzanne Jessop McGowan and Jon have finally found a place to park the four small, sporty cars they have in Northfield.

They bought a barn—one which just happens to have with it a house which, according to "Jess", "... is 158 years old—built in 1812—and in marvelous condition, besides just oozing character and charm."

I (Jan) have been dabbling in ceramics this year and editing the PTA Bulletin of the elementary school which two of our three boys attend. Last August Morty and I took the boys for a delightful vacation to Montauk, on the eastern tip of Long Island.

Dottie reporting:

Collecting "the news across the nation" was my privilege again this year, although I am hopeful that one of you will be elected to that job at our reunion this June. Our first foster baby "arrived" in April at five pounds and nine days. Scottie is still with us, and when he is adopted we will certainly miss him. This has been quite an experience for us and our 3-year-old Karl. Marshall and I are "over-active" in our Sunday School and Church activities. I enjoy being in the classroom and participating in the curriculum planning that is involved. I also joined the Southwestern Butler County Women's Club. Marshall, as a member of Pittsburgh National Bank's Computer Time-Sharing Team makes many "calls" to universities; I've been fortunate enough to make some with him—so who knows who I might visit. See you at the June festivities and thank you for those cards and letters.

Paula Keizler Cramer, with both children in a Montessori School, and with one of them approaching first grade, says she is re-thinking the fundamentals of the educational system. She is also working with the League of Women Voters, International Visitors and studying the philosophy of art at the Barnes Foundation, the home of a world-renowned art collection.

Also taking courses is Jacqueline Nadolny Rosenberger. She is keeping up with husband Karl who has been appointed treasurer of On-Line Systems Incorporated, a computer time-sharing company. The Rosenbergers have a tele-type terminal at home so Jackie took a basic computer programming course and a fun course in arts and crafts. Jackie adds, "and as you well know, little boys (like her Scottie, 2) can keep you busy."

Another alum busy working with children, but in another way, is Barbara Levine who is doing psychiatric social work in a Child Guidance Clinic in New York.

Alma Jones Gadd (Libby) is also working with children, but as a volunteer with delinquent boys. Libby says, "It has really opened my eyes and my heart." She took a six-week course in handicrafts, and saw her Jenny take that big step into kindergarten, while Scott, her 3-year-old, watches Sesame Street at home (as do many of our pre-schoolers). For Libby's husband it was a year of "the dream come true." Ross is now co-pilot for a Pittsburgh corporation. Libby looks forward, as we all do, to springtime and our reunion.

From London, England Joan Levine Gilder writes to us of her husband's new position as chairman of the board of Kaye-Gibson, the largest greeting card company in England. David is nursery school age and since Joan is at home most often, she would welcome a visit from Chathamites.

Also from far away, Mary Louise Kaylor Maurey sends "a fond hello." The Maurys have moved again, this time to Alaska where they are stationed at Elmendorf Air Force Base in Anchorage. Here they plan to travel the few roads that exist in Alaska, camp and fish. Mary Lou says she hates to miss the reunion—we'll miss her, too.

Finally official, Shirley Lewis Minner's husband Gene received his doctorate from Purdue University and accepted a job with the NASA Lewis Research Center in Cleveland where the Minners have bought a home.

Busy and happy with her little boy is Carol Lemke Keil. Jackie's arrival has made life quite different from her studies at John's Hopkins and teaching. Elmer is an engineer at Westinghouse. The Keils are looking forward to a trip to Pittsburgh for the reunion.

One who delights in her indoor handicraft activities and in her outdoor activities of riding and training her horse is Frances Keenan Bonfigli. Fran wrote to us from the studyhall in school where she is teaching developmental reading. Her third-grader, Paul, is a ski buff. John, her husband, has become Director of Social Services and Program Planning at Somerset State Hospital. Last year he received his second master's degree, this one in public health hygiene which will soon lead to a doctorate in social work for John. Fran had a good time at the 100th Birthday Dinner and chatted with Kay McLaughlin Elder and Arlene Sinkus Lewis and their husbands and with Mr. and Mrs. Evanson.

One of our creative classmates, Donna Lange, was "published" last May when Carnegie Magazine of Pittsburgh carried her story on summer theatres in the Pittsburgh area. Donna's regular duties are writing entertainment articles for Valley Independent, the Monessen newspaper. Here's a sample of Donna's prose. "My big news is a vacation to Europe last September. I couldn't ignore the theatre; I saw the famed Abby Players in Dublin and a production of Oliver Goldsmith's She Stoops to Conquer in London; of course I sent back articles to the newspaper. My trip included most of the southern and western sections of Ireland—by car. In Ireland I found some charming ancestral haunts, even managed to kiss the Blarney Stone, which isn't easy to do, in Blarney Castle. Then I moved on to Edinburgh, London, Munich, a corner of Austria, loved the antiquities of Rome nestled right among the bustling modern city, hated the traffic jams in Paris. My only problem this year is to find a vacation that will even come close to last year's."

Sally reporting:

Reunion plans are keeping Jean Thonen Nickel and Arlene Sinkus Lewis busy this year. Arlene points out that the reunion system was changed so that '61's official "tenth" reunion is not in 1971, but this year. Jean is chairman of our class reunion and hopes for a great turnout on June 6th. Her daughter Kathy started nursery school last fall, but Nicky is still at home to "help" his mother with reunion plans. Arlene worked on the Centennial Birthday Dinner held in November; she also reports having visited Sue Jessop McGowan and Anne Putnam Mallinson.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Mary Sendek Jakabscin on the death of her father last June. Also our congratulations on the birth of their third son, John, and for Jake's promotion to Assistant Controller of the May Company Department stores in Youngstown, Ohio.

Betsy Waite vacationed in New England and saw "everything historical and hysterical!" She heard from Sirkka Manilla Orhanen (exchange student from Finland our sophomore year), who is teaching English and finds American telecasts an incentive for students to learn.

The grand traveller this year was Anne Putnam Mallison, who spent two months in Europe with Bill's parents last summer. Bill was with them for a month and they sailed over on the Queen Elizabeth II—visited Belgium, The Netherlands, Germany, Paris, England, Scotland, and Wales, and returned to New York on The France.

According to Sue Smith Balika, the Mallinsons also "spent a lot of time with us and our pile of lumber, nails, and sawdust" where the Balikas are building a weekend home in the Pennsylvania mountains near the Mallinson's home. Sue keeps busy with church activities and handwork for the Community Christmas Shop, plus keeping up with three lively children.

Greetings come from Sharon Norton Tomalin and Joyce Teegardin. Joyce says she hopes to see many at the reunion as "there is a lot of catching up to do."

Besides getting ready to "move family and fix up new abode," Judy Rubenstein Rubinstein has been learning Hebrew and is participating in a local "Project Understanding" sponsored by the Catholic Diocese. Her husband was elected vice president of the Mon-Yough Chamber of Commerce. Judy also reports having seen Angie Blumberg Levenstein in Chicago in the fall.

Brenda Purdon Stober's husband Bob is active in the Jaycees and has completed the Advanced Study Program at the American Institute of Banking. Daughter Elizabeth started school this year and her two-year-old brother "would love to get on the bus and go along!" The Stebers vacationed in Atlanta and Colonial Williamsburg.

Barb Pings Rawley and family toured eastern Canada and New England last summer and are talking about a southern tour for this summer. "Living in Iowa this winter has been like living in a deep freeze," she says, "even too cold for sledding and skating, but don't think we didn't try!" Wayne is now head of the circulation department of the University of Iowa Library, and Barb is back in school this term with two elementary education courses as a start toward a certificate.

Also back in school is Carroll "Sam" Spelke Smaltz, taking courses in journalism at California State College at Los Angeles. Sam's husband and three other attorneys recently formed their own firm. Their two eldest daughters, Connie and Carrie, are on the swim team and 3-year-old Jennifer is also an avid swimmer.

Here are a few highlights from Marylou Quern's letter. It was mailed from the Philippines where she was flying MAC (military) charter flights to Guam, Ben Hoa, South Vietnam and Bangkok. After what she termed a "vacation" assignment, she had some regrets about having to return to New York in March. Last summer she flew as purser on MAK flights between the West Coast and Honolulu. A real vacation in December took her to Copenhagen, Vienna and Garmisch, Germany (for skiing). During the Christmas rush she was on the New York-San Juan run—6 flights in 8½ days. Marylou's letter certainly indicated that she enjoys her work!

And I am looking forward to seeing Sam when we are in Pasadena this summer. We plan to spend a month there and at Newport Beach with Bill's family. I finally resurrected my flute and have been playing in the Flint Civic Orchestra, and the Mott Ensemble, a quintet that gives "mini-concerts" and introductions to the instruments in all the elementary schools in Flint—a "job" that has suddenly made me a "professional" flutist! In addition to his usual courses at the college, Bill has been teaching a special class of disadvantaged students, and finds them among the most creative students he has ever taught. And we are continually entertained and exhausted by our little 1½-year-old, Mary. We do hope to be in Pittsburgh on June 6th for the reunion and I hope to see many of you there. Thank you all who replied with news. I always enjoy hearing from you.

Jane reporting:

Wouldn't it be great to see the bodies that these names in italics represent? As many of you may know, we're to have a joint reunion this June with the classes of 1960, 1961, and 1962. Just think about it—haven't enough years passed without our getting together? Give it some real serious thought, won'tcha?

The topic of the winter here in Pittsburgh has been the "potholes" in all the streets, driving into which very nearly approximates the journey to the center of the earth! These are apparently the result of all the snow and bitter cold which Jan Carver King and George admit to having brought with them from New Hampshire. They're back in Pittsburgh, where he's a medical engineer for Westinghouse, and she's to have her turn at her master's degree in bio-technology at Carnegie Mellon.

Although she claims no credit for the snow, it may also be significant that Pat Burda Sliwinski and family have returned to Pittsburgh from Alaska. Stan has taken a 3-year residency in ophthalmology at Montefiore Hospital. Par is glad to be home but occasionally longs for some of the complete solitude she could have a half mile from home in Juneau.

Sudy Bullock Bell and Mary Ann Conti Sheline have undertaken home decorating projects during the year, both apparently successes, although Sudy states that Suburbia "isn't really my bag." In addition to her girls who are 4½ and 3, she rides herd over a pregnant calico cat, a German shepherd, and a 7th grade Sunday School class. Mary Ann's new home and Erik keep her hopping, but she does miss teaching and has had thoughts about a part-time job. Husband Jim has received his master's degree in the Graduate School of Industrial Administration at Carnegie-Mellon and is now a corporate development analyst for Rockwell Manufacturing Company.

Meg Alexander Sprenkle, Skip, and their two daughters are also in a new rural home in Rhinebeck, New York. She is currently taking an adult education course in data processing.

Betty Bennett Morrow is still in the midwest, as Mel is a graduate assistant in computer science at Iowa State. Betty has been active in the League of Women Voters and several community action groups, working in the areas of housing, education, and job training for low-income people.

International travel has been the name of the game for some, and a mini-reunion took place in London last summer with Margie Connor and Sue Bradley, from this side, having a great visit with Ba Norris Missen and Luli Davis Wareing, as a side junket of their travels through Spain and Italy. Sue has been working as assistant to the first woman president of a New York Stock Exchange member firm, running the Boston office. Her marriage in April to Mac Trayser, treasurer and a director of a New York brokerage firm, will call down the curtains on this job, at which time they will settle in New York.

Margie, stateside, is still teaching in a ghetto school but is now concentrating on emotionally disturbed children, which she prefers to teaching a regular class. She's started a second master's degree in this specialty at Brooklyn College and hopes next year to teach in a hospital school, where the degree of disturbance is even greater.

Judy Adler Elitzky and husband Nate spent a couple of weeks in Israel last winter, and since then have been putting the finishing touches on a home which Nate is building himself. They plan to occupy it around April first, along with their Halloween baby, Susan Ellen.

Your reporter, Jane Alexander Givens, had her first trip abroad last summer, with the emphasis on Teheran, Iran, plus a few days in Frankfurt and Heidelberg, Germany, on the way home. The Iranian portion of the trip was far and away one of the most unique experiences I've ever had, and I've mentally revisited the mosques, the covered bazaars, and the stark mountains and deserts many times. I had the distinct advantage of staying with an aunt who has lived there for twenty years and knows the language, the country, the culture, and many people, so I saw Iran in a way few tourists ever have the opportunity to do.

In closing, good people, please don't just pass off my mention of the reunion without some consideration. Why shouldn't this be the year?

Fender reporting:

Each year, as Chatham College unfortunately becomes more and more a part of our past, the responses to my questionnaire become more meager. I do hope that next year each one will take a moment to let us know that you're still alive.

Annette Frank Fisch, husband Nathan and daughter Debbie, age 5, have led an exciting and full life. Annette received her M.A. degree in Mediterranean Studies from Brandeis University. She was teaching history full time in Brooklyn, but is now only subbing. The Fisch's report a wonderful summer in England and France last year.

Bonnie George Switzer is kept occupied with her second child, a sister to Brian. Husband Bob is an assistant professor of biochemistry at the University of Illinois and they are looking forward to moving into their new home on July first. Bonnie is taking pottery lessons at the University. And, small world again, Mary Cook Guy lives two blocks away. Looks like Urbana might be a worthwhile place to visit!

Susan Hunt Roose is also the mother of two, Debbie and newly born David, but this doesn't seem to deter Sue, as her comps for her M.A. were scheduled for March. Husband Jack is working as assistant director for the Water Resources Council, an independent government agency. Sue and Jack returned to Pittsburgh in November for the Centennial Dinner and while there saw Sue Uptegraff Endersbe, '64, and her husband Rob.

Nan Hall Lombardi and Joe have bought another charming New York City period home, this time an old carriage house on Sniffen Court which they are completely renovating on the inside while maintaining the historical exterior. Joe's profession is the renovation of brownstones all over New York City and Brooklyn Heights, and those of us in the New York area know this is The Thing. Nan, mother of two boys, has begun to design and execute her own needle point things. She'd love to see any '63-ers in New York City.

Three cheers to Mickey Kammerman Kurzbard for getting her law degree at George Washington University, and for passing the bar exam. Mickey is working full time at the Trademark Division of the Patent Office. Husband Steve has his own radiology practice in Washington. Mickey sees Barbara Moore Smith quite often (she went to Chatham her first two years).

Sue Herb Reichard and husband George have made their second move in a year. George has returned to Bell Telephone Labs in Indianapolis. Busy year for them—move across country, a new house and a new baby, second girl born a month early. Luckily they had a week in Puerto Rico before all of this. Sue reports seeing Carol Pike Maynard and Al, Sue Rockwell Coen, and Jan Skeloski Matey and John.

Patti Dobyen Lupton, Baker, and the "Three Rebels" sound as lively as ever and Patti more and more a Southerner herself. Patti is active in the Red Cross, Junior Women's Club, P.T.A. and the Republican Party. Baker received his master of commerce degree from the University of Richmond, and the entire family turned out for the ceremony.

Bobby Fellabom Emerick is working "in a leisurely fashion" at Lehigh University for an M.A. in Latin American history. She went to a "mini reunion" at the home of Judy Paulsen Webb where she also saw Patti Burda Sliwinski and Ronnie Kotulak Benson.

Nancy Fleming Demoise says "HI" from her new home of Atlanta. And, it was terrific to hear from Rachel Gore Johnson who, busy with her ever-growing twins, has also volunteered to solicit for the Centennial Fund drive in Pittsburgh.

As anticipated, Sheila Grobe Rossbach's letter from Germany was a delight which I shared with Sally Mercke while she was visiting me. Life goes on in their Frankfurt suburb where Sheila is still working at the U.S. Air Force Child Guidance Clinic, actively engaged in private practice, and, to quote, "ever more involved in Sigmund Freud Psychoanalytic Institute in Frankfurt." Wow! And, is fine, busy with his law practice and golf. And, lots of travel for them both—Vienna, Rome, Spain, mixing pleasure with International Psychoanalytic Conferences. I suggest a trip to Wiesbaden to get the full story.

Yours truly spent the fall on business at the London office of Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York. While there, I spent a delightful evening with Luli Davis Wareing and Guy at their lovely home in Kensington. Luli is on the go all day with her volunteer jobs for various needy London organizations; and by night, lots of entertaining. I plan to attend Susan Bradley's April wedding in Boston, and hope to see other '63-ers there.

A special plea: we are having a RE-UNION this June. Let's all make a special effort to attend. See you all in June!

Marty reporting:

There is reason to suspect that the Pony Express is on strike, so few of you responded, but I was delighted to hear from those who did. It seems the one thing most of us have in common pertains to new homes or apartments, or plans to build in the near future.

Sue Hill Warner wrote as soon as she brought their new son home from the hospital. Two-year-old Amy is as excited about him as the proud parents are. The Warners, presently in North Carolina where architect Edward is working on some buildings, will soon return to Raleigh where they hope to build by next fall.

Barbara Kessel Bloxson has moved to a large apartment, and although a part-time job before Christmas was interesting, it wasn't enough to drag her away on a permanent basis from 2-year-old Jennifer. Ray is now an assistant city attorney for Topeka and also has his own practice.

The past year has been exciting for Veronica Kotulak Benson, with three young children, a new home as of last July, and the opportunity to take a few short trips since Dick received his commercial pilot's license in December.

Judy Launer Palkovitz writes that after a few weeks of traveling around the Northeast following the completion of Harry's neurology residency, they have started their two-year stint in the Air Force, presently stationed at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. Judy and daughter Sharon spent a week with Barbara Shullman Young in Ann Arbor, and in the fall she was busy furnishing their town house.

Another traveler was Lois McCune Flowers, with trips to Pittsburgh, Montreal and northeastern United States, and a week in San Francisco highlighted by the worst earthquake in twelve years while Lois and Jim were in the Opera House. Lois has been a library analyst for Miami Dade Junior College since last April.

The major portion of Margot Myers Clark's time is spent with Alexis, 3, and Mark, 1, but she finds time for community social work, and, with Woody, is working on a Community Human Relations Council.

The Thaelers didn't go anywhere to speak of last year, since our "vacation" began a week after Karen was born. I have observed that two small kids are more than twice the work of one, and that having one doesn't necessarily make you an expert with number two, with the possible exception of changing diapers. We moved to our new home last April, and still have much to do before it is completed. We have become snowmobile fans (too chicken to ski, I suppose), and this winter has been perfect for it—102 inches of snow by the middle of December, and who knows how much since. Thanks to all of you who answered my rather hasty plea for news.

Nancy reporting:

Sue Rockwell Coen writes that this Christmas was a happy one—Jim, Sue and the children, Timmy and Jenny, were all together back at Westover Air Force Base.

A continuing interest in Chatham keeps Ann Niedermeyer Fox and Judy Paulsen Webb up to date and excited about what's happening at the top of Woodland Road. Ann and Al packed up the family (four children including 6-week-old Rebecca) for their 7th Annual August in Rehoboth, Delaware. "This year," Ann writes, "I'm the community representative of our A.A.U.W. group, attending lectures at Chatham, and going to School Board meetings." Judy reports that things are changing at Chatham. At a Mt. Lebanon Alumnae meeting, she learned that under consideration are coeducation, dropping the old Basic Curriculum, eliminating the Chaplaincy—to name a few. "Would we have cared or dared?" asks Judy.

It was good to hear from Pinky Rosen Lebovitz and to catch up with all her happy news. Pinky and Bob, an attorney-at-law, have three children—Stephen 5, Richard 2, and Ellen—only 8 days old as Pinky sent in her Recorder questionnaire! They've been in their new home now for almost 2 years, and to quote Pinky, "We couldn't be happier."

Helen Roesing Monroe writes, "Still working on sculpture commissions and pottery in my studio, teaching art in Chicago's South Side Beverly Art Center, and substituting in the nearby schools." In between time, she has managed to decorate and up-date their marvelous old house. The Monroes are looking forward to traveling east this spring, and sailing this summer.

Betsy Phelps Tucker and husband Tuck were off to Hawaii as she wrote, "for a little R&R after my mother's recent death." Last summer, the Tuckers went on a safari to Kenya and came home via Rio and Trinidad. Betsy is still teaching art part time.

Diane Phillips called me as she was leaving Washington for a well-earned vacation with brother Barry and family in London. She's still working in D.C. and describes the hectic political life as "fantastic!"

Sandy Rossio Molinaroli is still busy with their new house, and Mary Riley Smith is busy with their new apartment in New York. Tony is working at the U.N. and son Joshua is thriving. Bobbie Laiken Funkenstein announces that she's "retired" after the birth of Sue Ann. Dan is a resident in psychiatry at Stanford.

Carol Pike Maynard is enjoying her life of leisure and lots of new friends after quitting work, moving into a new house, and having baby Edwin all within 8 weeks.

I've moved back to Westchester for some trees and grass (the green kind). The problems of city living were closing in after seven years, and it is nice to see white snow again! New job, too, writing for The Conde Nast Publications. The switch from travel to fashion is very stimulating and I love it. Have a good year.

Gail reporting:

Travel and moving played its part in this section of the class. Debbie Wolowitz Cowan reports a move coming up this spring (hopefully to a nicer climate) now that husband Dale passed his boards in internal medicine. In the meantime Debbie keeps busy working part time in housing for the Integrated Communities of Shaker Heights. Their goal is to create and maintain integrated neighborhoods in this Cleveland suburb. The rest of Debbie's time is occupied caring for house, spouse, and daughter Rachel.

A delightful note from Dianne Rubin Newman informs us that she has learned to write in Yiddish and Hieroglyphics—quite a combination of languages—and is still very active as grad student, skier, and organization lady. There must be something in that Ohio atmosphere!

Betsy Snyder Cottingham's note sounded rather breathless, the Cottingtons having just returned from a trip to Jamaica. Lucky Betsy! Barb Shullman Young seems to be collecting things: "two kids, a collie (named Lassie, of course), a station wagon, a house that is really never complete—oh yes, two gerbils, two frogs, a turtle and some fish." Son Joel is in nursery school and daughter Jody is walking. Her hands aren't full—they're overflowing!

We welcome Billie Jeanne Walcutt Burg as a new associate member. She was married in 1962 to Dr. Robert Burg, a dentist, and divides her time between Bob, daughter Betsy and being assistant professor of behavioral science at the University of South Florida. Billie Jeanne received her master's in rehabilitation counseling in 1964 from University of Florida. It's nice to hear from a long-lost classmate after all these years.

Caroline Whaley Thibault's husband Albert joined the Foreign Service in June. After a brief stay in Washington, where she saw Judy Strain Barton and Mickey Kammerman Kurzbard, Caroline and Albert left for two years in Conakry, Guinea. Her "lovely villa on the Atlantic, servants and all the necessities of living in 'high style'" really make one envision a dream fantasy. The Thibaults have become very fond of Africa already, and their stay in Conakry should be a most fascinating one. Caroline is an elementary teacher in an American school with thirty-five students and three teachers. She describes it as "the closest to non-graded education she's ever seen, with English being the second language for most."

Having sold her house in Germantown and given up her general practice, Louise Sonnenberg is back to being a full-time second year psychiatric resident. She plans to continue or finish her training in Philadelphia, but was not sure just where. She sounded very energetic, which in itself is a feat for today's physicians.

Judy Strain Barton's 3-year-old Jennifer has accepted her new brother happily, and Richard is Staff Director of the Subcommittee on Position Classification for the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee and becoming quite involved in state and local politics.

The Verlin household is still in Glen-side, things having fallen in place nicely when Mike got his deferment in June. He will start his third year as a resident in July, and a fellowship in hematology. Joel Maurice arrived exactly one month after I received my master's degree in music history, the result of five long years of work.

My mailbox went rather hungry this time with only eight responses. Please give it another try next year. And if you are ever in the Philadelphia area, please drop in. The chances of my being home are much better these days.

Marsha reporting:

Suzie Archer Dawes and family are still enjoying the West Coast and have done lots of sightseeing. Lou is teaching in a suburb of Seattle and they like being back in an urban atmosphere. They spent Christmas vacation in New York with their parents, and probably will be moving back east in the not too distant future.

Penny Barley Wolboldt received her M.A. in Spanish from Middlebury College in August, 1969 and is a lecturer at Cleveland State University. Her husband is the assistant pastor of the Rockport United Methodist Church in Rocky River.

Becky (Bennett) and Jim Wallace love being back east. While Jim is getting a master's in tax law, Becky keeps busy with daughter Katherine and is involved in civic affairs.

Sheila Bennett Harris enjoys her new role as a mother, but finds working part time in Joel's lighting showroom a much needed change of pace. She has seen Jill Squire Popish and Adrienne Sivins during the last year and keeps in close touch with Pam Stirba Russell.

Bibi Boles Evans and Sam plan to spend at least two more years in Los Angeles. She is busy working as an actress and Sam works for Hughes Aircraft.

Joan Bretz Peirce and Jim are both still working for Chicago banks, and enjoyed skiing again last winter. Joan is trying to finish her thesis and hopes to get her master's degree soon.

Diane Brouwarsky Levine's 2-year-old son is a constant source of pleasure. She is teaching a course at the Community College of Baltimore, and is taking two evening courses at Johns Hopkins University in a master's degree program.

Sally Brown Lincoln and John left their hearts in California when the Harleco Division of the American Hospital Supply Corporation transferred them to Philadelphia last December. While in California Sally worked in the trust department of the Bank of America.

Sarah Corwin Brady got her master's in early childhood education at Lesley College in 1968, and is presently teaching in the Headstart Program at A. Leo Weil School in Pittsburgh's Hill District. She and Michael, who is in computer management, enjoy ice hockey games where she often sees her "Little Sister," Evi Tamm Metcalf '67.

While in Belgium from last June to October, Ken and Carol Craven Kratz were visited by Rosemary Cesarone and Jan Patterson. Until April, when they were to return to Liege, Belgium for six months to a year, Ken worked on computerized steel mills at Westinghouse.

Bonnie Dallas Palmer was an assistant professor of English at Wayne State University in Detroit this last year. She was satisfied with the students and learned to cope with the city, but was disappointed with her courses. Next September will find her '60 Department of English, Northern Illinois University, Dekalb, Illinois.

Ginny Damato received her master's in secondary education from the University of Bridgeport in June, 1969, and is still teaching English at Weston High School in Bridgeport. She spent winter weekends skiing in Vermont where she has bought a share of a lodge with a friend. Last year she went to Europe and Mexico, each for the second time, and is now planning a trip to Japan for the summer which may lead to an extended round-the-world jaunt.

Now that her Ph.D. is completed, Ginny Fisher O'Leary is a senior research associate at the Center for Urban Studies of Wayne State University. Attempting to solve urban problems is quite a challenge. She is also teaching part time (psychology) at the University. They are very involved in politics as Morgan is working for the Democratic gubernatorial hopeful in Michigan. They spent last Christmas in Morocco, and enjoyed returning to Paris and Madrid as well.

Last August Linda Berg Samuels and her husband moved from Worms to Idar-Oberstein, Germany, a quaint town famous for gems.

Before "retiring" to care for her new daughter, Priscilla Buxton Greenwood taught emotionally disturbed children and gifted 6th-grade children. Laurence is taking his residency in psychiatry at Hanna Pavilion of Case Western Reserve University. During his internship Priscilla went to Cleveland Institute of Art as a full-time student and is very much interested in painting decorations on furniture.

Francie Darr Alely has applied to Simmons College to begin a master's in library science this summer. Husband Tom has a new job in marketing with Kendall Corporation in Walpole, Mass. They see Jane Tobey Eden and Mike frequently.

It's hard to believe another year has come and gone! Thanks to everyone who responded to the call for news. Your reporter has been busy keeping up with our 2-year-old daughter, and my increasing involvement in the League of Women Voters not only provides an enjoyable change of pace from household duties, but brings me into frequent contact with Susie Haas Nordby. A highlight of the year was a reunion with Linda Kates Meyer in Philadelphia last November! Susie Vansant Bartz joined us for part of the day and we all enjoyed talking over old and new times.

Myra reporting:

*Penny Embry McGoe*y and family have moved to Armonk, New York, where Bob is serving as Assistant District Attorney for Westchester County. She loves living in "exurbia."

Sandy Goldman Forquer and Tim returned to Pittsburgh a year ago from Sweden for the baby's birth, the big event of the year. Sandy has taken an interior design course and sewing lessons, and they have bought a home.

Susie Haas Nordby, still working on their house, says a new furnace and redoing two bathrooms has to come before paint and carpet.

Carol Hartman Elden is looking forward to moving to Los Angeles when Tom returns in July. He is serving as a military judge in Da Nang and will be returning to his former job with the District Attorney's office.

Sallie Hendon writes: "Have had a fantastic year working as administrative assistant to a very prominent D.C. lawyer. The job even sponsored a very quick but stupendous six-week trip around the world (two weeks of work in glorious Bangkok!). Visited Japan, Taiwan, Hong Kong, India, Istanbul, Geneva, London—really great, but now it's back to work in D.C."

February was gloomy for Mike and Elaine Hillman Moroney when everyone took turns being sick, although Mike did get in some skiing. They have been enjoying the antics of little M.J., who will be crawling soon, and says Elaine, "I can wait!"

Sidney Hudig finally took a long-planned jaunt through Europe—flew with the bush pilot in North Norway; visited assorted relatives in Holland; spoke French in Paris; fell in love with Greece; and almost had a job offer in London where she lost her passport. Now back home in Boston at work in the mutual fund business, she says, "Anyone want to go to Greece in the fall of '71? Let me know."

Nancy Johnson Saperstein's new job is a demanding one. As a social worker for the American Red Cross, she works with young, relatively uneducated families, many of whom are in truly dire straits. She and Stephen enjoy the California climate and are shopping for a house of their own.

From Iowa City Heather Johnston writes: "After several years as a research assistant and computer-program-writing general handyman, I finally have a teaching assistantship. I passed comprehensive exams last May and have been trying to get enthusiastic about a dissertation ever since. I'm finally beginning to grind it out now. Whether or not I finish the Ph.D. by August, I am on the assistant professor job market for September." Heather, who describes herself as "a hold-out for the single life," has thoroughly enjoyed Lower City and reports "no hostile Indians. Nevertheless, I'm ready again for some smog and the other advantages of big city living."

In October Linda Kates Meyer took a break from her reader assistantship and her housewifery for a two-week trip back east. The visit with her folks was grand and it was wonderful to see *Marsha Richards Bingle*r, Susie Vansant Bartz, and Martha Repman again. "Once we were in one another's company, it certainly didn't seem as though three or four years had elapsed." John has been practicing civil and criminal law with a small San Diego firm since his discharge from the Navy last March.

Evelyn Kinast McElhaney had a wonderful "old world" Christmas, complete with Dutch Sinter Klaus and a whistle-stop trip to Paris. Learning to speak Dutch has been a bit frustrating, not only because the language is difficult but also because everyone wants to practice their English! With luck and kind friends to care for David, Evelyn and Ron hoped to fly to Saltzburg for a brief vacation. They have their fingers crossed for next year and a research job in the States.

Mary Krein Howarth doesn't find her job as a reference librarian at Pitt the most exciting activity in the world, but she has enjoyed seeing a lot of Sage Tower Mumma and taking trips to various places. Vacations included Niagara Falls with the water "turned off," hot and sticky Florida, rainy Massachusetts, snowy Albany for Christmas, and numerous weekend trips elsewhere. When David is graduated, the Howarths will depart for a six-week tour of Europe, and after that a job, hopefully in New England or upper New York state.

For Linda Lanius Tomlins, "This past year was a very busy one with what with chasing Leah, 15 months old, and typing translation for Jack. We are, however, looking forward to spending at least a semester in Sao Paulo, Brazil. With a little luck we'll be going on a Japanese liner. Three weeks each way to sit in the sun and relax!"

It was fun to talk to Linda Marsh Gurk, who had just returned from their annual Florida vacation. Linda has been doing volunteer work in the library of a new experimental school. Fantastic audio visual aids, ungraded classes, sliding doors, and circular architecture are some of the features in this federally-funded attempt to counter racial imbalance. Linda is also tutoring a woman in reading and finding this kind of teaching exciting. Refereeing for Shannon and Greg also has its share of thrills.

Ann McClure Hall will be leaving "Big Steel" in June and is pleased to report that Jack passed the Bar this past fall and joined a defense trial firm in Pittsburgh.

Lynne Jack Porterfield may have a taste of the same someday, for Jim is now a law student at Pitt. Lynne, on the other hand, is a teacher in a most unusual situation. In an unstructured, ungraded classroom she and her assistant work with 12 to 15 juvenile offenders of various ages who are awaiting trial and court-disposition. She finds it challenging, fun, and always different.

For your reporter, Myra Hull Gillum, the school year is outwardly much the same. However, the kids provide constant variety—and comedy—and I'm giving a stiffer composition program this year. (Wow, the paper grading!) Also I find myself tired of what I've done previously and have been experimenting much more with the units.

Pat reporting:

News of the travels of some of our classmates has left me slightly envious although I must admit to a certain amount of vicarious enjoyment as I read their letters. Lynn Schreiber Glasser and husband Steve, who has been promoted to assistant director of the Practicing Law Institute, went to Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Brazil on a business-pleasure trip in November, "sans Susie!" Susan Beth is their year-old daughter who was born January 14, 1969. Sorry I "goofed" on Susie's date of birth last year!

Beverly Miller Blessinger is no longer teaching. She is, instead, a reading clinician consultant. For those of you who, like me, aren't familiar with this profession—Bev provides ideas and suggestions to the teachers on how to help children with reading problems. She misses the direct contact with the children, but husband Ken is still "in touch" with the younger generation while teaching American history. Bev and Ken enjoyed their visit to the British Isles last summer, and they especially want to revisit London someday.

And, believe it or not, Jinny Powell has been in London since May, 1968, and is no longer considered a "foreigner" by the natives. For the past year-and-a-half she's been an interviewer for the office of Manpower, Ltd., located near Piccadilly Circus. In March Jinny was to leave the "flat" she had been sharing with Chathamite Val Valentine and two English girls to go to the new Manpower branch in Nottingham as office manager. Because of this, she could no longer put off getting her British driving license. Jinny has tried to keep up with pottery, and is a member of the Chelsea Pottery. She has done some work, also, with "brass rubbings" of burial plaques, on which the pictures of the persons lying below—usually knights and their ladies dating from 1250 to 1450—are etched in brass. Jinny invites us to visit her in Robin Hood country, offering a floor to sleep on and a Powell tour. Her new address was not available at press time, but she can be reached through the London Manpower, Ltd. office.

And, now, to another traveling classmate whose letters are always a treat—Janice Patterson. When we last "saw" Janice, she was traveling for the J. C. Penney Co., but early last summer she left that job and accepted Carol Craven Kratz and Ken's invitation to visit them in Belgium. With their home as base, Janice spent a couple of months traveling through Europe. The Oktoberfest in Munich and a week of sun on the beaches of Mallorca were highlights. Upon her return, after nine weeks of student-teaching in the sixth grade, she took a five-week training program with House of Nine (nationwide chain of junior-size dress shops) at their California headquarters, and is now Regional Coordinator in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Michigan.

While she was on the West Coast, Janice saw two other Chathamites and their spouses, Dottie Raymond Matsui and Ingrid von Dattan Detweiler. Dottie now has her master's degree and is librarian in the Adult and Young Adult Services of the Santa Clara County Free Library, while husband Yas, with his master's degree tucked away, is an industrial designer with Hewlett-Packard. The Matsuis obviously love California and their home in Palo Alto near Stanford University campus.

Barb Schneider continues to be a New York commuter, but to a new job (as of March, 1969) as executive secretary to the vice president for sales of a youth-oriented corporation called National Student Marketing Corporation. The extra benefits sound terrific; for example, a rented mansion out in the Hamptons for the summer use of the employees, and an Easter all-expense ski week-end in Vermont. Barb saw Julie Mamolen (down from Boston) at a Christmas eggnogg party at Susie Newton Kelly's apartment in Manhattan. Because of bad weather Pam Stirba Russell and hubby couldn't make the party from their home in New City, New York, but Barb and Pam keep in touch via mail and phone.

Some of the class have been quite busy with new babies and new homes. Jenia Royster Brown and new-born twin boys joined Taylor at Ft. Bragg, North Carolina in early February. Taylor, who was drafted after passing the Bar, decided against O.C.S. or J.A.G. and began a two-year Army enlistment at Ft. Bragg in April '69. Hopefully, April '71 will find the Browns back in Baltimore with Taylor practicing law. Before the birth of the twins (completely unpredicted!), Jenia continued her work as a social worker in Baltimore. She was happy to have Niki Neese Lallande and Joe "meet" the boys this winter. The Lallandes were enroute to New York City where Joe will attend Columbia Business School for his master's degree.

Sandy Mountain Rosche's new baby and move to a new home all happened within five weeks! Anica Reed Smith has moved back to Pittsburgh after five years of being away, and she, husband David (a Ph.D. candidate in geography at Pitt), and daughter Tina are glad to be back!

Ellie Raden Kobrin's new husband, Robert, has his doctorate and is a senior research chemist and computer specialist for Mobile Research and Development Corporation. Ellie is still executive director for the Prison Service Committee of Southern New Jersey and has been awarded a fellowship to continue her graduate study in rehabilitation counseling at Temple University. Congratulations to Ellie on her first publication (July, 1969, in Haddonfield, N.J.), a monograph, The Rehabilitation Perspective for the Female Offender—Particularly as She is Caught up in the County Jail System of Southern New Jersey.

Maxine Ruter Horowitz's husband Danny has passed the C.P.A. exam, and is now a C.P.A. in the State of New York. Max has seen two other classmates, Lynn Schreiber Glasser who lives around the corner, and Nancy Johnson Saperstein.

Francie Meyers Bullis is still teaching at Ithaca College in the Speech and Drama Department while husband Jerald finishes his Ph.D. in English at Cornell (June, 1970). Francie longs to retire from teaching as Patsy Scarry Jones has done. Ralph received his Ph.D. from Cornell, and the Joneses are now living in Rochester where Ralph is a chemist with Kodak.

Greetings come from Susan Michaels Orringer and family in Baltimore where husband Mark is a resident in surgery at Johns Hopkins Hospital, and son Jeffrey is a two-year-old bundle of energy.

The Bremans, Sid, Patti and Jason (our Welsh Terrier puppy), are back in our hometown of Leechburg, a convenient arrangement since Sid is working at our family auto dealership, and I have been substitute-teaching at the local high school. Sid is taking an intensive management course at General Motors Institute in Flint, Michigan, and the last third of the school year I will be a permanent substitute in the secondary special education program. Incidentally, this year found me back at Chatham as a student. With Dr. Knolle's cooperation, I'm finishing the coursework necessary for my Pennsylvania teacher's certification. I want to thank all of you who wrote me. Your communiques are always a pleasure to receive.

Jane reporting:

Several members of our class are enjoying a change of scenery due to temporary relocation. Janet Simpson Prescott and Ed will return to Philadelphia this summer after he completes his work at the Labor Department on a Brookings Fellowship. They are enjoying their brief year in D.C. In addition to Janer's own two, she has found time to tutor underprivileged children.

Susie Vansant Bartz is also exploring Washington while Jerry is training for deep sea diving and research in mini-sub and oceanographic vessels. They miss Key West's sunshine but are looking forward to moving west by the end of the summer.

Anxious to return east once again, Ingrid von Dattan Detweiler and Doug are between homes while Doug is looking for a new position. Meanwhile, any correspondence will reach them via "Beautiful Downtown Burbank." They spent the holidays with Ingrid's parents and enjoyed being in a wintry setting once again. They, also, enjoyed Janice Patterson's visit.

Jill Squire Popish and Paul are at home in Virginia while he "Army-doctors it" and she "Army-wives it" for the next two years. Jill reports that Thea is a pleasure.

Susie Soule Cox and Larry spent the summer renovating an old home they bought in the village of Bethel, Maine. Sam and Christopher are great fun and "all boy!" Thinking it would be the last chance in years for a reunion, Patty Baisler Van Amberg and Ron spent a few days with the Butlers last October prior to entering Vista. Their assignment turned out to be in Portland, Maine, so they're looking forward to seeing lots more of each other!

Lynne Swartz Jacobson and Blair have bought a house "typical Pittsburgh, thirty-five years old, brick, lots of room to grow, and crabgrass! But it sure beats a third floor apartment!" and only two blocks from Sodini's! Lynne and Sheila Bennet Harris are already arranging a match between Lynne's Larry and Sheila's Marni. Lynne and Blair were to attend a convention in Los Angeles in March and hope to squeeze in a peek at Las Vegas and San Francisco, too!

Betsy Unangst has moved to New York to work with a friend on a computer-related project. Last September she spent a week in Bermuda, and enjoyed it so much she's planning to repeat the venture next fall.

Ellen Tilles Weil has also been island hopping. They spent two weeks during December in Hawaii, baby and all!

London and Rome were the destinations of Pam Stirba Russell and Bill last fall. They're planning on Greece this spring! Isn't the airline industry marvelous?! Pam's two girls, thanks to Bill's interest in football, love to tackle. She enjoyed seeing Mr. Malfatti again when Chatham performed with Franklin and Marshall at St. Thomas' Church.

Barbara Zitko is back at her old job with Arthur D. Little, but she hasn't been idle. During a three-month leave of absence she visited Mexico, California, and New Orleans!

Good news from Ronya Seig McMillen! She's once again a full-time housewife and mother, finds San Antonio charming, but admits that she misses the east. They will remain there while Robert completes his studies at Trinity University for a master's in hospital administration. Since he is also working full time for Texas Hospital Association, it will be at least another year or so. Then they're hoping for either Boston or California for his year of residency in a hospital administrative post.

After three years in law school, Nancy Speck is working with the National Transportation Safety Board which is providing both sound legal experience and travel. She has become active in the Federal Bar Association and is doing some volunteer legal work for the poor in civil suits, particularly landlord-tenant problems and consumer problems. She's also involved in a project for a leased department store which would be tenanted by members of the inner city community.

Marcia Webb Buxton had a lovely visit from Sallie Hendon as she was passing through Seattle on her way to Bangkok, Thailand.

Karen Schweig Brown and Ed are the proud parents of two lovely girls, Erica and Leslie. Karen plays tennis throughout the year and continues her sculpturing and original embroidery and needlepoint. She is seeking the whereabouts of Ellen Davidson. Anyone with information please let her know.

We've expanded—both in living space and group membership. Both have proved delightful! I retired from first grade in June and did some substituting in local schools while waiting for Jeff. We relived "the good old days" with Patti Papp Breman and Sid last July. Mike and I joined my family for a week in the Thousand Islands—we recommend houseboating. Adjusting to suburbia's been easy; we've met so many wonderful people! It was lovely to hear from you once again. My thanks to all.

Marilyn Doeller Blain, April 4, 1969

The news of Mimi's tragic death in an automobile accident last spring reached the alumnae office too late to include any more than the announcement. The class is saddened by her passing and extends deep and sincere sympathy to Mimi's husband and parents.

Cooky reporting:

Betsy Crone, having received her M.A. from Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers, is becoming a professional job-hopper in Washington. She worked for several months with the Speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates but gave it up because it conflicted with her ideology. Betsy then tried out-and-out bureaucracy, a Department of Labor-Office of Economic Opportunity Contract on public employment and the disadvantaged. At the moment of writing she was with the House of Representatives Democratic Study Group.

Penny Anderson Gladwell is working toward her master's in elementary education and teaching first and second grades. Watch for her on television—the teachers are trying to raise the pay scale in Kentucky through negotiation, sanction and, if necessary, strike. She and Dave attended the wedding of Joan Velkey Feltovich where they ran into Chilton Richardson. The Gladwells and the Walthers (JoAnn Eustace and Fred) reunited at the wedding of Mary Rosenberger Hourigan in August. JoAnn is teaching English at Cambridge High and Latin School and is working toward an M.A. in English at Simmons. Fred, while in MIT's doctoral program in physics, has a research assistantship.

Bev Blazey Palmer is finishing up her Ph.D. in guidance and counseling at Ohio State University. Her husband Dick will finish medical school in June and begin interning.

Maggi Berman Guzinsky and husband Bob are moving from Birmingham to New York City. They're delighted with the change and are currently in search of an address.

Barbara Blodorn Kronenberg and Howard have recently moved to San Francisco where Howard works for the advertising firm of Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, Inc. Barb, presently unemployed, is contemplating job hunting. In December the Kronenbergs had a visit from LoLita Dawson Pfeiffer and Ray who were enroute from Washington to Denver. Ray was in the Navy but was released after nine months duty as a result of budget cuts. LoLita suggests an active campaign for strict defense spending as a way to end the war. Ray is now free to pursue a Ph.D. in philosophy at Washington University in St. Louis. LoLita is working for the Danforth Foundation as an assistant to one of the vice presidents on the Danforth Campus Ministry grant.

Jane Birmingham Hanley is doing social work for the Department of Child Welfare in Louisville while Terry is stationed in Korat, Thailand, where he'll be until July. Over the New Year's weekend saw Mary Ruddell Lindberg and Mary Lou Patrick McJunkin in Lexington, Kentucky.

Nat Dingle Bazzell is teaching at Eisenhower High School in Norristown in the honest attempt to put off graduate school for as long as possible. Creamer is attending Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science as a full-time student. Nat reports that she hears occasionally from Judy Millis who is working toward a master's degree while in Southern California. Nat also spoke of Jill Haas Hobson and Larry who now have a son. Erica, now 2½, manages to take up what remaining time Nat has in her busy schedule.

Barbara-Lee Buxton Van Sciver, also the mother of a 2-year-old, Sara, is leading an active life in Providence where Stephen is a trust officer for Industrial National Bank. Barbara-Lee is busy with Planned Parenthood, Junior League, and Air Pollution Control League, and house-hunting. She and Stephen are delighted with Providence because of its proximity to skiing and swimming.

Lenore Fellner Lessall and Kenneth have been traveling in Mexico, Caracas and Spain. Lenore has a new job with Continental Royal Services, Inc. in New York.

Donna Beiswenger Riggs reports that Richard is a Faculty Intern Fellow in theatre at Tufts University. A newcomer to New England, Donna complained that the winters in Massachusetts are too cold. Sue Holden Davis is also in Massachusetts, doing social work for the Boston Commission for the Blind.

Last June Philip and I attended Jo Messersmith Mitchell's wedding in Harrisburg. In September we drove south again for Iris Raskin Snyder's wedding. Iris is a medical social worker in Philadelphia doing screenings for legal abortions under Pennsylvania law. Her husband Al is writing his master's thesis in social work at the University of Pennsylvania.

I spoke to Nora Levy Johnston when she and William were in the States last summer, and I had lunch with Debbie Little in January. She is rooming with Cary Cadman in Cambridge. Judy Fletcher, Cary's roommate last year, is attending grad school in art at Yale.

Philip has changed from a B.D. program to an M.A. program at Andover-Newton. We're hoping that when he finishes next January we can return to Boston where he'll continue his doctoral pursuit. In the meantime I am still working in Boston as methods and training analyst.

Elizabeth reporting:

After the worst Pittsburgh winter in years, I really envy Connie Gray Voight and Ron who are living and working in Miami, Florida. Ron, still in the Air Force, has returned from a six-month tour in Korea. Naturally, Connie is much relieved. Linda Hauser Stavros is making a new home in Bethlehem, Pa., where Tony is with Bethlehem Steel. Anyone heading Linda's way, throw away your road maps and follow a certain star! Greta Gunia Harkness writes that she and Walter are a hard-working couple, but when they relax, watch out! They helped to elect the first Republican governor in Virginia since Reconstruction. Greta hasn't changed!

Still working toward graduate degrees are Lucille Finger Harding, Judi Fletcher, Judy Gilbert Livingston, Suzanne Hershey Bress, Alice Hunter, Pat Jalowick Demase, and this reporter. Do you think we'll make it?

Gini Gold reports a terrific year for travel: Paris, New Orleans, Dayton, and the French Riviera—all in six months. Jill Haas Hobson reports that the highlight of the Hobson's year was the Army's discovery that Larry was politically unfit to serve. Judy Graytock Dengler's newsy letters are the highlight of the year. Judy's been subbing in Bay City but has retired. Bill is with Dow Chemical.

Annual greetings from Mary Louise Farmer Haralam, Bunny Generalovich Lerner, Judith Howland and Pamela Johnson Gutkind.

My sincere apologies to Diane Furrer Holzbeimer and Lynn Hillman McCulloch, our foreigners in the Fiji Islands and London respectively. Due to a mix-up in the mails their news could not be included.

As for me, I am feverishly hand-sewing way into the night on various parts of the gown for my June wedding. In my spare time I'm decorating my new apartment, teaching high school English, taking courses at Carnegie-Mellon University, a little house mothering at Benedum Hall, and once in a while a rest to refuel!

Cookie reporting:

Through our correspondents in the east, we hear the incredible but good news that Chatham may go coed. It is certainly the best thing we have to report!

We see Lolly Lowery Derryck and Dennis often, either in California or New York. Among the very exciting events in their lives, they have invested in a Brooklyn brownstone as well as a farm in New York state, not to mention a summer jaunt to Africa and other sundry spots in the Caribbean.

Over hot and sour soup in a Mandarin Chinese Restaurant, Kala Lapidus Paul and Jim described to us the merits (?) of Corpus Christi, Texas, where Jim has a job in chemical industry upon finishing his Ph.D. at Oregon State. Kala plans to open a shop there, selling things from bagels to artsy-craftsy delights.

We just spoke to Lee Macy who is very much into her photography and working in a camera shop on the side. She and her boyfriend Don, a C.O. working at Langley Porter Institute of Psychiatry, are living in the Mission District in San Francisco, an area seldom seen by tourists.

Uncle Sam has swiped some Chatham girls. Three are married to captains. Kammy McCleery MacKirdy is substitute-teaching in Oklahoma until she and Wayne, an army career officer, get to Maryland where she will obtain her teaching credentials in social studies. Dael Kiesler Stichter is a distant neighbor in Burlingame, California, where Charles recruits college students for the Marine Corps Officer Program. Dael has been working for the Food Stamp Program. Shannon McGuire Sollinger will leave Pittsburgh soon for West Point, where Jerry will teach English; she will work on her Ph.D. in English at NYU or Columbia.

In Pittsburgh Judy Light is working on her Ph.D., and Karen Lake on her M.A. in Educational Research.

Meg McDonald Murtha and Gar have acquired a townhouse on Capitol Hill. Gar is handling criminal and civil trials in D.C. courts and Meg is at the Washington Center for Metropolitan Studies. Other Washington residents include Judy London who lives with Judy Siegel. The former Judy loves her job at OEO Mid-Atlantic Regional Office on a demonstration technical assistance project for Pennsylvania Community Action agencies. We understand Washington is a haven for ex-Chatham girls . . .

Joan Lessing leaves New York City and a job at the Bar Association to whisk away to Europe and skiing spots. Martha King just arrived in Manhattan and loves her job as a systems analyst at Chemical Bank.

Linda McPhillamy Nielsen is another convert to the wild west. George is a stock broker and she teaches Russian in Colorado, where they hope to remain forever.

Word from Europe: Nancy Lippmann teaches at the Berlitz Schools in France, Italy. Another owner of a townhouse is Nora Levy Johnston. William is a managing director of the Clarks Engineering Company in Bath, England.

Sandy Korman Auburn is doing speech pathology work at Chicago State College while bringing up new baby David. Mark is finishing his Ph.D. in English at University of Chicago.

We gained back two of our Peace Corps friends. Sara Leuthy Chamberlain and Mike are houseparents to 96 girls at Wheelock College in Boston. Sara is studying early childhood education and Mike is at law school at Boston University. Tonya Hines Pence and Steve have returned from Turkey to momentarily rest in Fort Wayne. Both have jobs there and plan to leave the country again for teaching or other work abroad.

Berkeley may seem calmer than usual to outsiders, but we women, among others, are scheming. Women's Liberation is big here, and both Carol Pogash and I are involved in a splinter group, the Radical Women's Caucus, part of the Sociology Department on Berkeley's campus. The Ecology movement has Berkeley as one of its main centers, and this is another one of our interests. Carol is now here, post-Georgetown M.A., working for the Institute for Local Self-Government, and teaching a graduate seminar in metropolitics. With only a year or so to go, I'll have a Ph.D. in zoology with present emphasis on insect nervous systems (believe it or not). We have a groovy cottage cum fireplace, lots of greenery, cats, and general Berkeley pleasantries. We would love to have you all visit.

Teg reporting:

Since my last report there have been quite a number of marriages, starting with Liz Schaye in July '68. She and her husband, John Haskell, are living in Pittsburgh where he is vice president of Bentson, a division of Haskell Inc. Liz is working toward her doctorate at the University of Pittsburgh in counselor education. Also in Pittsburgh is Louise Royster who married Jim Brown in August '68, after he got his degree in architecture from Carnegie Mellon. Louise finished her master's in political science at University of Pittsburgh and is now working as an assistant executive secretary to the new Democratic Mayor of Pittsburgh, Peter Flaherty.

Next in line is Andy Morgan, who married Tom Weyer in September '68. At last report, Tom was nearing the end of his Army OCS program and they were looking forward to enjoying a bit more settled life together.

Lauren Nagler Tuckfelt (August '68) got her master's in psychology at Temple University and then did some part-time work for the Learning Research Development Center in Pittsburgh while Mark was finishing up his M.D. at the University of Pittsburgh. They are now living in Chicago where Mark is doing his internship and Lauren's looking forward to a new job as a school psychologist with the Chicago Board of Education starting in June.

Judy Murray married a Frenchman, Bertrand Walle, and is living in Paris—sigh! She did some grad work at the University of Toronto in theater and then became a production assistant for the CBC before going to France. At present, she is doing some free lance interviewing for the CBC. Her husband was an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh and works in marketing and sales promotion.

Eve Rubin Zincavage is teaching part-time at Coe College in philosophy—"o course"—while her husband Walter is finishing a Ph.D., also in philosophy, at University of Iowa. She mentioned that the chairman of her department was once the Chaplain at Chatham—Dr. Fred Eutsler—and is a good friend of Dr. Arnett—Smallwood!

Mary Rosenberger Hourigan and Philip are living in Durham, North Carolina, where he is a medical student at Duke. Mary has a challenging and rewarding job teaching mentally retarded children.

Iris Raskin Snyder and her husband Alvin are living in Philadelphia and are both involved in social work. Alvin will graduate from University of Pennsylvania in May with a master's in social work. Iris is currently working with adolescent mothers as part of the Maternal and Infant Care Project in Philadelphia.

Nat Osgood Simsak and her husband have moved to Denver and are enjoying country air. Nat's little girl keeps her pretty busy but she still finds time to spend at her loom weaving fabrics. She says it's a wonderful art form and hobby and recommends that Chatham should offer a class in weaving!

Mary Ruddell Lindberg's baby—another Sara!—is a year-and-a-half old now. Jack is working on his master's at Pitt and working full time. Mary has been working with retarded children in her free time.

At last word, Dara Murphy had done some grad work at Boston University in education and was putting her new skills to work teaching 5th grade ghetto children in Boston.

Ann Palmeri is also doing some grad work at Ohio University. She finished her M.A. in philosophy and plans to enter a Ph.D. program in the fall. In the meantime she's keeping close to the philosophy department working as a teaching assistant.

Donna Mroch is hoping to enter Law School in the fall at University of Pittsburgh. Right now she's doing computerized legal research for Aspen Systems Corporation. Sounds kind of scary!

I talked to Andy Moss on the phone. She's here in New York and has a new and very exciting job with Avon Inc.—NO! she's not ringing doorbells—Yet! That's part of her training program but right now she's working in merchandising and doing some ad work. She's busy fixing up a new apartment and enjoying New York life along with Suzie Plant and myself. Suzie worked for about a year for Varig Brazilian Airlines and then decided to forgo the travel benefits (like weekends in Rome!) for a more stimulating job. At last word, she was doing some bilingual guide work and tutoring in English until she found something better.

From the Associates corner: Joanne Lurcurcio Pavia has moved again, from Cleveland to Rochester this time—the 5th move in 3½ years. She and Ken have bought a new 'old' house, lots of wood paneling and fireplaces, etc. They're fixing it up in between keeping up with two little "spit-fires," Ken, Jr. and Rea.

As for myself—I'm living here in New York and have been working as a research assistant in neurobiology at the Rockefeller University since I returned from Denmark. I've been taking some courses at Cornell Medical School this year and also singing with the New York Choral Society, where I found that one of my fellow singers was Guenn Gurnack, '66. I frequently see Mary Vanderwart who has moved into an apartment in the Village. She finished a master's in psychology at McMasters University in Canada and is now doing social work for the Children's Village.

I attended Jean Sour Raben's wedding last summer which was simply beautiful and where I saw quite a number of '67 grads. Zayde (Dotts) and Joe Antrim are also here in N.Y. and join with Mary and me in inviting any Chathamites passing through to stop and say hello!

Jo reporting:

Carol Porter Cohen, an associate member of our class, was married last fall, and she and husband Victor live in Washington, Pa. Carol graduated from Seton Hill College with a major in home economics, retailing and textiles. Prior to her marriage she worked for three years as a county home economist for Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Services.

Mary Schlitt Kostalos is doing graduate work at Pitt and is an instructor in three of the ecology labs to fulfill teaching requirements for her degree. Mary attended the Alumnae Council meeting in November. She and husband John have journeyed to New England twice visiting Boston and Vermont.

Geetings from the state of Washington come from Martha Sebastian Moyer, who invites anyone vacationing in the northwest to stop and visit. She has, since 1965, graduated from University of Washington with a major in history and political science. After graduating, she married George, MIT '65, whom she met while a freshman at Chatham. She got her master's in social work last year and is a psychiatric social worker at a new comprehensive mental health center which serves 170,000 people of a large urban and rural area. George is finishing work on his master's in business administration. Future plans include a trip to the Far East, Middle East and Europe next winter.

It took a while, but Judy Siegel is now formally enrolled in the glamorous working world of Washington, D.C. Sandwiched between Syracuse University's Maxwell School and her job with National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice were a thesis, a move to Washington, a master's degree, and a security clearance. It was while waiting for the security clearance that Judy spent the summer as a Kelly Girl. She finds her job at the Institute exciting and especially enjoys the criminal justice research work and the traveling which it involves. She and Judy London share an apartment in the city.

Newlywed Jean Sour Raben and husband John moved to Allston, Massachusetts, after their August wedding. Jane Ziskind Cohen was one of Jeanie's bridesmaids. Debbie Little, Teg McAteer, Vivian Lowery Derryck, Betsy Crone and Alison Oakes, '68, were among those who attended the wedding. Jean is teaching high school chemistry while John finishes his last year at Harvard Business School. They plan to return to their native New York City upon completion of John's program. Jeanie sounds like a very busy, very happy bride.

Sandy Stewart Shasby reports that her research work (liver studies) at Southwestern Medical School in Dallas is proving to be a very rewarding experience. Husband Michael is a medical student at Southwestern.

Don't you envy a young couple who buys a large old home "with possibilities" and undertakes the fun of making it their own? Carol Swenson Foss and husband Charlie find themselves putting much time and love into their house, circa 1910. Swens also teaches a 25-kid Sunday School class, and she and Charlie attended a Washington and Jefferson fund-raising dinner in New York City last fall. It was there that she ran into Joan Lessing. Dara Murphy was a weekend houseguest last fall.

Evi Tamm Metcalf works for Pennsylvania State Senator Jack McGregor, who is also president of the National Hockey League's Pittsburgh Penguins. Evi is not only tremendously busy as his assistant but has developed an avid love for ice hockey, as well. Husband Jack is an accountant with the Pittsburgh office of Arthur Young and Co., an international firm. Evi reports she had a great time at Chatham's 100th Birthday Party.

Linda VanDoren Garlick has received her master's degree from Columbia and rejoined husband John since we heard from her last year. Linda is a psychiatric social worker at Lake County (Illinois) Mental Health Center, where she does intake and therapy work with adults, adolescents and children. John, who has another 2½ years as an officer in the Navy, is an instructor at Great Lakes Navy Base.

This spring, Janet Walker will take her qualifying exams for her Ph.D. in modern French literature at Bryn Mawr College Graduate Center. Then, hopefully, it's off to Paris as an exchange student at the Ecole Normale Supérieure.

A New Englander who has settled comfortably into midwestern small town life, Janet Washburn Grana was surprised last September when she and husband Ed visited Pittsburgh and noted the changes which the city, and particularly Shadyside, has undergone. Janet works in Iowa City, and Ed is finishing his studies at University of Iowa. He will receive his MFA from the Writer's Workshop there this summer. His first sound film was shown in Chicago in November, an exciting event for them.

Following a September wedding, Jane Weigel Hubley and husband Fred moved to Alexandria, Virginia, where Fred is employed by the Army Security Agency. Their wedding was highlighted when Fred laughed at the phrase "in sickness and in health" because a doctor had just discovered that Jane had mononucleosis. After taking it easy for several months, she is now a secretary at Atlantic Research and looking forward to a postponed honeymoon in the Virgin Islands.

L. J. Weltchek is living in New York City and working with computers. Since graduation, L. J. has visited California, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, the Bahamas, Mexico and Canada. In the planning stages is a long jaunt by bus and freighter to the Near East, Far East and Australia.

Susan Whitfield, upon returning from the 1968 Republican Convention where she worked as an aide, entered the employment agency field and now owns her own agency. Although she is considering a change of fields and perhaps even of locale, she heartily recommends the "small business world" to all of us, since it has been a graduate program in "life" for her. Her work has been balanced by skiing in winter and horse races during the summer. Unfortunately, Susan's father died in November, a sad event which marred what sounds like an otherwise perfect year.

Mariann Williams Yatsco has joined husband John, an Army officer, in the Philippines. Life on the island has been quite an adventure but they are looking forward to a change of scenery—a trip to Taiwan, Thailand, Hong Kong, Japan and India.

Another classmate who has moved to new surroundings is Jane Ziskind Cohen. Settled amidst the beautiful Smoky Mountains of Tennessee, Jane is looking for work as a chemist. Until February, she was teaching slow learners biology at a local high school but found that teaching unwilling students with inadequate materials was too frustrating. Husband Sheldon, assistant professor of philosophy at the University of Tennessee, is completing a book which he co-authors with a fellow professor.

It was great to hear from so many of you! This has been my most special year, having gotten engaged in April and married in June. Ed and I are both in our last year of law school, and we are looking forward to returning to his hometown, Williamsport, where he will enter practice in his father's law firm. By the way, although I met Ed in law school, Chatham played a big part in introducing us—the very first thing Ed said to me was, "Do you know Lynn Schreiber?" It seems he dated her in high school!

Laura reporting:

My apologies to my section of the class for not getting my report of their news to the alumnae office before the deadline. A three-week trip to California overlapped the date. Mrs. Swisshelm has been kind enough to take the following information from the class questionnaires so that we may be included.

Christine Andrews: teaching in Barnesville Primary School and working for M.Ed. at University of Maryland.

Mibs Bainum: In September, 1970, an M.A. in theatre at Wayne State University.

Barbara Bohne: working full time at Defense Construction Supply Center in Columbus, Ohio.

Loretta Bonazzo Wildman: husband Gary is an engineer with Esso Research and Engineering.

Sarah Bornstein: in Master's—Ph.D. program in history at Rutgers University. Wedding planned for June 6, 1970. New address will be 2635 Cranston Road, Philadelphia, Pa. 19131.

Suzanne Boucek Berol: with her husband John, a student at CMU, studied Spanish at Guadalajara, Mexico, under the University of Arizona summer program.

Mary-Alice Brannin Ross: employed at North Shore Hospital; husband Michael, Bucknell graduate, with Rubel Corporation.

Dianne Bronstein Goldman: teaching history at P.S. 206, Brooklyn; husband Richard, a master's candidate at Long Island University and teaching science and biology at Midwood High Annex, Brooklyn.

Sue Brown Weeks: teaching at Cambridge School at Weston; husband John, Harvard graduate, management trainee at First National Bank of Boston.

M. Viki Burdett: Ph.D. candidate (1972) in microbiology at Georgetown University.

Sally Burkhart Albrook: studying for master of science degree in physiology, husband Raymond a physics major, both at University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

Joanna Campbell Dellenbaugh: husband Geoffrey is a research assistant and Ph.D. candidate in chemistry at University of Pittsburgh.

Barbara Christie: law student at Villanova University School of Law.

Dale Cohen Sollod: employed at Irving Trust Company; husband Robert a Ph.D. candidate in clinical psychology at Columbia Teachers College.

Nancy Cohen: working on a medical publication in New York City.

Emily Barclay: completed her degree at University of North Carolina and is working in the poli sci department at MIT.

Mary E. Clark: completed her degree in political science at Boston University; now with National Information Services in Cambridge.

Penny Pruden Redfield: is not on my list but I know that her husband Bucky is back from Vietnam and they are living in Cambridge.

Lois reporting:

Graduate school seems to be a popular "pastime" for many '69 Chatham grads. Bobara DeCaulp is studying at the Columbia University School of Library Science specializing in law libraries and computers. Jody Drooz is at the Georgetown Law Center working toward her J.D. in law. Prior to settling down for school she spent the summer in California and Washington working for Senator J. C. Boggs.

Vivian Garbuny Goldberg is also in Washington studying physiology at Georgetown. She plans to start her research this spring doing "something with sodium reabsorption in the kidneys of rats with high blood pressure." Vivian writes that she sees Vicki Burdett in her biochem class, and that her husband Bobby, a chemist at the National Bureau of Standards, recently bumped into Chatham's Dr. Richey who is in Washington this year working at the Freer Gallery. Graduate school is also keeping Risa Ellovich busy. She is at Indiana University concentrating on anthropology and African studies.

Ida Gonzalez Holstein plans to join the ranks of graduate students soon, taking courses in social work at Pitt for certification as a Home and School Visitor. Biri Fay, also thinking seriously about grad school, in the meantime is working as a curatorial trainee, junior assistant at the Brooklyn Museum in the Department of Ancient Art. Biri saw Ann Nelson and Susie Elliott in Florence last summer and has seen Janice Gary, Sarah Olmstead and Bonnie Lombardo in New York.

Polly Fritz is combining graduate school with teaching. She expects to receive her master's in education from Stanford University in June and has been teaching music in a San Francisco Junior High School while pursuing her studies. Evelyn Goldsmith Kitay is also combining teaching with graduate school at N.Y.U. where she is working toward her master's in French. She teaches French and reading to under-achievers at a Brooklyn private school. Evelyn's busy fall included her marriage to Michael who is a lawyer. Her wedding, a miniature Chatham reunion, included Kathy Romanski as maid of honor, Marion Lefebvre as a bridesmaid and Joylyn Vargish, Rose Kirschenbaum ('70) and Sherry Handsman ('70) as guests.

Jackie Emery Flynn, another newlywed, is teaching seventh and eighth grade math in the East Allegheny District outside of Pittsburgh while her husband Ned finishes his last year of law school at Pitt. Dixie Dixon Toker is also teaching but at the other end of the state. She teaches German at a private school outside Philadelphia where John works as an attorney.

Bobbi Franklin McKenna's husband is also on his way to becoming a lawyer. They are living in New York City where Bob is a third-year law student and editor of the Law Review while Bobbi keeps busy working in the Office of the Mayor with poverty groups.

Jennifer Gearhart Grason, another recently married, is working as an assistant buyer at Kaufmann's while her husband is an assistant professor of electrical engineering at Carnegie-Mellon. Betty Chafullo was Jennifer's attendant at her October wedding.

And on a "better late than never" note, I just heard from Ginger Getman who is currently recovering from a bout with hepatitis, but sends assurance that all else is fine in Sierra Leone where she is serving in the Peace Corps. She is teaching second grade in a village of 600 Mendes "using a good bit of Mende language to teach English."

Back in the states, after a summer of Chatham "wedding-hopping," Sandy and I joined the ranks in August. Chathamites present included former room-mates Harriet Katz Bachman and Risa Ellovich as well as Ann Posner, Gail Hart, Dianne Bronstein Goldman, Sarah Bornstein, Laura Weill Brown, Sue Brown Weeks and Barb Miller. After a somewhat hectic fall we're settled in our new jobs, new apartment, etc. Sandy's working in the news department of WNUF-AM-FM and I'm working as Program Director of the Binghamton Girls' Club. Both keep us busy and happy . . . Thanks to all who responded to my questionnaire.

Barb reporting:

Everyone seems so busy with so many different things—and we've been out of Chatham less than one year!

Many classmates are continuing their educations. Sally Hamilton is working for her M.A. in German at the University of Kentucky. Also in graduate school are Cindy Martin, at the University of Minnesota, and Nance Jacobson at Brown University. Nance plans to teach English. I was so pleased to hear from Mary Hood, who hopes to obtain her B.S. from the University of Virginia this June. She plans to specialize in special education.

Even more members of our class are hard at work. Holly Meck looks forward to a summer wedding. She is temporarily a proofreader for The Science Press until the wedding, after which she and "Den" will belong to the Navy for three years.

Mimi Majewski is a Software specialist with Sylvania, and is living with Kate Perkins in Boston. Mimi has spent the winter learning to ski, and, last summer, attended the weddings of Sue Trees, Jane DeLucia, and Diane Himes.

Harriet Katz is presently a social worker in Baltimore, and her husband is a teacher at Anne Arundel Community College. Ann Judson Ratcliffe is teaching eighth and ninth grade English at Taylor Allderdice High School, and "Rats" is in his last semester at the University of Pittsburgh Law School.

Harriet Hudson is a production editor at Academic Press, Inc. She's sharing an apartment with Peggy Rosenthal, who is thinking of attending film school. Harriet is thinking seriously of attending medical school. Eleanor Levinson Peris sends greetings.

Joyce Kass Eisenstein is a medical secretary at Columbia Medical School. Barry, a 1968 graduate of Kenyon, is a medical student at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. Joyce was a bridesmaid in Kathy Wright Mueller's wedding.

Busy as an editorial and research assistant, Management Institute of Boston College, is Karen Miller Moss. Her husband Neil is a consultant for Sterling Institute and a doctoral candidate at Harvard Business School.

Sandra Guest Stevenson, Barbara L. Miller, Mimi Majewski, and Ida Gonzalez Holstein were members of the wedding party of Diane Himes Ambrose. Diane is now an assistant librarian in the Bookmobile Branch of the Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh. Her husband is a student at the Duquesne University School of Law.

As for myself, Barb, I really have my hands full. I am a graduate student working toward my Ph.D. in microbiology at Upstate Medical Center, Syracuse. At the same time, I'm taking care of our beautiful new son, Brian. Joe is a pharmacist at Memorial Hospital here in Syracuse. We're so happy here, and Brian makes everything perfect. At the moment, we're madly saving for a house. My best wishes to everyone until next year! Getting all this information together is fun—it's great to know what everyone else is doing.

Merle reporting:

Responses from the class did not come in great numbers, though all of the associate members responded. I guess not many of us feel that we have been away long enough to have much to report.

For those of you who are wondering about the whereabouts of Penny Lowe, she is living in Cambridge with Holly Lanigan, '68, and studying at Boston University. Penny expects to receive her B.S. in elementary education in '71. While in Boston she is an active member of the "Sierra Club," busy fighting highways and pollution(?).

Marcia Seeler is also living in Cambridge. She is working at M.I.T. where she is in charge of the Film Series.

Kate Perkins is living in Allston, Mass. and is working at the Simmons Graduate School of Library Science. Following a similar line, but in New Jersey, Susan Priest is a student in library science at Rutgers. Wonder if she has run into Sarah Bornstein?

Joining those still involved in the world of academia, Jean Robinson is a graduate assistant at Syracuse while working on a degree in child development. Jean reports that she is "unofficially engaged" to Robert H. Andrews, Jr. Is it official yet, Jean?

The Windy City hosts at least two members of the Class of '69. Ann Nelson is working in the art department of a Chicago advertising agency, Earl Ludgin and Company, and finding the work to be very interesting.

At the University of Chicago, Alison Oakes is working for a master's in social service administration. She is living with her sister and Marsha Weiss. They are keeping in touch with Chatham through periodic visitors from the Class of '70.

Jody Drooz also keeps in touch with friends still at Chatham and feels that there is a great deal of concern re the effect of a modern library building on the beauty of the campus.

Maybe Ellen Newman Edelstein could comment on this for us in the next issue. Ellen is in Pittsburgh working as a Veterans' Claim Examiner at the Veterans' Administration while husband Aaron is a planning engineer.

Associate Martha Mann is at Katherine Gibbs, New York school, after graduating from Drew University.

Neither Suzanne Paisley in New York City nor Ann Posner in Rochester have much new to report but both send greetings to the rest of us.

Joining me in Baltimore, Helen Pollock Starr is working as a marketing research analyst for the First National Bank. Jud is still in Army Intelligence at Fort Holabird. Neither one of the Starrs "love their work," but they are hoping to find excitement in Europe this spring if the Army agrees that Jud should have the three weeks to go.

After one semester in the sociology department at Temple, I am back in Baltimore for a short stay. I have given up my research assistantship with Robert Bell, reported to be the next Kinsey, to marry Richard Intner on April 12, 1970. My attendants include Jody Drooz, and the Weisses, Connie and Marsha. A Wharton grad, Richard works in the New York office of Price Waterhouse, so we will live in Forest Hills, New York and I will finish my degree somewhere in New York.

Those I have run into since leaving Chatham in May include Susan Trees Juliano and Kathy Wright Mueller and Jim at Faye Singer Rosch's wedding in June. Faye and Jeff are in Philadelphia, but our contact was limited to the telephone since neither of us have a car and Philly after dark is not the greatest.

Sarah Bornstein and Yale visited Connie Weiss and me when we were living in Philadelphia. Back in Pittsburgh, Connie is visiting with me now on her way to Chicago to spend some time with Marsha.

Jody Drooz is a frequent visitor to Baltimore and on one trip this summer brought Judy Rogoff with her. Judy was living in Washington with Jody at the time, but has since moved on to Boston. How about notifying the Alumnae Office of your Boston address, Jody?

That is all for my news. Just one final comment—if you happen to be in the New York City area please call. Both Richard and I love company!

Dottie reporting:

Faye Singer Rosch is a technician in the department of biochemistry at Jefferson Medical College where her husband is a student.

Joan Velkey Feltoich, married to a graduate student at the University of Minnesota, is substitute teaching in a very cold climate. Her wedding party included Jennifer Gearhart Grason, Cynthia Linbar, '71, and Nona Eisenbies '71 Penny Anderson Gladwell, '67, was a guest. Joan commented that all Chathamites are not migrating to Boston as evidenced by the presence of Faith Yoho Jaycox '68, Cindy Martin and Ann Wakeley in Minneapolis.

April Wooden is in graduate school at the University of Delaware in physiological psychology. She spent the Christmas holidays studying education facilities and medical facilities of the Soviet Union. Linda Richman, an associate member of our class, is in graduate school at Columbia University School of Social Work.

Lynn Stewart is a claims representative for the Social Security Administration. She is visiting in Europe for the month of May.

Jo Ann Watson is a third grade teacher at the Homewood Elementary School in Pittsburgh. Jo Ann and I were in Judy Cooper Beaner's wedding last August along with Sally Hamilton, Nancy Best and Karen Polinsky. Over the holidays Judy, who came in from Michigan, Jo Ann and I visited with Polly Fritz, who came back from San Francisco for Christmas. I am kept rather busy as a graduate student in the department of educational research at the University of Pittsburgh working toward my M.A.

Katherine Wright Mueller, who is married to a graduate student in organic chemistry at the University of Illinois, is a research assistant in the department of pharmacology at the same school. At their wedding Joyce Kass Eisenstein was a bridesmaid and Faye Singer Rosch attended.

Carol Zurheide is assistant to the Dean of the Corcoran School of Art where she is trying to study sculpture. Paige Churchman is living nearby. Anne Murton and Kathy Cochrane visit occasionally.

Nina Talalay is sharing an apartment with Christina Andrews. Both are preschool teachers at Barnesville Primary School and are taking a course at the University of Maryland Extension in early childhood. Nina teaches art and Christie teaches math. Their apartment is just a few minutes from Washington which makes them very happy.

Marsha Weiss is in the graduate school of education at the University of Chicago working toward her master's degree in the teaching program with a specialty in history. She is teaching in the laboratory school there. Allison Oakes shares an apartment with Marsha along with Allison's sister, Andrea.

Barbara Willis is doing graduate work in English literature at the University of Wisconsin. She was in Harriet Dye's wedding over Christmas and saw Sue Cosgrove Jones '68, and Caroline Roth, '68, there.

Laura Weill Brown is teaching high school French and is working toward her M.I.T. Her husband is an executive at Saks Fifth Avenue.

Caroline Taylor Heysek's husband is working on Wall Street for the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and is attending New York University Graduate Business School part time, while Carolyn is the associate editor of "Toys and Novelties," a toy trade magazine.

Rosemary Spierer is working in the creative department of Muller, Jordan, Herrick, an advertising agency.

faculty and students as well as the college administration. Concern for the total college community is perfectly exemplified by the acting chairman, Mr. George D. Lockhart, and is readily apparent in the tone of Board deliberations.

In addition to being distinguished in the quality and credentials of its members, the Board is a very hard-working group. This is especially true of those members drawn from the Pittsburgh area, who carry the heaviest loads of committee work between scheduled meetings.

Informed and probing questions give evidence not only of talent and experience, but of conscientious homework and unwavering attention by the entire membership. It is a rare board of directors that does not give some room to members whose principal contribution is a respected name to grace the institutional catalog or annual report. Ours seems to be that rare kind of board.

In the three years I have served as an alumnae trustee, I have seen not the slightest evidence that any matter, important or trivial, has been subject to pre-planned maneuver. Openness, depth, and thoroughness are consistently characteristic of the discussion. One effect of this is to render even unpromising agenda items alive and interesting, though, to be sure, there are few matters of business that could be so described.

Perhaps the eminently successful operation of Chatham College makes it redundant for me to say that your confidence in its administration and board is extremely well-founded. I appreciated the opportunity to have this reconfirmed for myself, and thank the Alumnae Association for it herewith.

Chatham Career Counseling

Within the next few months a committee, under the chairmanship of Mary Anderson Sheehan '54, will begin the task of setting up a reference file on alumnae careers. Its purpose will be to provide readily accessible information about the kinds of jobs Chatham alumnae are engaged in, and to enlist the services of employed alumnae as job consultants for present students and other Chatham graduates.

It is the plan of the committee and of the alumnae office to work very closely with Miss Peggy O'Hara, the college career counselor, in order to provide a much needed service to alumnae and students alike. The first questionnaires will go to alumnae living and working in metropolitan areas. The success of the project will depend largely upon the cooperation of the alumnae who are asked to return the questionnaires.

Job Advisory Service

Pittsburgh area alumnae who are interested in part-time jobs, either paid or volunteer, are invited to consult Job Advisory Service, a new organization sponsored by the Pittsburgh Women's Alumnae Club Council of which Chatham Alumnae Association is a member.

JAS has temporary office space in Beatty Hall at Chatham, next door to the Alumnae Office. Staffed by volunteers, three of them Chatham alumnae, the office hours are 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. The telephone number is 441-8200, ext. 256. Calls should be made only during the specified office hours.

Can't You Help Interest Qualified Student in Chatham?

Admissions are extremely important and effective in channeling the list of qualified students toward Chatham and alerting the Admissions Office to students—including daughters!—who should know about Chatham.

Our help is needed to encourage and recommend students who may be interested in Chatham's new and unique educational offerings. As a alumna, you can describe Chatham's relationship to the city as a working laboratory and to the six colleges and universities with which students enjoy cross-registration. You know of its commitment to dualized education, and you have learned from recent publications about the exciting Interim courses and the expanding opportunities for independent study.

If you know of interested students in your area, please submit their names on the attached card and mail it to the College. The Admissions Office will handle the rest.

Our commitment to top quality education for women has been affirmed, and, with your continued support, our source of qualified students is assured.

Please send information about Chatham to the following girls:

are traditional grades associated with "regular" courses. There was an air of excitement and enthusiasm surrounding the interviews interviewed about their experiences.

The more attractive group of girls would be hard to imagine. Beauty per se may not be a requirement for entrance to Chatham, but one would not be able to prove it by the girls who were interviewed. Added to their natural beauty was a sparkle, a zest, a purposefulness not always associated with youthful people in these times. As each girl shared her experiences, she actually seemed to glow.

Debbie Bickel spoke first about her independent study of the carving and casting techniques of the Chinese bronzes in the Freer Gallery in Washington, D.C. Debbie, a history major who likes oriental art. While she lived in Georgetown, she was granted free reign at the Freer Galleries to study the bronzes. Dr. John Pope, director of the Galleries, had granted Debbie permission to remove the bronzes from the gallery in order that she might study them closely.

Janice Crookham spent most of her Interim studying in Williamsburg, Virginia, because she is interested in restoration. She spent a week in Williamsburg and there used the college library. Janice plans to do graduate work in art history.

Janice Patton and Nelle Sandridge, both members of the

Do you feel a generation gap? Do you have cabin fever? Want to complete your bachelor's degree? Want to take a refresher course? Want to be certified to teach?—Pittsburgh alumnae, check with your alma mater; out-of-town alumnae, consult your local college or university.

As reported in the Fall 1970 Recorder, open registration for Chatham alumnae was recommended by the Alumnae Council and student body, endorsed by the college faculty, administration and students.

To enroll in a course at Chatham:

- 1) File application with the Admissions Office. $5.00 application fee for alumnae who have earned a bachelor's degree; regular $10.00 application fee for all others.
- 2) Make an appointment to talk with a member of the admissions staff.
- 3) The admissions staff will make arrangements for you to talk with the appropriate members of the faculty.

Fees:

Part-time student (2 or less courses per term)—$250 per course.

Full-time student (3 or more courses per term)—full tuition.

Please contact the Admissions Office for application, catalogue or other information about registration.

INTERIM INTERVIEW

by Virginia Long Carlson '48

"We believe that a college should be a community of fully participating faculty and student scholars, a community in which the responsibility for the success of our living together is shared. Through vigilant examination and re-examination of ourselves as individuals and as a community, we have developed Chatham's flexible curriculum, the Interim, the 4-1-4 academic calendar . . ." So states the Chatham College Bulletin of December 1970.

In order to take full advantage of the close faculty-student relationship at Chatham, a new academic program has been implemented at the College. A new academic calendar consists of two terms of fourteen weeks each, during which the student pursues four courses, separated by a one month Interim term in January in which the student undertakes just one project. According to Dr. Richard Morrill, the director of the Interim program, entering freshman are required to take two Interims but may, if they like, participate in all four. Students must have a sponsor for the program they choose and the program must be approved by the Interim Committee.

According to some of the students who recently participated in the January 1971 Interim, learning took on a brand new cast. Gone were the geographic boundaries of the campus, gone were the fixed hours of classes, and gone were the traditional grades associated with "regular" courses. There was an air of excitement and enthusiasm surrounding the students interviewed about their experiences.

A more attractive group of girls would be hard to imagine. Beauty per se may not be a requirement for entrance to Chatham, but one would not be able to prove it by the students who were interviewed. Added to their natural beauty was a sparkle, a zest, a purposefulness not always associated with youthful people in these times. As each spoke of her experiences, she actually seemed to glow.

Debbie Bickel spoke first about her independent study of decorative and casting techniques of the Chinese bronzes at the Freer Gallery in Washington, D.C. Debbie, a history major, likes oriental art. While she lived in Georgetown, she was granted free reign at the Freer Galleries to study the bronzes. Dr. John Pope, director of the Galleries, had granted Debbie permission to remove the bronzes from their cases in order that she might study them closely.

Janice Crookham spent most of her Interim studying Williamsburg, Virginia, because she is interested in restoration. She spent a week in Williamsburg and there used the reference library. Janice plans to do graduate work in restoration.

Debbie Patton and Nelle Sandridge, both members of the

Chatham Choir, spent their Interim at Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, near Utica. Sixty-five Chatham students and forty Hamilton students combined voices for four hours every day in an intensive study of twentieth-century chant music. For the most part, students paid their own way, staying in barracks for a dollar a day. At the end of their study they composed their own piece and recorded it. Both Nelle and Debby spoke enthusiastically about the Choir's trip to Europe next summer.

Two other Chathamites undertook a study of architecture: Mary Beth Coffman, an art history major, and Betsy Schwab, a drama major, participated in lectures, discussions, readings, films, and field trips which introduced them to the basic vocabulary and concepts of architecture as a medium, such as structure, orientation (site), space, and circulation. The course was taught at the College by five Pittsburgh architects and included walking tours of the city and meetings with the City Planning Commission. Betsy and Mary Beth had to design a park, a city block, and a building which would be built on the Chatham campus using the contours of the land. Implicit in their relating of their experiences was a deep awe and respect for the architectural profession.

Cheryl Dowds participated in an exchange program with Washington and Jefferson College, during which she studied pre-med at the Mercy Hospital in Washington, Pa., for four hours a day, five days a week. A different field was studied each day. Cheryl, majoring in biology, plans to go into medicine as a general practitioner. She was able to participate in an intensive laboratory experience for two hours a day, working at slides, in a study of tissues and cells. As she put it, "It sounds like a lot of time, but you need it."

Another kind of experience was the one in which Joan Klopp participated. A German and French major, Joan and a group of eleven others went to Switzerland where they stayed with a Swiss family and became completely immersed in European language and culture. As she put it, it was a great opportunity living near Berne and speaking German constantly. The father of the family with which Joan stayed was a teacher and she was able to observe their schools from the fifth to the ninth grades. Joan became very animated when she recalled the wonderful things the children did in the schools there. They all seemed to be involved and enthusiastic about what they were doing. In Switzerland, some people never get to fifth grade: they are tested and some don't make it.

What is it like living and teaching in an American subculture? Asked what is meant by a subculture, Susan McCeney offered one definition: It's any group of people other than those considered to be white Middle Americans. Susan's Interim was spent in a rural mining community near Uniontown, Pa., in an area designated as Appalachia. Eight students went and they stayed in three "dinky" little rooms in the home of a retired teacher. The project in which Susan participated was funded by Mrs. Vira Heinz.

The school in which she taught was the German Central Elementary School, and all of the people working in the school district are originally from that area. Susan was especially impressed with the principal who she thought was a wonderful person. Susan spoke with a great deal of affection about her experience in the small town of McCollingtown, which consisted largely of a gas station—period. She feels she learned much about teaching methods and about people, and as a result of her experience, she plans to go into teaching. A sophomore at the present time, she feels she now knows the direction in which she wants to go.

In attempting to sum up the feelings of the group of girls interviewed, it would be safe to say that all of them gained something infinitely valuable from their Interim experiences, that all of them surprised even themselves with the amount and degree of dedication with which they pursued their aims, and that all are looking forward to continuing in some way what they have begun. Joan Crookham is already planning ahead to next year when she will be doing more restoration work under the aegis of Dr. J. Cutler Andrews, Professor of History at Chatham. Already she knows that alumnae in the Harrisburg, Philadelphia, District of Columbia, and Williamsburg areas will be asked for help with housing for students while they do their work. Debbie Bickel said it for all the girls when she stated that she completely surprised herself with the amount of work she did. Debby Patton said she liked the pass-fail system in some courses because she concentrated on what she was doing without worrying about grades and surprised herself by working harder than she ever had in her life.

Much of the credit for the success of the Interim program must go to Dr. Richard Morrill, young, intelligent, committed. He explained that the Interim is a new kind of intellectual venture with emphasis on voluntary participation of the faculty. Thanks to a "revolution" on campus last spring, during which the Interim was introduced, the requirement for College Board examinations for admission was eliminated, and auditing of classes prior to final selection of courses was offered to incoming freshmen, new forms have emerged—"forms that we deem contemporary means of fulfilling the traditional convictions in which Chatham College is rooted."

If nine lovely young women are in any way indicative of a wave of the future, Chatham and the world need not worry. And if a youthful professor has anything to say about it, we can all rest comfortably knowing that Chatham young women are being educated in the finest, noblest sense of the word. John Witherspoon, an early president of Princeton University stated that, "The end of a liberal education is to set all human powers in motion." One could almost feel those human powers being set in motion during the interview with the nine who shared their experiences with this interviewer. They all seemed to be fortunate indeed in that they all apparently knew what it means to be involved, to be committed, to be alive.

INTERIM Addenda ~

Alumnae Assistance Needed

The nine students who were interviewed by Virginia Carlson represent only a small percentage of the 410 who participated in the 1971 Interim, and the subjects selected for both independent and group study cover a wide variety of interests.

It is interesting to note, also, that two sons of alumnae were among the young men from other colleges who enrolled in courses offered on campus. Tom Ladley, son of Marjorie Noonan Ladley '43, was a member of the class studying Introduction to Architecture. Jonathan Emley, whose mother is Shirley Gordon Emley '35, took the course on The Study of the City.

As might be expected in the first trial of any new program, there were some problems—particularly for students doing independent study off campus. The alumnae-student relations committee, whose membership includes six alumnae and a dozen or more students, suggest two ways in which alumnae might help alleviate these problems.

1) Suggest the names of persons in your local area who might be interested in having a student as an intern during the month of January, 1972. Areas of interest include law, medicine, scientific laboratory projects (chemistry and biology), hospitals, museums, art galleries, television, theater, film making, art, government, urban affairs, and many, many others.

2) Offer bed and/or board to a student who might come to your area to work on her project. The extra costs involved in working in another city can be a determining factor in a student's selection of a project. And, in addition to helping the student, it can be an interesting experience for the alumnae family.

One of the major purposes of the Alumnae Association is to work with and for the students—our future members. Many of the alumnae-student activities must be campus-centered, but these suggestions offer the opportunity for alumnae all over the country to participate in the program.

Communications having to do with the project should be addressed to: ALUMNAE-STUDENT PROJECT, Alumnae Office, Chatham College, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15232.

by Helen Heath Smith '44

Ruth Swisshelm has not made things easy for her biographers. A high school drop-out who becomes a business tycoon; a coddled rich girl who champions social reform; these are the stories that write themselves. But what do you do with a subject whose leadership qualities and direction have been clearly apparent since girlhood? who is remembered in student days for the quiet authority, evenness of temper, dependability, meticulous attention to detail, capable handling of all assignments, that now still characterize her as she prepares to take leave of the office of Director of Alumnae Affairs and retire?

What do you do? Well, if you are one of the hundreds of alumnae who have worked with Ruth over the past twenty years, you cry a little—in total selfishness—because the loss is much the same as when your family doctor retires, or your clergyman is reassigned.

Like television's Marcus Welby, Ruth Swisshelm spreads calm and confidence wherever she goes, and among all age groups—partly because she deals in facts and not placebos, but surely because she shares a more important Welby secret: the love of people, valuing their talents and understanding their frailties, ever willing to go the personal, as well as the professional, mile to serve them. Welby has the advantage of a script; Ruth plays by ear and by heart.

In a more and more ambivalent and arbitrary world, another oasis of blessed consistency seems about to shatter, and the effect on many of us is far more than psychological. As one alumna has said, “Over the past two decades of my business and personal life, only two sources of information have batted 1,000 for me—Carnegie Library Reference Department and Ruth Hunter Swisshelm.” With regard to the 4,000-plus women in the Chatham Alumnae Association, there is probably no question that Ruth cannot answer—usually without reference, or with only the briefest reference, to her files. Unlike a computer, she does not mix up the Smiths and the Joneses, does not print out a lot of extraneous data, and she makes each phone caller and visitor feel like a valued and special alumna of the College.

Ruth's classmates agree that the qualities that have made her direction of alumnae affairs memorable were already blossoming in her undergraduate years. Says Martha Ackerson Smith, “I remember Ruth then as someone you always could count on—steady, even-tempered, able to take charge of things, and to carry them out without prodding.” Martha, who, like Ruth, is a past president of the Alumnae Association, concedes that she has worked hard for alumnae cause “because of Ruth.” Ellen Connor Kilgore, who commuted with Ruth between Wilkesburg and the campus during their undergraduate years, muses, “She was quiet and efficient. Then, as now, she could get more done in a short space of time than I could hope to do.”

Ruth's plans for her life were plain to her then, as they are today. She planned to marry Bob Swisshelm as soon as she graduated. “Her school year revolved around the date for Penn State house parties,” remembers a classmate. And as soon as Penn State and Pennsylvania College for Women had delivered diplomas to the classes of '27 and '29 respectively, Ruth and Bob were, indeed, married. They settled down, had a son, Bob, and proceeded into a happy domestic future.

But the College, as it turned out, was not quite ready to let Ruth Swisshelm go. Active in alumnae affairs, she was elected president of the Alumnae Association in 1950. At the end of her term, the alumnae office was without a director, and Ruth, because she was familiar with current Association affairs, agreed to “help out” temporarily in the office. Eighteen years and some 1,500 alumnae later, Ruth has chosen an early retirement to coincide with Bob's. The well-planned future includes prolonged leisure at the Val Buren Bay, New York retreat where they have spent happy vacations for many years.

A side of Ruth's life that not many alumnae know is her active role in the professional organizations related to her job. In 1954, she was instrumental in founding the Womens Alumnae Club Council of Pittsburgh, the organization of local alumnae clubs whose parent colleges are members of the American Alumni Council. She was the

PRESENTING . . .

The New Director of Alumnae Affairs

After proofreading the questionable, but admittedly beautiful, article Helen Smith has written about me, with the promise that I would not edit a single word, I have chosen to exercise my editorial prerogative in another way. I have reserved for myself the pleasure of introducing my successor.

Chatham alumnae everywhere—meet Marjorie Noonan Ladley, Class of 1943, who will assume the duties of Director of Alumnae Affairs on July 1, 1971.

Marjorie, a psychology major in college, has the advantage of having had both business and Alumnae Association experience—the former as a commercial research analyst for U. S. Steel Corporation of Delaware; the latter as a member of a variety of committees, and more recently as an elected director with responsibility for the Alumnae Fund.

The Ladleys—Marjorie, husband William, and their two sons and two daughters—reside in the Fox Chapel area of Pittsburgh, where she has participated in community, garden club and Girl Scout activities.

Because the Alumnae Office is a department of the College, the official appointment of the Director of Alumnae Affairs comes from President Eddy. Prior to this, however, Alumnae Association president Jean McGowan Marshall served as chairman of a committee composed of those members of the administration with whom the Director of Alumnae Affairs works most closely. These include Mr. Robert A. Barr, Jr., Assistant to the President, Dr. Norman W. Chmura, Provost, Mr. Leonard G. Doran, Secretary of the College, Mrs. Toby Milligan, Director of Public Relations, Miss Peggy Donaldson '44, Director of Admissions, and Miss Peggy O'Hara, Director of Financial Aid and Career Counseling. Following individual interviews, the committee presented its unanimous recommendation to the President.

I am confident that Marjorie Ladley will serve the Alumnae Association and the College well. My greatest wish for her is that she may enjoy the same kind of friendship and cooperation that Chatham alumnae have given to me. With that, one can do almost anything.

— 30 — Ruth Hunter Swisshelm '29

group's first president, and later served as secretary-treasurer for a number of years.

Ruth is well-known and highly respected among her professional peers on both the district and national level of the American Alumni Council. She has served both as member and moderator of district and national conference panels, presenting papers on such subjects as "Program Prospects on a Small Budget," "Alumnae Program for Seniors," "Enlisting and Training Alumnae Volunteers," and "Alumnae-Student Relations." In 1969, she was appointed area coordinator for a newly established AAC consultation and assistance program. Last year she served as chairman of the nominating committee for District II, AAC.

In 1966, the Associated Alumnae Presidents and Directors Association was organized by ten women's colleges (Bryn Mawr, Chatham, Connecticut, Goucher, Hollins, Randolph-Macon, Skidmore, Sweet Briar, Wells and Wheaton) for the purpose of sharing mutual problems and ideas. Ruth was a charter member of this group, and, along with the successive Association presidents, has been consistently active in its affairs.

Chatham alumnae who have worked with Ruth during her years as Director of Alumnae Affairs cannot help but rejoice with her as she moves into another bright and happy chapter of her life with Bob. But rejoicing and sadness are generally admixed, as Shelley and other poets have duly noted, and the occasion of Ruth Hunter Swisshelm's retirement proves no exception. And so, to one "antarii lapis" from many, "Go in peace, Ruth, with the gratitude and the well-wishes of us all." As is fitting on memorably happy occasions, we claim the right to cry a little.

CHATHAM CLUB ACTIVITIES

The Grand Tour by several members of the administration and faculty made 1970-71 an exceptionally active club year. Sometimes individually, on other occasions in groups of two or more, nine persons participated in the programs, and alumnae were privileged to meet Mrs. Eddy wherever the President went to speak.

Guests at most of the meetings included alumnae, their husbands and guests, parents of present students, and secondary school counselors. The broad topic for discussion was Chatham Today, with each speaker covering his or her particular area of interest and responsibility as part of the whole exciting year of innovations.

Chronologically, the meetings were as follows:

October 24: Dr. Norman W. Chmura, Provost, Cleveland Club luncheon at Stouffer's Shaker Square.

October 29: Mrs. Doreen Boyce, Assistant Provost, and Dr. Richard Morrill, Interim Director, Alumnae Council speakers on campus.

November 3: President and Mrs. Eddy, Boston Club evening meeting at the College Club.

November 6: Provost Chmura, combined Philadelphia Clubs, evening meeting at Drexel Activities Center.

November 9: President and Mrs. Eddy, Washington, D.C. Metropolitan Area Club, cocktails and dinner at Orleans House, Alexandria.

November 12: President and Mrs. Eddy, Buffalo Club wine and cheese party, Faculty Club, State University of New York at Buffalo.

November 14-15: Provost Chmura, Chicago Club wine and cheese party at home of Margaret Cooke Skidmore on Saturday evening; Sunday afternoon tea for prospective students at home of Mary Loughran Fell.

December 1: President and Mrs. Eddy entertained members, husbands and friends of Pittsburgh Juniors Club at their home for sherry and conversation with several members of the touring group.

December 3: President and Mrs. Eddy, Provost Chmura, New York City Club, reception at the Harvard Club. Alumnae from New Jersey, Westchester County and Long Island were invited to join with the local alumnae.

January 11: President and Mrs. Eddy, Provost Chmura, Cincinnati alumnae (not an organized club) for cocktails and buffet supper at home of Barbara Black Bloomstrom.

February 3: President and Mrs. Eddy at Cleveland.

February 14: Mrs. Clifford S. Heinz, Chatham Trustee, gave a buffet dinner at the Surf Club in Miami in honor

A Word About Credential Files from the Office of Career Counseling

During the summer of 1971, credential files that predate 1965 will be destroyed if they have not been kept up to date or used within this period. The reason for this action is twofold:

- (1) References that predate 1965 are out-of-date. Employers prefer recent references.
- (2) Files are becoming cumbersome.

Each graduate whose file is to be destroyed will be notified before the action is taken.

The Office of Career Counseling will assemble a credential file (either new or replacement) for any graduate who contacts the office. The charge for this service is $5.00.

of President and Mrs. Eddy. Alumnae and their husbands residing or visiting in the Miami area were guests.

February 24: Dr. John W. Cummins, Associate Professor of English, spoke to members of Pittsburgh Juniors at home of Barbara Morgan Spiegelman.

March 9: Provost Chmura, newly reorganized Westmoreland Country Club, evening meeting at home of JoAnn Rymer Lightcap in Latrobe.

March 10: Provost Chmura, Mt. Lebanon Area Club evening meeting at home of Peggy Korb Smith.

March 25: Mr. Robert A. Barr, Jr., Assistant to the President, was the only one to arrive at the home of Martha Lasky Sanders for the scheduled meeting of the new Atlanta Club—a severe ice storm kept the local members at home!

April 6: President and Mrs. Eddy entertained members of Decade V at luncheon in their home. Dr. Chmura, Mrs. Boyce, Mr. Barr, and Mr. Leonard G. Doran, Secretary of the College, participated with Dr. Eddy in the program. Jean Marshall and Ruth Swisshelm were guests.

April 16: Mr. John R. Curry, Instructor in Mathematics, Southern California Club evening meeting at home of Virginia LeFurgy Tubbs in Claremont.

May 6: Miss Nancy J. Kuhn, Admissions Counselor, with Rochester, N.Y. alumnae for brunch at home of Elizabeth Reed Dann.

At this time, three Chatham clubs have not had a college speaker this year. A November meeting in Detroit, at which Dr. Chmura was to speak, had to be canceled. With Baltimore and Minneapolis (Upper Midwest Club), it has been a matter of time running out before dates and speakers could be scheduled. They shall be first when the new year begins next fall.

CHATHAM COLLEGE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION

Proposed Revision in the Constitution

In accordance with the Constitution, Article V—Amendments, Section 1, "This Constitution may be amended at any regular business meeting of the Association by a two-thirds vote of the members present, provided that a notice of such amendment shall be sent to each member prior to the meeting."—the following proposed revision will be voted upon at the Annual Business Meeting on ALUMNAE DAY, June 5, 1971.

CONSTITUTION

Article III—Officers

Present reading:

- Section 1. The officers of the Association shall be a president, two vice presidents, a recording secretary, a corresponding secretary, and three alumnae representatives to the Board of Trustees of Chatham College.
- Section 2. The Executive Board shall consist of the officers of the Association and five elected directors. The Secretary of the College, the Director of Public Relations, the Director of Alumnae Affairs and the Director of the Alumnae Fund shall be ex officio, non-voting members of the Board.

Proposed revision:

- Section 1. Same as above.
- Section 2. The voting members of the Executive Board shall be the officers of the Association, five elected directors, and two students appointed by the Chatham Student Government.
- Section 3. The Secretary of the College, the Director of Public Relations, the Director of Alumnae Affairs and the Director of the Alumnae Fund shall be ex officio, non-voting members of the Board.

Explanation of Proposed Revision

At the February 1970 meeting of the Executive Board, the following recommendation was made by the Alumnae-Student Relations Committee:

That a student serve as co-chairman of the Alumnae-Student Relations Committee.
(The First Vice President of the Association serves as chairman.)

That the student co-chairman and one other student serve on the Executive Board as ex officio, non-voting members for a period of one year, February 1970 to February 1971, at which time the trial procedure would be evaluated.

At the February 1971 meeting of the Executive Board, student representation on the Board was evaluated and acted upon, unanimously, as follows:

The year-long experiment of having two students on the board has been successful and beneficial to both alumnae and students.

The work of the Alumnae-Student Relations Committee has been greatly enhanced by having a student serve as co-chairman.

One of the major concerns of the Alumnae Association is to establish a closer relationship with the students.

The present work of the committee can be strengthened by granting full voting privileges to the two student representatives on the Executive Board.

The president, Jean McGowan Marshall, appointed Nancy Diven Seagren and Ruth Hunter Swisshelm to study the Constitution to determine the necessary revisions for carrying out the above recommendation.

DEATH

Belle McClymonds Marshall (Mrs. Wm. G.), August 25, 1970. After a long stay in a nursing home, Belle passed away quietly.

Clarissa Blakeslee Ingle has been in and out of hospital this year and is bed-ridden most of the time, but continues her interest in the movements to stop the war, largely by writing to our senators. Her son John is active in the U.S. Park Service.

Maggie Mae McCullough Huffman sounds well and strong. I hear through relatives that Rachel McQuiston Kelly was confined to a hospital this past summer.

Sara Carpenter is still busy caring for her ill sister. Sara and I expect to attend the Reunion Luncheon, June 5, marking sixty years as alumnae.

Eagle Scout. Her daughter Helen's career as an archivist is of great interest to Lucile. Recently, by way of relaxation, she has been reading an old German prayer book and that brings back memories of Miss Skilton.

In between phone visits, Laila Clavert Ament and I see each other at Decade Club meetings. Laila is her usual cheery self, leading a life of good works and busy with her various activities. Birthday congratulations will soon be in order for Laila's Aunt Alta (Mrs. Dilley), this time for her 107th birthday!

Helen Craig Culley paid a visit to Pittsburgh friends in 1970 and while she was here Helen Baumann, Laila Ament, and I met her for lunch one day at Stouffer's. Helen looked fine and we had a jolly visit together. She was going on a short Caribbean cruise in February.

Louise Fletcher is wintering in Sarasota, Florida again, where she enjoys her contacts with the Chatham graduates there. Last summer she spent a wonderful week at Chautauqua Assembly Grounds at the Hotel Athenaeum.

A piece of bad luck befell Emma Geisler Hart Osterloh when she came down with a miserable case of shingles and thereby was deprived of her annual visit in Connecticut. Even in January Emma was still feeling the effects of her bout. She sends her love and best wishes to all her classmates.

Jeanne Gray Orcutt and her friend Miss Porter, are still living on Meade Place in Pittsburgh. We regret that Jeanne so often finds it impossible to attend Decade Club meetings for we always love to have her.

Two notes from Martha Young McKeon—one at Christmas and the second in answer to my card, tell of her grandsons, now 8, 10 and 12, and, like the rest of Canada, mad about hockey and skating. Martha says she tried reading Russian literature for six months to see if she could develop a taste for it, but found the taste so bitter that she is switching projects and going in for painting.

A nice breezy letter came from Mildred Weston Rogers from the old address in Gallitzin, written with the thermometer at seven below zero. She speaks of being shut in almost entirely by the mountain evergreens on their one hundred acres. She and Bill had a too short trip to Paris in the fall, then back for the publishing of Bill's book on Carl Sandburg which came out in October. Mildred says her old poems from the New Yorker continue to be reprinted, some in foreign countries, but nothing now can thrill her as did their first appearance in the New Yorker years ago. Her favorite collection of poetry this past year was published by Dent and Sons in Canada and is entitled "Quest."

I must say that Grace Wilson guessed correctly when she said that the promptness of her reply to my card was enough to make me faint. Grace is living along about as usual, giving up a few things, but still getting around. And as is the case with most of us, she feels that time just flies.

My new address appeared in last year's Recorder so the move is old news now, but was the most important event for me in 1970. In the summer I visited again in Oneonta, New York and Packanack Lake, New Jersey. At the present writing I am about to fly off for a little visit in Florida, a farewell visit with my Spanish friend who is leaving these shores to live again in Spain. I might add that your Pittsburgh representatives, Helen Baumann, Laila Ament, and I are faithful members to Decade V. The attendance at our meetings is still very good.

DEATH

Leah Claster, February 3, 1971

Leah's death was unexpected. Her burial took place in New Kensington, Pennsylvania, on February 5. She is survived by her brother, Attorney Louis Claster of New Kensington.

The Class of 1917 was never large, but we are still going strong and are fairly healthy. We live in nine states, but we travel over most of the others and in foreign countries. Some of our members did not write but we have no ill news of them.

Martha Crandall Noyes and Pauline McCaw Patterson have nice reunions when Martha visits her son Jim in Dayton, Ohio. Pauline lives there quietly and happily, and sends greetings to all.

Martha Dunbar Say and her husband have sold their Florida apartment and now call Chautauqua "home." They do not stay there, but travel to Ohio and the West Coast. They were able to see Dorothy Stoebe Markell and George established in their new apartment in Pompano, Florida, after months of toil and preparation.

Edna Evans Peterson sends greetings from Greensburg, where she lives, quietly, caring for her invalid sister.

Ruth Gokey Walters and Roy settled near Buffalo for the winter months, after which they will enjoy the Lake home again and play host to the younger generation. Roy junior, our "class baby," is now 52. Of the grandchildren two are married, four are in college, and the other seven in grade and high school. They were able to spend a few happy days with the Pittsburgh members when they helped to celebrate the Golden Wedding of the Markells in October.

Elizabeth McClelland Crawford has now given 27 years to volunteer work in the Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh. That is some kind of a record. She has a married granddaughter, two grandsons in college and a teen-age granddaughter.

Helen Pardee Nichol reports the same round of activities. She proposes a toast to 1917 and all our ties of friendship.

Louise Reinecke Thorne travels. She visited Caroline and family in England this summer. Her visits to Marian Wright in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, permit flying visits to and from this village of Chatham. Anxiety over the open-heart surgery for Phoebe Anne's husband is over. Now she can forget frozen pipes as she goes west to visit Jack and her cousins whom "she reckons by the dozens."

Miss White writes that she enjoys "active retirement" with freedom to do what she likes when she likes. She remembers all of us with affection and interest. She appreciates the occasional messages and wishes you all good for the coming year. She is an admirer of Rachel Carson and her achievements, especially as to birds which she feeds and watches all winter.

Your secretary enjoys her freedom from the schedule of many years. She also looks over the stories of your lives and feels that many of the "blissful dreams of long ago" did come true.

NEW ADDRESS

Helen Treloar McGarrity (Mrs. John A.), 864 West Colonial Circle, Holly Hill, Fl. 32017

Helen Treloar McGarrity took time in the midst of moving with an arm in a sling to answer my appeal for news. She has sold her duplex and will be living in a "dollhouse" of a mobile home in a small community of good friends, members of the A.A.U.W." She visited last spring with relatives in Cornwall, England.

Edith Pew and Stella Espy were in Europe last summer, seeing the Passion Play and something of Austria, Hungary, Germany and Switzerland.

Lois Farr Hamilton enjoys the year-round sunshine in Tucson where she lives near her daughter and four grandchildren, the oldest of whom is in the School of Engineering at University of Arizona. She continues her volunteer work with the Red Cross Blood Center, and spends each Christmas with her son and grandchildren in Pittsburgh.

Marcella Geary was suffering from a torn back ligament when I called, which we hope is better now. Florence Fast McIntyre traveled to Texas and Arkansas to visit her daughter last year. Ella Martin is busy as ever with her work at Allegheny General, church groups and friends. She visited Mabel Shaffer in Kittanning, who also continues her church and community activities.

Mary Reed Reeves divides her time between her home in Latrobe and a summer home near Ligonier, where her five grandchildren are often with her. Gladys Sullivan Peter's husband has not been well so she has been less active than usual. Her oldest granddaughter is at Wellesley, her second at Baldwin. The others are in school near their homes in Darien and Seneca Falls.

Betty Sprouls Spragg called to tell me that she hoped to be soon on her way to Cody, Wyoming to visit her son. The older of his two sons is at the University of Wyoming. She also has two grandchildren near her.

Edith Honsaker Schumacher and her retired husband leave the Illinois cold each winter for the warmth of Carlsbad, California, where they are near daughter Lois who is with IBM. Marion teaches stringed instruments part time in Milwaukee schools while her husband teaches anthropology at Marquette University.

Lucile Long Haseltine and her husband spent five weeks in France last summer. Another of our travelers is Marcella Collier Des Jardines, who wrote from Arizona where she and her husband stopped over on their way to Hawaii. Last summer they were abroad, spending a week in the Chateau country before taking a cruise in the Baltic and the North Sea with stops at Moscow and Leningrad.

I appreciated each reply, and I look forward to seeing many of you at our reunion on June 5. It will be a success only if every one possible is represented. If you are not able to come, do send me a snapshot to show how kindly the years have been to you.

NEW ADDRESSES

Sara H. MacGonagle, 11 South Lake Avenue, Albany, N.Y. 12203

Louise Wilson Matthews (Mrs. J. MacDonald), 1804 Mears Avenue, Cincinnati, Oh. 45230

Harriette Bowers Sime visited the Chatham Campus last summer, met the new assistant to the President, stopped for a fond look at her old suite in Woodland Hall, toured the new residence halls and recalled studying by gas light in Berry Hall. She has just concluded a semester's course on the Conceptual Approach to Social Studies, and attended the National Council of Social Studies held at the New York Hilton, Thanksgiving week. She has been vitally interested in the subject since her research article "Psychological Function of Search" was published in the October 1943 American Journal of Psychology. She still gets the urge to go back to Law School because of the need for improvement in laws for women. "Don't get me wrong, I am not an out and out Women's Lib gal." While her present contacts are deep at Columbia, New York, Hofstra and Adelphi Universities, she would love a good old session again with her Chatham classmates.

Jean Bumgarner's sister Louise had a heart attack a year ago, but they were able to spend a delightful week at the Flanders in Ocean City last September and hope to repeat their spring and fall visits.

Josephine Dickey sends greetings to the class and says her activities in New York have not changed very much in the past 28 years—a job in the daytime and concerts, theatres, etc., at night. She is thankful to keep active and interested in that busy, sometimes frustratingly hectic city.

Margaret Foster Bergstrom and Ed are enjoying a busier-than-ever retirement in Boca Raton, and plan a three months trip to France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and Austria.

Justine Kress Kreps went on a Philadelphia Orchestra Tour last May, enjoying two weeks of music in Berlin, Bonn, Vienna and London. She has retired from school teaching and is the proud grandmother of six boys and one girl. Her daughter lives in Virginia Beach and her son in North Jersey. She looks forward to seeing Jean and Louise Bumgarner when they come to Ocean City.

Sara MacGonagle found her roots were deeper in Albany than in Pittsburgh, and was happy to return there last summer.

Julia Matthews Kirk writes that Chatham College is so different from the PCW we knew, but we can all be proud of the changes and advances. She hopes to return to see for herself, but can't imagine a 50th reunion. Imbued with the explorers' spirit, she and Myron enjoy the out-of-doors, fishing, investigating out of the way places, and are planning a summer trip to the Southwest.

Dorothy McCormick Means keeps busy with lectures, concerts and Theatre Group plays. She has been deeply involved with "Meals on Wheels" through her church, which serves as the base of operations for the North Boroughs of Pittsburgh.

Martha McKibbin Tainall is sure she is the only young graduate who has a great grandson, adding, "Honestly, I haven't a word for publication and, like the President, I'm never to be quoted." I can add that she and Tom had a delightful trip abroad in September.

Mary McKinney Wilson and Margaret McRoberts Egbert send best wishes to all.

Marion Moffett Barnes escaped the cold winter by vacationing at Jekyll Island for two months. She and Nick enjoyed an interesting trip to Greece last fall.

On the day before she was to return from a trip to England last May, Marie Ohle Craig fell, breaking both bones in her wrist requiring surgery. Although she did not have to pay for hospital care, she could not help noting the condition of the buildings and the scarcity of doctors, most of whom were East Indian. She is thankful for her complete recovery.

Marjorie Patterson Kaiser and Carl (who taught economics at Chatham, 1946-1950) expressed their earnest desire for peace for mankind in an unusual Christmas letter which also contained a poem written by Marjorie when, as homesick expatriates, they spent Christmas 1967 in Rome. Marjorie, in addition to teaching violin and playing in the University Symphony, is president of the liaison board for the community and several hundred foreign students on campus, chairman of Children's Friend and Service Board for South Kingston, and conducts a class in American cooking for eight Asiatic and European faculty wives. Carl, besides his teaching at the University of Rhode Island, is Moderator of the Kingston Congregational Church, a member of the Board of Directors of the Rhode Island Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management, and active at the national level of that group. Their son is on a team doing heart and lung surgery in the Boston Baptist Hospital.

Eliza Peterson is most enthusiastic for another class luncheon in the spring. Eliza, Dot, Marion J., Martha S., Marion B., and myself lunched last Halloween at Kaufmann's Dining Room, and plan to meet again in May. If anyone from out of town wants to join us, let me know. Dot read a letter from the Administrator of the Fairhaven Home, Upper Sandusky, Ohio, 43351, stating that Miss Kerst had recovered from a sick spell, used a large magnifying glass to read, could write (slowly) and enjoyed receiving mail from old friends. Dot had a card which we all signed and sent to her.

Marion Rainey Johnston enjoyed "An Ideal Husband" by Oscar Wilde, produced by an English cast on WQED in January. This was our Senior Class Play.

Edith Wilds Clark sent a postcard from Palm Beach indicating she was enjoying a tour of Florida in February.

Helen Brown Cook is busy with Twentieth Century Club, garden club, hospital board, investment club and golf, with time out to summer at Muskoka, Canada. Her niece, Isabelle Spurr Holloway, (Chatham, '60, and daughter of Margaret, '22) and family have been transferred to Pittsburgh, which makes her joy complete.

Your secretary continues to be grateful for the flow of news. Happy visits with family and friends and the educative experience of attending Alumnae Council made her year memorable.

NEW ADDRESSES

Katherine Dashiell Roberts (Mrs. Cyril H.), 201 North Ocean Boulevard, Apt. 910, Pompano Beach, Fl. 33062
Virginia Jordan Peters (Mrs. Russell E.), 451 Rudder Road, Naples, Fl. 33940

After receiving such a warm and friendly note from Louise Graham Brown, it was a great shock to learn in February of the "cerebral accident" she had suffered in the Pittsburgh Airport as she was returning from Washington and her duties as president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. The latest bulletin as the Recorder goes to press states that Louise, after undergoing brain surgery, is making excellent progress. Certainly we, as classmates, join with her many friends across the country in praying for her complete recovery.

Greetings to all of our class who were (or were not) at our reunion last June. The usual fun of "Auld Lang Syne" was had by all. Out of our business came only one item of general class interest. It was voted that each member of the class contribute a minimum of $5.00 a year for the next five years, with the resulting total amount to be used as a 50th reunion gift to the College. Stand by for further details.

In answer to what has been termed a "touching appeal" for news, there have been greetings from Helen Ahlers Patton, Louise Bumgarner, Margaret Herron, Frances Rolfe, Mary Shane Muir and Elizabeth Stevenson McQuiston.

Lois Brown Nabors is president of her literary club and active in the Uniontown College Club and her church.

Jean MacColl Horton shuttles between Ithaca and Cape May where they have a second home. The Horton's two sons live in Cambridge, Massachusetts and Pittsburgh.

As for me, your reluctant secretary, I am in my usual tizzy, either packing or unpacking. This time it's packing—destination, South Pacific. Last summer my husband, with our sons-in-law and male descendants, fished in Alaska. On their return, we decided to investigate Central Europe and had a fabulous trip through the Iron Curtain countries, ending up in Vienna.

NEW ADDRESSES

Ella English Daub (Mrs. John C.), 965 42nd Street, North, Pinellas Park, Fl. 33565
Louise Hazen Meilicke (Mrs. Myron), 1 Bayview, Paradise Bay Park, Bradenton, Fl. 33505
Katherine Lowe Hall (Mrs. Walter B.), 505-161st Avenue, Redington Beach, Fl. 33708

Special Notice from Ella: "A reminder of our 50th Anniversary Fund is in poor health. Get current, please, ladies. Make checks to me, and make them payable to Chatham Alumnae Class Account. The more we pay in, the more interest we have. We've lost lots of interest already."

Ruth Allman Jones and her sister are enjoying the status of grandmothers, and are maintaining their old family home, which is the right size for home-coming of children and grandchildren. Ruth's daughter now lives in Pittsburgh after being in The Netherlands for eight years.

Marybelle Carroll Emerick writes that she, Burley, Shirley, and her four grandchildren are all well. She enjoys notes from Christmas from Irene Stout, Marian Connelly, Sally Davies and Kay McPeake, and wants to be remembered to all the classmates.

Elizabeth Crawford's retirement is such a full-time occupation that she wonders how she ever found time for "working last summer she traveled through Bavaria and Austria, taking in the Passion Play and parts of the Salzburg Festival.

Ella English Daub and her husband got into their newly-built home last April. Ella's travels last summer included a month in Europe (without husband); Atlanta and Virginia Beach (with husband) for Shrine meetings; Wilmington, Delaware, New York, New England; a trip across Canada, enjoying the scenery for ten days; back to Pittsburgh before returning to Florida. At Christmas time they were again in Pittsburgh from which they were happy to depart southward leaving the cold and snow to 'you-all.'

Harriet Evans says she is 'just plugging along', but is interested in hearing about the activities of our class, and in the changes and developments in this part of the country.

Sallie Everson Bright has just finished 5 years as Director of Public Relations and Fund Raising for The Community Service Society in New York City, and is staying on to write a history of the agency from 1843-1971. She is proud to have been included in a newly-published volume, "Outstanding Women in Communications." Sallie has four grandchildren—two with her daughter in Santa Barbara, and two in New York City. Her husband and son are both with the American Broadcasting Company Television in New York.

Ruth Green West has a son and a daughter, both married, and four grandchildren. She is recently a widow and is looking forward to retirement after 20 years of teaching kindergarten. She has also taught piano, has her master's degree and 39 credits beyond it, and has had some poetry accepted for publication.

Mary Harner Britton's travel plans for next fall are to rent a camper and tour the New England states. She and her husband 'did' the Southwest in March 1969.

The past year has been Louise Hazen Meilicke's year to travel. She calls it 'visiting grandchildren.' Her son-in-law is with the German government doing research for a year so that was her excuse to visit her three grandchildren, after touring Greece and cruising through the Islands, and sightseeing in Italy, Switzerland and Austria. Also, she went with a niece on a Caribbean cruise to Panama. From Europe she flew to Denver to see a new grandson, seeing "enough snow in the Rockies for the winter. So here I am in balmy Florida. Tomorrow I will be in Merida, Mexico, to see Mayan ruins." Louise is still painting and has won a ribbon.

Elizabeth Hewitt Holland, as a member of the National Board of Directors of the Board of Homeland Ministries of the United Church of Christ, went to Humacao, Puerto Rico, in April, to help dedicate the new buildings of Ryder Hospital there. She and her husband visit many sections of the country each year promoting a better understanding of the mission of the Church. Elizabeth also mentions that next year will be our 45th anniversary and asks what the plans are.

Pegg Johnston McClintock had a visit from Kay Lowe Hall and husband last winter, and saw Sally Springer and Lib Hubbard. Pegg enjoys playing golf, has no children nor grandchildren but likes to read about others who do, and hopes to attend our next reunion.

Kay McPeake Arnold writes an interesting 'sermon' (as she calls it) which I quote: "An appeal to all as your years pile up that we each make an effort to keep our minds alert and develop an interest in some pursuit outside ourselves. Enjoy your grandchildren and have fun with them. If, like me, you have none, adopt one or two from your neighborhood. Old age can be a burden or a time of joy—we make the choice—but early!" Kay said not to print this but I think it is worth printing.

Eleanor Mowry McKelvey says "retirement is wonderful!" Her travels include a cruise to Scandinavia, Europe and the Mediterranean, a vacation in Malaga, Spain, plus trips to Chicago to see the grandchildren.

Anne Negley Brunot and Rae Stevenson Bair are still going to their old college bridge club and enjoy traveling to Pittsburgh together. Anne and her husband have accepted an invitation, from an old friend in Miami who has a large boat berthed at Nassau, to cruise among the small Bahaman Islands.

Frances Ray Dunlevy has traveled in Europe for the past six summers, and really loves "every old building, museum, garden, handcraft, and bit of gentility over there, not to mention the opera and concert performances." Last summer she toured Mid-Europe by car for 45 days with her granddaughters, aged 18 and 15, and one of her choir girls, also 18, taking in the Passion Play, then ending up with five days in London. Frances says she has spent her life teaching young people—more than just how to sing, she hopes!

After retiring from teaching last June, Inez Wallis joined Dulcinea Marshall Walker for a delightful trip to the British Isles. The previous summer they "did" the Iron Curtain countries together. Inez was planning to make Sarasota, Florida her headquarters during February and March.

Isabel Watson Druschel has twice tried to retire. After ten years with Lawrence County Board of Assistance she resigned, but was called back to start a Social Service Department in the hospital. After accomplishing this and resigning once again, she is now involved in starting a Meals on Wheels program. Meanwhile, "we are remodeling an old house in the Shenandoah Valley where we eventually plan to live." Isabel has a year-old grandson.

As to your secretary, I had an awful (in the true sense of the word) urge to answer each of your letters personally! I enjoyed and appreciated hearing from all of you who wrote and wondered why the rest of you didn't. I am an "armchair traveler" myself, but I was delighted to read about everyone else's (or everyone's else) travels and doings. The extent of my travels is riding around town in my convertible with its top down, weather permitting, or out in the very adjacent countryside. I walk to my work at the W.&J. College Library, read a great deal, play bridge, and look after my home—after a fashion. And I keep a Diary. Timothy who has just turned 24, is not married yet, and lives at home so that I happily still 'have the pleasure of his company.' My hands are rather arthritic, but otherwise I think I am well—for an old lady! Speaking of reading—no one mentioned that she had read any good books lately. Or bad.

Dorothy Appleby Musser has a new grandson, Kevin Alfred Musser, born January 28, 1971. "The most interesting thing I did in 1970 was to go to the aid of my daughter and her family after hurricane Celia demolished their new Corpus Christi home on August 3rd."

Isabelle Basline Hammond's mother passed away February 13th, 1971. We extend our sympathy.

Ellen Connor Kilgore, hospitalized for arthritis in her hip in October, is now recuperating with a "new" hip and expects to walk again this summer.

Mary DeMotte Sutphen's first grandson was born November 21st, Robert Edward Radsperner. A granddaughter, Terri Lynn, is in the first grade. Mary planned to vacation in Florida, making a stop in Sarasota to see Miriam Fisher Planert.

Elsie Duncan Harrison and her husband had a trip to the Scandinavian countries in August and will go to Acapulco this spring. Son Scott is an orthopedic surgeon practicing in the Harrisburg-Hershey area. Their daughter and family live in Wayne, Pa.

Ruth Hunter Swissbalm, after 18 years in the Alumnae Office, will resign as of June 30th. A very painful knee and husband Bob's retirement are the contributing factors. Ruth and Bob will be leaving Pittsburgh to reside in Van Buren Bay, New York.

Mary Louise Jones is still busy with her mimeograph machine but has recently taken to a wheel chair, her hip and knee sockets having been chipped by numerous falls. She had visits from Peg Fifer and Erma Stuart this past year and always enjoys seeing the '29ers.

Ruth Lenon Dissenbacher has had an exciting year: traveling to London and Paris, and singing with the New Britain, Connecticut Symphony for its November performance of Beethoven's Ninth and the Finale from Fidelio. Ruth's boys are pursuing medical careers, and she continues to enjoy her position as an Educational Assistant at the University of Connecticut.

Martha Stem's "busy-busy year" with the Optometric Extension Program Foundation, Inc., has taken her to Hawaii where she represented her organization at the American Optometric Association Congress and attended the Board meeting of the Volunteers for Vision, of which she is a member. Martha has just published another series of text papers on Professional Relations for the Foundation, and collaborated with fellow staff members on a number of articles and books.

Grace Sherman Fullerton's son Gordon was chosen as Capsule Communicator for the first five hours of the Apollo 14 launch; his was the voice from Mission Control in Houston. Daughter Jean will receive a master's degree in social welfare from Portland State University. Grace and Charles are still living in Salem, Oregon, and nearing that "magic land of retirement."

Louise Sutton Ivory sends greetings from Chambersburg, Pa., where she soon will retire from teaching elementary reading.

Evelyn Thompson Wible has been very busy ministering to her father who has been in St. Clair Memorial Hospital for some time.

Dorothy Warner is working every day but still manages to have fun.

Peg Wooldridge Fifer has coast-to-coast children. Penny is a physical therapist at the Richmond Cerebral Palsy Center. Susie lives down the road with two delightful "gremlins," Margot and Todd. Barbara lives in Illinois with her new son, and Mike in Hood River, Oregon with his wife Lyn. Back at the farm are "grandma and grandpa with a huge menagerie." In her spare time, Peg is active with the Sewickley Hunt, the local shooting and fishing club, and the Pittsburgh Poetry Society.

Your secretary reports a grandson, Christopher Matthew, born October 21st, 1970. Soon after this news is sent in, we plan an escape to the South for a winter holiday.

It was a joy to read your letters this year. Many classmates said they could hardly believe it has been 40 years since we graduated. Forty years is a long time, and during these four decades we have lived through three wars, one great Depression and several recessions, and have seen the world turned upside down by a violent industrial revolution, a radical social revolution, and an impulsive ecological revolution. In addition, the science of space exploration has advanced to the successful completion of three manned landings on the moon—all by Americans.

June 5th is the day we celebrate. Several have already said they will be with us, and we hope that we will have a large number present for all of the events of the day.

We have lost contact with Naomi Bower Rimer, Anne Bozic and Julia Connell Callaban. If anyone knows the whereabouts of these gals, please notify the Alumnae Office.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn, back in school again, is studying Property Tax and Appraisal at Rutgers University, prompted by the fact that she was elected Township Tax Assessor last July. She continues on the County Library Commission, but has given up the School Board post. Son Dick hopes to graduate from Juniata College in May and has applied to Pitt School of Library and Information Sciences. A trip to Alaska is on the Dearborn's travel schedule for June 7.

Eddie Beale Asper, our true Alaskan, and Linn went to Europe last May. Their guide was a young British woman who teaches history in London during the winter, who gave them lessons all the way across seven countries, and arranged for them to stay at quaint, old hotels with lots of charm. On the way back to London, they crossed the Channel in a Hovercraft, and during the crossing the guide remarked that she felt she was home when she saw the white cliffs of Dover, as Americans think they are home when they see the Statue of Liberty. Edie wanted to remind her that she was not home until she saw the Mendenall Glacier! The Asper kids were home for Christmas—Linn and Mary from Fairbanks and Jim from Cleveland.

Dorothy Bortz Kund, during her 24 years in Miami, has been a busy wife, mother and grandmother, active in social, civic and political clubs. She has assisted in school and college functions of her daughter Annette, who now works for National Airlines. The Kunds' have a six-year-old granddaughter. Dot travels extensively with husband Paul, a real estate and mortgage broker. Their most recent trip was to Hawaii, and they are planning a trip to Europe in June.

Martha Bradshaw Stout is glad to have the jeep, the station wagon, and the ice melters that Walter installed in their driveway to cope with winter ice, snow, and sleet, and summer grass and weeds. Last May, Martha became a grandmother, and is now boring "all my friends with photographs of Heather Anne."

Betty Brandon spends several months each winter at Fort Myers Beach where she works for a few hours each day in the hotel office. Back in Beaver Falls, Betty has a new first-floor apartment. She does volunteer work in the Social Service Department—Medicare Section—and in her church. If anyone is coming through Beaver Falls on the way to Pittsburgh in June, Betty would like to arrange for a ride.

Dode Crawford Macy's one daughter lives in Summit, New Jersey, the other in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and there are four grandchildren. Dode comes to Pittsburgh quite often to see her mother.

Around the first of the year LaVerda Dent Morgan and Tom moved into their new apartment in Sarasota. Last June, LaVerda's youngest daughter presented them with their sixth grandchild, a lovely "Irish miss named Colleen."

Helen Dombhoff Neely and John, Sr., visited in the mountains with their elder daughter, Shirley Neely Brown ('62) and children. John, Jr., is in his second year at Harvard Law School. Following graduation from Princeton, he served two years in the Army, one of which was in Vietnam. Their younger daughter graduated from Duke University last spring and is working in the treasurer's office at Durham.

After breaking her leg on the 1969 trip north, and her husband having a heart attack during the 1970 trip to sell their Cleveland home, the Simmermachers (Clara Falconer) have decided to stay in Florida. Clara says that, in spite of her crutches, she does not feel old enough for a 40th!

Gertrude Ferrero Prather, with husband Tom and daughter Lynne, spent 25 days last summer in the British Isles where they joined their younger son Michael, a student at Oxford.

Last June Kay James McCann and Ray returned to Lassen Volcanic National Park, where they caught the transition from winter to spring. At lower elevations the wildflowers and birds were delightful; at high elevations the snow was twelve feet deep on both sides of the road. In October they visited many of the exciting red rock parks of Nevada, Utah, and Arizona: Red Rocks at Las Vegas, Dixie State Park, Zion, Bryce, Capitol Reefs, Arches, Monument Valley, Oak Creek Canyon, and others. On their way home they saw Joshua Tree National Monument and the California condor country. At their local Foothill Park they led the Audubon Annual Christmas Count. Kay has been branch chairman for a conservation topic, Beleaguered Earth, and on two state committees. She was in charge of the Audubon Wildlife Film Series in Palo Alto and chairman for weekday field trips for both AAUW and Audubon. Besides, she has had two one-woman watercolor shows in 1970!

Margaret Jefferson has retired as headmistress of St. Anne's School in Charlottesville, Virginia, and is teaching biology in the public schools there. In recognition of her years of service to the school, the St. Anne's Alumnae Association has made Margaret an honorary member.

Florence Jones Maddox and William spent three weeks in Europe last summer with Olive Wycoff MacCarthy and Parker. The four of them flew from Columbus, Ohio to Cologne, Germany, took a boat trip on the Rhine, and continued with a bus tour of more than 2,000 miles through Germany, Oberammergau and the Passion Play, Austria, Hungary, and Yugoslavia. They spent three nights in Dubrovnik, and a full-day trip to St. Stefan and Kotor in Montenegro. They flew to Columbus from Yugoslavia in one 23-hour day! The Maddoxes hope to attend an engineering convention in San Francisco this spring. Recently they went to a Chatham Alumnae meeting in Cincinnati where they met President and Mrs. Eddy and the new Provost, Dr. Chmura.

Our sincere sympathy to Addie Lasner Sachs whose husband died in Palm Beach, Florida where they had lived for the past year. Addie says she will remain in Florida and will not be back for our reunion.

It was good to hear from Elinor Martin Vaughn. Her husband retired two years ago but his contract engineering work since then has taken them to several parts of the world. Last summer they spent three weeks in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and later in the summer they went to Barranquilla and Bogotá, Columbia. Their son and his wife are both architects in Philadelphia, their daughter and husband live in Des Plaines, Illinois. Elinor is eagerly looking forward to seeing all the girls again at our reunion.

Isabelle Patterson Konold retired from social work in December and is now doing all sorts of things she had put aside until retirement. She, too, is looking forward to that special day in June.

On a trip to the Far East, Margaret Ray McDowell and John visited Thailand, the Philippines, Japan, and Hawaii on their way home. In the Philippines they visited with their daughter and son-in-law who are teaching missionaries in the Philippine Wesleyan College about 60 miles north of Manila. Their son-in-law is setting up a department in technology, and daughter Nancy is doing a research project on family planning—a badly needed field of education because of the high birth rate. Margaret comments that there are a number of missionaries and Peace Corps workers in the area, and everyone's home is a way-station for workers as they travel about the country. To go far into the interior, a jeep is a must for travel because of the poor roads. Nancy and family have a comfortable residence, built in a style suited to the tropics—with wide eaves for protection from sun and showers, and an airy, screened porch with a wall around the entire yard, the latter a necessity to protect one's possessions. In Malaysia they visited their nephew who is an agronomist. Between Kuala Lumpur and Malacca they saw much of the countryside—how the people live and work. In conclusion, Margaret said that the thing that impressed her most was the emerging middle class. They are demanding better wages and a real share in the development of the country. There are many new professional and business people, almost all of whom are eager to come to the United States. They want jobs that will bring United States wages, without realizing that high wages mean inflated prices. Her greatest pleasure on the trip was the opportunity to find the "real Orient"—not the one usually seen by tourists.

Anne Ritenour Harbison moved last summer to a home that she and her son Frank, Jr., purchased. It is large enough for both families to be independent of each other, with lots of room for the grandsons. Anne's other son, Joe, is area administrator for the Ditto Division of Bell & Howell in Los Angeles. Kay Potter has been urging Anne to try to come to the 40th, but Anne says she will see later.

Kay Rockwell Potter and Bill returned to Coral Gables at the end of January after a fascinating three-week cruise on the Stella Oceanic through the Islands and to Central America. The Potters have another grandchild—their 14th! Kay says she has circled the date and "the good Lord willing—I will be there—and hope to see many 31-ers."

Lucilla Scribner Jackson says that with three married children, and the number of grandchildren increasing, the 40th must be so! Bill's business takes him to various parts of the world so Lucilla does a lot of traveling with him. She has had some eye problems, but hopes to be present at the reunion.

Viola Smith retired from teaching last June and celebrated by taking a trip to Switzerland and Italy, her second trip in 20 years. She was interested in seeing the familiar sights and all the new buildings that had gone up in the meantime.

Olive Wycoff MacCarthy and Parker returned from their three weeks in Europe with Flo and William Maddox to prepare for Marti's wedding at home on July 11, which meant getting the yard as well as the house in shape.

A short September vacation at a small inn on Chesapeake Bay, and an October trip into Pennsylvania's "flaming foliage country" were my jaunts for the year. See you on June 5th. We have some business to bring up at the class meeting. Let's have as many as possible there.

Edith Rial Benford (Mrs. John D.), 507 South Main Street, Greensburg, Pa. 15601

Helen reporting:

The sympathy of the class is extended to Edith Rial Benford and to Estons Lee Davidson whose husbands died during the past year, and to Genevieve Davis Crawford, who lost her brother and whose 91-year-old mother is ill and confined to a nursing home.

Greetings are appreciated from Jessie Doudna Phillips, Edith McBane, Ruth Ross, Jean Saul, Vi Sekey Jessop and Jean Shaw Brackman.

Evelyn Aliff Dautlick's daughter Cory (Chatham '68) is employed at Western Psychiatric Hospital in Pittsburgh, and son Jay, no longer in the Army, is completing his work in biochemistry at Pitt. He, Susan and their baby daughter live in Monroeville. Evelyn is still teaching and Joe is fine.

Sara Allison Allman's son Wes, 24, married Diana Van Kirk on November 21 in Akron. Sally, a senior at Baldwin-Wallace, was a bridesmaid. The occasion provided a wonderful reunion with their family from Pittsburgh.

Evelyn Bitner Pearson's children keep moving and multiplying (10 grandchildren now). Evey continues to teach reading, spelling and vocabulary in the Work Incentive Program at Goodwill Industries three days a week.

Helen Chambers Swartz retired from Federal Government employment in December 1969, and bought a condominium in Sarasota, Florida. Since she knew no one there, she joined the American Association of Retired Persons, whom she accompanied on several interesting trips, including Key West and Cypress Gardens. She also joined the Women's Symphony Association, AAUW, YWCA, United Presbyterian Church, Welcome Wagon, two concert series, a play series, and the Ringling Museum.

Mary Crumay Kehew finds Denver, where her two grandsons live, to be too far from Bradfordwoods, but she expects to visit them soon, as well as her two unmarried daughters in Boston. Mary is a regular home-bound teacher and does some substitute teaching.

Marguerite Cunliffe Gape spent the usual nine weeks in Edinboro last summer, and enjoyed a trip to Lancaster with her mother and daughter. She finds her first-graders a joy to teach. This year she and another woman were the first to be honored by election to the Lutheran Church Council.

Dorothy Edsall Fuller's family follows the orderly routine of home and job, singing in church and community choirs, attending Milwaukee and Chicago theatres, watching the grandchildren (ages 9 to 12) develop, and being grateful that they don't yet feel a generation gap.

We are sorry to learn that Betty Graham Kirkpatrick is frequently in the hospital, but we are glad she takes the time to keep in touch. Our very best to you, Betty!

Virginia Hall McAleese and John are happy and healthy in their retirement spot.

Marjorie Hopkins is working on a picture book with an American Indian theme, and on a revised English curriculum for junior high school in addition to her teaching.

Charlotte Iams had further surgery performed on her face. Since then she has been sewing for Family Service and doing some traveling.

Heart surgery has performed a miracle for Mary Johnston Krudener's husband Art, who had suffered with angina for some years. Mary, now a full-time working girl, reports thankfully that the results were far beyond their wildest hopes.

Phyllis Lebew MacArthur is proud of William, III, who arrived on October 8. Son Bill is assistant cashier at Northeastern National Bank in Scranton and is teaching night school. Phyl still teaches reading and travels as much as possible. She spent last Easter on Grand Bahama and the summer in Spain, Portugal and Morocco. She expects to spend this Easter in Nassau and the summer at the University of Florence.

Gene Llewellyn Price continues to teach piano, and finds this to be good therapy after her strokes. Son Rodger is much improved after a very serious operation.

Ruth Ludebuehl Early and Ruth Nirella toured for a month in a rented Mercedes through Bavaria, where they saw the Passion Play, the Italian Lake Region, and Switzerland. They spent five nights at the luxurious Villa D'Este on Lake Como, left the car at Geneva, and flew to London for good theater and a week's bus tour of Devon and Cornwall. Back home, Ruth N. is busy with senior class rehearsals.

Eleanore McClimans Muncaster's family is preparing for son Hugh's marriage this spring to a nurse from Farmington, Michigan. Last August David was graduated from Indiana State University. In June E. J. and Hal plan to go to the Orient.

Last May Louise Metzgar Iams and Charles enjoyed a trip to Denmark, Sweden and Norway with a group of friends from the University Club. They went to Paris on their own, then to England to spend a week in Bristol visiting and sightseeing with son Bill and his family. In July Dan was married to Sandra Burger.

Last summer I enjoyed a Caribbean cruise aboard the Santa Paula, and a recent visit in Philadelphia with Sally Miller Brash was a nostalgic occasion. Sue is a happy sophomore at William Penn College in Oskaloosa, Iowa. West, after 6½ years of military service in the missile program, is now in pilot training at Vance Air Force Base, Enid, Oklahoma.

Dorothy reporting:

Two years in a row Dorothy Newell has had to cancel a cruise around South America—last year because of a broken collar bone; this year due to a cataract which she will have removed later this year. She has passed the time with her piano and a new Hammond organ with all kinds of stops. The patients at the State Hospital at North Warren are getting pleasure from a Hammond concert organ and Deagen chimes—Dot's gift to them. She has been an honorary member of the Board of the Benson Memorial Library in Titusville, and a member of the Warren Library Board of Control.

Carolyn Pierce May finds that three months in a little house in the Florida Keys makes apartment living the rest of the year acceptable. Bob Senior exhibited his sculpture in a show at Ocean Reef in March. They are anticipating Bob Junior's return in the fall. When in Philadelphia, Carolyn enjoys her work with the Wayne Women's Exchange.

Gertrude Ray Mann spent three summer months with husband Carey on the Persian Gulf, near Abadan, where he was working for Westinghouse. She felt like a character in an English novel as she experienced the desert heat, the international flavor of life in Bandar Mashahr, the contacts with the handsome Iranians, the unbelievable three-day visa renewal trip to Kuwait, and the 17,000 mile journey there and back. Carey arrived home in time for a Boston Christmas, and January found him in Argentina on a new assignment for Westinghouse.

Helen Rowand Dunkle's daughter Maryann is engaged to Philip Alan Langdon, a graduate of Allegheny College and on the staff of "The Patriot" in Harrisburg. Maryann has been working for Alcoa in Pittsburgh since her graduation from Allegheny last June. Christina spent her first anniversary with her husband in Hawaii, and hopes to have him home from Vietnam in April.

Ruby Skinner Miller and her husband spent a month last summer touring the west, going to Vancouver and to San Francisco. This summer they plan to attend the International Geographical Congress in Budapest, after which they will tour Europe.

Sara Stevenson Foster and her husband felt the short rolling shock of the California earthquake as they were waking. Fortunately, there was no noticeable damage in their area. Joe plans to retire in June after 25 years of teaching at Scripps College.

Martha Stuart Muhlbeizler finds life very satisfying in North Carolina where they raise a fine Angus beef herd.

Miriam Young White and Roger have a new grandson, Jeffrey, born on November 10 to Carol and David, who live in Clinton, N.Y. Susan is with Mim and Roger this year, attending Indian River Community College. Imagine the excitement of seeing the moon shot right in front of one's house! Mim saw Vaughn and Marian Baughman Monroe at a Pro-Am golf tournament in Stuart. Roger is still with the FM radio station there.

In February Ed and I took a much needed vacation in Florida. Ginny and Hugh had a daughter, Anne Charlotte, in April, bringing our number of grandchildren to nine. Then in August, Anne and her family moved to Waterloo, Iowa. We visited them in October, but had an automobile accident on the way home. I am happy to say that no one was hurt.

Thanks for responding so willingly to our requests for news and money. Until spring of 1972, sincere good wishes to all.

DEATH

Marian Burns Sabina, December 5, 1970.

We are sorry to hear of Marian's death, and extend our sympathy to her family and friends. A gift to the Chatham Library has been made in her memory.

Sally Aldridge Schaefer continues to work in the hospital gift shop, and, in addition, managed the Garden Club Christmas Show this year. She's been enjoying a pants suit Louann made for her, to prove she's not too old and fat!

An exciting new job started for Helen Birmingham Proctor on November 1 when she became Public Relations Associate for the Burke Rehabilitation Center in White Plains, N.Y. She was also coordinator for a benefit theatre party for the Institute of Rehabilitation Medicine—Danny Kaye in "Two by Two."

Fred and Jean Engel Reppun, with Martha, David and Josh, took off this spring for Yugoslavia and England, with a brief stop in Paris. Martha is planning a June wedding. Jean and Fred saw at least two classmates last year; Ted and Dorothy Wood Clarke visited Hawaii in April, and Ed and Ginny Hyde Schweinsberg in September.

Shirley Gordon Emley's son Jonathan and three friends took Chatham's Interim course, "The Study of the City," and liked the course and the girls (who apparently taught them many things including how to "tray" down the hill) so much that they actually tried to transfer! Shirley heard from Yuki, Eleanor and Miss Eleanor Taylor at Christmas.

Eleanor Harbison Bream's husband Gray is again teaching at Loyola in Chicago, and the commuting from Washington has worked out remarkably well.

Prue Goodale Martin and a friend had a wonderful month-long trip last year driving through Portugal and Spain.

Spain keeps cropping up in your letters. Bob and Louise Leadman Faller (after taking a course in Italian) plan to go to Spain in May. Kenneth and Mary Seaver Hewitt cruised in the Caribbean last year, and were to return to Spain in April. Ed and Virginia Schweinsberg Hyde were going in March, and Ted and Dot Clarke hoped to visit their daughter Barbara there in April.

There were at least three marriages last year. Martha Jane Nims, daughter of David and Jane Harmeier Nims, married Ronald E. Valent, and is living in Ridgeley, W.Va. Bob and Louise Leadman Faller's son Rick married Susan Franz in a charming garden wedding in June. And in August Ted and Dorothy Clarke's daughter Barbara was married to Navy Lt. Walter M. Jones, and is living in Rota, Spain.

Among the more interesting vacations last year was a thrilling raft trip down the Colorado River taken by Bill, Dave and Caroline Hesse Ender. They're showing slides and movies all over town. Dave will enter Bucknell in September.

Marie Martin says she hasn't much news to report, and then mentions vacationing in England and Ireland.

An enforced rest period had Win Jefferson Saxon whiling away the time by reading. Since that was the coldest part of the winter it shouldn't have been too hard to do.

Keith and Ruth Moorhead Sward travelled by car and train through Oregon, Washington and western Canada to Jasper Park with friends, a treat to eye and spirit after crowded, smoggy Southern California. Susan is a writer in the AP Los Angeles Bureau, Martha will graduate in June from Stanford, and Ellen is a freshman at Berkeley.

Forrest and Gerty Russell Lydic had a marvelous trip last May to Scandinavia, and particularly liked Norway. Their son Clarence is now in Vietnam.

Their European trip and the Passions Play in Oberammergau were thoroughly enjoyed by George and Dot Woodwa Evans.

Dot Evans forwarded a copy of a letter from Yuki Naito, and Yuki also was in Oberammergau as part of a tour of Europe and the Middle East. Since her return from Japan she has resumed teaching English and Japanese, and work on the translation of a book. She sends her greetings to everyone.

All of Anna Snyder Milford's family were together for the first time in 27 years when her mother came from Honolulu and her three sisters visited for Christmas. Son John is with the Army in Vietnam. Dale is in the graphics business, and Jim joined the U.S. Coast Guard last fall.

Dolores Steinecke continues as a musical braille transcriber, very satisfying work, and has added a new dimension to her life. Though never a scout, she is now treasurer of the local Girl Scout Council.

Dot Taylor has left U.S. Steel and is now working full time on what was her sideline—brokering and insurance, and is also doing some income tax work. She is still coping with the builder of her unfinished new home, and living in it meanwhile with no hope of completion until spring.

Charlotte Wright Sproull's husband John retired last year from Alcoa. All three children are now married. Kathleen lives in Michigan and has one daughter, Lucy is in Monroeville and has three girls and a boy, and young John and his wife both teach at Gateway in Monroeville.

It has been a real joy to hear from all of you, and I hope that those of you who did not answer this time will send news next time.

Dorothy Casper Zeisig has just started work on an education specialist degree and is teaching in junior high school. Her oldest daughter and husband are returning soon from Australia. Another daughter is in college and the youngest is in high school.

Florence Kinley Mercer, Lyle, and son
Tom went to Italy after Tom's graduation last May as a set and stage designer from Carnegie Mellon. They were joined by daughter Lynn, who came over as a member of a group of six entertainers from Rollins College on the SS France. The highlight of their trip was seeing their foster child, Maria, in Palermo, Sicily, whom they have cared for for fourteen years under the Foster Parent Plan.

Mary Trimble Brittain has a new granddaughter, Heather Victoria Trimble Knox, born September 12, 1970 to daughter, Alexandra. Elizabeth is doing graduate work in classics at the University of Pennsylvania.
Mary is serving on the Board of Directors of Harmarville Rehabilitation Center as deputy treasurer. In February Ray and Mary broke the winter doldrums by taking a Caribbean cruise.

Katherine Pyle spent Christmas in Denver, Colorado with friends. She is president of her United Presbyterian Church Women's Association and a member of the Fort Vance Historical Association.

Isabel Silvis Sterling and Jim took a trip to Australia in November. Their son Pete is spending his freshman year aboard the S.S. Ryndon—world campus afloat—Chapman College's (California) unique international program.

Louise Johnson Purnell is working as a part-time secretary at a small church. She and her husband are active in church work.
Son Dave is an aerospace engineer with Lockheed in Atlanta, Georgia, and John is in high school.

Mary Yellig Earley and family will return to Akron, Ohio in June. They have lived in Richmond, Virginia for five years.
Her three married children live in Akron, daughter Jean is at Dunbarton College in Washington, and Mary Jo is in high school. Mary is a high school librarian.

Betty Bevan Winkler spent five weeks in the Orient last summer.

Martha Branch Culbertson and Cubby find their household has shrunk to its original two members, since Alan and Anne are away at college. Martha is learning about welfare problems as a freshman member of the County Board of Public Assistance.

Elsie Dressler Helsel is still employed by the National United Cerebral Palsy Associations as their Washington Representative and is commuting each week to Athens, Ohio.

Mary Jane Addy Braley and Betty Grace
Hammer Maxwell send greetings to all.

Mildred Brown McIntyre would like to hear from some of our classmates who attended Swissvale High School with her in the early 1930's.

Nancy Diven Seagren and George visited Herb and Sally Anderson Amisberg in their new house in Hilton Head Island, South Carolina. Their son Berry and his wife are still with the church at L'Abri Foundation in Huemoz, Switzerland. Son
Dean is in his last six months duty in Vietnam, and Bill is a freshman at Northwestern.

Our sympathy is extended to Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott, who lost her father in October.

Eleanor Marshall Watters is planning a family reunion. Her youngest son will return from the Peace Corps in East Malaysia; her oldest son and his wife will be back from Africa; and her second son, his wife and child will come from Detroit.
Last March Eleanor and Ed were in Australia and returned home via Japan.

Constance Bell Sedgwick's husband has retired because of his health, and he and Connie will be moving to Deerfield Beach soon. Son Dwight got his master's in industrial engineering last June and is working for a management consulting firm on assignment to Los Angeles.

Sally Anderson Amisberg acquired a daughter-in-law when Doug was married last June. Daughter Judy is at Wilson College this year.

Mary Follansbee Buck's daughter Susie and husband are in Hong Kong where he is teaching at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Her other daughter was married last summer. Mary and her husband have four children in college. After a trip to Florida, Mary is looking forward to going to Hong Kong to see her daughter, her husband and two grandchildren.

Margaret McBride McMaster visited Miss Margaret Robb in Boulder, Colorado last June and enjoyed every minute with her.

Betty Lewis Williams is still teaching in the "Head Start" program at Fairywood Elementary School.

Grace Crutchfield Christenson gives her family's vital statistics. Her oldest daughter, Sigrid, has three children; Roy is with Cal-Tex on the Island of Bahrain in the Persian Gulf; Ralph is in the Army in Germany; Karen is at John Robert Powers
School in Pittsburgh; and Norman is studying chemical engineering at Cornell. Grace and Chris are thriving.

Martha Jane Gerwig Rial and Jack went on a Golf and Theatre Tour through Scotland, England and Ireland last fall. Son
Fred is in the Military Police Company at Fort Benning, and Frank is at Carnegie-Mellon. Our sympathy is extended to Martha Jane on the death of her mother in January.

Naomi Sayre Bartoe has been appointed to the board of directors of the Society of Plastic Engineers, Delaware Valley Section.
Naomi received the Buick Safe Driving plaque and a United States Savings Bond from the Philadelphia Zone Buick-Opel Dealers Association for her thirty-year safe driving record.

Lillian Taylor Franz writes that her mother is still in the Collins Nursing Home. Lillian tells us that some of their group attended Naomi's wedding at the Dormont United Presbyterian Church.

Elizabeth Bradley is planning a cruise to the West Indies late in the summer. She is involved with club work this year.

Remember our thirty-fifth reunion next year, and plan to attend.

Helen Archer Fardig's part-time work in the elementary school library has grown in a year's time to a "Media Center" (audio-visual) job, too. She's also involved in her church with the teaching curriculum. Her three oldest girls are out on their own
now. Still at home are David and Alison, ages 10 and 11. Helen and Ollie have two grandchildren.

Elva Bogren Goodwin reports that Expo
'70 brought more than the usual number of visitors to Hong Kong. They were especially pleased to see Peggy Cooper Upte-graff and family in July. Elva and Bob stopped at Expo '70 on their home leave trip in September. While in Pittsburgh she saw Peggy Uptegraff, Rose Marie Weller Black and Jeanne Kalish Samuels. She hopes anyone going to Hong Kong will let her know so she can see them. She and Bob have chalked up so many air miles in their 10 years of living abroad that Pan American invited them on their inaugural 747 Pacific flight last May.

We're sorry to hear that a freak golf cart accident in September resulted in a severe knee injury for Mary Cole. However, she hopes to recover enough by spring to play golf and work in the garden.

Peggy Cooper Uptegraff, Roy and three of their children went to Expo '70 after daughter Judy's graduation from Penn State. The rest of the summer was spent at Chautauqua. Judy is now at Southern College of Optometry, one of five women there!

Kay Cuthbert Hardee sounds mighty busy. Besides her medical practice she enjoys boating on the Chesapeake. She was in Pittsburgh to attend her 25th Reunion at Pitt Medical School.

Gene Detwiler Davis is looking forward to her first trip abroad this spring. Her youngest son, Bill, went into the Navy February 7.

Still working at Child Welfare Services, looking for foster homes for neglected/abused children, June Feick writes that "the mechanics of my work combined with trying to keep everything at home running smoothly gets complicated at times."

Jennie Ferralli sent greetings to all.

May Gregg Stockton has taken up crewel embroidery in her spare time from home duties and work at Carnegie-Mellon University. Daughter Linda, back from a Red Cross assignment in Vietnam, is now in Germany for a three-year job with Army Special Services. Daughter Suzi graduated from Carnegie-Mellon University last May and works at Westinghouse as a writer and editor.

Still busy at the hospital as Assistant Director of Personnel, Helen Harris Davis and husband are looking forward to a tour of the Greek Islands.

Totty Hoyt Faison enjoyed a visit from Mary Margaret Schmitt, '38, when she was in Houston for a National Public Health Convention. Their children are keeping them busy as only a 14½-year-old and an 11½-year-old can do.

Jeanne Kalish Samuels has acquired an electric potter's wheel and is "persevering through all the attendant frustrations." Daughter Cindy covers the Senate for Columbia Broadcasting System news, Emily will graduate from Smith in June, and Janet is an underclassman at Beloit in Wisconsin.

The summer off from teaching will be filled with two graduations and a wedding for Jean Keenan Farrill. Son Jack will graduate from Cornell and go to graduate school there. Daughter Kathy will graduate from high school and be married in August.

Mary Jane Kerr Leonard is working four days a week as secretary to the Director of Admissions at Germantown Friends School. She and Rowland had a trip to England, Ireland and Wales last summer. They visited with daughter Jo and husband in London. College student daughter Lou, who was in Europe working with an American Friends Service Committee work camp, joined them for a few days in London and Ireland.

Genevieve Love Smith's husband plans to take early retirement, and they will move to Deming, New Mexico where they own five acres of beautiful desert at an altitude of 4,360 feet. Their view of the Florida Mountains is spectacular. She flew to New York in February for a conversation with her publisher regarding revision and addition of audio-visual material. In March she flew to Deming to show their contractor where to locate their new house.

Letitia Mahaffey Andree and Jan enjoyed their drive through New England last summer. She writes, "otherwise am busy with house, United Presbyterian Home for Children, Kindergarten Association and church work."

Amy McBride Bell and John had a trip to Europe in September, driving from Geneva through Switzerland, Northern Italy, Germany and Austria.

Mary McCullough Abbott moved to a fifty-acre farm with a lovely old home last May. Youngest daughter, Mary Lynn, graduated from Washington University and now both girls are living and working in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Mary and Ward had twelve days in Israel with stops in Athens and Rome on the way home. She wished that she had remembered more about ancient history, and said that it was an extraordinary trip since they visited in people's homes.

Still busy writing and directing plays for The Knickerbocker-Knockerty Players as well as teaching Sunday School, serving as conference chairman for the National Conference of the Federation of Motion Picture Councils, and looking after her husband and two supercharged teenagers is Madge Miller Eulenstein. She received the Charlotte Chorpenning cup for excellence in playwriting which resulted in a citation from the Pennsylvania state legislature. 1971 will see the production of a brand new play, OQRS, ETC. "How's that for mystery?" asks Madge.

Mary Milne Hanson's son John will be married this summer after graduating from college. Mary is busy in the furniture and decorating business.

After five years overseas, Alma Mocker Bacon and family expect to leave Seoul sometime this year and return to the States. Their daughter Connie, now back at Wilmington College, joined them last year after spending three months on an exchange program in Eastern Europe. Bridget is enrolled at the American Military Dependents' School in Seoul where Alma is a sixth-grade teacher. Son Mike is out of the Army with an eye toward Australia for civilian life.

Hortense Norton Seedlock's joyous news is that after 30 years they have moved back to Pittsburgh where husband is General Manager for the new Sky Bus. She reminisced about being "a married day student back before it was stylish! Bob was stationed in Pittsburgh as a brand new Second Lieutenant."

Beth Pensom Fox is living in West Virginia close enough to Pittsburgh to commute once a month for bridge club. Her husband is Superintendent of Construction for the new Harrison Power Station. Son Charley is in 5th grade and busy with Scouts and sports.

Our sympathy to Betty Rindlaub Lord whose mother passed away in June. The month before, her aunt had died at the age of 102, and in November her cat died, leaving Betty alone to pursue her career of teaching speech.

"Social work like all other professions is struggling to be effective amidst insurmountable obstacles," according to Florence Ray Stier. She enjoyed gathering the research data for her dissertation on Community Planning for Mental Health and Retardation. She and Don visited Jean Doherty Marlor (ex-'39) and Sandy at Christmas.

From California Ruth Ross Duer writes, "Nothing new in the Napa Valley except to thank God we didn't live in Southern California." She and Ralph are planning to take a trailer cruise to British Columbia in late spring. Last August her mother and sister, Janet Ross '43, visited them.

Helen Starkey Dixon and husband are collecting out-of-print books so that after Bill retires from the railroad presidency they can operate an antique book shop with emphasis on transportation and city planning. She says that S. T. Mallison's, The Great Wildcatters (1953), has a lovely color illustration of Michael Benedum Greystone, plus an interesting account of "The Golden Lane" (Woodland Road). Their daughter is on the west coast studying oceanography.

Mary Bee Weibel McEwen sends her best wishes to all and is looking forward to our next reunion.

Rose Marie Weller Black writes, "I have no marriages, no divorce and no grandchildren." The Blacks had a trip to Europe last summer. Marjie is at the University of Colorado and hopes for a political internship this summer. Son Harry is working at The Pittsburgh Press.

There are two alumnae on our record who are "lost." Does anybody know anything about Jane Foster (Mrs. Monroe Frye, Jr.) or Alice Williams (Mrs. LeRoy Shaeffer)?

Again, it was pleasant for your co-secretaries to hear from you. The Daughters and the Dickinsons are enjoying grandparenthood. Their daughters each have a boy. Lucy and Don's son Ray is a student at Point Park College. Mary Jane and Scott's son Scott, Jr. started as a freshman at the high last fall after spending five weeks in Europe.

Jeanne Anna Ayers Widgery writes, "I have been a good and busy year for us. Our second daughter, Catherine, spent the summer with a tea plantation manager's family in Ceylon, as an American Field Service student. She is now in the college selection throes. Carolyn is still happy at Yale. I am now Director, Market Research, Gulf Oil Chemical Company. My second novel was published in August, 'Trumpet At The Gates.' The first is coming out in paperback next summer, and I'm working on a third—well along with it. I hope to see you at the reunion in June!"

Anne Butler Stewart is opening the new PEABODY COLLECTION of BOOKS FOR CHILDREN (Psychology, etc.) at Peabody

College Library. Harry is vice president of Ingram Materials (sand and marine, and transportation). David, 28, is still living in Paris and winding up a dissertation on LeCorbusier from the University of London. Dick, 24, will graduate from USAF Pilot Training in Oklahoma. He has Survival Training in Washington State, and Special Training in Florida before a tour in Southeast Asia. John, 20, is a sophomore at The University of the South, and Grandmother Butler is fine.

Alice Chattaway Kittle and Jim went to Spain and Mallorca the end of January, and to France in April—their first trip to Europe. Alice went home to Monongahela in October to visit friends and relatives, then on to Memphis to see Brenda and Bill. She adds that son Jimmy works for his dad and that a lawyer in the family is a definite asset. John and Ann bought a lovely old home. John, who is active in the Merchants Association, has 2½ years left in the National Guard.

Dull February was brightened for Shirley Clipson Clarke when her daughter and son-in-law came to visit from Colorado, their first trip home in a year.

Dorothy Geschwindt Schrieber is involved in lots of volunteer projects, but her favorite is teaching remedial reading to seven first-graders. The Schriebers have three grandsons and an expected—granddaughter?!! Dottie hopes all are as happy as she.

Beth Howard Smith writes, "For the past two years I've been up to my ears in education as an officer in P.T.A. and the San Diego Association For Gifted Children. Have met with some success which makes it seem worthwhile. I was very surprised to be asked to testify at one of the eight nationwide conferences of HEW on the needs of gifted children. It was an interesting experience. Dick and son Carl are healthy and busy."

Very brief news flash! "Grandson last spring," Mary Kinter McEldowney.

From Natalie Lambing Paige, "We built a house! It is lovely, in the woods, elevation 18 feet, highest in Bellport! We watch birds! Moved in Dec. and the 5 kids arrived 20th Dec.—natch. Peter Otis and wife Loie still at Ft. Bragg and he may be sprung from Army in June, I hope. Douglas about to graduate from Lehigh . . . one more off the payroll! Lee about to graduate from Choate and is anguishingly college shopping. We also have another son this year, an AFS student from Finland. He goes to Choate, too, and spends his holidays with us. Such a marvelous experience for all of us. He is just a great kid and we all love him. I heartily recommend taking AFS students. We cruised ten days aboard 'Ollie' this past summer, while Douglas drove across the USA and Lee worked as a volunteer at the Grenfield Mission on Bateau Island, Labrador. He said it was the best summer of his life. Mary Linn and Jack Colbaugh spent a very, very short weekend with us this summer which we so enjoyed. We are about to go back to Snowmass (Aspen) for a week's skiing, taking the 'group', and it should be fun. We would love to have any PCW-ites come visit.

Carol Martin and her sister will be moving into a new home shortly, a one story with less outdoor work and boasting a pretty mountain view.

"Remember, fellow Classmates, our reunion is this year. Eight of us had a ball last time. I hope we have more '41ers' this year at the Woodland Road get-together. I want to thank all of you who have sent in your news. Mary Bertha and I have enjoyed being your reporters. Every February since 1966 she and I have chatted on the phone about forthcoming news. My last bit of official business is to inform Alice Kittle and Dottie Schrieber, who live in Indianapolis (one on Allisonville Road, the other on North Meridian Street) to get in touch with one another. Let's ALL go to Chatham in June!!!" Strickie.

Mary Bertha reporting:

Eleanor Asp Stahl reports a marvelous European trip last September and October.

Except for four unique and remarkable grandchildren, Sara Louise Finkelstein Hirschberg has nothing outstanding to report. She had just returned from visiting said grandchildren and children in Denver and Taos, N.M. and is looking forward to reunion.

Mae Oettinger Schweinsberg's son John is in his last year at Grove City College, and daughter Beth and family live in Columbus. Frequent trips are made there to see (you guessed it) the grandchildren.

Still busy at Gulliver's Travels is Dorothy Oliver Friday. At Zonta meetings she sees Rachel Kirk Bobo ('40), and Peg Dunseath Wilson ('40) each month at the College Club. As for the other Fridays, Peter is a freshman and Elizabeth a senior at Wittenberg University. The latter will be married in June. Dr. Richard is still in Guam, and Paul teaches German.

Mildred Rudinsky Kochanski can't believe it is thirty years since our Chatham days. She received a wonderful letter from Miss Effie Walker at Christmas time. Eldest son Ted, now a freshman at M.I.T., was a Westinghouse Talent Search winner and Connecticut Science Fair winner last year. Gregg and Rex are second and fifth-graders.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz sends greetings to all. Still with the county child welfare office, Eleanor is happily ensconced in a fabulous new building, an architectural prize-winner. She and John are getting excited at the prospect of their first European jaunt this summer.

A new grandmother is Alice Steinmark Rightor, whose daughter Libby had a little girl on December 29th. Alice is doing only substitute teaching this year and is looking forward to reunion.

Elinor Weibel Stoltz had trips to Florida, Boston, the Midwest, and Williamsburg, but otherwise it's the same old routine of chauffeuring, creative writing theme correcting, library work, art classes, and more chauffeuring. She and Ed will definitely be at the reunion.

January 5th was Sue Wooldridge Fishburn and John's 25th wedding anniversary. She is busy as ever acting as girl-Friday to John who is Assistant County Attorney. They have two children in college this year and will have three next year.

Your reporter had a fine Florida vacation last March and a September motor trip around Lake Superior to Minnesota and Wisconsin. June, July and August were devoted to the Migrant Ministry Association, operating a used clothing shop and doing "good works" for the Mexican American migrant farm workers who come to Michigan each summer. We are now planning the Association's program for next summer. See you all at reunion!

Late word from Dr. Walter R. Tkach brought the sad news that Helen Weller Tkach is very ill and unable to reply to our request for news. Their new address is listed above.

We have learned, also, that Vivian Frick Nicholas' husband died in February, and we extend our sympathy to her in her great loss.

Marian reporting:

I am now a member of the working class again. After five years of saying that I had to find my own thing as the children kept leaving home, I am now secretary to Toby Milligan, Public Relations Director of Chatham . . . and loving every minute of it.

Falk and I count our blessings as we report that David is teaching in History of Art at Yale on a Carnegie Fellowship; Dan is a Yale freshman (and thus far has managed to avoid having David in class); Louise, at Ellis, rides her bike there in nice weather . . . my car pool days are over.

The cards were full of snow or sunshine, depending on whether you had to stay at home and bear it . . . or could get away from it all. Thank you much.

Pat Blue Byers "announces" that daughter Kris is engaged to a boy who goes to Annapolis. Chuckie just turned 8, and Paul was 21 in April.

Mary Campbell Eckhardt had a delightful trip to Japan, Hong Kong and Hawaii last June. Their Robin spent three months in the Galapagos Islands doing research. He's an ecologist and is teaching at Harvard this year.

Edie Cole is now a Lieutenant Colonel in the Army Reserves. Salute! She is still working at Leech Farm VA Hospital. Her card was written on a zero evening when she was "trying hard to remember where I planted all those crocus and daffodil bulbs."

Jean DeWoody Bailey and Dick are busy with The American Paso Fino Horse Registry. "There are now 350 members in the Association and over 1200 horses registered with us, so there is much work to be done," writes DeWoo.

Peggy Dietz Abele's Ralph is now Executive Secretary of Joint Legislative Air and Water Pollution Control and Conservation Committee in Harrisburg. They will be moving there as soon as the Mt. Lebanon house is sold. Ralph, Jr. is doing graduate work in geology at the University of Massachusetts; Jennifer is in her third year of nursing at Pitt. (Please send in your new address, Peggy).

Virginia Dittges writes, "Both Mother and I are doing well." She is doing volunteer work as Librarian for the Sinking Spring Presbyterian Church Choir.

Jane Fitzpatrick McGough postcards that Jane Ellen has her first semester at Ashland behind her; Tom is waiting to hear from colleges; Hugh is doing well at Shady Side Academy; Marita will finish 8th grade this year.

"Life has reached a sort of calm plateau for Dave and me," writes Florence Frey Burnite. "We're 'well-informed and concerned' citizens, but our activity is limited by health problems. Dave's days involve sound, amplification, and taping on a volunteer basis, which includes reading textbooks for blind students . . . my work with the elderly folks suits me just fine."

Janice Goldblum (who speaks occasionally with Janet McCormick McDole) is still with the Los Angeles City School District, working with the federally-funded programs for the disadvantaged. She flew to Hawaii on a 747 for a brief vacation last year.

Barbara Heinz Barone announces "another child by marriage." Their oldest daughter, Caroline, was married in May to Frank Q. Jones III. He's an assistant editor on a magazine and they're living in New York. Lark will graduate in June from Indiana University. Barb and Ray enjoyed a trip to Russia in November.

Ginny Hendryx Shank gives us a run-down on their girls: Lyn is still in Denver, same job, new apartment; Sally is teaching first grade in Three Rivers, California; Kathy is now a sophomore at Muskingum; Jill is a senior at Churchill and looking at colleges; Kim is in junior high; and this is Chris' last year at Woodside . . . whose P.T.A. next year, for the first time in 20 years, will be without the services of Mrs. Shank.

Claire Horwitz Klein reports that Alan is a junior at Duquesne University and Evan is a sophomore at Peabody High School. She and Seymour are busy with civic activities. Claire is presently serving as President of the Pittsburgh Chapter of Hadassah which has a membership of 5,000. Congratulations, Madam President!

Miles Janouch Price guesses that the highlight of their year will be Christine's graduation from Cornell in June.

Connie Lauer Stein will also have a graduation this June . . . Mark's from Harvard. Joy is a freshman at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia. Connie and Neil are planning a trip to Europe this spring to celebrate their 25th anniversary. Connie's daughter and Jean Sweet Bentley's son Pete, who is a senior at the University of Georgia, have finally met after all the years that have elapsed since their mothers were roommates.

I've purposely saved Peg Johnson Miller till last because her story is complete with happy ending:

"A truly great year . . . I worked very hard all summer doing independent study with Dr. Sartain at Pitt, preparing to realize ambition of many years—going into Indian education. In August, went to Navajo reservation . . . where I was remedial reading teacher. Loved it, learned a lot and have many things I would like to say for and about Indian people. If there is another Indian uprising, I will join it—on the side of the Indians—if they will let me . . . I really expected to spend the rest of my life there and only John Miller could have talked me into leaving . . . John and I were married January 14 in Pittsburgh . . . I have easily and quickly made the transition from roving reading teacher to settled Ambler, Pa. housewife. We have a 3-child family; my Chris (in Florida); John's Martha at home and Fred at Westminster . . . John is with Univac."

Class congratulations to you both!

Jean reporting:

Nina Maley Ross writes that Cindy will be married this summer. Sally graduates in June from Bucknell, having spent her senior year in England. Dick is at Penn State and Laura in junior high.

Los Alamos is twenty-five years old and Betty Maroney Aiello and family have shared twenty-three of those years. Betty is teaching freshman English at the University of New Mexico. Son Bob, a sophomore at Hamilton, is spending winter session at the University of Vienna. Bev is in 6th grade, and husband Bill still plays around with detector satellites.

Dorothy Marshall Autore keeps up on Chatham news through a neighbor, Lester Jipp who teaches at Chatham. Children from ninth grade through first keep her aligned with the young world.

As President of the Herb Society of America, Amy McKay Core is seeing new places, meeting new people and learning more about herbs. Her travels have taken her all over the United States, and we look for her here in New Jersey in March. Gordon graduated from W&J and is in the Army Reserves, Philip is a sophomore at W&J, and Amy Jane finishes at Westtown in June.

Connie Meyer Waldschmidt's son, Chad, was married in August, 1969. He graduated from Hillsdale College in June, 1970 as outstanding senior man, and was elected to Who's Who and Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary fraternity. He is now working for Marbon Chemical in Parkersburg. Bob is a sophomore at Hillsdale and looking ahead to a career in law. Chuck and Connie are home alone for the first time in twenty-five years.

A famous first for the class of '43. Marjorie Noonan Ladley's son Tom, a sophomore at W&J, spent the month of January as a student at Chatham. He reported that the course was good and so were the surroundings. Barbara will go to college in the fall. Bobby and Jane are still at home, but, as Buck travels a lot, Marjorie is looking around for something more to do with her time.

A YWCA program arrived with Janet Ross' letter. She is busy with a building program and recovering from a broken leg, suffered while pushing a 2½-year-old on a swing! A trip to San Francisco speeded her recovery.

Our sympathy to Mary Schweppe Hoffman on the death of her father in January. Rebecca is in her second year at Hood.

No problem for Barbara Steele Mangano to keep busy now that her children are gone. She is a Literacy Tutor teaching a Greek man to speak English, takes organ lessons and lovely vacations with Bill—Paradise Island and Mexico City for starters. Judy and family live in Connecticut and Kathy, a junior at Denison, is now on a Fine Arts tour of Europe.

Jean Sweet Bentley joined the Grandmother Club when Robert Bentley II arrived November 11. His father, Biff, teaching in a junior college and working on his doctorate. Pete will graduate from the University of Georgia in March. Bob is administrative officer for the Charleston Mental Health Clinic. Jean is chairman of the English department at the high school and play-writing in her spare time.

Louise Wallace Menges reports two weddings. Sally Ann was married in April, but is living at home while Rich is in Vietnam as a helicopter pilot. Merrily was married in September and lives in Chicago. Bobbi and David keep Louise busy at home. Bob is now the financial administrator for Third Presbyterian Church.

Kitty Watson Shryock's son John is in the Peace Corps in India. He hopes to go to medical school when he gets home. Daughter Ann graduates from Western College in June. Kitty is with Pittsburgh National Bank as employment manager.

Lorny Wolfe Regan's life abroad sounds very exciting. They have been in Frankfurt for 15 years and have seen most of Europe and North Africa during that time. Daughter Kathy is working for the Engineer Command in Frankfurt; Susie is a sophomore at Mary Washington College. Anne will graduate from high school in June and is still deciding on a college. Ellie is in the 10th grade; and Mar will go to high school next year. All the girls are bi-lingual. Lorny has studied a language and earned a certificate from the Sogetsu School in Tokyo.

Signs of the times—Kay Von Fosse Johnson's daughter Julie is a freshman at Stanford and loves her co-ed dorm. Husband Curt is head of chemical engineering at the University of Colorado.

"Hello" from Janet McCormick McDole still in Seattle with Boeing, from Jeannette Myers Erler on her way to New York City for a visit, and from Peggy Suppes Yimling.

Joe and Marian Teichmann McKon were here for the day in February. Joe is operations officer at McGuire Air Force Base, and Gussie is taking courses at Temple University and working as a social worker in Philadelphia. Marianne is away at prep school. Last fall we had a great visit with Jane Humphreys Agriesti in her beautiful woodland home when we were taking Pati to see Denison. We had our annual fine visit with the Cores en route too. Dan, Jr. is working in Arizona while waiting for the draft board to call his low number. Dick is a junior at Kenyon and Pati is set for Bucknell in the fall. Before Christmas Pati and I got to go with Dan to Puerto Rico where he was evaluating a school.

Lois Allshouse Harnack has two sons in college and two in grade school and is active in church work and part-time work in children's shop.

Paula Basenko Thomas has had a few band compositions published, and her 70-piece Red Coat Concert Band will perform in June at the Pittsburgh Three Rivers Arts Festival. Daughters Paula, at Pitt, and Lilli, at Churchill, are also active musically and the entire family enjoys skiing and a Yoga class.

Janny Beck Jameson's daughter, Priscilla, Chatham '70, was married in October. Son Billy is at Penn State, Tim in high school. They vacationed last summer at Nags Head, N.C.

May will be a busy month for Grace Benner Crosbie with David graduating from Carnegie-Mellon as a chemical engineer, Ruth graduating from high school, and Nancy celebrating her 9th birthday.

Hoping someday to finish her M.A. in German, Hertha Bergmann Caylor is working as a research technician in the Entomology Department at University of California at Riverside. Her son is at University of California at Santa Cruz, and her daughter at Monterey Peninsular College.

Helen Clewer Armstrong keeps busy with teaching and church work. Daughter Leslie Ann is sophomore at Cornell College in Iowa.

Marion Cohen commutes from New Jersey to New York City regularly for accompanying assignments; then returns home to Thiang and Tuptim, a pair of Himalayan cats. Marion says if some Chathamite with a male Himalayan is interested in meeting her lovely ladies, do write.

The big news from Maine is the publication of a book entitled "Freeman Cooper" by June Collins Hopkins' husband Bill. Otherwise life goes on the same with school year in Rockland and three summer months on the Island of North Haven. With all the focus on environment these days, they feel very lucky to have such an unspoiled spot to enjoy. They spent Christmas on the island and were isolated there without boat service for 3 days by a blizzard, but that only added to their enjoyment.

Carolyn Cosel Lampl just finished work on Cleveland's Symphony Ball and is now doing publicity work for the Playhouse and the coming national Occupational Therapy Convention. They spent an exciting Christmas vacation in Spain and Portugal.

Martha Cox Hartman says they will move to Annapolis in June and are now building a house. Their second daughter goes to college this fall, but they're pleased to have one still at home.

Alice Craig Coyne guesses she's just ten years younger than the rest of the class since, after all these years, they're only now about to send their first off to college.

With both daughters at Grove City College, Miriam Davis Schellhaas still keeps very busy, including volunteer work at Pas-savant Hospital.

Louise Flood Egan is plugging away at her master's plus two mini part-time jobs. Her 16-year-old son, John, is an American Field Service exchange student in Cucuta, Colombia. Farley, the oldest, is at Scripps College, and the other four are in four different schools in Pasadena due to their first year of forced busing, which they think is great.

The best news from Nina McAdams Handloser is that her son John is home from the Army, after some duty in Vietnam, and is now at Santa Barbara College. Nina is still doing substitute teaching in elementary schools.

Betty McCrory McBride is back nursing on a part-time basis while husband Jack continues trying to keep Findlay College staffed and running. Daughter Sue, a senior at Ohio State, is studying in Italy at the University of Verona for a year.

Jane Meub Evans says life is even more exciting as the children grow older. Emily, a junior at Denison, was married in January; their son begins college next fall; and the youngest daughter is 15.

Patsy Speers Bradley had an exciting year with a glorious Art Study Tour to Italy last spring, including a one-day stop-over in London for luncheon at the U.S. Embassy Residence. Both boys are in the Navy, and daughter Pam (Chatham '70) was married in January.

Helen Truxal Noyes' delightful Christmas letter brought news of "the greatest vacation"—a trip to Greece, a week on a cruise ship among the Greek Islands, and visits to Istanbul, Rome, Pompeii. The trip was a brief escape followed by practicalities—such as a super boring course for Helen in tests and measurements at the State College. Son Jeff is studying college applications while David is finishing at Cornell.

A first, but happy, communication from Louise Yeiser Threan, who has been living in the Dominican Republic for 23 years since her marriage to a Dominican who is sales manager for a local firm in office equipment. Louise is now bi-lingual, and for the past 5 years has been teaching "English as a second language" at a local university. They have a son working in San Francisco, a daughter at Indiana University, and a 13-year-old at home. Enjoying dips in the Caribbean from their beach house all year round and a "live-in" maid make life most desirable in Santo Domingo. She's so pleased to be in touch with everyone again and sends best wishes to all.

Mary Jane Youngling Tygard is involved in community and church action programs in their new location. They survived Ralph's heart attack last June, and he is associated with the modular homes construction industry at State College. Daughter Sue is at West Virginia Wesleyan and to be married in June; Rog is at Duke and Beth at home.

No "special news", but greetings from Harriet Fleming Muryn, Ruth Ford Woodward, Alice Hanna Ference, Janet Harkless Beattie, Nancy Herdt Hall, Phyllis Ingraham Stout, Petie McFall Schall, Marie Minnemeyer Houston, Emily Noll Zerbe, Elizabeth Schollar Worley, Gertrude Schmeichel Hutson, Patty Smith Joyner, Polly Wilson Ackenbeil, Tillie Wilcox Moncrief and Jane Wood Ziercher.

Our 25th Reunion last June was a most enjoyable occasion with twenty members present—we're only sorry more weren't able to attend. As Lois Lutz Pierce writes, "It was fun seeing everyone again—decided we'd all weathered the 'storm of 25 years' pretty well."

MARRIAGE

Barbara Gill Gregory to J. F. Meagher

Patty reporting:

Greetings from Kay Ciganovic and Ruth Arnold Harmon.

Ann Lee Alexander had an exciting fall acting as coordinator for a State Department project administered by University of Pittsburgh's Graduate Library School.

Patti Balch Lando wrote from Miami Jockey Club, where her husband and she have an apartment. Daughter Sandi graduates from Boston University in June, and son Mark is a sophomore at Kent State.

An Alaskan vacation was quite a thrill last August for Helen Broun Michaels, especially when a land slip had the family stranded for a few extra days in Mount McKinley Park.

Alice Burns Kasimirsky spent her vacation in Smokey Mountains.

Mary Chambers Gibbons is in the Graduate School of Social Work at the University of Pittsburgh and also working for Family and Children's Service in McKeesport.

After five years of widowhood with six children, Babs Gill remarried, and says that former bachelor, Joe, is adjusting very well to a family of ten. Her daughter, Bonnie, is now married and Babs is a grandmother, too.

Priscilla Gersmann Joseph's daughter Randy is married and attending college. Her new husband is a senior at Carnegie-Mellon University. Judy, 17, is a senior at Allerdice. Pat is recovering from an emergency appendectomy.

Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh is doing part-time work at a food brokerage plant. Daughter Jill is a junior at the University of Rochester, and her other child is looking for an art school.

Isabel Griffiths Borland has been doing more than her share of moving since 1965. Starting from Monroeville, she and her family have been in California twice, and twice in Wallingford, Pa., where her husband is now a plant manager for Westinghouse. Isabel has had back surgery and spends most of her time in a brace. Daughter Nancy is a freshman at Wheaton College, and son David is in tenth grade.

Ruth Griffiths Magnuson is still in Pleasant Hills after fifteen years. Daughter Sally is a sophomore at West Virginia University, Malcolm a sophomore in high school, and Lisa in seventh grade.

Vickie Haverstick Myers is Bookstore Manager in North Carolina Museum of Art. The eldest of her three daughters is in a North Carolina regional college.

This winter, Lee Hutton Sage is Director of the Y.W.C.A. "Wednesday Morning Mother's Group and Nursery," a program of help and service for mothers of low income families. Son Enos was drafted in October, and daughter Chris is a junior at Chatham. Her seven- and thirteen-year-olds keep Lee busy at home.

Alice Kells left San Francisco last June and is now teaching biology and a course in environmental pollution at Northfield School, Northfield, Massachusetts.

That's it for 1971, gals. Each year the response to my cards is less. I'll be out of business before the next reunion. All's well at the Shaw's. Tricia is a freshman at Grove City, and Becky is looking around for a college in the fall of 1972.

Gloria reporting:

It was good to hear "no damage" reports from two of our classmates living in the L.A. area. From West Covina Leslie Lees Birch writes they were a little "shook" and Lois Power Moore came through with no problems in Pasadena. Leslie's 21-year-old daughter Holly takes after her dad, who is an FBI supervisor—she does security work for a department store. Cary Birch is a freshman at UCLA, Jamie a high school freshman, and Mama recently received a certificate in floral techniques.

Barbara Mason continues to enjoy Hawaii, but is looking forward to a Japanese vacation in May. In the meantime, a business trip to New York brings her back to the "mainland" in April.

Lois Power Moore says she has adjusted to apartment living, and enjoys it. (That's more than I can say, Lois.)

Janet Thomas expressed her envy of my new southern location and is eager to go somewhere in the south. She soon will complete 25 years in teaching, and contemplates a new address at that time. Come to Atlanta, Janet, it's a swingin' town, but it does get cold.

Amsterdam, Paris and London via the "747" were on last summer's agenda for Norma Trozzo Hopkinson and Sam. She finally convinced Sam that Europe would be interesting, and he's glad he went.

Nancy Walters Cobetto is up to her ears in family, community theater, music accompanying and studying.

Working as a full-time secretary for the Environmental Protection Agency has made a career girl out of Janice Wilson Bader in addition to being a busy wife and mother. Patty graduated from West Liberty College, Roger is a sophomore at Bowling Green State University, and Joanne is a senior at Mariemont High.

Greetings came from Peggy McSwigan Friday, Jacqueline Neal Jackson, Elaine Sauerwein Mathison and Jean Yeager Love, and thanks to all who sent money. If any of you come through or to Atlanta, I hope you will look me up. It's a charming city—especially in the springtime. (Aside to Betty McKee—you really don't want to remain lost, do you?)

Jeanne reporting:

Rachel Anto Parens is trying to finish a play that she has been writing for eons. She is very proud of her husband, Henri, who has just become a child psychoanalyst. They are also waiting for the release of his book Dependence in Man, from International Universities Press this spring.

Lu Beery Wenneker, who completed her Ph.D. this year, is in charge of college counseling and teaching art history at the Ellis School.

Elaine Beyer Zivkovich, first-grade teacher, is working on a Special Reading Section for her school. Her two boys are now in school.

Janet Couch St. Clair and husband celebrated the end of her teaching internship by vacationing in Bermuda. She is now teaching 5th grade in Baldwin-Whitehall. Connie is a sophomore at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, and Bill and Debbie are in Mellon Junior High.

Kathleen Dalzell has changed jobs. She works for a PR man in The Swimming Hall of Fame in Ft. Lauderdale. Last September she spent 23 days cruising the Mediterranean. Stops included Canary Islands, Lisbon, Barcelona and Nice.

No special news but "hello" from Ruth Brodnax Craig, Eva Christy Frangoulis, Ruth Clarkson Brown who is a Brownie Scout Leader the second time around, and your secretary, Jeanne Anderson Nesbit.

Don't forget our 22nd reunion June 5th. If you have any ideas that would make the reunion more exciting, please let one of your secretaries know. Our class bank account is low—please mail your dollar to the Alumnae Office.

Betty reporting:

After the family, music continues to dominate the life of Jean Forward Frank. The boys are now 13, 15, and 18. Pete is a freshman at Duke University.

Everything is great with Jean Fraser Bailey. Dave is happy in college, Tom had a fantastic year in football—won all kinds of awards, and is now waiting for college acceptance. Janet holds up the female end by making all her own clothes.

Roberta Hanson Helm's first one is out of the nest this year, and hopes to go to Arizona State this fall to study architecture. Their 15-year-old is president of his sophomore class, and Jane is in first year of junior high. Their littlest is in second grade. She did have a wonderful month's trip to Europe in May with Ralph, he on business and Bobbie tagging along.

Louise Heineman Harper's big news this year is the promotion her husband received in his company. She keeps busy working at the Youth Club at the church where her children attend.

Harriet Kerr Daye and family bought a trailer last summer and had lots of fun camping in Michigan and Canada. She also worked in a federally funded program for handicapped pre-school children.

Marjorie Livezey Sims has three teenage girls, 13, 16, and 18, and there is always something going on. John has been working in Illinois since November, and comes home on week-ends when he can. Looks like the Sims will be moving this summer.

No news but heard from Alice Holt Miller and Barbara Hoge Dansak. Like all of us, their families are growing up.

Buying a house, a business trip to Europe, and moving kept the Weltmans busy this past spring and summer. Having never lived anywhere but Pennsylvania, we have been taking short trips around Michigan, and learning as much as we can about our new home state. Thanks again to all of you who sent me your news over the past few years. It has been fun.

Marilyn reporting:

Ellie Luthringer Mattson's job as church financial secretary seems to "expand to fill the time available." In the summer she still teaches swimming and acts as "chief dispatcher" for the family. Her oldest daughter, Ginger (17), has learned to drive and is starting to think college. As many already know—that's quite an experience! Ellie expects to see us in June.

Mike (Clara) Miklos Hoon says, "Hi," to everyone and hopes very much to make June reunion.

INTRODUCTION AND COMMENTARY

EDWARD D. EDDY
PRESIDENT

The Trustees of Chatham College have reached the unanimous decision that Chatham should remain a women's college. A study committee composed of faculty members, students, alumnae, trustees and administrative officers made the recommendation to the Trustees after two years of analysis, heated discussion, open forums, visits to other campuses, and polls of those most affected.

Though at times the central question may have seemed to be: Can a women's college stay single-sex?—in actuality the question became: What will tomorrow's society require of today's students? The answer was obvious: NOT the status quo. In the process of examining possible options for the future, Chatham itself changed because it found that a mere rejection of the idea of coeducation was not a satisfactory alternative. Something far more contemporary and dynamic would be required. The decision to stay a women's college became the culmination of a series of dramatic sweeping changes.

The report of the Trustees' Committee on the Future of the College cannot be understood properly without some attention to the larger context within which it was formulated. In recent years the pressures on women's colleges to abandon their single-sex status have been enormous. Women's colleges were the first to note a decline in the number of applications for admission. They were also among the first to feel the economic pinch. In retrospect Chatham College considers itself fortunate that it did not rush to accept men as candidates for the Chatham degree. More recent studies and widespread reports now indicate that the applicant dip and the economic squeeze are not phenomena limited to women's colleges but affect all private colleges and universities. In addition, the public institutions are now faced with a similar tightening of financial resources.

In all of higher education, we were lulled by the affluence of student numbers and relatively easy funding during the decade of the sixties. It was barely five years ago that we talked about "the tidal wave" of students, born in the late forties, who would be descending on the colleges. We ignored, however, the truth of the symbol of our popularity: a wave lifts the level only momentarily. By its very nature it must recede. The "wave" also brought into admissions offices a flood of "ghost applications" from those who feared rejection and, therefore, sought admission to as many as eight or nine colleges and universities. Today's high school senior applies to three or four.

In those years it was easy to maintain some degree of institutional distinctiveness and integrity. One could resist change by preaching diversity. The arguments may have been valid but the motives were sometimes questionable. Soon the pressures began to mount. It was said that the small, private, single-sex institution could not survive. But, curiously, the first to run into really serious trouble were the large, coeducational universities with heavy dependence on government funding.

Hopefully the point is clear: easy generalizations about the form and the future of higher education can be as wrong as the conclusion that we don't need a freezer in the kitchen because the temperature has just hit ten below outside.

In its report, Chatham's Committee on the Future of the College refutes, therefore, the easy generalization that colleges seeking only to enroll women as degree candidates are anachronisms. Perhaps some are, but assuredly some are not. Too many conditions intervene to make that generalization acceptable. Where is the college located? What is it accomplishing which contributes to its validity? What about the quality of accomplishment? And what about women?

I cannot speak for the whole committee in expressing convictions with regard to the role of women in American society. For what they are worth, I offer some personal observations.

Today it is almost trite to assert that women are not first-class citizens. One need not embrace the Women's Liberation Movement to subscribe to the notion that there is indeed a barrier against women in many channels of opportunity. Women still have a long way to go before we can say in all honesty that they are free to compete as individuals. This fact alone affects the continuing possibilities of single-sex women's colleges.

The deliberations of the Chatham committee have convinced me that there is no such definable distinction as "an education for women." Education basically is asexual. One does not teach political science or biology or philosophy to women in a substantially different framework than to men. But—and this is the all-important condition—one may engage in this teaching in a setting which encourages a student to realize potentialities within and to gain the self-confidence tempered by humility to fulfill this realization.

Women's colleges were established to provide an education equal to, not differing from, the education offered to men. It is the college—its atmosphere, its spirit, its concern for the individual woman—which gives strength to a continuing ideal. The education per se, if one means only what is taught within the classroom, has no sex differential.

Why, then, is it important to have different types of colleges, including women's colleges? Because both society and women's roles within society are changing radically and constantly. The nation needs institutions which will concentrate their attention on these changes and on their effect upon the role of women. The women's college must prepare women for change and must engage in research and teaching on the possible shape of the change. All of this should be accomplished within the context of our cultural and social history.

Women are needed, and increasingly will be sought, in a wide variety of fields of human concern. The response to these needs requires flexibility in the course of study and an openness in approach and structure. Each student must be given the opportunity to fashion the pattern which best fits her potentialities. We are no longer educating for stereotypes; women's roles are continually subject to change. The women's college can maintain its validity and strength by concentrating on an understanding of and preparation for change.

In seeking a pattern for this particular college's future, we have reached the conclusion that the social order increasingly will require liberally educated women who are capable of filling a rapidly widening variety of social roles. The college for women has primary confidence in these students.

The rationale of an institution may differ substantially, however, from the interests of a high school senior. Again, several years ago one might have jumped to the conclusion that the admission of men was the only salvation for women's colleges, regardless of their nature or location. The pull of coeducation seemed overpowering.

Increasingly, today's students seem to be seeking qualities in colleges which are sexless. They are searching for substance in the program, flexibility in the requirements, vitality in the location, and personality in the size. Chatham's surveys indicate, as the report states, that students choose this college principally because of its academic reputation, not because it enrolls women or has no men receiving degrees at commencement time. The premium is on intellectual vitality and integrity.

Demands such as this are far more difficult to meet than reformation in social regulation or college government. They require the effective college to abandon what has become to symptomatic among liberal arts institutions: the naively romantic and often superficial approach to learning and life. The college of substance which will appeal to today's woman has to be willing to face the hard, cold facts of societal change, of abandoned standards of morality, of the demise of troubled and ineffective democratic institutions. We cannot preach; we must teach. We cannot hide from reality; we must recognize that changes are taking place in the home, the church, the school. The "soft approach" to understanding spells only disaster for a college enrolling today's pragmatic female.

We conclude, therefore, that the decision on the sex of the student is not one-tenth as crucial as the commitment to restructure the curriculum, to rearrange the academic schedule, and to tighten the total institutional effort both for the sake of the student and to preserve essential qualities in education during a time of economic pressure. Is the college making full use of its faculty talent? Is it affording the student the opportunity to develop as an individual human being? Is it being realistic in the balance it fosters between security and anxiety, both of which are essential elements in creativity? Is it strong enough economically to withstand the buffeting which the next few years will bring?

The answers to many of these questions were apparent to the Committee on the Future of the College as it neared its final recommendation. Again, the Committee was not forced into the unhappy position of deciding between the status quo and a radical move to coeducation. Changes had already been made within the College which ruled out any semblance of rigid adherence to tradition.

Chatham reaches its commitment to remain a women's college, then, on the basis of these evidences of strength:

1. The faculty, with the strong support of the trustees and students, has made substantial changes in curricular requirements and offerings. Henceforth the student is given the opportunity to design the course of study which best fulfills her personal educational interests and abilities. No two students have exactly the same educational goals, nor do they learn in exactly the same manner or period of time. Working closely with her faculty adviser, each student will determine whether to pursue a traditional program involving a major field of study or an innovative program with or without a major.
2. The faculty and the trustees have accepted a primary focus on quality in teaching and advising the individual student as the primary measure of undergraduate education. In this setting research and publication are important because they contribute in some effective way to the education of that student.
3. Since students and faculty members join the educational endeavor as participating scholars, they need not be tied by a timetable which hinders rather than encourages creativity. After extensive debate, the College chose the 4-1-4 calendar because it provides more opportunity for variety in approach, for exchange programs, for individual study projects, and for the combination of theory in the classroom and realistic experience beyond the campus boundaries.
4. Chatham College is an integral part of a much larger academic community in the city of Pittsburgh. The six accredited institutions of higher learning in Pittsburgh, enrolling over 45,000 students, encourage their students to enroll in classes on any of the other campuses, thus affording the Chatham student the experience of the larger university with its coeducational classes. This cross registration program brings to Chatham male students who wish to take advantage of its smaller classes and special liberal arts studies. The cooperating Pittsburgh institutions include Carnegie-Mellon University, the University of Pittsburgh, Duquesne University, Carlow College and Point Park College.

5. Chatham College has the solid foundation of one of the largest endowments per student among all liberal arts colleges in the nation.
6. The College has completed one year ahead of schedule and substantially in excess of expectations a capital fund drive representing by far its most successful fund campaign in its century of service.
7. For an experimental period of three years, the College Board scores have been dropped as a requirement for admission. The College believes that too much stress is placed on College Board scores at the present time by individual students, by guidance counselors, and by colleges and universities. The scores do not necessarily reflect the ability or motivation of a potentially successful student. This is another indication of the College's commitment to the education of the individual and not of a pre-determined stereotype.

Chatham's first-year experience under this new approach has resulted in an increase of over 12% in the number of applications for admission at a time when many other private colleges and universities are suffering sharp decreases. It appears to substantiate further our contention that the major variables in student choice are quality in program, flexibility in approach, location, and size. Chatham is unique in many respects because it is one of the very few small liberal arts colleges located within a large and dynamic city. It can, we believe, afford to remain a women's college by virtue of its lack of isolation, its opportunity for everyday exchange with the nearby coeducational universities, and its overriding concern for quality in teaching as well as individuality in approach.

We can return now to the important argument of diversity in higher education because it becomes an honest argument, not an excuse for the preservation of tradition per se. It is important that there be institutions of differing size and character within the totality of American higher education. It is important that there be a non-sectarian liberal arts college for women of high quality within Western Pennsylvania and in the more immediate area of Pittsburgh. It is important that the women whose roles assuredly will change in the future be given the chance to study in colleges primarily concerned with their interests and with the nature of change governing that future. We have heeded the warning of the Assembly on University Goals and Governance of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences that women's colleges should "not lightly abandon their identity" by some precipitous and ill-conceived move.

Chatham College cannot take tradition for granted. It must be poised constantly for change in program and in character if it wishes to continue to offer a sound and substantial education to students of high quality. It chooses now to continue to limit that offering for degree purposes to women students. This is not an easy choice; there are attractions and advantages to coeducation. In our setting, however, they seem less compelling than the path we have chosen.

At this time the future of all forms of higher education is less assured than at any other period within memory. The institution with the best chance of intelligent service, if not survival, is the one marked by conviction, enthusiasm and integrity. On these counts the future for Chatham College augurs well.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE FUTURE OF CHATHAM COLLEGE*

The Committee on the Future of the College recommends to the Board of Trustees of Chatham College that the College continue to commit its resources to the education of women. The Committee can find no compelling reasons, at this time, why Chatham College, in its particular location, should alter a pattern which has brought it distinction for more than one hundred years. This recommendation is supported unanimously by members of the Committee. It was reached through the procedures and is based on the information given in the sections which follow.

REASONS FOR CONSIDERING COEDUCATION

In recent years many traditionally single-sex institutions have become coeducational. For example, during the academic year 1966-67 eighteen men's and thirty-five women's colleges announced plans to admit members of the opposite sex as degree candidates. In June of 1968 there were 248 women's colleges in the country; by January of 1969 the number had declined to 184. (College Facts Chart, U.S. Office of Education.) At the present time there are approximately 150 colleges which restrict their enrollments to women and the majority of them are church-related (primarily Roman Catholic).

Chatham now finds itself competing for students with a group of colleges that is predominantly coeducational. Many of the newly coeducational institutions explain their decisions as reflections of the current preferences of high school students. Applications to most of the women's colleges which we studied have declined during the past five years while, until this year, those to coeducational institutions had been increasing. Chatham's admissions situation will be discussed in more detail later in this report, but clearly the national trend away from single-sex institutions combined with declining applications to our college is one compelling reason for undertaking an examination of our role as a women's college.

The increasingly serious financial situation of the College, which is related both to the admissions situation and to general economic conditions, also was a factor in planning this study. Several years ago the decision was made to increase the enrollment gradually to 750 undergraduates in residence. This decision was based both on strengthening the academic program and on economic grounds. We have not been able to make progress toward meeting these enrollment projections because of the decline in applications. One result of this situation is an increasingly tight operating budget. Question: Would the admission of men bring a significantly larger applicant group of high quality to the College and make possible a move to the optimum enrollment level?

Finally, we needed to ask whether our academic program—and our service to the community—would be strengthened by a coeducational student body. The oversimplified version of this question is whether the learning situation is enhanced by having mixed classes and, if so, whether the addition of male degree candidates is the best way of achieving improvement in standards and in classroom performance. If it could be demonstrated, either in the literature or through the experiences of institutions which recently have become coeducational, that graduates of such colleges are better prepared to contribute to their communities and to society than graduates of single-sex institutions, then a good case for coeducation could be made on the basis of social utility.

ASSUMPTIONS CONCERNING THE FUTURE OF CHATHAM COLLEGE

It would be foolish to attempt to reach a decision on a question as fundamental as the one facing the Committee without reference to other basic characteristics of the institution. Although the Committee was not asked to undertake a broad self-study, it found it advisable to assess the present posture of the College in order to determine Chatham's future direction. The Committee limited the scope of this general review to the reappraisal of a number of assumptions about the future of the College. Several policy decisions were submitted to the Board of Trustees early in our study. Recommendations concerning enrollment and the maintenance of a program of liberal education were approved by the Board at its meetings in October of 1969 and February of 1970. While these decisions and assumptions are matters for continuing review and possible future change, we restate them now so that the readers of the report will understand the ground rules on which we operated.

The College will remain committed to a program of liberal education on the undergraduate level.

Chatham will remain a private institution.

Chatham will remain on its present campus. This implies certain restrictions on physical expansion.

Enrollment will grow gradually to 750 students on campus at any given time.

The campus will continue to provide residential facilities for the majority of students. This assumes that Chatham will continue to remain national, rather than local or regional, in the composition of its student body.

The impact of these assumptions is implicit in the rest of this report. It may be useful to make explicit some of the guidelines which they imply. For example, the Committee, in its discussions, considered the enrollment of men interested in a broad, undergraduate program rather than in pre-professional or technical curricula which are not now offered on the campus. It discussed bringing men to the College both by adding somewhat to the size of the student body and by replacing a certain number of places for women with openings for men. We were not able to consider seriously moves that would involve a major expansion of facilities since space is not available for such physical growth. Neither did we discuss at length adding a large number of commuting students since that approach would do violence to the assumption that we would remain primarily a residential college.

PROCEDURES

It may be of some use to future historians of the College to leave a record of the ways in which the Committee functioned. It read documents, sampled opinions, engaged in direct observation, raised questions, sought answers and met together to share and evaluate ideas. A brief bibliography is attached to this report. Representatives of the Committee attended several conferences on women's education. At least five open meetings on the subject of coeducation were held on the campus and all members of the community were invited to attend. Notes taken at those sessions were made available to each member of the Committee. Visits were made by a team of five committee members to several institutions which recently had changed from women's to coeducational colleges. During the visits, team members talked with a large number of faculty and staff members and students. Mention should be made here of our gratitude for the reception we received at these institutions, the helpful cooperation that was offered to us and the mass of data which was collected as a result.

Polls were taken of students, faculty and staff members on the question of coeducation. The results of these polls, completed in November of 1970, are discussed in subsequent sections. Members of the Alumnae Board were consulted in the spring of 1970 and their responses to the possibility of coeducation were presented to the Committee.

Our recommendations certainly reflect in part the impressions and factual information we gathered from all of these sources. They also are based on hunches and faith. We should warn, perhaps gratuitously, other institutions which may be planning to undertake similar studies that no statistical formula for the "right" decision was revealed to us. The circumstances vary con-considerably from institution to institution and data must be evaluated against the peculiar situation of the home college. That fact in no way diminishes our debts to those who traveled this road ahead of us.

ADMISSIONS AND FINANCES

We mentioned earlier the importance of the admissions situation to the future of the College. The Committee examined the Chatham experience in considerable detail. One disturbing development is the drop of 30% in applications to Chatham since the high point in 1967. Part of this can be explained by variations in the number of women graduating from secondary schools. The full impact of the decline has been diluted by the fact that the percentage of acceptances of offers of admission to Chatham increased during the same period. It should be noted, too, that the quality of both the applicant groups and the entering classes during these years was consistently high. Nevertheless, the downward trend, if continued, would pose a critical problem for the institution. The possibility of putting together classes which include a desirable range of interests, backgrounds and goals would no longer exist. The achievement of our enrollment projections would become increasingly difficult.

The Committee searched diligently for evidence that the major factor causing the drop in applications was Chatham's single-sex composition. It examined data collected by the Admissions Office which show that, more than ever before, our competition for students is with coeducational colleges. It noted the results of a survey undertaken by the Director of Evaluation Services which indicated that most of the students who transferred from Chatham during the period 1959-69 chose coeducational institutions. The Committee considered carefully the admissions experiences of several colleges which recently became coeducational; it also looked into admissions trends at other single-sex institutions.

There is little doubt that most women's colleges which opened their doors to men did so because they concluded that such a move would cure a potentially unhealthy admissions situation. This fact emerges clearly from reports issued by Vassar, Connecticut, Mercyhurst, Hood, Elmira and from other reports in the possession of the Committee. The same conclusion is reflected in the public reports of a number of previously all-male institutions. Colleges which decide to become coeducational expect subsequently to enlarge and diversify their applicant pools. While this expectation may be realized by some of these colleges, the Committee was not persuaded by the evidence available to it that Chatham's admissions problems would be solved, or even eased, by a decision to admit men. The evidence is at best conflicting on this point.

Candidates for admission to Chatham are applying to coeducational colleges in greater numbers than in earlier years. (See Bulletin #127, Chatham Office of Evaluation Services.) While this fact may demonstrate a greatly increased preference for coeducation, it also is true that there are fewer women's colleges to which high school seniors can apply. The important question here is whether there are enough secondary school graduates interested in women's colleges to guarantee an admissions pool of the desired size and diversity at Chatham. We discovered no national statistics concerning this question, but the experience of Mills College, Wheaton, Goucher and several of the Seven Sisters, as well as our own situation thus far in 1970-71, leads us to believe that there is a sufficiently large number of well qualified young women who could be interested in Chatham's program. We failed to discover a single women's college which experienced a sizeable increase in applications solely as a result of the decision to admit men.

Chatham's Office of Evaluation Services has established that most of the women who transfer from Chatham to another college choose coeducational institutions. The same survey, however, shows that an interest in coeducation by itself is not often given as the main reason for transferring. Factors such as finances, marriage, changed academic interests and the pursuit of increased anonymity play substantial roles in decisions to transfer. Here again, perhaps it is significant that there are increasingly fewer single-sex colleges open to Chatham students who decide to transfer.

Finally, the Committee was persuaded by the experiences of other colleges, by an increase in applications to Chatham in the fall of 1970 and by information gathered by the Office of Evaluation Services, that there are important elements aside from coeducation which affect the size of an applicant group. This statement is a critical one for the Committee and will be discussed in detail later. We have concluded from the evidence that revisions in the academic programs, a large increase in the financial aid budget, additions to the staff of the Admissions Office, an expanded and strengthened recruiting effort—any or all of these developments—can make a college seem more attractive to prospective candidates. The December, 1970 Bulletin of the Office of Evaluation Services indicates that, while 57% of the students who entered Chatham in 1965 chose it primarily because it was a women's college, in 1970, that reason was given by only 28% of the freshmen. Our entering students now maintain that the sex composition of the student body "does not matter"; program, size and facilities are of more importance in selecting their college. And to repeat, we know of no institution where a move to coeducation which was taken in isolation, unaccompanied by at least one of the developments just mentioned, resulted in substantially increased applications.

The financial situation of a college is linked closely to enrollment, staffing and facilities. It does not take a sophisticated economist to point out that the strain on endowment income and annual gifts is greater when there are fewer students enrolled than the institution can accommodate. Basic operating costs are not heavily dependent on enrollment fluctuations while income from tuition and fee charges varies directly with changes in the student population. Since the staff and physical plant are adequate for a student body somewhat larger than the present one, it follows that any changes which result in attracting more students also will result in a brighter financial picture.

Since the link between finances and enrollment is so strong, there is little reason to suppose that the admission of men to Chatham would strengthen the financial base of the College unless it improved the enrollment situation concurrently. The Committee did investigate the possibility that a coeducational student body would make the College more attractive to potential sources of financial support such as foundations and corporations. Such a possibility is sometimes assumed to exist, especially in the area of grants from industry. Again, we found no evidence of increased support for newly coeducational colleges from these sources although the development staff at one such college is optimistic about receiving greater support in the future. There is an equal chance, apparently, that contributions from alumnae and other traditional sources of gifts will decline at least in the first years of a mixed student body. The increasing recognition of the important role which women can play in industry also may bring greater corporate support for the education of women.

In summary, then, if budget deficits existed before the move to coeducation, they exist after the change. Where well organized efforts to obtain financial support are based on clear institutional needs and the present quality and future promise of academic programs, progress is being made regardless of the sex composition of the student body. All of these general remarks should be read against the background of economic conditions which make this period a difficult one from which to draw conclusions about financial support for colleges and universities.

RESULTS OF COEDUCATION ELSEWHERE

During the course of its deliberations, the Future of the College Committee examined with some care the situation at other colleges which recently have become coeducational. As previously mentioned, several members of the Committee visited newly coeducational campuses and asked questions. The results of these inquiries are discussed in detail in this section of our report. The Committee found the information which was shared with us to be of great interest and importance. We hope, however, that the reader will remember, as we have tried to remember, that the experiences of other colleges are not likely to be directly relevant to Chatham. In every case there are clear differences in enrollment, location, academic program, financial situation and size of campus. It is also important to note that full coeducation is such a recent development on the campuses we visited that observations and conclusions drawn from their experiences must be tentative rather than definitive.

Academic Program and Staffing

All of us have heard individual opinions about the differences between a coeducational classroom and a class of women. The Committee listened to a number of such opinions and examined some of the published literature in this area. Hard data are scarce, opinions differ sharply and conclusions are elusive. Certainly some faculty members find coeducational classes livelier, more exciting, harder to direct, than classes of women. It is just as clear that a number of students and members of the faculties of newly coeducational colleges feel that mixed classes are more stimulating than those involving only women. Others maintain that they have found that women participate less often in class discussions that include men. It should be noted that these reactions are not exclusive; a student might find a class discussion involving men more exciting even if she participates in it only infrequently. These differences of opinion exist at Chatham where cross registration has created a number of coeducational classroom situations. It is probably safe to generalize that men are less disciplined and methodical in their approach to academic work than women; they tend to be more aggressive, verbal and theoretical in class discussions. The Chapman studies (see bibliography) at Vassar seem to bear out such generalizations while acknowledging the existence of frequent and obvious exceptions to them. The Committee concludes, therefore, that the coeducational class may be different from its female counterpart, but it did not establish whether the difference was a positive one. No one at Chatham told us, on the basis of the experience with cross registration, that the learning process was significantly enhanced by the presence of men in the class and we found no published evidence to that effect. If, indeed, one aspect of coeducational classes is male domination of discussions, as seemed true on several other campuses, then we are not persuaded that women will learn more, or more effectively, in the presence of men.

The evidence with respect to course enrollments is easier to evaluate. We have figures on the number of men and women in various courses at Connecticut and Vassar; for example, and have compared them with similar statistics from several years ago when both student bodies were entirely female. Enrollment patterns have changed very little. Evidently, at least in the short run, men seek out departments, faculty members and courses that traditionally have been considered strong. The hypothesis that one way to build up enrollments in small departments or courses, e.g., the sciences in an all-women's college, is to admit men is not borne out by the facts that we gathered. Growth in the size of the student body may strengthen small departments, but coeducation, again in the short run, does not seem to do so. Men are attracted to an institution by the strengths of that institution, just as women are.

Since no major changes in the academic program of the College would follow necessarily from the admission of men, the academic staff presumably could remain much the same. The one exception might be the addition of men to the staff in the Department of Physical Education. The determinant here would be changes in program which the Department wished to make in order to accommodate the interests of male undergraduates.

Judging from the experiences of other colleges, certain additions to the administrative staff would be desirable under a coeducational scheme. One or more male admissions officers should be appointed.

Greetings Friday, Jacqu Sauerwein M

Staff additions in the area of student affairs probably would be required. The staff and functions of the Placement Office should be expanded. Beyond these appointments, no initial changes in the administrative staff would be necessary unless the number of students grew substantially.

The Committee feels that it is important to develop a more effective program of career counseling and placement on the campus, whether or not men are admitted to the College.

Admissions

The Committee collected impressions and statistics from admissions officers at a number of colleges. We stated previously that a deteriorating admissions situation was a major reason for changing from single-sex education to coeducation. The results of that change in policy are hard to evaluate since other institutional innovations often accompany it. In such circumstances the institutions themselves find it difficult to sort out the effects of coeducation from the results of revisions in the academic program or intensified recruiting efforts.

Obviously a decision to accept men as degree candidates at Chatham would increase greatly the pool of potential candidates for admission. We cannot make definite statements about the academic and personal qualifications of the men who might file applications, but the experience of other colleges is encouraging and leads us to feel that highly qualified men might well consider Chatham. The quality of prospective male candidates is not, then, a major point of argument against coeducation. It is probable, however, that more than a decision to admit men would be required to transform potential applicants into matriculated students. Institutions which have relied only on changes in admissions policy have attracted enough male candidates to offset a continued decline in the number of women who applied, but have been able only to maintain, rather than to increase, the size of the entering classes. On the other hand, the number of applications to Vassar increased by 70% in the year following the decision to admit men and the entering class grew from 430 students in 1969 to 532 in 1970. Applications received from women increased substantially during that year as well.

The admissions situation at Vassar deserves some additional comment since it illustrates several of the points which the Future of the College Committee wishes to emphasize. The increase in applications and in entering freshmen at Vassar was not solely the result of the decision to admit men. At the same time, the number of full-time admissions officers was increased from four to six, the admissions staff visited 40 secondary schools in 1969-70 as opposed to 40 in 1968-69, a general revision of academic programs was announced, the publications program in admissions was expanded greatly, and the scholarship budget was increased substantially. The proportionate responsibility for the increase in interest in Vassar will never be distributed with any precision among these factors. The Committee has noted, however, that Chatham might consider initiation of certain of these changes in the absence of coeducation. We recommend, therefore, that a study of the College's entire admission process be initiated as soon as possible.

One especially hopeful sign which we mention elsewhere in this report is the increase in applications to Chatham which has occurred during this fall. In particular, early decision applications (submitted by students with a clear first choice of Chatham) are more than triple those of 1967, the year of the previous high figure. This development, if continued, will support our point that curricular revision and expanded recruiting efforts can have positive effect on the admissions picture at a women's college.

Finances and Facilities

Private education in this country is facing a major financial crisis. This is not the place to analyze the roots or dimensions of that crisis except to say that all institutions, large, small, coeducational, single-sex, are affected. The Committee's major conclusion in this area of concern is that single-sex colleges do not escape from the current squeeze between rapidly increasing costs of operation and inadequate sources of sup port by announcing for coeducation. It would not be proper for us to comment in detail on the financial problems facing the colleges which we have studied during the preparation of this report. It is clear, however, that none of them would defend the decision to admit men on the grounds that it cures financial deficits. All of them are concentrating on broadening sources of financial support, cutting costs and attracting public funds.

It is equally true that a decision to admit men to Chatham would not, in itself, be a costly one. At one college the initial costs of that decision were given as under $70,000. Basically the staff and facilities at Chatham are adequate for the support of a coeducational student body that is somewhat larger than our present enrollment. Admission, scholarship and publication budgets would have to be increased, food service expenses would probably go up about $150 for each male student and the expense of maintaining the physical education and placement programs might well rise. Still, these increases are relatively minor. Unless the enrollment (whether coeducational or of women) exceeds the capacity of the present facilities or forces an increase in instructional staff, coeducation could be initiated at Chatham without adversely affecting the current financial picture.

As a postscript to the discussion of facilities, the Committee refers the interested reader to an analysis made by the College for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1969, and reaffirmed in 1970, which shows that we have sufficient classroom space for a student body of 750, potential dormitory space for 650 students and, upon completion of the new library and student-faculty center, study and dining space for 750 students. College policies with respect to off-campus living, a program of athletics, and provisions for student automobiles would have a bearing on the costs of coeducation and a larger student body.

Student Life

As far as we could ascertain, the majority of students and staff members on newly coeducational campuses are delighted with the change. Students in particular mention the easy relationships which develop between men and women, an increased sense of community, a livelier classroom situation and more social options on their campuses. Extra-curricular programs at these institutions have been expanded by the interests of men. The sense of isolation which evidently plagued many students in earlier years has largely disappeared.

We will maintain in our concluding remarks that in many respects Chatham's situation is unique and thus difficult to equate with conditions at other colleges. This point is well illustrated in the area of student life. Although some Chatham students complain about feeling isolated, they do so without the experience of attending a college in a small town in a rural area or in a community which is made up primarily of the facilities of the college. Chatham is not isolated from the resources and problems of the city. This fact has implications for the quality of student life and the academic program which are very different from the situation at many single-sex colleges.

Many students at Chatham have indicated that their opposition to coeducation centers around a concern that men will dominate their classes and usurp positions of leadership in the extra-curricular program. We found evidence, at one institution, that this concern has substance. Several staff people at that college indicated that they were searching for ways to insure that women at the college would continue to have a full range of options for personal and academic development as the number of men and women enrolled becomes more nearly equal. Members of the staff seemed more concerned than the students about the possible long run effects of male domination of activities and classes. Perhaps the sensitivity to this possibility that already exists among our students is a sufficient safeguard, but the Committee is sympathetic to the concern.

We do not feel that coeducation can be supported on the supposition that it will make significant improvements in campus life at Chatham. In substantial numbers men are already a part of that life. Our students are not obligated to play roles secondary to those of men. They can, in addition, use the resources of the city without difficulty. While no one would maintain that the present pattern of campus life is ideal, we do not feel that coeducation would make it demonstrably better.

COMMUNITY RELATIONS

We have made reference to some of the advantages of Chatham's urban location. There are responsibilities that result as well. As it makes plans for the future, the College must keep in mind the concerns of its immediate neighbors and of the city of which it is a part. Relationships of this sort are of less importance to an institution in a rural location or one that is situated on a large campus which offers a kind of geographical protection from the surrounding community. For example, Vassar and Connecticut Colleges have hundreds of acres for future use and few close neighbors who would be directly affected by the institutions' plans. We do not mean to imply that Chatham is peculiar in having to remember its environment, but its community relations are different from, and more complex than, those of other colleges with which we have been in touch.

The College must make and carry out plans which will increase its effectiveness as an educational institution. It must insist on the freedom, within the law, to shape its own future. But it does not exist in a vacuum. For example, any discussion of major growth of the College is greeted with dismay by many of the neighboring families who fear that physical expansion of the campus will increase traffic in the area, change the character of the neighborhood or encroach on their property. If Chatham ever seriously considers enlarging beyond the capacity of its present campus, it will have two very expensive options. Either it must acquire adjacent land for expansion or it must construct high rise facilities. Both options would affect our neighbors and our neighborhood and would, of course, have to be accomplished within existing law and regulations. Neither appears to be necessary in the foreseeable future.

The Committee would have recommended coeducation or a change in the size of Chatham's student body if it had been convinced of the wisdom of those decisions. It would have urged full and free discussion with the surrounding community. It does not feel that the recommendations which appear in this report are cause for concern, but it wishes to acknowledge the legitimate role that community relations play in the long term plans of the College.

RESULTS OF CAMPUS DISCUSSIONS AND POLLS

It was essential to the success of the Committee's undertaking that as many members of the Chatham community as possible be involved in the consideration of coeducation. Campus discussions began during the winter of 1969-70 and continued into the fall of 1970 through open meetings, written communications and, finally, polls on the question. The Committee members had the benefit of the views of all those who wished to express opinions or raise questions.

The time and energy devoted to the process of gathering opinions from faculty and staff members and students were well invested. The Committee's major recommendation, no matter what its nature, could not be transformed into a successful policy decision without the support of the College community. It happens that the Committee's views correspond with those expressed by the majority in the discussions and polls, including the Executive Board of the Alumnae Association. This means that the College should be able to count on the support and cooperation of its members as Chatham confronts the problems that will follow from the adoption of these recommendations. Conversely, if our conclusions had differed from the opinion of most of the members of the community, the Committee would have had to make extensive efforts to change community opinion or cope with the failure of its effort. Thus, while not a mere echo of campus sentiments, our recommendations have been influenced strongly by them. We appreciate the assistance of those who participated in discussions and completed our questionnaires.

The results of the November poll on coeducation follow:

SUMMARY OF POLL ON COEDUCATION
by percentage of those voting

QUESTION: Are you in favor of coeducation at Chatham College?

	Strongly Favor or Favor	Neutral	Opposed or Strongly Opposed	Total
Students	18.9%	5.6%	75.5%	100%
Faculty	38.7%	9.7%	51.6%	100%
Administration	40%	6.7%	53.3%	100%
Other Staff (including Clerical, Housekeeping, Maintenance and Head Residents)	43.9%	17.5%	38.6%	100%
TOTAL VOTE BY PERCENTAGE	24.5%	7.4%	68.1%	100%

The Committee wishes to call particular attention to several aspects of the voting tabulations.

1. More than four-fifths of the faculty and two-thirds of the students voted. These are high levels of participation on a college campus, including Chatham's.
2. More than two-thirds of those voting preferred to have Chatham remain a single-sex institution. Approximately one-quarter of the respondents favored coeducation.
3. Three-quarters of the students who voted opposed coeducation for Chatham. This result obtained in each class with the opposition ranging from 81% of the Freshmen to 70% of the Seniors.
4. Three of the four categories of respondents (students, faculty members and administration) favored maintaining Chatham as a college for women.
5. Those especially interested in science, students as well as members of the faculty, opposed coeducation more strongly than did their colleagues in other fields.
6. Half of the faculty respondents who have taught at Chatham for less than five years supported coeducation, as compared to approximately twenty-eight percent of those with longer service.

A considerable degree of uniformity marks the poll results. At least for the present, the sentiment of the Chatham community seems clear. We are not aware of a similar vote in any other institution which has considered the question of coeducation in recent years. This makes it difficult to explain the preference of the students simply in terms of their individual decisions to attend a single-sex college. The Committee can only guess at the reasons for the results. One factor may be that the Chatham campus is not isolated geographically, either from the resources of a major urban area or from frequent association with men from other colleges. The recent emphasis throughout the country on increasing the opportunities for women to develop their talents and to fill a wider variety of roles in our society may seem to some to justify, more than ever before, the existence of a college for women. The Committee is impressed by the fact that the community, for whatever reasons, wishes to continue its commitment to the education of women within Chatham's newly fashioned frame- work, combining flexibility with tradition.

CONCLUSION

The clearest summary of the Committee's conclusions is found in its recommendation that Chatham remain a college for women. We hope that our report places those conclusions in a reasonable perspective. We are convinced of the desirability of diversity within American higher education and believe that the strong single-sex college contributes positively to that diversity. We could not continue to hold that conviction in the face of diminishing interest in Chatham but are encouraged by our current application experience. We suspect that the College offers a special kind of opportunity for student development and take pride in research findings that graduates of women's colleges make disproportionately great contributions to our society (see Tidball, E.P. in bibliography).

Chatham has certain unique advantages which have persuaded the Committee that it can attract and serve competent young women. It is one of the few small, liberal arts colleges in this country which is located in a city. The number of women's colleges which are able to profit from an urban location is even smaller. The location has enormous academic advantages as well as cultural and social benefits. It is in large part our conviction that Chatham intends to make full use of this geographical advantage that strengthens our faith in its ability to attract students in the future.

The College has initiated, within the past year, a new curriculum and calendar which permits students and members of the faculty to cooperate in the design of individual programs of study. The curriculum opens additional possibilities for ties with Pittsburgh and provides women with exciting opportunities to develop the skills, independence and self-confidence which are major ingredients in a productive life. Much of the difficult work of curricular reform has been accomplished and the College is no longer restricted by the academic rigidities that are increasingly discouraging to students.

Location and program combine in a particularly satisfying way for Chatham by providing opportunities for cooperative effort with other Pittsburgh colleges and universities. One major result is the program of cross registration which opens the courses of six institutions to students enrolled in any one of them. Chatham women thus have access to a much wider range of courses than is available at most small colleges. They also have the option of participating in coeducational classes either on their own campus or elsewhere. The cross registration program is a major element in the uniqueness of the College's offerings.

As long as there are young women who wish to study in the environment of a women's college and who grow and develop strength through the experience, this Committee hopes that Chatham will serve them by making the fullest possible use of its location and the potential of its program. Chatham College will then continue to be one of the few institutions for women in this country in which students can find a truly individualized program of liberal education.

We all extend our sympathy to Joan Moreledge Michaelian and her family on the sudden death of her father last July. Dr. Moreledge had a deep fondness for "P.C.W." and was so proud to conduct and preach at our Baccalaureate service in 1949. Joan says her boys are great sportsmen. Two were pitchers for Little League baseball and three play in the Y.M.C.A. basketball league. Margaret, finally 6 years old, will start first grade in September. They all enjoyed a summer vacation in the lovely Shenandoah Valley and Thanksgiving in Pittsburgh. She always drives through the campus when she is in town.

Timmy Mountford DeFrance and family have moved to a new home in Canfield. After three years of teaching 8th grade English, she will return to housewife as two sons go off to college. Bill is a sophomore at Mount Union College and John graduates this June from high school. David finishes fifth grade and they will cheer at his baseball games!

Jo Nusbaum Cone enjoyed an area alumnae dinner in October at which Dr. Eddy spoke. Art's new book, "The Complete Guide to Hunting," came out in November. Her oldest son, Steve, who is a junior at Coe College, is having two poems published this March in a book called "Sunspo" by Palomar in California. Artie will graduate from Mt. Hermon in June as an honor student. The twins are 15 and are either giving or going to parties! Jo keeps busy as president of a Welcome Wagon Club, and she and Art still do lots of bird hunting with their Brittany Spaniels.

Pat Pew Simpson's daughter Edie is in one of her junior high school science classes this year. She says it is fun going to school together! Pat is getting a thrill out of helping to plan the science labs for a new air conditioned and carpeted junior high building.

June Reed Sheftic not only has a new husband, but also two more children, a girl 20 years old and a boy 13 years old. She is busy planning a June wedding for her new daughter. Life for her is once more very full and active. Her own children are 15 and 13 and this makes a busy household.

Mary Lou Rider has been living in Washington, Pa. for over a year now, but still spends a good bit of time at her parents' home in Uniontown. She hopes to see us in June.

Many thanks to all who replied. We are a very busy family, as are many others. I am looking forward to our reunion in June and hope to see you there.

Carol reporting:

Ann Shane Perky is teaching full time and working on her master's. Nevin is a graduate of Wisconsin's Graduate School of Banking and son Doug of high school. She'll see us all in June.

Barbara Shields Sullivan is a Brownie leader busy with 23 little cooks and hand puppet artists. Mary Ann, age seven, faces open heart surgery in June, and we all wish her well.

Jean Tsagaris Karidis is the happy leader of a Teen-Age Prayer Group at church. Cindy is a freshman at Chatham, and George and John are deeply involved in wrestling in senior and junior high respectively.

Alice Vandermark Stanton and family are happily looking forward to finishing their new home in Franklin, their dream town. Jack is the hospital administrator, who enjoys his work and all the hunting and fishing in the area. Tim, in eighth grade, and Beth, in ninth, think the school and people are great. Alice is busy with volunteer work and hopes to make our reunion.

Corinne Welch Patton and Jim are president of the Ft. Couch Middle School P.T.A., and she is president of the Mt. Lebanon Chatham Alumnae Club. The children, John (13), Alice (9), and Bill (7½), are busy with Boy and Girl Scouts, Indian Guides, school and church choirs plus music lessons.

Eleanor Wenning Atwell's children are getting older, but she and Bob aren't! Bobbie decided on Dartmouth and Amy is a junior at Ellis. They all still love skiing.

Mary Elizabeth Wiles Knight (no longer Mizzie) wishes us Peace.

Martha Sutton Ammon and Jim have been traveling this year. They were in Greece last March, and in London, Paris and Switzerland in the fall. Martie plans to go back to school next fall. For now, she visits elderly shut-ins in the inner city and her daughter Sarah tutors there. They all love to ski and play tennis all year long.

After taking extra courses in biology, Nancy Aeberli Mooney now has a part-time job selling carpeting—mostly because it's so close to her home. She and Jim and their two boys (in high school and 6th grade) had a wonderful trip to Cape Cod last summer where they also enjoyed visiting with Barbara Clark Samuelson and family.

Gwen Bach Lammert certainly had her share of misfortune this past year—broke her right knee cap in a car accident in June ("step and drag" in a full cast for six weeks) and three days later suffered a miscarriage. Our deepest sympathy is also extended to her on the recent deaths of both her father and younger brother. However, three young children (8, 10 and 12) keep Gwen busy—both as a Brownie Leader and active member of the P.T.A.

A great trip to Europe last September was the high point of the year for Nancy Baker Fekety. Husband Bob attended medical meetings (he's Chief of Infectious Diseases at the University of Michigan), and Nancy saw the sights. Daughter Susie (13) is a horse enthusiast, and Sally (9) bubbles about everything—especially skating.

The state of Washington is down in population—Eleanor Balent Young and family are "back east" in Ohio where Paul is now an explosives engineer for Kaiser Chemical Co. Their oldest son, Tom, is a freshman at Ohio University.

Just keeping her "men folk" fed (3 sons and Jim) is a full-time job for Marilyn Black Auchterlonie. Next year the two oldest boys hope to enter the University of Michigan and Purdue, but the youngest boy and daughter Amy promise to keep the homefront lively.

Nancy Brooks Burkhart is busy as a telephone answering service for her oldest son's musical group called the "Notables." He's a college sophomore, and this group work certainly helps defray expenses. A daughter in high school, another son in 8th grade, and active work in the Overbrook Women's Club keep Nancy "on her toes."

A trip to Jamaica the end of February was planned for Eleanor Colvin Wiley. Husband Tom has his own business as a manufacturer's representative and steel fabricator. Son Jeff will enter Grove City College next fall.

Three-year-old Jeffrey is helping his mother, Shirley Elliott Johnston, teach morning kindergarten at a nearby church. Brother Jay (9) regards his favorite pastime as eating, and Jill (13) is now almost as tall as Shirley.

A spinal fusion in September has kept Jane Feiler Miller out of action, but we're happy to hear her back is now healing nicely. Last summer the Millers enjoyed having an English boy as a house guest for a month. He was part of a teen-age exchange program sponsored by the Rotarians. This summer Jane's sons (17 and 15) hope to go to England and live with English families.

Teaching reading as the Team Leader of the first year reading pod has taken precedence over music for Norma Jean Gittins Stoffer. However "N.J." still finds time to direct two junior church choirs and keep up with her four girls. Husband Van has been promoted to Superintendent of Seamless Mill Maintenance.

Joan Goodwin Heckel is teaching 3rd grade in the Mars area this year while husband Joe is working on a master's degree in counselor education at Pitt. Son David is college hunting for next fall. "Goodie" and her three daughters managed to do a lot of canning and freezing from their large garden—they moved into an old farm house near Mars last summer. She also reports having seen Joann Walther recently in Pittsburgh.

Still working as 3-11 supervisor at Allegheny General Hospital, Jean Graham Hague is also president of the local garden club. Her four sons are all fine and lively—especially Tommy who is just 2. Husband Fred was recently made principal of Fox Chapel High School.

As of last September, G-G Guest Tritschler is Director of Studies at Saint Agnes School, an Episcopal preparatory school in Albany. Sydney is in 8th grade (going to Greece in April), and Charlie (5) attends an "open classroom" and can actually read whole books! G-G and Lorrie Norr Blumberg survived each other's 40th birthdays together and had a wonderful summer vacation at the Cape.

Anne Holden London reiterates what most of us with children will agree—her two girls are as different as night and day. She continues to enjoy her work as research editor for Clark, Dodge & Co.

The clean, uncluttered life in Iowa really appeals to Barbara Hoy Dible. "Shipa" and her family had a great vacation touring Colorado and Wyoming last summer. She sees Ivy Watson Baird quite often, and they both hope to get to our reunion in June.

A jammed-pack news flash arrived too late for publication last year from Barbara Hyde Asbury. At that time Bunny and her family (5 children) had recently moved from Michigan to Miami, Florida, where husband Charlie began teaching at Miami Dade Junior College. This year Bunny is teaching in a private school, and, at Ruth Swisshelm's request from the alumnae office, she served as local alumnae chairman for the dinner Mrs. Clifford S. Heinz gave in Miami in honor of President and Mrs. Eddy on February 14. Our condolences to Bunny on the death of her father in April, 1969.

Only three more credits and Kathryn Jones Schurman will have her master's degree from Duquesne University. In the interim Kathy is doing substitute kindergarten teaching. Her three children (8, 12 and 14) are all well and happy. We were doubly sorry to hear that Kathy's father and father-in-law both passed away this past year within six weeks of each other.

A great visit with Ann Gould Moore's family in Colorado last summer is the word from Patricia Kennedy Earley. While in Colorado the Earleys also spent a week at a dude ranch. Pat mentioned what a treat it was to be invited to a dinner party last January at the home of Barbara Black Bloomstrom ('50) where they visited with Dr. and Mrs. Eddy, Dr. Chmura, and other Cincinnati alumnae.

Our 20th reunion chairman, Mary Ellen Leigh McBride, reports all goes well. Her husband is now tax counsel for PPG Industries. Daughter Ellen Leigh was an Exceptionally Able Youth in Allegheny County, and her other daughter, Robbie, wins prizes for her horsemanship. You'll all be hearing from "Mel" soon.

Patricia Meyer Kovacs and Fred had a fabulous trip to London and Paris last summer. Their two sons are busy with tennis and skiing. Pat continues to enjoy her part-time work for the Center of Occupational Mental Health.

A couple of weeks in Florida was enjoyed by the family of Laura Miksch Diaz this past summer. On the way back they stopped in Williamsburg and Atlanta and saw "Six Flags Over Georgia"—fabulous! Then home to enjoy their own pool.

Helping to set up a new middle school library for next year is a lot of work but fun, too, for Julianna Moore Pollitt. Nanna's oldest son is college hunting, and her oldest daughter (16) is a beautiful girl almost six feet tall. If we other "youngsters" can tolerate her gray hair, Nanna hopes to make our reunion.

All Californians—prepare for battle! Patricia O'Keefe Beede and family enjoyed a vacation in California last summer but are glad they don't live there. Pat and Ray are otherwise "up to their ears" with the activities of their two sons.

The college records must be wrong, contends Stella Pavloff: as far as she wants to believe, she only graduated ten years ago! At any rate, Stella does admit to having had a memorable visit in Los Angeles from a '51 classmate, Shirley Kerchner, last November.

Anne de Shazo Robertson reports loving her work in a local mental health center (has her Ph.D.) and a consulting center in Washington, D.C. She and Tom also enjoy a lot of skiing in Pennsylvania and Aspen. Last July her two oldest boys were in a serious car accident, and Scott (17) spent six weeks in the hospital with a fractured vertebrae. All is well now—he's a freshman at Reed College, Portland, Oregon. In October "Shaze" and Tom attended another most rewarding seminar in Dynamics of Family Communication in Mexico.

Marlene Shettel Stovicek now has a double reason for coming to Pittsburgh often. Daughter Jan is a sophomore at Chatham, and Larry, Jr. is a freshman at Carnegie-Mellon University. The four younger boys all are "gung-ho" in the sports world as well as doing fine in school. Last fall the Stovicks moved to a 50-year-old "English Manor House" just three blocks from their previous home. And Marlene has weathered the 40 mark—"getting wider and grayer!" (Aren't most of us—please?)

Horse shows and fox hunting are the "in" things with the family of Marguerite Sullivan Hannon. The three oldest children have collected an impressive number of ribbons and trophies. Mugs reports that their "menagerie" now includes six horses, four cats, three dogs, a canary and numerous goldfish. She was able to accompany Jack on trips to Colorado, Wyoming, Florida, Chicago, Skytop and New York. She also had a nice visit with Lois Young Flyte and family in Cleveland recently.

By June Peggy Tucker Thompson will be half way through her graduate studies in social work! She has a very interesting field placement in the protective service of a public child welfare agency. Husband Pete and her four children seem to be surviving well despite a good bit of mayhem. Chatham's new assistant to the President, Robert Barr, is an old friend of theirs and a real gain for us!

Joyce Wilde Round's family has "spread its wings." Her oldest son is a freshman at Wittenberg University, her daughter is enrolled at Heidelberg College for next fall, and her youngest son attends a local military school. Husband Dan is a comptroller at a local bank, and Joyce is quite content and happy. If any 51'ers get near Uniontown, Pa., give her a call. The Rownds have a summer cottage at Deer Lake.

Even though they had no special news, we were very happy to hear from the following: Ethel Anderson Mesloh, Suzanne (Suzie) Blair Murray, Natalie Eger Novick, Ann Gould Moore, Margaret (Peggy) Kennedy Murphy, Shirley Kerchner, Anne (Macfuddy) Mae Landefeld Eckert, Nancy Perry Vesely, Martha (Betty) Whaley Webster and Joan Young Drugmand.

Maddie reporting: We finally made a family trek back to Wisconsin last August—hadn't been "home" in nine years! Our boys (9 and 6)—well, they're boys; and Penny (16) alternates her time between skiing and her pleasure horse which she bought with her own money!

Rosella reporting: My mother and I spent a glorious week in September at the fantastic Greenbrier resort in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. However, we were deeply saddened in November by the death of my beloved father.

Hope to see everyone June 5th!!!

Due to circumstances beyond her control Frances Habe was unable to solicit her section of the class for this issue.

With her children in grades 9, 6 and 2, Muriel French Hasely is working part time as a school nurse. Ann Matlack Williams reports that her children are now 16½, 14½ and 12½.

I had a great surprise shortly before deadline time. In lieu of returned questionnaire, I received a phone call from Nancy Patterson Courtney who was here visiting sister Nora (x'52). It was such fun talking with her, although she did have some sad news to report . . . former classmate Babs Woolston Brinton and husband lost their oldest child and only son, Jimmy, when he was struck by a car last year. I'm sure that all who knew Babs join in extending deepest sympathy to her and her family. Patter also said that the Dickey's (Jane Montgomery) will be leaving Pittsburgh for the Akron area, and that Nancy Bailey and her family have been in Dallas for years.

Another nice surprise was hearing from Bobby Pratt Ahlers who reports—hold on to your hats, troops!—that Kim is 19 and in college. WOW! Bill (16) is working while Stephen (14) "eats and watches TV." The Ahlers are thrilled to be moving back to Cleveland where big Bill will be district manager for J&L Steel.

Jane Smith (Donaldson) was married to Richard Morgan last spring with Jane's sons Robb (13) and Dean (11½) attending. Richard is with Great Lakes Steel in Detroit.

Daughter Sandy (3½), part-time work running her husband's office, and frequent travel take up Sue Smith Sweitzer's time. The Sweitzers expect their lake-front home to be completed by winter.

Alice Snook Kalla, Dick and their four boys came home sore but happy with their collective improvement after a week on the ski slopes of Quebec. Snookie is taking cello lessons again and hopes to get involved in some ensemble work soon.

As an AAUW member, Marie Timothy Obermann is working in conjunction with her local library to provide an oral history for Berkeley Heights, New Jersey. They are interviewing older and long-time residents and taping their memories of the town.

Ed and Elaine Vincic Berman have both become involved in the community, which has been quite lively with a fight over the local high-rise issue. Son David is 7, and daughter Susan "almost 5 (going on 21!)." Vinnie hopes to get back to work again after Susan begins kindergarten in the fall.

Our deepest sympathy goes to Trisha Wilkinson Bloomfield on the sudden loss of her mother in an automobile accident. Ever the traveller, Trisha's job has taken her to Hawaii, Canada and Texas, and she and Frank spent a great month vacationing in Europe. She almost got to see Jan Geiersbach Barr in January, but had to settle for a phone visit when the pilot chose to land in Oklahoma City instead of Tulsa. Trish did see ex-roommate Ann Beaumont Sanborne, whose children are growing, and whose husband John is starting his own business.

Mary Carroll Williams Hofer, Don, and the three children are getting ready to move into their new "old" house, a 114-year-old former schoolhouse/meeting hall. She still keeps busy with church work and the League of Women Voters. M.C.'s questionnaire contained a plea for news of Alice Bash Fish. All of her old roomies have lost touch with Allie and are most anxious to find her. If anyone can provide an address or any information, please contact M.C.

With four children going in as many directions at once, I (Diane) am spending my life in the car. The highlight of our year was a relaxing, do-nothing-but-sun week in the Outer Banks of North Carolina.

So many former classmates have popped up in this year's replies that I hunted up old yearbooks and have had a ball reminiscing about those who were a part of the class of '53 at one time or another. How about including news of as many as possible in next year's Recorder? And don't forget—we have a reunion in '72, so start planning now. Hope to see you all there!

DEATH

Lois Gilpin Pollock, March 28, 1971

We are shocked and deeply saddened to learn of Lois' untimely death due to cancer. The class extends its very sincere sympathy to her bereaved family—her husband Warren and their three children, 202 Hackney Circle, Surrey Park, Wilmington, Delaware 19803, and her mother, Mrs. Sara J. Gilpin, 1120 Monroe Avenue, Bethel Park, Pennsylvania 15102.

Jean Reporting:

After a camping trip to Moosehead Lake in Maine last summer, Kay Avers Headley and family moved to a large home in the country. Kay is president of her church women's group.

Barbara Braun Bajoras reports that she is still the stay-at-home, non-career type and has her hands full with her family.

When I received Barbara Beacham Volk's letter she had just returned from a ski trip to Vail and Aspen. At Christmas she had a reunion with Barb McVicker Martin and Carolyn O'Donnell Menosky. Squire Volk and family spent last summer's vacation at Boothbay Harbor where they enjoyed sailing and water skiing.

Sally Beck Lee should have a lot to report next spring. At this writing she and Bill were planning a trip to Rome.

Keeping up with today's youth and her nursing is Yvonne Brooks Saxton. Yvonne is a substitute nurse for the New Jersey Board of Education in Camden. Pete is the Executive Director of the South Camden YMCA. Son Dave is 9 and in the 4th grade, daughter Lisa is 8 and determined to become a ballerina. Yvonne had a reunion with Jill Burnham Bouser and Grace Cherry King, '58, during the past year.

Jill Burnham Bouser is involved with church work, Camp Fire Girls, PTA and a human relations group. She writes of visiting with Yvonne Brooks Saxton and Gretchen Elchlepp Smith.

Eleanor Carroll Molnar's news arrived on her Christmas card which was a sketch of her family by Henry Koerner. The whole family went to Europe for a month this summer. They traveled by car to Hungary to visit Mike's family and then on to Yugoslavia and Italy. Suggie is very busy with all her volunteer work in the art field: the Greater Uniontown Arts Festival; restoration of the Fayette County Courthouse; a show at Gallery 40 West with her mother; a one-man show at the Backstreet Gallery; helping Mike teach design at the Fayette Campus of Penn State. She writes that she sees Bonnie Palmer Whyel and Barbara Beacham Volk often.

A Chatham Club South is being started in Atlanta, reports Linda Cunningham Bham. Linda hopes to go back to grad school next year and finally get her degree. She is busy as president of her church women's group, an officer in her garden club, and a member of Republican Women and the League of Women Voters.

I had a pleasant chat with Angie Fee Levy instead of the usual letter. She reports that after a lengthy process the remodeling of the house is finally complete. The Class extends sympathy to Angie and family on the death of her mother.

Volunteer work in the school library keeps Zoe Ghiates Lalos busy. Since they live close to New York City, they are taking advantage of their location and seeing all the Broadway plays.

Secretary of the Membership Nominating Committee of Southwestern Pennsylvania Girl Scouts is Patricia Gordon Moore. Pat had to give up her Junior Troop and camping because she developed an allergy to grass and trees! She writes of seeing Leslie Mulvihill Brockett and receiving a beautiful letter from Marilyn Lenchner Applebaum, '54, from Tel Aviv, Israel.

Ethel Gottesman Weil says she is still teaching kindergarten, keeping house and taking care of four children.

The Class extends sympathy to Nancy Follett Waichler and family on the accidental death of their two-year-old daughter Leslie Zhoni due to an overdose of tranquilizers. The following is a quote from Nan's letter. "After Leslie's death on October 10, Dick and I launched a nationwide campaign to insure the passage of a strong version of the Poison Prevention Packaging Act of 1970. A strong bill requiring child resistant containers on all harmful household products including medications was passed in the last session of Congress and was signed by the President on December 31. It will be a year before the effects of this bill are felt in the market place. In the meantime we are urging all adults to lock up every harmful household product and medication they have."

Marilyn Hill spent a superb vacation in October driving through the southwest with a friend and visiting Indian Reservations. She had also spent some time on jury duty.

One night a week Lorraine Hixenbaugh Haas spends at an adult education class, and the rest of her time is spent taking care of her family and new son.

Marilyn Campbell Kahn sent her Christmas letter and a picture of her family. She and her family are enjoying Florida, especially when they hear the weather reports from the north. Her 13-year-old son Dale had an accident which required him to have brain surgery. He was diving into a canal and hit something. He suffered extensive brain damage, and, in time, must have a plastic plate put in to replace the part of the skull which is missing, but he does not seem to have any serious after effects.

Mary Jane Kahn is continuing her library work.

Another class member who has moved to the country is Marie Kibler Gaertner. She reports that the forests, pastures, and a lake inspire her daily efforts in music.

Claire Koller Runger reports that Indiana is cold and windy. She is busy with League of Women Voters and helps an inner city teacher with some of her problems most mornings. She recommends that everyone read Moment in the Sun.

I would like to thank all of you who replied this year and those of you who sent $1.00 too late to be acknowledged last year.

This past year has been busy for us although we have done nothing on a grand scale. I am busy with a part-time job, Youth Committee at the YWCA and some church work besides keeping up with an active teenager. We have had trips to Washington, D.C., New York City and the Gauts' on Long Island, and the seashore where I ran into Molly Lenhardt Rowden in Ocean City, New Jersey. Hope to see you all at the reunion next spring.

Carla reporting:

Ruth Levison Kalish is still teaching nursery school two mornings a week and active in P.T.A. She had a fun reunion with Sandy Blumberg Sonneborn and Dottie Bigg Milstein and husbands.

With Pat McCormick Goodrich's two daughters in school all day, she now has time to paint and do some free-lance magazine illustrating. Pat met Mary Jane Knapper Wallbauer at a party last May.

Anne Cohen Winkelman put their new swimming pool to good use by entertaining inner city children from Washington once a week. She found this such a worthwhile undertaking that she plans to have them twice a week this summer.

Last January, Nancy DeWard Walker moved near Portland, Oregon, leaving behind in California the wall-to-wall people and the smog. Nancy is still teaching, is active in AAUW, and is a Girl Scout leader. Living on four acres, she has become involved in 4-H, raising two baby goats.

"Had a lovely year—if you call spending the summer with a full leg cast on from a winter skiing accident lovely!", writes Barbara McVicker Martin, who decided not to try it again this winter. She did learn that you can get used to just about anything.

Joan Monahan McFalls' community work includes the establishment of elementary school libraries in Pittsfield's 27 elementary school buildings, all to be manned by volunteers. She has also been working on a project for drug education at the grade 4-6 level for elementary schools throughout Berkshire county. Those two projects, plus two children, 7 and 4, plus skiing and house renovation keep her busy and happy.

Mary Kay Moseley Kamath anticipates a change of address before next year and joins Ruth Oberheim Webb in sending regards to all.

Finally having all five Spanglers in school is news for Marita Pigossi Spangler. She still loves Colorado—even talked about skiing again after years of avoiding it. Ron and Marita are planning a trip east with the children this summer to show them the ocean, Washington D.C., New York City, etc.

Nancy Reynolds Rdesinski enjoyed their camping trips to Watkins Glen and Corning, N.Y. last year. Amy, who was then about one year old, was a good camper. Nancy doesn't know if they will try it this year with their new little girl, Rebecca. The older girls are a big help with the "babies" and will come in very handy for babysitting later on.

This year Sally Seiple Tullai and family traveled from Florida to Nova Scotia with their tent camper, but not all in one vacation. The entire family enjoys skiing, too, and have been spending many winter weekends in the Poconos.

Travel for Natalie Stern Miller meant two weeks in Japan during May, 1970. They were only at the Fair half of a day, spending the rest of the time in Yokohama. Natalie wrote they "were trying to live like the Japanese, but they were taking our pictures." In December the Millers spent two weeks in the outer islands of Hawaii. Natalie is busy with the American Conservatory Theatre Foundation (fund-raising arm of A.C.T. theatre groups).

Her game of golf was so bad that Jeanne Craig Byron decided to return to full-time teaching this term at El Camino High School in Woodland Hills, California. They have bought a sail boat for trips to Catalina Island on the weekends.

Gayle Crane Wheeler finally got us caught up with their activities. She taught school in Butler, Pa. while Jim got a master's degree in library science at Pitt (1966-67). Then they moved to Fredericton, New Brunswick, Canada where Jim was with the University of New Brunswick. Gayle enjoyed Canadian living—less hectic and very friendly people. Their next move in September 1969 took them to Westfield, New York when Jim became Director of Patterson Library. Their 14-year-old daughter thinks Chatham is great.

Regina McDonough O'Rourke is busy with myriad activities of a busy family, especially when the range is 15 years to 7 months. The generation gap in the O'Rourke family is between sisters and brothers.

Last summer Marianne Thorne Wright had a great trip to Europe. They spent some time visiting Mannie's sister and family in London, then rented a car and traveled through Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France. Some time was spent in Heidelberg, Germany showing Libbie, their 14-year-old daughter, where she was born. They also took a hydrofoil to Budapest, Hungary. Janet Loos Siebert is a new neighbor, and they met accidentally at a luncheon at the Y.

Margie Mounts Hartz spent ten days of winter in Pittsburgh due to her father's death. They were so glad to get home to sunny Florida.

Nancy Smith Bierwerth is active in the League of Women Voters and in church affairs after being put on the church session—one of her more frustrating activities.

The Gauts have finally adjusted to New York, with its demands, and Long Island with its surrounding water. We enjoyed a trip to Colorado Springs last May. As of this writing, we will try skiing, for the first time, in New Hampshire during school recess. Many thanks to those who replied.

Mary Killen Cochran reports a beautiful view of the Apollo 14 from their house. Disneyworld will also be located nearby. Mary is a member of the pollution study group of A.A.U.W.

Ginny Ladish Angulo visited the U.S. in November with her two boys and was later joined by her husband and his parents. She also went to Chicago and was delighted to see Rosalie Stern Wolfe and Pat Alogoskoufis. Ginny extends her usual invitation to the class to visit her in Bogota.

Being busy doing "motherly, housewife-like things" with five children still leaves Dottie Devine Agnew with some time to tutor algebra and to take a sewing course in sportswear.

Nancy Cannon Cocke has been helping to organize a group to counteract drug abuse in Erie County. She is having great fun doing volunteer production work at the local education television station for live and taped programs.

Grace Cherry King has been busy with a new home, her family, and night school.

Barb Baker Kreindler had a "busy, healthy, and exciting" year with a trip to Williamsburg, Jamestown, and Washington with the family, and a visit to London in June with Herb. She is involved with volunteer work in schools, ORT presidency and various activities with her three children.

Having recently moved to Indianapolis, Marcia Froimson Baum works full time in a project concerned with children having developmental problems. Richard is a neonatologist, a pediatrician specializing in newborns. He is setting up a newborn intensive care unit at Methodist Hospital.

Carol Grim LeClere is teaching school like mad, taking up skiing, and living at the lake with husband Bill and their two children.

A long humorous letter from Nancy Kasper Nixon tells of their great enthusiasm for horseback riding. Her husband Rick's gift to her and their son was a very fine hunter. In addition to her riding everyday, Nancy has been housing a menagerie of animals.

Judy Kohn Goldie is busy carpooling her two nursery school age children and is financial secretary for Women's American ORT. Ted is an engineer at Autonetics, a division of North American Rockwell.

Rhoda Weitsman David keeps busy with three daughters. While registering daughter Jennifer at Brownies, she came out troop organizer for the entire school.

In a year complicated by major surgery, Nancy Teeters Bunce is so unbelievably busy we can barely even summarize. The book she illustrated, "Hi Fashion Sewing and Tailoring" has sold over 20,000 copies in hard cover and is now in paperback for nationwide distribution. The week their fifth child was born, Chuck was promoted to Cashier of the First National Bank of Pueblo, in charge of all bank operations and personnel. Nancy is also art and layout director for a magazine for the city of Pueblo, decorated the bank at Christmas with animated displays, and did the interior decoration for a new drive-in and office building. That is only a start in what Nancy described as a most happy and fulfilling life for all of them.

Mary Ann Schmitt Goodrum also had a newsy letter—of her 9th child, and being invited to the Governor's Mansion as they are friends of Tennessee's Governor and Mrs. Dunn. She extends an invitation to all classmates to visit. Mary Ann says, "If we can take it—so can you all."

Betsy Russell Pugh wrote of a trip to Pittsburgh in September and some ski-trips to Vermont in the winter.

While Rena Shurmaster Sherman returned to school for a master's degree in elementary education, Rose Senoff Eisenstein also went back to school. She is now a library teacher in an elementary school in her area. Rose will be in Pittsburgh at the end of May as Mark will be attending a meeting at Pitt in anesthesiology.

We were glad to hear from Carol Zoreitch Latchem. She lives in Monessen, Pa.

where her husband is a civil engineer in utility and heavy construction.

After a pleasant summer, June at the New Jersey seashore and August in the mountains in Missouri, Eleanor Skinner Wainwright is a part-time lecturer in the department of English at the University of Wisconsin.

Lynn Wilner Hawker and family are busy as usual. This year each is involved in an arts and crafts project. Lynn reports a wonderful visit with Jane Stocker Burfoot and family in Washington, D.C. last summer.

Sue Feldman Cohen is studying for a master's in guidance counseling and visited Spain and Portugal in the fall.

Jackie Miller Van Doren sent another newsy letter about her eighteen-room hotel. She has a furniture refinishing and repairing business while her husband is an engineer for General Electric.

Rosalie Stern Wolfe reports a year full of travel, once to Mexico, another time to Florida, and a family camping trip from Chicago to the East Coast, down to Key West and then back home. A highlight of her year was the Bar Mitzvah of their son in November.

"Hellos" from Kathy Meyer Abrahamson, Jane Pattie Vysotsky, Marlene Valentine Dougherty, Liz Krayner Weatherwax, Kathy Iannuzzo Wasserman, and Barb Madson Shannon, who has two children in school while she is at home "struggling with their two-year-old brother."

Your secretaries are truly delighted with every word we receive from you. I (Hannah) am busy with volunteer work now that my two daughters are in school. I (Sandy) divide my time between some volunteer work and chasing my two-year-old son. We both enjoyed visits from Jan Goldman Coppersmith and Steffi Ruben Klein this past year.

Susie reporting:

Carla Bianchi Palmer has been in New Rochelle, New York, for six years now, with husband Jack and ten-year-old son John. Jack is Chairman of the N.Y.U. Biology Department at University Heights in the Bronx, while Carla is a research technician in microbiology for the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. Her recent work involves severely burned patients and their bacteria flora. The Palmers spend their summers in Falmouth, Cape Cod. Right now, however, Jack is on a six-month sabbatical and hopes to go to France to study the vertical, rhythmic migrations of a species of worm. "Some people will do anything to get away from it all," writes Carla.

Elaine Bloom Greenberger presented husband Elliott with the first girl born in the Greenberger family in fifty years. Their sons, ages 11 and 10, are taking complete care of Shari Lynn. The Greenbergers are decorating their home, and have an entire wall in the family room devoted to clocks of all kinds. Their Cheeseboard Store business requires trips to New York City which Elaine enjoys, especially attending the fancy food shows. She mentions that several Chatham alumni are excellent customers and connoisseurs of unusual cheeses.

Norma Davis Hilles, husband Bob and the children, Norman, 4, Mark, 7, and Debbie, 9, enjoy their new home. Norma directs a religious girl's group called the Pilgrims.

Lois Shook Becker is teaching adult education in painting and design and also going to school. Her paintings are selling all over the country, and she has just completed art work for a hotel in St. Croix, Virgin Islands. Lois says her life is full and she is enjoying her two daughters.

I attended a Chicago alum party at Margaret Cooke Skidmore's, and reunited with classmates Lillian Kubrick Miller, Sandy Wagner Gross and Jinnie Nabors. I was impressed by the advanced degrees that so many alums are putting to good use, and have begun a master's in sociology. Philip and I have bought a sprawling five-bedroom home near Wheaton for our two daughters and two baby sons, and hope to be moved in by the time this is in print. I would like to have Lois Becker watercolors on the walls.

Debbie reporting:

This was a bumper year for responses. Sixteen—count 'em—and all good news.

Harriet Lewis Franklin wrote while packing for a combination business and pleasure trip to New Zealand, Australia, Fiji and Tahiti. She is taking a Berlitz course in conversational Japanese in preparation for taking Erica, 5, and Gregg, 7, to Japan for the summer. Ken has started an international consulting firm called International Food Programs, in which he creates food programs for vast food chains and restaurants abroad. Harriet will probably take a leave of absence from her doctorate program in English at Carnegie-Mellon. Can't imagine why! The Franklins spent three weeks in England and Ireland last summer.

Also planning some travel abroad, but in reverse, is Elly Roeger Nyhus and family. They expect to return to the U.S.A. after three years in Rio de Janeiro, spend a few months here, then go overseas again to a new assignment. Elly asked that we correct her son's name. It is Eric, not Erie as in Great Lakes.

Betsy Lytle Suatoni, Jean Babb Ersoz ('58) and their husbands enjoyed a week of skiing in Canada. In warm weather the Suatonis go for white water canoeing for fun and thrills. Husband Frank is the anesthesiologist at St. John's Hospital in Pittsburgh. With both girls in school, she has time to work with the Job Advisory Service at Chatham, a very interesting and challenging organization.

Mary Ann Martucci Baker is working full time at the Faculty of Medicine, University of Toronto, and preparing to move into a new home.

Carol Parker Berkman enjoys being a member of the alumnae nominating committee. They had a great trip to Acapulco in November.

Missie Mendelson Cummins and Millard spent eight days in Aruba and saw Ruth Gottesman Klodell while there. Millard has been active on the national level of the United Jewish Appeal, and went to Israel three times this past year. Missie is active in community affairs, and reports traveling a lot with the three kids and really enjoying "our mid-thirties."

Jan Roux Seaman and family traveled by trailer last summer, south through the Smokies, then east to Cape Hattaras and Williamsburg. Now they are planning a trip to California for the coming summer. Jan is teaching a unique transition class for children who have completed kindergarten but are not yet ready for first grade. The chance to do some experimental teaching and use innovative materials has made it an exciting and challenging year.

Ruth McMillan is presently involved in a state pilot project in Environmental Education. As part of the program she took 24 fifth-graders camping for five days in November. It rained for four days, but they hiked and explored the environment day and night, and she hopes this will become a regular part of the Fox Chapel curriculum. In her reading and math classes she has Fran Vernardos Gialama's oldest son, Jim, and has seen Fran several times this year. Ruth hopes to complete the course requirements this summer for her master's degree at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Marie Smith Smith takes advantage whenever she can of being so near the Capitol. She is still teaching piano and is the organist at her church. She is also president of the local Newcomers Club, which has a membership of 300 very interesting and interested women. She is looking forward to seeing Elly Roeger Nyhus when she returns to the D.C. area.

Nancy Sherwood Willcox has moved to New Haven for one year where Brewster is on a Rockefeller Sealantic Fellowship at Yale Divinity School. He hopes to receive his S.T.M. degree in June. His emphasis is on developing a biblical theology for social action in the urban church. Meanwhile, Nancy is Director of the Calvin Hill Day Care Center. It is a new center initiated by Yale students for low income Yale employees and graduate students, and is the first such program to be established on campus with the support and cooperation of the University. They serve 27 children with a professional staff and 20 student volunteers.

Elayne Rosen is Campaign and Planning Associate and Urban Affairs Coordinator for the United Jewish Federation of Pittsburgh. This summer she will return to Los Angeles for the second year of training in the Jewish Communal Workers program.

Earla Sue Smith McNaull had one foot on the plane to Bermuda when the trip was cancelled due to a cut-back on travel because of the recession. However, Colin got a one-month trip to Africa before the cut-back. They enjoy skiing in the winter and good sailing on Long Island Sound in the summer.

Alma Salvetti Jennings sends regards to all '59ers, as does Alice Rexer Kolek. Alice hopes to visit Sally Head Mulcahy this spring and vacation in Canada. Harriet Lipscher Felman extends an open invitation to anyone passing through St. Louis. It might be a good idea to stay for dinner since she has won a National Gourmet Recipe Contest. Harriet Lewis Franklin and hubby spent a few days there and lived to travel the rest of the world.

Holly Wilbar Johnston visited her sister in Los Angeles, taught the Brownies the Hula, and skis with or without the three children every chance she gets.

Lynn Hughes Mayer writes of an active year as chairman of "Fish of Northbrook," and has been elected to the vestry of her church.

Yours truly is still working part time and laying the ground work for a study to establish guide lines for predicting the relative safety of an elderly patient living alone after discharge. With both girls in school this year, I have more time to "busy around." I am writing a monthly newsletter for my garden club, stalking antique shops for "junque" to furnish the room we have added to the house, and waiting for the spring thaw so I can begin a "dig" for old bottles. It was great hearing from you . . . keep up the good news.

Marianne reporting:

Barbara Easton Marks is teaching kindergarten at an open space progressive school. Kristine, 4, and Scott, 15 months, make her household big and bustling as her parents, "retired" from Pittsburgh last summer, have joined them in Annapolis.

Angie Blumberg Levenstein and family spent a mid-winter month in Mexico. While there, she read in the paper that Dr. Mabel Elliott had attended the wedding of her sister's godchild in Mexico City. Small World!

Hannah Brush Van Horn says they are just muddling along with Karla, 4½, in nursery school, and Velda, 2½, into everything.

On the plane to Boston for a second week of training as a sales coordinator for Wide World Lecture Bureau, Harriette Cohen Turndorf writes enthusiastically about her new career. She also reports visiting Dick and Judy Rubenstein and Irv and Danni Karp Bloom while in Pittsburgh for our reunion, and saw Ronnie and Marlene Schweig Hartstein's new home in the fall. Harriette also visited another traveler in Washington, D.C., since Nigar Abbasi Husain spent a lovely summer in Europe and then in Pakistan, leaving her middle daughter with her mother in Kahachi. Susan Childs Matheson had an exciting time re-experiencing winter in Minnesota where it dipped to —12° on a visit to Jim's parents.

Sue Engel Golden reports a busy year as library chairman of P.T.A., and treasurer of Randallstown Jaycee Wives. For not getting involved in her new community, Marilyn Eckert Winters has managed to join the League of Women Voters, a child study club, church choir, church couples social group, couples bridge group and book study group. She squeezed in a visit with Sue Jessop McGowan during the summer.

Benita Acheson is in graduate school at SUNY in Albany studying library science.

With Bill commuting to NYC daily, Robin Askin DeKleine is adjusting to 6:00 a.m. rising and 7:30 p.m. dinners. She is also working part time as a substitute teacher in nursery school and as accompanist for two school choruses. The community choral group that she accompanies taped a December concert that was radio broadcast on Christmas Eve.

Joan Cercone Gilson's latest project is daisy afghans, after stuffing animals with foam for Christmas presents. She says, "I must be losing my grip!" Her visit to New Orleans was fabulous, but she wonders how anyone survives that heat all year round. Well, I'm going to find out in a few months since we moved to suburban New Orleans last October after a longevity record of 18 months in Atlanta. We find it an exciting city to live in and the cuisine is divine. We're busy redecorating another house, and our second child arrived just in time to make the "news."

Jess reporting:

Among Mary Booth Fassett Roberts' charitable activities, the most interesting is a proposed merger between Child and Family Service and the Catholic Family Service Organization. Mary Booth says this is a fascinating project and she finally feels as though she is putting her background in sociology to some use.

Karlana Glemser Warnock is a full-time homemaker and mother these days. And what courage! She and Fred took their new daughter on a two week camping trip to Nova Scotia when she was only three months old.

Libby Jones Gadd reported that "all the responsibility falls to me." That means caring for the family as well as dealing with a new old home, a 150-year-old house they moved into last spring. Ross is now a full-fledged corporation pilot and thus is often away for weeks at a time. He spent Thanksgiving and New Years in Nassau, but Libby says she did get to accompany him once on a long weekend in Fort Lauderdale.

Ronna Friedman Kanterman says mothering takes up all her time. Besides Bobby, 5, and Nancy, 2, she also manages two white poodles and a German Shepherd.

Judy Hicks Musser's husband has completed his surgical residency and will go into practice in Somerset, Pennsylvania in March. Judy says she leaves her job at the art museum regretfully; maybe she'll have more time for painting now.

Mary Jennings Quickel reports that Ken will finish his training at Duke Hospital this summer. Then they will be moving to Danville, Pennsylvania where Ken will join the staff of the Geisinger Medical Center.

Moving days seem to be keeping many of us busy. Fran Goodside Feigert says that's the reason they missed the reunion. Frank is teaching political science at SUNY and they enjoy being near the city again. Fran misses the library after so many years of work, but two sons have forced her retirement, at least for awhile.

It's been an exciting year for Eila Foster Amdur and David. They spent three weeks in Israel last summer on a study tour and Eila says they saw everything. Now they're changing address again. David is the new Executive Director of the Jewish Federation of North Broward, including Fort Lauderdale and Pompano Beach. Cleverly, Eila has decided to retire in the sun after ten years of teaching.

A letter from Marty Sanner Grover left me exhausted. Besides involvement with a horse show, a May Fair, an art exhibit and the Junior League, she has become the first feminine member of the housing board in her area. Apparently, this came about when she expressed dissatisfaction with a housing petition. Marty made some phone calls, collected information, and the appointment soon followed. The borough council president remarked to the newspaper that the new housing member has a "knowledge of the building trades uncommon in the fair sex."

Linda Morgan Blyth and family are home from the continent and settling down. Alden is working with the City Planning Commission in Philadelphia and the Blyths are living close to the waterfront in an integrated neighborhood which Linda describes as containing all the staggering problems of urban existence. They are renovating a house using Alden's five-phase architectural plan. You're invited to visit but not stay overnight because they're only in phase two now—plumbing, I think.

Donna Gagliardi Marinofsky and Bruno thought the reunion was grand. They visited with Brenda Purdon Stober and Bob during the summer and enjoyed telling them all about it.

Regards but no news says Marge Hanson Honig, but we are proud that she and Sheila Rush have been appointed to the Chatham Board of Trustees.

As for us, the McGowan's were a trifle slowed down when Gerry came to us last March 30th, at least I was. Jon was promoted to Associate Professor at the University of Massachusetts and also does some consulting. It's been our year for seeing alums, too. We've had visits with Arlene Sinkus Lewis, Anne Putnam Mallinson, Marilyn Eckert Winters, Sally Mercke '63, and Mary Ann Conti Sheline '63. At this writing, 60 inches of snow have been recorded here and we're skiing several times a week, which makes it bearable!

Donna reporting:

It's nice to be doing work for Chatham again even if it's as a class secretary rather than a student. I'm sorry more didn't reply, but thanks to those who did.

Ruth Jones plans to get work as a welfare counselor this spring in the Pittsburgh area if she can find a reliable babysitter for daughter Bonnie. Ruth visited Chatham several times, one trip serving as a speaker at the Students' Colloquy where she was glad "to see how many students cared about peace and women's liberation." Currently a vice president of the Peace and Freedom Center, Ruth is also helping to organize a welfare rights group in Lawrenceville as well as a memorial program for Martin Luther King (April 4).

Still at Elmendorf Air Force Base, Anchorage, Alaska, is Mary Louise Kaylor Maury, whose husband James is a navigator with the USAF. Mary Lou loves Alaska, "especially the camping and salmon fishing in the summers. Unfortunately the summers are short." Mary Lou keeps busy with Lee Ann, 7, Beth, 2½, bowling, Camp Fire Girls and Red Cross. "As a Red Cross volunteer," she says, "I help meet the planes bringing injured soldiers from Vietnam and pass out a little tender loving care while the planes refuel."

From Frances Keenan Bonfigli comes news that husband John has started work on a Ph.D. in social work at the University of Pittsburgh. He's still director of social services and program planning at Somerset State Hospital. Nine-year-old Paul wanted a baby brother, but finds baby sister Jennifer Christine quite nice. Fran is training a colt she bought last April.

Carol Lemke Keil labels son Jack a "terrible two." Marshall and Dottie Seif Kapp and their boys stopped by during a trip through Maryland last summer. The Keils spent a vacation hiking at Blackwater Falls State Park in West Virginia.

Shirley Lewis Minner and family took a one-week, 2,000-mile trip in a pick-up camper last July, traveling to Canada, New York State, Connecticut and New Jersey. Now that husband Gene is an aerospace engineer with NASA Lewis Research Center, the Minners have been getting used "to living the good, normal life in Ohio—away from sardine-can living of married-student housing."

Daughters Sophia and Irina are now six and two, respectively, reports Maria Liadis Faskianos. Sophia, a second-grader who has been reading since age 2½, last June won first prize (a bicycle) in a nationwide Readers Guild reading competition.

Due to some upheavals at the company for which Judy Luttrupp works, she'll soon become a "one-girl office" but looks forward to it.

Working for the United States Census Bureau last spring, Katie Messina Gamble described her districts as running "the gamut from huge estates on the Delaware to very poor people in public housing projects." Says Katie: "If I learned anything from the experience, it was that everybody, rich or poor, loves to talk about himself." During the election Katie worked for the News Election Service which compiled election results for UPI, AP and the three TV networks. "Having worked for Shapp all spring and summer, I thought I'd be in the know about the Pennsylvania gubernatorial race before anyone else, but on election night I was assigned to the New Jersey desk and didn't find out who won in Pennsylvania until I got home next morning." Now Katie is working for an "unannounced candidate" for mayor of Philadelphia. The election is next fall.

Jacqueline Nadolny Rosenberger has been elected a member of the executive committee of the Mt. Lebanon Drug Abuse Council.

Adair Sidforth Alworth's husband Tony is president of the family contracting business since the death of his father in January. Adair says, "I have been working several nights a week on a 'Hotline' crisis telephone service which covers a ten-town area. We get 400 to 500 calls a month. Some are pretty weird—suicides, drunks, drug users." Adair has become active in the Mormon faith and still works with the Junior Woman's Club. Adair would love to see any Chathamites who happen to be in the Caldwell, New Jersey, area.

As for yours truly, I returned home last August from a three-week trip through the Pacific Northwest, where the scenery is absolutely breathtaking, to experience something new in newspaper work—a strike! The non-mechanical employees of The Valley Independent in Monessen struck the paper August 28, after nine months of bargaining which failed to produce improvements in wages, vacations, etc. It's no fun walking a picket line although with all that exercise I've never looked healthier. Not working, I've found more time for reading, knitting, various projects and occasional theatre trips to New York City. The irony of the situation is that I'm now listed in the book "Foremost Women in Communications" and I'm not communicating!

Sally Vasse reporting:
(for Joyce Teegardin Spector):

Once more it has been my happy task to collect news from several classmates, because Joyce Teegardin Spector, who was elected class secretary at the reunion last June, asked me to do it for her this year "as a wedding present." When she and Louis were married in October, Joyce not only switched roles from career girl to housewife—she also acquired a son, 5-year-old Michael, and has been enjoying the new experiences of motherhood! Her husband retired from an Army career and is now a social worker in the Buffalo area.

Jean Thonen Nickel, our class reunion chairman last June, says she was pleased with the attendance, but hopes for even more at our next reunion in 1974! The Nickels' big news is that Nick is now a partner in the new CPA firm of Wellinger, Nickel & Co.

Anne Putnam Mallinson also says, "That was a fine reunion!" (We certainly enjoyed hearing Anne sing again!) She also appeared in a local production of I Do! I Do! in November.

The Kapps (Dorothy Seif), who also enjoyed the reunion, spent a busy year with church and club activities, Marshall's studies at Duquesne University, and two active boys—Karl, in nursery school, and two-year-old Scott. Dottie served on the Alumnae Nominating Committee and as a Chatham delegate at the inauguration of the new President of Butler Community College. Marshall's computer, at Pittsburgh National Bank, got them a fun trip to New Orleans. They also went to Annapolis where they visited Carol Lemke Keil and her family.

The Balikas (Sue Smith) finally finished building their house in the mountains and Sue is looking forward to the pleasant job of decorating. So she says, "If you are in the neighborhood and happen to have a paint brush, we can use you!" (Green Acres' Old River Road, Pleasant Township, Warren County, Pennsylvania.) Sue is also busy with a new project called "Teleclub"—an emergency service and daily check-up for the elderly and shut-ins in Bay Village. She explains: "We do everything—call hospitals, relatives, ministers, doctors—for them." If anyone would be interested in this worthwhile project, Sue will be glad to send you an entire "how to" guidebook.

Nancy Wright Miller and her three children spent the summer at a YMCA camp in the Poconos where Nancy was camp nurse, and they all lived in the infirmary.

Mary Sendek Jakabcsin and her three boys are very happy about Jake's new position as Vice President of Finance and Administration for Hartzell's, Rose and Sons, a men's clothing store.

Barbara Pings Rawley also reports a new position for her husband, Wayne, as Head of Serials (as well as Acting Head of Circulation) at the University of Iowa Library. Barb is still taking courses required for a teaching certificate, and reports their "usual travels"—Detroit and North Carolina shore in the summer, Denver for Christmas.

Marlene Schweig Hartstein will represent her local National Council of Jewish Women at the biennial national convention in Detroit this spring. She is also an officer in an organization that raises funds for cancer research. Husband Ronald is group vice president of Williamsburg Regency.

The international traveler this year was Elizabeth ("Betsy") Waite, who spent 3½ weeks in the British Isles, 3 weeks in Spain with intermediate stops in Paris, Rome, and Amsterdam.

With just three more courses to go for her degree in journalism from California State College at Los Angeles, Carroll Spelke Smaltz writes, "Just think—next time I write I'll be a college graduate just like the rest of you!" Besides school, "Sam" manages to keep up with her three girls' activities—ballet, swim team, choir, Girl Scouts, and Brownies!

This has been an unusually eventful year for the Vasses. In May, Mary (then 1½) and I traveled with a friend and her two daughters (ages 1½ and 3) to Amsterdam for a two-week holiday. We took my 16-year-old sister to help with the children, and it was quite an adventure! The Dutch people were especially interested in our back-packs which we used to carry the two youngest girls while we explored the city and countryside on trolleys and trains. In June we drove to Pittsburgh for the Reunion, and Bill and I made our annual pilgrimage to Stratford, Ontario in July for several superb plays. Then we three flew to California for a month with Bill's mother in Pasadena and then to the beach at Balboa. The highlight of that trip was visiting Don and "Sam" Spelke Smaltz and their charming daughters at their beautiful home in South Pasadena with a "mountain lake" swimming pool and a spectacular view of the San Gabriel Valley! Back home in Flint, I have been busy setting up a library for our church, doing much flute and piccolo playing, and trying to keep pace with one very lively 2-year-old. Bill has been busy with new developments at our college, The University of Michigan at Flint—particularly the search for and selection of the first Chancellor and the planning of a new campus. And our latest cause for celebration was his promotion to Associate Professor.

I have enjoyed hearing from all of you who have replied to my requests for news these past 10 years. I wish Joyce as much pleasure and satisfaction as I have had when she takes up the task next year.

Nancy Beach reporting:

Time passes, husbands and children enter our lives, but the Class of '63 seems to be as active and concerned about people and problems as we all promised we would. Thanks to the busy ones who took time to answer.

Sudy Bullock Bell and Jim are sponsors of their church's Junior High Group, along with refurbishing, remodeling, raising three daughters and German Shepherds. Jim was made Assistant Vice President of Chase Manhattan Bank. Meg Alexander Sprenkle does volunteer work at the local library in Rhinebeck. Her two girls and husband Skip, now a Programming Test Manager, seem to thrive in the "sticks." Anna Crone Nagy sends word of her two children—Andrew, 2, and baby sister Laura. Her primary problem seems to be garbage—disposal, recycling, landfill. "If anyone knows of a workable plan, please let me know."

Margie Conner writes, "I'm still teaching emotionally disturbed children in Bedford Stuyvesant, now in the third year with the same group. Their progress is terrific for children who are supposed to be 'off the wall.' They are experts on marsupials, mammals and as much Greek and Roman classics as I can give them—they absorb everything." (Kudos for Margie.) She also finds time for advance course work and keeping up with old friends. "Sue Bradley's wedding was like a Chatham reunion," Margie reports.

Linda Cooper Brodson took a leadership training course in the Junior Great Books

Program for grammar schools, and enjoys leading her discussion group. Last summer, the Brodsons took the children to visit Linda's family in Europe. "The memories we have are unforgettable . . . to see the world through the eyes of children," Linda writes.

Mary Cook Guy asks, "Why do questions about men and marriage come before jobs and graduate school on our Recorder questionnaire? Our lives shouldn't be defined by men." Mary is a member of the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, and is very excited with the work being done in Montana. Don finished his doctorate in economics, and is now teaching in the University of Montana's M.B.A. program. They both love the clean air and magnificent scenery.

I have joined the ranks at Vogue as an editorial staff writer. When I'm not following the hemlines or extolling the virtues of the new short-shorts, I'm busy doing my part as a one-woman ecology crusade. It's amazing how much you can do when you badger your fellow laundry-ites into using a phosphate-enzyme-free detergent, when you stop a litter-bug cold as you say, "Excuse me Sir—I think you dropped something," when you scream and yell a lot to save a tree, a patch of grass. So start something—wherever you are—and let's read about it in next year's Recorder.

Gail reporting:

For a normally quiet time of the year, February's alumnae news forms brought reports of a very active group of people. To exotic places and delightful chit-chat New babies, new jobs, moving, travel plans filled the usually empty mailbox downstairs. Thank you for all the delightful answers.

Sheila Grobe Rossbach's letter from Germany related how delighted she is with Toff (Christopher Allen) and has another Chathamite (Marcia Mann Butler, '64) to vouch for his bi-lingual abilities. (At four months of age, that's quite a feat.) Husband Ande is in international law, and Sheila still retains her position on the faculty of a German academy for the post-graduate training of social workers, as well as being an ALMOST full-time hausfrau and mother. To quote Sheila, "I confess to finding Dr. Spock more scintillating reading than Lawrence Durrell, Sigmund Freud, and Kate Millet combined." Sheila also brought news from another member of our class, Lucille Davis Wareing and Guy, who are proud parents of "Willie."

Pat Dobyan Lupton returned the alumnae form barely a week after her fourth child arrived. The Luptons are relocated in Mt. Lebanon after ten years in the sunny south. She heard from Sue Hunt Roose as well as Mary Winchester Hickey. Mary also has twins, as does Patti, and Mary swears "there must have been something about that quad."

Nancy Fleming Demoise just about made the deadline for tax deductions with the December 29 arrival of son David.

Mickey Folino Huff is delighted with new son Brian, and, after all this time, she is finally a full-time housewife.

Pam Johnson Fenner and Paul, who went through Lamaze Childbirth Education classes, were thrilled to help bring Gillian into the world, baby sister to Liesel. The Fenners planned a February trip to Honolulu and San Francisco to see Paul's parents, show the grandchildren, and see the sights.

Bonnie George Switzer told about travel plans to San Francisco, too, but not till June. She and Bob, who is assistant professor of biochemistry at University of Illinois, will attend the annual biochemistry meeting sans children. Their new home is near the university campus, where Bonnie is enrolled in the master's program, one course at a time. She is serving, also, as board president of her children's elementary parent-cooperative school.

Bobbie Fellabom Emerick is teaching in the Allentown Y.W.C.A.'s Inner-City Pre-School Program, a school and play set-up for 3½-4-year-olds from underprivileged homes. Bobbie's knowledge of Spanish is quite a help, since Puerto Rican children account for half of the "students." The school meets three mornings a week, but the children's alertness and eagerness make it worthwhile, as well as opening the eyes of the community to its problems.

A long-lost classmate, Pam Chicone, showed up in Philadelphia, and it was great to hear from her again. She is active in numerous facets of Philadelphia life such as the World Affairs Council and the Academy of Natural Sciences, to name just two. She recently became administrative assistant to the Director of Public Relations at Drexel, the first female to ever hold this post. Pam is active, also, in Plays and Players, the oldest little theater group in the United States.

Joan Damiano Cino still lives on an island in Beach Haven, New Jersey, where husband Joe is superintendent and principal of a small school district. He is working towards a doctorate in education at Temple. Joan is home with their three children and enjoying their non-metropolitan life. Sounds so nice!

Sue Herb Reichard reports from Hoosier land that Kathy and Becky keep her busy, while husband George is busy creating new ideas for Bell Telephone, the latest being a telephone for the deaf and dumb, called Code-Com.

Mickey Kammerman Kurzbarb's husband Steve is busy at George Washington University while she is still working at the Trademark Office.

Also in the D.C. area, Sue Hunt Roose heard President Eddy speak recently and caught up on all the changes at Chatham. Debby and David are busy learning from "Sesame Street," while husband Jack travels as Associate Director of the Water Resource Council.

The Verlin household is finally on the move. Michael will start a fellowship in hematology this July at Simpson Institute, University of Michigan, and we leave the Philadelphia area in June after six-and-a-half years. Barb Shullman Young and Steve, who have lived in Ann Arbor for a while, are going to "show us around." Our son Joel is becoming a real wise guy at sixteen months. If anyone is interested in great deals in household appliances, furniture, etc., come to our "garage sale" in May.

Fender reporting:

Judy Launer Palkovitz and husband Harry parted ways with the Air Force, and settled in Columbus, Ohio last September. Harry is doing a fellowship in EEG at Ohio State, prior to practicing next fall. Judy is acclimating to yet another location with daughter Sharon.

Since Elaine Mazer Myers' husband Howard has been made a full partner in his law firm, it looks as though they will be in Milwaukee for a while. She and Howard, without boys, vacationed in Puerto Rico in January.

Barbara Kessel Bloxsom reports from Topeka, Kansas where husband Ray is Assistant City Attorney. Daughter Jennifer, 4½, is quite ready for kindergarten now thanks to "Sesame Street."

Veronica Kotulak Benson's husband Dick is working on his Ph.D. in electrical engineering at Pitt. Veronica, too, is furthering her education by taking a course in Catholic Doctrine, which she plans to teach this fall. Lois McCune Flowers' husband Jim is in the U.S. Coast Guard and has been transferred to Governors Island, New York. Lois and daughter Catherine are temporarily located in Pittsburgh awaiting to join Jim, hopefully by June.

Janet Greenlee Rohanna and Kalil are still farming their 75 acres and are finding themselves more involved each year, as they add more animals to their collection. Kalil is also a chemistry teacher, and Janet does occasional substitute teaching and looks after their two small children. Janet visited with Judy Myers over Christmas, and Judy herself wrote from Berkeley where she is doing post doctoral work in population ecology.

Sue Hill Warner and Ed are working on the plans for building their new home which will have plenty of room for their two active children. Rita Ippolito Hazen, mother of two boys, is doing graduate work toward her M.A. and teaching math in a non-graded elementary school. The Hazen family spent a delightful vacation camping in Canada and New England last summer.

Had a blast at Susan Bradley Trayser's wedding to Mac last April . . . a mini-reunion all our own with Pam Johnson Fenner, Ellen Rusch, Margie Conner, Jane Martin, Nini Lenz Sheikh and Sally Mercke all in attendance. I've seen Susan and Mac several times here in New York in between their fabulous trips which will be a full-time occupation for the next two years.

Finally, yours truly was married in February with Sally Mercke a bridesmaid and Joan Damiano Cino and husband Joe in attendance. After two glorious weeks in the Virgin Islands, I have now settled down to cope with being a housewife and career girl at the same time. Morgan Guaranty Trust Company made me an assistant treasurer last spring—my own mini-contribution to Women's Lib, since female officers are the bane of a bank's existence. We are looking forward to summering at our farm in Auburn, New York.

That's all for this year . . . hope to see any and all of you who happen to breeze through New York . . . there is always a bed at the Shaw's!

Marty reporting:

Betsy Phelps Tucker and Malcolm have bought a home. Betsy's artistic ability must come in handy in fixing it up. She hears from Zebun Khan Islam and Billie Walcutt Burg regularly, and reports that Zebie and husband are building a new home.

Diane Phillips is now Assistant Director of Training for Roy Littlejohn Associates, a consulting firm in Washington, D.C. Big event for the year was a trip back home to Cincinnati for the inauguration of Jack Gilligan, and reunions with friends she had not seen since leaving Cincinnati.

Carol Pike Maynard is busy keeping tabs on son Eddie and keeping in touch with Chatham as alumnae representative for admissions in her area. Husband Al received his master's degree in electrical engineering from R.P.I., and started right back for his M.B.A. They found time for a delightful vacation cruise to Bermuda last summer.

Ladies, arise! Susan Popky Harris writes that she is becoming a militant feminist and preparing to alter significantly the plight of the oppressed female. She is also very involved as a speaker and researcher for a Montreal-Quebec anti-pollution group whose membership has grown to 2000 in one year.

Sue Rockwell Coen says no news, but adds that Jim has earned his bachelor's degree after five frustrating years of interruptions, and will begin work on his master's after a short vacation. There is now more time for family life with Tim and Jenny, including camping trips to Cape Cod and the Berkshires, and squadron activities.

Bobbie Laiken Funkenstein says she's "retired"—meaning she's working just as hard but without a salary. She and year-old Susie are getting their new home settled while Don finishes his psychiatry residency at Stanford.

I am another who is "retired." Rob and Karen are growing up and I am aging in the process. We are still putting finishing touches on the house, and last summer I communed with nature via hoe and aching back at least an hour a day in the garden. Hope to take the kids and camp this summer in the Adirondacks.

Thanks to all of you who sent news, and a good year to all.

Jane reporting:

'Twas somewhat of a disappointment not to have seen more of you at last summer's class reunion. The glorious June day made the campus look just exactly as most of us probably choose to remember it, and those of us who were there would happily have shared a bit of it with you!

From far-off Guinea, Caroline Whaley Thibault writes of her temporary home as the ideal spot for one who is about to have a nervous breakdown—warm climate, plenty of servants, and little to do. She taught and served as librarian in the American Community School, where English is a second language to most of the students, somewhat complicating the teaching procedure. She and Albert, a foreign service officer, are looking forward to being in the States for a couple of months this fall.

Barbara Shullman Young has taken a part-time job with headquarters at home, abstracting journals for an educational resource information center at the University of Michigan, keeping alive her interest and knowledge in guidance and personnel administration. Son Joel will start kindergarten in the fall, leaving Jodi, two, at home.

Louise Sonnenberg will finish her psychiatric residency at Temple University in June and begin private practice of psychiatry in July. Congratulations, Louise, and best wishes for a highly successful career!

I don't think I'd ever heard of anyone other than Charles Darwin who went to the Galapagos Islands, but Betsy Snyder Cottingham is most enthusiastic about her recent sojourn there. "Very un-touristy," she reports, and goes on to mention 300-year-old tortoises, volcanic rock, "weird" iguanas, and swimming with sea lions. Not a word about finches.

Billie Jean Walcutt Berg has a new job teaching behavioral science at the University of South Florida. In addition, she is teaching participating childbirth at a junior college in the evenings.

Herb's new appointment as Deputy Director of Akron Metropolitan Housing drew top billing in Dianne Rubin Newman's response. Apparently, Akron is the forerunner in the nation in the use of modular or "instant" housing for low and moderate income levels.

As for me, Jane Alexander Givens, I've finally launched myself into a graduate program at Pitt's Graduate School of Business, which, incidentally, has never conferred a master's upon a Chatham graduate. There are times, too, when I feel that that claim will hold, despite my efforts!

Marsha reporting:

Suzie Archer Dawes and family have settled back east only 40 miles from their home town. Lou finished his M.S. and is pool director at a new pool (and high school).

It sounds as if Sue Atherton Kleine enjoys being a working mother. This year she taught government and world history at a high school in Vienna, Virginia. She has also found time for the League of Women Voters, and Doug is quite involved in Reston activities. They see a lot of Nancy Speck, and enjoyed a brief visit from Ellie Raden Cobrin and Bob last summer.

After a year in VISTA, Patti (Baisler) and Ron Van Amberg "decided the east was as crowded as we had remembered and so decided to return to the west, which is as spacious and beautiful as we had remembered." Ron is Assistant Attorney General and Patti is working for the School of American Research. While in the east last year they enjoyed reunions with Larry and Susie Soule Cox and Jim and Becky Bennett Wallace.

Becky Bennett Wallace and Jim are happily settled in Worcester, Massachusetts where she is involved in Black problems, model cities and pollution problems.

Bibi Boles Evans is "still acting—doing plays and commercials, a little television and a film (but so bad I'd rather not mention it)." She and Sam are hoping to take a trip to Europe at the end of the summer.

Joan Bretz Peirce and her husband are enjoying their new home in the suburbs of Chicago. She is looking forward to our class reunion and the opportunity to go to Sodini's for a genuine Italian salad—which she hasn't been able to find since she left Pittsburgh.

Diane Browarsky Levine, dividing her time between academic life and a growing family, hopes to finish the last course requirement for her masters' degree from Johns Hopkins this semester. Dave is doing research in the area of medical education both at Hopkins and the National Center for Health Research in Washington, D.C. He is looking for a faculty position that will allow him time and resources to continue his research.

Ginny Damato, on a trip to the Orient last summer, felt handicapped as a traveler for the first time because she couldn't use her French or Spanish to get along. She is presently looking for a job teaching secondary English in a private school somewhere in Europe.

Morgan and Ginny Fisher O'Leary had a hectic political year. He was press secretary for the Michigan Democratic gubernatorial candidate and Ginny did a lot of issue work, writing position papers on drugs, mental health, housing, etc. It was quite a let-down when they lost by less than 1% of the vote. Ginny enjoys her job as assistant professor of psychology at Oakland University, a small liberal arts university (6,000) with a "Chathamish" attitude toward undergraduates.

Linda Berg Samuels and family returned from Germany last December. While her husband is in Vietnam, Linda and her daughter will be living in or near Philadelphia.

Priscilla Buxton Greenwood is attending studio classes at the Cleveland Institute of Art. She spends her free time sculpting, including a life size standing figure of her 14-month-old daughter. This spring she and her mother will put on a fashion show exhibiting a collection of over 100 antique gowns (1799 to 1930) at a luncheon of wives (500) attending the American Psychiatric and American Psychoanalytic Associations convention in Washington, D.C.

Francie Darr Alely began graduate school this year in library science at Simmons College. She had been writing a weekly "town column" for a local newspaper for the past year and is happy to get back to the books. She sees a lot of Mike and Jane Tobey Eden.

This has been an exciting and interesting year for the Bingers! In April, 1970, three weeks after Michael was born, John was appointed Pittsburgh's Director of Public Safety by Mayor Flaherty. This is a cabinet level post in City government as the top administrator of the Police and Fire Bureaus. Big changes are taking place in Pittsburgh government, and we are happy to be a part of it. We had to move inside the city limits, and I am finally feeling settled enough to pick up where I left off—both in Chatham alumnae activities and the League of Women Voters. I am reunion chairman for our class, and we are hoping for a big turnout the first weekend in June.

Myra reporting:

Penny Embry McGoey's husband Rob went into private practice last June in New Rochelle, New York. Peggy Redmond Bittner and her two boys visited the McGoys and their two children in January, a fine reunion after five years apart.

Sandy Geldman Forquer has started part-time on a two-year master's program at the University of Pittsburgh in guidance and counseling. Tim is designing and building his own mini-computer, and little Beth likes her swimming lessons.

Following graduation from the University of Pennsylvania, Nancy Gettes taught high school chemistry for one year, was an assistant to the Dean of Women the next year, and then began medical school at Temple University. "I still can't believe that in May I'll have my M.D. degree. After an internship in straight medicine, I think I'd like to do work in hematology or adolescent or community medicine."

Judy Goslee Dias stopped working in September to get ready for a new baby and a new house. She keeps up with a lot of old Chathamites, including Rosemary Cesarone, who's studying and traveling in Europe (England in the fall, then Italy, and a trip to Belgium to visit Carol Craven Kratz).

Judy Haberman Katz's news is a new baby, a new address, and maybe a trip to the U.S. this autumn.

Tom and Carol Hartman Elden have been in San Marino since July. Tom is a Deputy District Attorney in Los Angeles County, and their two little girls keep Carol busy. She hopes that Karen Kvam will come for a weekend visit from San Francisco.

Sara Heslep points out the implicit assumptions in placing the "Engaged?" and "Married?" questions first on the Recorder questionnaire and reports a new un-job: "After four years in the working world, three of them as a bottom-rung University of Chicago bureaucrat, I've quit to finish school here at U.C. I'm considering graduate work somewhere where one can study British and American literature in its historical and sociological context. I'd be grateful for a line from any classmates who have found such a school—or who've found art for art's sake in vacuo purist literature departments. I'm working in women's liberation to some extent, and the People's Peace Treaty, an attempt to declare peace with the Vietnamese, is also occupying my time." (Sara and my husband Gary have had some interesting run-ins on these topics.)

The big event in the Elaine Hillman Moroney family was Lucille's marriage to Rosemary Cesarone's brother Bill. Elaine has also been getting together often with her little sister, Judy Murray Walle, newly moved to Montreal. This May the Moroneys are hoping to go to Ireland for a month to see Mike's family.

Jim and Lynne Jack Porterfield are happy studying law and teaching respectively. Lynne is amused that Jim purchased a component hi-fi setup, complete with earphones, so "she" could enjoy good music!

When I called, Nancy Johnson Saperstein was aglow with fixing up their very own house and a visit from her brother.

Linda Kates Meyer is attending a "Parent-Child Observation" class, a one-day-per-week affair involving 20 children and mothers and one professional teacher. The Meyers feel very settled in California, loving the friends, the climate, and the relaxed friendliness of nearly everyone they meet.

Evelyn Kinast McElhaney and family returned from Holland in July so that Ron could be an assistant professor of biochemistry at the University of Edmonton. She says, "As much as we like the people and our home here, we're not impressed with the climate! We have great plans for vacations this summer with the Rockies at our back door!"

Mary Krein Howarth is "now in charge of the Pitt undergraduate library as well as the reserve book room, and in my spare time I play at being reference librarian for 14 hours a week! All at Pitt's usual ungenerous salary. I ran into Carolyn Quad Asquith roaming around the library this summer. Seems Quaddy is a librarian at Michigan State, has taken the profession to whole heart, and is quite concerned with the plight of librarians." The Howarths enjoyed the Christmas visit of Sage Tower Mumma and family and are looking forward to a trip to Europe. Mary is serving on the alumnae-student relations committee for the Alumnae Association.

Jack, Leah, and Linda Lanius Tomlins spent three months in Europe as part of a first-semester sabbatical. "We flew to Amsterdam, London, where we bought a car, and then drove to Dover, across France, across northern Spain, and down the west coast of Portugal to Lisbon. What a lovely country Portugal is with its ever-changing landscape, charming medieval villages, and warm, gentle people. Our little girl was a good traveler: no illness, no complaints, just lots of disposable diapers!"

Julie Mamolen has been abroad since September and expects to stay for a year. She's working in Geneva with I.C.E.M. and taking advantage of weekends for traveling and skiing. New Year's was spent in Prague, and even freezing weather could not hide the contrast of the Hapsburg splendors to the utilitarianism of the present regime.

Spectacularly bad news comes from Linda Marsh McGurk. Their lovely, old, two-story house that they had only recently finished redoing, burned down in December. A night fire, caused by a faulty chimney, almost completely destroyed the interior. Linda is amazingly cheerful about it and says they are living in a 60' trailer beside the house during the rebuilding process.

Ann McClure Hall feels it was very appropriate that David was born on Labor Day! They are enjoying their English Tudor home in Mt. Lebanon.

As for me, Myra Hull Gillum, team teaching, planning some far-out worship services, and directing a play reading keep me pretty busy. Gary is working on his dissertation, and it looks like we'll be moving to Philadelphia this summer or fall so Gary can work at the Federal Reserve Bank there. Huzzah, the end is in sight!

Pat reporting:

Susan Michaels Orringer, Mark, Jeffrey, 3, and 10-month-old Lisa have returned to Baltimore after living for six months in England. Mark, on temporary leave from Johns Hopkins Hospital, participated in an exchange program as chief resident in thoracic surgery at Frenchay Hospital in Bristol. Susan is keeping up her teaching skills by running a once-weekly course in language arts for children in a Baltimore city school.

Claudia Miller Russey and husband Stephen are very much involved with the Rocky Hill School, with Claudia head of the Foreign Language Department and Stephen head of the English Department. Both are doing graduate work at the University of Rhode Island. While Claudia is studying Spanish part time, Stephen has completed his master's in English and is doing further graduate work in educational administration.

Niki Neese Lallande, husband Joe, and 10-month-old "J" have been living in New York City while Joe finishes his senior semester at Columbia graduate school. Niki has seen several classmates while in New York, among them Pat McNeill (who is working at Columbia), Janie Lanigan and Susie Soule Cox. However, when Joe graduates this summer, the Lallandes will return to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Greetings from classmates Patsy Scarry Jones, Pam Proksa Patt (who hopes to see lots of you at the reunion this June), and Maxine Ruter Horowitz. Maxine's husband Danny was selected by his company to attend a six-week computer audit training program in Phoenix. Since no wives were allowed at the program, Maxine visited with relatives in Los Angeles, but en route to Phoenix, Maxine and Danny detoured to San Francisco to visit with Steve and Nancy Johnson Saperstein.

Beverly Miller Blessinger enjoys her work as a reading clinician and is extending the program to the various elementary schools in her district. This spring Beverly will receive her degree as an educational specialist from Michigan State, representing 30 hours of work past her master's. This summer, husband Ken will be taking courses in Guadalajara, Mexico while Bev "soaks up" some of the Mexican culture and learns a little Spanish.

"... My suitcase hasn't been unpacked since I last wrote you," writes Janice Patterson. She managed to find time to write a delightful and much-appreciated note between her weekly jaunts across the country. Her job as District Manager for the House of Nine necessitates all this traveling, and Janice admits to being a bit envious of the nine-to-five workers! At present Janice is in the midst of deciding whether to accept the position of Training Director for her company in its Los Angeles Home Office. Whatever your decision, Janice, lots of good luck—and happy landings!

Dorothy Raymond Matsui continues her work in the library and is anticipating a move into new library facilities. Her latest avocation is gardening, inspired by a "feeling that I'd like to control the results of what happens in the yard." Last summer the Matsuis enjoyed a trip to Oregon, and this fall a trip to Japan is planned, to see Yas' parents and "do the tourist bit."

After he finished his Ph.D. at Cornell last summer, Jerry and Frances Meyers Bulis vacationed in Maine. Then they were off to Appleton, Wisconsin where Jerry is assistant professor of English at Lawrence College.

Elly Raden Cobrin has a new job—Director of Gateway, a rehabilitation service of the Camden County Mental Health Association. She has her master of science in rehabilitation counseling from Temple University, and spent part of last summer in Japan as representative to the Fourth United Nations Congress on the prevention of crime and the treatment of offenders.

Jenia Royster Brown and the twins, Randy and Marshall, will be glad to move back to Baltimore when Taylor leaves the Army on April 17. He has a job with a law firm, and Jenia hopes to take advantage of both sets of grandparents as sitters and return to part-time work or become involved in civic activities. Until they have a permanent address, they can be reached at Jenia's parents' address listed above.

Barbara Schneider hopes to come to reunion but isn't quite sure where she will be come June. She feels the need of a change from New York City and may decide to broaden her horizons in the near future.

This past year has been a happy, busy year for the Bremans. Sid continues his work at the dealership, and I enjoy my "homemaking" duties. Though I vowed I never would, I've become involved in various organizations, too. I had a marvelous teaching experience last spring—working with 15 senior high special education students ranging in age from 16 to 20. In August Sid and I headed for Boston and a delightful visit with Jane Tobey Eden, husband Mike, and son Jeffrey. While there, we also saw Francie Darr Aley and her family. Quite a reunion! Speaking of reunions—I hope that you'll all make a special effort to attend our "official" class reunion at Chatham on June 5, 1971. Dorm rooms will be available for alumnae and husbands, so let's make it a great weekend. In any case, I hope to see you in June, and I want to thank all of you for being so cooperative during my years as class secretary. I trust the next "secretaries" will enjoy the experience as much as I have.

Janie reporting:

What a transient group we have! The moving companies must be doing very well!

Last September Susie Soule Cox and Larry moved to Loon Mountain in Lincoln, New Hampshire where he assumed the marketing, advertising and public relations responsibilities for the ski area. They are renting a large house in Bethlehem and have lots of room and welcome for tired skiers, mountain climbers, etc. Sue is chairman of an Adult Education subcommittee on a Drug Abuse program for the North County. She has become involved in attitudinal skills training and is finding this alternative approach to the drug or "cop-out" culture very challenging. Sue sums up their children by saying that Christopher, 2, is learning to talk and Sam, 3, to talk back! It's been a good year for Chatham reunions. Patty Baisler VonAmberg and Ron and Becky Bennett Wallace, Jim and Katherine spent a weekend in October with the Coxes. While at the New York ski show, Susie was able to catch up with Janie Lanigan and Niki Neese Lallande. During Christmas week Sally Brown Lincoln, John and Jay visited for a few days.

Back in Philadelphia from Washington, Jan Simpson Prescott is busy with her son's nursery school and the usual duties with two children. She and Ed had a trip to England last summer combining pleasure with business. At the moment they are looking for a house in Pittsburgh where Ed plans to join the Carnegie-Mellon faculty. That will make six moves in six years!

After three years of teaching in Sumter, Sally Small is now at Washington State University on an assistantship in an American Studies program. She reports that the solo trip across country was a great experience. Readjusting to student life, including dormitory living, has been a challenge! She'd love to see anyone who ventures out her way.

From the shores of Lake Michigan, Ingrid von Dattan Detwiler sends word of Doug's new position with Boise Cascade Corporation in LaPorte, Indiana. They drove from California, stopping at the Grand Canyon and in Aspen for a few glorious days of skiing, and found a house one block from the lake, complete with access to a lovely sandy beach. Jane Patterson has already found them and, as always, was full of news!

Ronya Sieg McMillen and Robert moved back east in December so he could begin a twelve-month student residency toward his master's in hospital administration. She was pleased to locate Phyllis Fox Catz ('64) in the area.

After ten months near Los Angeles, Tina Swansen Cummings and John have been transferred to Charlotte, North Carolina, where they are close to old friends and family. Amy, 2, and Randy, 3, are in pre-school. Tina plans to work with the cerebral palsy center.

Rina Sigal Segal and Amiel are excited about moving to Boston in June. Amiel will be a Fellow in Medicine (hematology), and Rina is looking for a position in psychology.

Lynn Suartz Jacobson and Blair rented a "villa" in Montego Bay, Jamaica last May; attended a convention in the Poconos in August, giving them an opportunity to visit Pennsylvania Dutch country, Gettysburg and Harrisburg; and took Larry to Miami in November. She finds it strange to be using Chatham girls as babysitters! She has been chairman of her high school class's tenth reunion and is looking forward to Chatham's.

Pam Stirba Russell's husband Bill has been promoted to Assistant to the Senior Vice President of Marketing at Eastern Airlines and they have spent a fantastic year of traveling. A meeting with astronaut Frank Borman, during a February trip to Puerto Rico, resulted in an invitation from NASA to watch the Apollo 13 blast off from the grandstand just 2½ miles from the rocket. On a trip to Greece in May, Pam and Bill visited with Collette Duerre Labanas and her husband in Athens. June—Jamaica; October—Miami; December—Fort Lauderdale with the girls; and then off to Morocco. In between all these trips, lots of tennis—indoors and outdoors—and assisting with 3-year-old Jennifer's nursery school. The Russells visited Sheila Bennett Harris over the July 4th weekend, and Barb Schneider visited the Russells recently.

Diana Wirsig Gerrity left her Atlantic Monthly editing job recently for a six-week free-lancing writing jaunt around Europe: fox hunt in Ireland, where she also argued women's liberation with Bernadette Devlin, and on to England and France. She's now free-lancing in New England and wherever Tom's consulting trips take him—Venezuela and more often, Chicago, Washington and New York. Di vows never to have a nine-to-five job again! Between trips, she's working with an all women's film group making a documentary about women in America! She and Tom disappear as often as possible to their small New Hampshire retreat to let the adrenalin levels simmer down!

With both boys now in school, Judi Wetlauffer Clinton divides her free time between working half days at their loosely summerhillian Independent School for 4-14 year-olds, and being one of seven associate staff members in an experimental college of law. Based on the premise that people do not really have a chance to understand what the legal system, the laws, or their rights are, a number of work-study groups have been developed involving about 100 people who will eventually be trained as paralegal people to do what Judi's doing—talking to interested groups, organizing within the community toward understanding various aspects of the legal system, researching cases, preparing defenses for current cases in the Law Collective, etc. The Law Collective is the defense-end of the Law College and looks something like a low-budget "Storefront Lawyers" scene. They survive on a few big drug or political cases and handle about 400 non-paying cases. The staff consists of one lawyer, two law students and four para-legal people of varying backgrounds. Sounds like a very worthwhile project and we wish Judi every success! The Clintons spent last summer hiking trails in the Adirondacks and Christmas camping on a tiny island in the Bahamas. In her spare time, (whenever that is), Judi can be found in the dark room turning out photographic masterpieces! She was delighted last summer to find that Diane DelBello Dilendik ('64) had moved in right around the corner!

Martha Wilson resigned from Garfinkels a year ago and has a fascinating job with the Smithsonian Institute Museum Shops. Doing some of the buying for the shops and most of the personnel work, she finds it much more interesting than department store retailing. She's been an Alumnae Representative in the D.C. area and is very excited about the new things going on at Chatham.

Jill Squire Popish and Paul are still with the Army in Virginia. They must like it there because when Paul is discharged this July he is planning to go into practice with three other pediatricians in Hampton. They've been house-hunting, taking a boat piloting course, and enjoying Thea, now 2.

Ellen Tilles Weil and husband Jim are enjoying suburban living in Roslyn.

For the past year and a half, Ginny Stretton Smith and Doug have been living about 25 miles northeast of Lansing, Michigan on 40 acres used by the Muzzle Loading Gun Club as its rifle range. They are the members in residence, and, for the most part, have the area to themselves, enjoying the solitude and natural surroundings. Doug has been building houses in the Lansing area and Ginny has been in and out of the classroom. A year ago she took over for a fifth and sixth grade social studies teacher and found it quite a change from high school German. She is now back substituting in both the high school and elementary levels. July brought the highlight of the year with the birth of Dougie, Jr. Ginny and Doug prepared for the event by taking the Lamaze classes offered by the Association of Shared Childbirth. With the cooperation of their local hospital, both of them participated in his arrival and found it to be a wonderfully satisfying experience.

It was lovely hearing from everyone. Mike enjoys reading your letters, too! Mike and I have been spending a good deal of time in Vermont working on a home my family acquired last summer. We've done as much skiing as baby sitters will permit and can hardly wait for one-year-old Jeff to get out there with us. Patti Papp Breman and Sid were here for a long week-end last summer. We look forward to reversing the honor this spring.

Thanks to all who responded. Hope we can really 'catch-up' at the reunion in June.

Cookery reporting:

Years of graduate work are about to pay off for Beverly Blazey Palmer who is completing her Ph.D. dissertation in counseling from Ohio State. Her thesis concerns the impact of the new feminism on marriage. Bev's husband Richard is serving his internship in Phoenix; next year he will begin a three-year residency in psychiatry at Harbor General Hospital, an affiliate of U.C.L.A. Jo Ann Eustace Walther is finishing work for her master's degree in English from Simmons while teaching at Cambridge High. Her husband Fred has almost earned his Ph.D. from MIT; when it is awarded the Eustaces will join the Air Force for four years.

Ellen Dailey Bedell and Tom are also leading academic lives. Ellen who is studying Egyptology at Brandeis, is writing her Ph.D. dissertation. Last summer she and Tom, who is an anthropologist, went on an archaeological site survey trip to the Lake Van region of Turkey. Anne Clarke Brown is on the faculty in the School of Architecture of City College. She has charge of all visual teaching aids including photography, darkroom and slides. She manages to do some free lance research and graphics as well. Her husband, Peter, is an architect.

Maggi Berman Guzikinsky and Robert are up north once again. Robert is a marketing representative for Armstrong Cork; Maggi analyzes cookies for Sunshine Biscuits. A fringe benefit is a free supply of goodies for the neighbors.

After seven weeks of camping through Europe last summer, Cary Cadman returned to Boston to take a new job with the New England Aquarium as co-ordinator of volunteers. With the approach of warmer weather she is contemplating the big plunge—a scuba dive into the giant tank to hand-feed the fish.

Penny Anderson Gladwell has retired from teaching for the joys of housewifery. She directs the first-grade department of her Sunday School, is active in a local homemaking club, and is mentally planning her dream house on some newly acquired land. Dave is likewise busy with his job at Ashland Oil, the Explorer Scouts and a group at church. Jane Birmingham Hanley reports that Terry has safely returned from Thailand and the reunited family is now living in Westover, Mass. Her two little ones, James and Melissa, keep her constantly on the run.

Leigh Cluthe Tilden, Geoffrey, and daughter Rebecca find living on the campus of a boys' school a mixed blessing. They love the old stone house that comes with Geoffrey's position, but they sometimes wonder what life outside a fishbowl would be like. Geoffrey is Director of Boarding Boys, teacher of algebra and European history and coach of both wrestling and tennis. Barbara-Lee Buxton Van Sciver, Stephen and Sara have returned from Naples, Florida where they spent Christmas. Barbara-Lee has been working for Ecology Action and Citizens for Clean Air; she testified at a hearing to establish air quality standards in Rhode Island. She had also been doing more than her share for physical fitness while teaching Sara to ice skate.

Bonnie Birks O'Connell thinks that the O'Connell family may leave Pittsburgh when Tom finishes his Ph.D. at Carnegie-Mellon—if he doesn't decide to stay another year. In the meantime, Sean keeps Bonnie busy in between her substituting assignments. Mary Eaton Fosler and Scott, after a summer in Bolivia, are moving to Washington where Scott will work as a consultant with the Institute of Public Administration. Mary sent word of Dennis and Vivian Lowery Derryck's new son.

Nora Levy Johnston, William and Lucy were in the States briefly on business—just long enough for her parents to make up for the spoiling they miss with Lucy so far off. Susan Schnapf has fully enjoyed her year of unemployment but finds herself about ready, financially, to hit the pavements in search of work. She figures if she is more frugal this time she can loaf for a year and a half next time. Iris Raskin Snyder writes that Al has a new job at Einstein Mental Health Center where he is doing individual and family therapy. She is still doing social work, but is finding the idea of being a housewife full time more appealing.

I switched jobs last August when the non-existent depression hit Boston, and I find I like the new job more than the old. I'm a systems analyst with an investment advisory firm. Philip is finishing his master's thesis in American Religion at Andover-Newton and resumes study in American Civilization at Brown in September.

Liz reporting:

1970 was obviously a very good year for most of us since we had numerous marriages, births, and newly purchased homes to report. You'll all be pleased to know that Janet Forbush Zuvers, an associate member, graduated from Nyack Missionary College in 1968. She then worked with the Dean of Women and as a dorm resident for two years. Prior to her marriage, Janet was working toward a degree in guidance and personnel. Many of us are still working toward advanced degrees.

Joann Greenfield Abraham, another associate member, is at Rutgers University in the English education master's program; Bunny Generalovich Lener is in guidance and counseling at Edinboro State College; Judy Fletcher is in graphic arts at Yale; and Suzanne Hershey Bress is in special education at the University of Pittsburgh.

Lucille Finger Harding, Ellen Goldbloom Kight and Connie Gray Voight and their husbands have all purchased new homes. Illie and Bones are settled in the Berkshires on ten acres of land, and seem to be thriving in the wilderness. Ellen and John, who took a group of 21 girls to Rome last summer, will have moved into their new home by the time this news gets into print. Connie and Ron have decided to settle in Miami. It must be great to live in vacation country all year round. Judy Graytock Dengler and Bill plan to move soon, also.

Gini Gold is still free and traveling. She spent two weeks in California last year and is planning a spring trip to Paris.

Your reporter, Liz, is adjusting to the dual role of housewife and career woman.

Ben and I took a three-week driving tour of Canada as our honeymoon trip. We were so impressed with the vitality and freshness of Canada, especially Toronto and Montreal. Thanks for responding so well this year.

Cookie reporting:

I received only five out of twenty-six responses this year. In musing over what I should write, I clarified some thoughts I've had for quite some time. I will tell you that Martha King has remarried and is working as a systems analyst for Chemical Bank, New York; that Dael Kiesler Stichler had her baby prematurely following a vigorous trout fishing expedition; and that Sara Leuthy Chamberlain is bringing up her baby in a Wheelock College dormitory where Sara and Mike are residents. I could go on, if I had more to report . . .

Here in Berkeley, during some infrequent discussions on Chatham, Carol Pogash, Margie Kaplan ('69), and I have arrived at some reasons for this seeming disinterest. For four years, Chatham College was for us a homogeneous community. We shared an environment where "news" of the sort printed here filled in informational gaps about persons we may or may have not known as friends. Now, we live in widely diverse communities. Our particular real worlds may be comprised of three kids and a corporate lawyer husband to look after in the suburbs, or doing slave labor for some mammoth bank or another, while dating the security analyst whom you met in the elevator of your building, or actually going to Viet Nam, as Kammy McCleery MacKirdy is doing for the second time (with the Red Cross), or living in a commune and selling your pottery on the streets of Berkeley.

The Chatham Recorder cannot communicate what we are now as individuals. The questionnaire asks us to explain ourselves by the number of babies incurred, or the jobs we have (which defines us by someone else's structure). I did receive more than five responses, but they were personal letters from friends, requesting that they not be put on the gossip list. The Recorder columns are inadequate and often embarrassing, giving readers a mere glimpse of the person in a few juicy facts. The magazine is not viable in terms of the group we once were and in terms of our present personal doings. As Debbie Little wrote, "The fragmentation we felt with a liberal arts curriculum is also with life, and I've found that I have to measure my diversions in order to hold together at the center." She is doing a myriad of things, like working for an environmental information center in Boston, writing for New England Telephone, skiing, etc., etc. But what does that really tell us about her?

Kammy comments at the end of a long and probing letter, that even she feels alienated from the institution of which she was once so much a part. The solution may be to reduce the magazine to a list of address changes and to expand the articles into more relevant messages written by people who wish to say something, or, alternatively, to start our own newsletter. Only by reflecting the variety of life styles we are exploring, can an alumnae magazine hope to reach the majority of recent graduates. If anyone has opinions on this matter, we'd like to hear them.

Teg reporting:

This last year has taken a few members of the class on some long trips and home again. Susan Plaut called to tell me she'd just gotten back from Israel, where she lived on a Kibbutz for six months. In her own words she "really digs Socialist life." Recently she worked on an anti-poverty program in N.Y. but plans to change jobs soon.

My news for Andy Morgan Weyer always seems to be about a year behind since she and Tom are so hard to track down. The last word I got was from Stuttgart, Germany where Tom was stationed with the Army. She said leave was hard to come by, but that they'd made several short trips to neighboring countries with their daughter Wilhelmina.

Judy Murray Walle has moved back to Canada from France with her husband Bertrand and has a fantastic new job working for CFCF TV. Her title is "script assistant," but this apparently includes almost anything that needs to be done around a TV station—from researcher to make-up girl! She says, that despite the odd hours and strange tasks, helping produce programs on topics like Community Action and Ecology is very rewarding.

Nat Osgood Simsak is also turned on to ecology out in Denver. Her husband Marty has a new job with the city where he's analyzing urban problems like pollution, and Nat uses nothing but Ivory Snow on Tara's clothes!

I wonder if Mary Ruddell Lindberg and Jeanne Osterhout Burwick are using Ivory for their new babies? Jeanne and husband Lou, who's a media-buyer for Benton & Bowles, have moved to a new apartment in Brooklyn. Mary has also made a new move with baby Krista, Sara (age 2), and husband Jack, to Toledo, Ohio. Jack is a civil engineer working for Fred W. Bostleman Co.

Ruth Oliver Hewitt doesn't have a new baby of her own, but proudly announces the birth of a grandson last November, David Wayne Hewitt. She's currently working right at Chatham as secretary to Miss Detchen.

Louise Royster Brown is still working as an assistant to Mayor Peter F. Flaherty. Her architect husband, Jim, is with the Westinghouse Design Center and is also coaching Carnegie-Mellon's basketball team part time.

Joanne Locurcio Pavia and Ken attended Linda (Punk) Wickett Bowman's wedding last November, and she comments that the ceremony, held at home, was "one of the most moving my husband and I ever attended." I am sure Andy Moss's wedding sometime in the next six months will also be lovely. She will marry Malcomb End whom she met while working at Olgilvy & Mather. Malcomb is still with that firm while Andy is now working for Avon Cosmetics.

The last few people I heard from all seem to be doing some teaching and studying. Ann Palmeri is in a Ph.D. program at Washington University in St. Louis. She frequently sees Lolita Dawson Pfeiffer whose husband is a fellow graduate student in the Philosophy Department. Mel Redhead Applebaum has been teaching art in Birmingham, Michigan for three years and working summers on her MFA at Wayne State. She and Edward, who is a credit analyst for the National Bank of Detroit, have bought a new home and spent Christmas with Lucille Finger Harding.

Mary Rosenberger Hourigan is doing the teaching and Phillip, the studying, in her family. Phillip will graduate from Duke University School of Medicine in June. Mary is teaching retarded children in Durham and hopes to continue this work when they move north for Phillip's internship in pediatrics.

As for me, I'm still working at Rockefeller University. I took a fantastic vacation this summer—some friends and I chartered a 42 foot schooner and sailed around the islands off Maine and across to Canada. We lived as free from civilization as you can get for two weeks, and it was hard adjusting to big-city life again.

Jo reporting:

Mary Schlitt Kostalos and husband John have bought a house beside beautiful Frick Park. Mary has been writing her thesis and finishing the last few details of her research work, while working part time as a lab instructor at Pitt.

A move from Washington state to New Jersey, via Mexico and Jamaica, highlighted Marty Sebastian Moyer's year. While George works as a financial analyst, Marty is getting settled domestically before looking for a job as a social worker.

Judy Siegel Sweet's new husband, Dick, works in the office of the General Counsel, U.S. Postal Service. Judy is still with the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, where her current project is in the area of correctional architecture. They hope to visit Europe this spring.

Ellie Stein Ward, another new bride, is an associate editor with Crown Publishers in Manhattan. Stephen is a free lance film maker.

Carol Swenson Foss was promoted to the management level of Southern New England Telephone Company and now trains service representatives. She and Charlie may be moving to North Carolina later this year, if Charlie's company goes ahead with its plans to relocate to that state.

Back at Chatham to teach the field in which she majored, Janet Walker is a French instructor. She is also doing research for her Ph.D. dissertation.

Having adopted New York City in November, Janet Washburn Grana still finds herself missing the Iowa way of life, but she and Ed are having fun discovering New York's many advantages. Janet works for a neurosurgeon who is involved in spinal cord research at N.Y.U. Medical Center. Ed is a producer of educational television shows.

Susan Whitfield is an employment interviewer with the New York State Department of Labor, Division of Employment. She finds that the typical applicant is either undereducated and underemployed or a professional unemployed who has been on welfare for a long time. She also finds it challenging to properly administer the programs involved. Susan extends a hearty hello and says that the welcome mat is out for all who travel through, near or by Watervliet this year (which is in the heartland of New York's winter and summer sports scene).

A promotion highlighted the year for Mariann Williams Yatsco when husband

John became a captain in the Army. They are still living in the Philippines and spent a week in November in Hong Kong. They will "hopefully" be back in the States in August.

Sylvia Woods Mudenda has been living a full and happy life since we last heard from her. Temba finishes dental school in June, after which their address will be: Dr. and Mrs. Temba R. Mudenda, Box RW. 322, Lasaka, Zambia. He will work for the Zambian government. Sylvia's days have been busy since Mutinta's birth in November. "Mutinta," Sylvia says, designates "a girl who is not preceded by any boys."

Pam Zerwick Huie and husband John have been looking forward to April 1971 when they're moving to a South Sea island for an extended vacation.

Having given up teaching, "for the time being," Jane Ziskind Cohen is now a research assistant to the head of the microbiology department at the University of Tennessee. Her main project is in the field of virology research. This summer she and Sheldon, assistant professor of philosophy at the university, plan a cross-country motor trip to the Pacific Ocean.

I am very grateful to everyone who replied to this year's newsletter. My apologies to Linda VanDoren Garlick; her Christmas card indicated that she and John were moving east, and I know that the reason we didn't hear from her this year is because the mail didn't get forwarded to her new address in time for her to reply. John is still in the Navy. Linda will be looking for a job as soon as they are settled.

This year certainly went fast for me. Ed and I graduated from law school in June, took the bar exam in July, and waited until October for our results. Happily, we passed and were admitted to the Pennsylvania Supreme Court in November. Before starting to work in August, we vacationed in Canada and Cape May, N.J. Also, we moved to Camp Hill, Pa., a suburb of Harrisburg. I'm now clerking for Judge Roy Wilkinson of the Commonwealth Court, a Pennsylvania appellate court which specializes in administrative agency cases. Ed works for a private Harrisburg law firm which specializes in corporate matters.

Laury reporting:

Christy Andrews Houghtlin's husband Dave is a Kenyon grad and is employed by Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company. She is a service representative for Ohio Bell Telephone, and is hoping to return to school for a master's in early childhood education or to teach kindergarten when an opening is available.

Nancy Best Kneedler is teaching preschoolers in a day care center. Her long hours leave little time for much else at the moment. Nancy and Fred were facing the possibility of the draft in March.

Loretta Bonazzo Wildman has been living in Pittsburgh for the past year, but Gary's job as a civil engineer may necessitate a move back to the east in the near future. If the move is delayed, Loretta plans to start classes at Pitt in April.

Dianne Bronstein Goldman and Richard still live in New York where Dianne is in the Graduate School of Science at New York University.

Sue Brown Weeks' baby daughter was born by natural childbirth—the only way, according to Sue and John.

Sarah Bornstein Edeiken completed her M.A. at Rutgers in June and is now working toward a Ph.D. in American history. Sarah and Yale have enjoyed visits from many Chatham friends, among them Sandy and Lois Murphy Skalka and Larry and Harriet Katz Bachman. Ann Rosch was Sarah's maid of honor, and said in her toast that she was "turning over her roommate of four years to Yale."

Suzanne Boucek Bero and John enjoyed a fantastic summer in South America. Among other things, it included studying Spanish and Colombian culture in Bogota and a tour of Colombia, a visit to the frontier town of Leticia, and a boat trip on the Amazon.

Josie Campbell Dellenbaugh is teaching biology and keeping up her interest in ceramics while Geoffrey works toward a Ph.D. in inorganic chemistry.

I, Laury Gould, am employed as an administrative staff assistant for New England Telephone in Boston, but I expect to receive a transfer to San Francisco in September. Last fall Ann Nelson and I had a great time driving around Spain for three weeks. Tom and Carolyn Taylor Heysek and Susie Elliott attended the wedding of Ann and Bill Hooe. We all felt sorry for Ann and Bill when they left for a three-week honeymoon in Europe—and we returned to our homes. I am adding the following bits about some Chatham friends in case they are "late" contributors to the "news." And speaking of "late," a word of apology about last year—I was away. I was negligent and irresponsible, and I am sorry.

Bruce and Alice Cihat Holstein are great friends to have around the corner. Bruce is in his first year at Boston University Medical School where he plans to study psychiatry. Alice is the best loved junior high teacher in Framingham—she has a citation from her students to prove it!

Andy and Ann Damrosch Krotzinger live in Cambridge where Ann is working as a gynecologist's assistant, white stockings and all. They have enjoyed weekends of cross-country skiing at Freedom, New Hampshire.

Mary Siltan and Patti Johnston have returned from a six-month bout with Aspen. Mary to Boston and Patti to New York. Both are job hunting.

Bucky and Penny Prudden Redfield are in the process of fixing up their new home in Cohasset.

Rosemary Spierer is not the typical nine-to-five worker, so she is doing it the hard way—free lancing in New York, portfolio in hand. Her latest job was designing the windows for "A Different Drummer," a New York boutique.

Lois reporting:

In deference to one of the Chatham grads in my section of the class who maintains that the "Questionnaire for Recorder News" discriminates against single females who are continuing their education, I will begin with those in graduate school. Susie Farr is working for her MFA in technical production and lighting design at Stanford, and hopes to complete her studies by June 1972. She sees Ricki Shore Boyd and Jimmy who live in San Francisco, and also spent some time over Thanksgiving with Betzi Jackson, '70, who is attending the California Institute of the Arts.

Biri Fay is studying Egyptology and Ancient Art at NYU, Institute of Fine Arts. She is still working at the Brooklyn Museum and has been promoted to Curatorial Assistant for Ancient Art. Biri frequently sees Carolyn Taylor Heysek and Tom in

New York, as well as Janice Gary who was married in February, Susie Elliott, and Bette Wallenhorst who is in Philadelphia working at Fidelity Insurance.

Margaret Cox, who transferred to Mount Holyoke after her sophomore year at Chatham, is now at Northwestern University working on her M.A. in speech pathology. She graduated from Mount Holyoke in 1969 as a French major.

Risa Ellovich is still at Indiana University in anthropology, continuing the study of Bambara (an African language) after spending the summer doing the same under an NDFL grant. In her leisure time, as she puts it, she is also holding down a teaching assistantship in anthro. She sees Cornelia Kennedy and Rhonda Nichols, who is busy with school in Cincinnati.

Bobara DeCaulp is enjoying her first year at the Hofstra University School of Law. She says that the atmosphere there is very lively and exciting and that she especially likes the odds of 15 women to 60 men.

As for the married graduate students, Vivian Garbuny Goldberg is doing her thesis research at the National Institute of Health. Her field is the action of hormones. Vivian writes that Vicki Burdett is also doing her thesis research at NIH and that Carole Birmingham Levitov is working there as technician. Vivian's sister Carole has transferred from Chatham to Kenyon and her other sister, Ellen, has Diane Cohen, '70, for a chemistry teacher at Churchill Area High School.

Jennifer Gearhart Grason is now in the Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences at Pitt. She is also holding down a part-time evening job at Chatham as a reference librarian.

Bobbi Franklin McKenna plans to take the poli sci GRE's this spring with an eye to grad school in the near future. She writes that Kansas is "enough to send anyone back into the arms of V. O. Key Company." She and Bob spent the summer in Charlottesville and finally had time to honeymoon in Switzerland and Austria. Also enjoying Europe is Evelyn Goldsmith Kitay, who is in Switzerland for two months while Michael is in Geneva on business. She has finished her courses for her master's in French lit at NYU and is now studying for her comprehensive exams.

Dixie Dixon Toker is working as a legal assistant to four attorneys in a large corporation, having studied corporate law at the Institute for Paralegal Training in Philadelphia. Kay Gamage also has a new job as a trader (stocks and bonds) for Mutual Fund in Boston. Jackie Emery Flynn continues to teach math in the North Allegheny School District and is currently awaiting news of when Ned must report for active duty as an officer in the Air Force. At least she gets to go with him.

Andrea Dubs Moorhead, the published member of our class, continues to write poetry. Her second book, "Morganstall," is to appear this spring. (Fiddlehead Poetry Books, New Brunswick.) Her husband Robert has an exhibition of painting at RPI.

Sandy and I have moved again! Sandy has a new job as News Director of WGNV radio in Newburg, New York. After a month of unemployment, I am now working as a Telephone Claims Representative for the Hartford Insurance Group. We like being in a semi-rural area where there are woods across the road and a lake in the woods at the end of the road. Call it escaping if you want, but we love it.

Barb reporting:

Many of our fellow classmates are involved in graduate school and new jobs. Diane Himes Ambrose, while working as assistant librarian of the Bookmobile for Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, is doing part-time graduate work at Pitt in library science. Donald is a second-year law student at Duquesne. Nance Jacobson is teaching tenth-grade English at Fox Chapel High School, and will begin work on her Ph.D. in English at Pitt this summer.

Ann Judson Ratcliffe is still teaching high school in Pittsburgh. Our congratulations to Temple, who passed his bar exam and is employed by a Pittsburgh law firm. While Barry continues in medical school at Columbia, Joyce Kass Eisenstein has a new job as an official assistant in the management training program at First National City Bank of New York. Kathy Wright Mueller and husband Jim visited Joyce and Barry in New York City last June.

Harriet Katz Bachman, in addition to her job, is a part-time student in urban planning at Morgan State College. Penny Lowe is completing her senior year at Boston University, majoring in elementary education. Mimi Majewski loves her new job at Wm. Filene and Sons in Boston, where she is a business programmer. June Marshall Werrin is attending graduate school at Pitt in English. She also teaches ninth and twelfth grade English at Peabody High School.

Congratulations to Sally Hamilton, who will receive her M.A. from the University of Kentucky in May. Her field is German, and she has been awarded a scholarship to study at Heidelberg University for a year. Mary Hood has a wonderful new job teaching 14 educable mentally retarded children, ages 6-10. She also loves Virginia Beach. Lucky Mary! Sandy Guest Stevenson sends greetings from Italy where Peter is a medical student. Sandy invites any members of our class visiting Italy to also visit her.

News from our newlyweds! Holly Meck Hunsicker and Dennis moved to Florida in December, where Dennis plays in a band attached to the staff of the Admiral of Cruiser-Destroyer Flotilla 12.

Bonnie Lombardo Ilch's wedding was a small Chatham reunion. Present were Sarah Olmstead, Janice Gary, Jolyn Vargish, Janene Snyder Carazo, Sam Hoch, Joy Waddell and Karen Copeland. Bonnie is a claims approver for Metropolitan Life Insurance in New York City, while Alfred is a copywriter in the public relations department of the American Management Association.

Carolyn Hooten Monarch has a new job with ABCO, Inc., in Irwin, Pa. Marjy Kaplan has completed her year with the American Friends Service Committee in Seattle, and has done some traveling in the U.S. and Europe. At the moment, Marjy is doing secretarial work for Sierra Club in Berkeley, and disliking every minute of it! Karen M. Moss, in the second year in her job at Boston College, has also become involved in an interesting project. She is a licensed instructor in a new course entitled Parent Effectiveness Training, in which parents learn skills for handling conflict and building better parent-child relationships. Good luck on an ambitious and much needed project, Karen.

I, Barb, finally had to drop out of graduate school due to a whopping bout of mononucleosis. I love being home and devoting full time to Brian (now 16 months old) and to Joe, who has become registered as a pharmacist in New York as well as in Pennsylvania. I saw Kate Perkins last summer at Cape Cod, and ran into Jean Robinson at a ski area near Syracuse. 'Til next year—peace and best wishes.

Merle reporting:

For those of you who think that one never sees a familiar face on the streets of New York—while looking for a job last spring I bumped into Jolyn Vargish on Park Avenue, and then saw Biri Fay on the Brooklyn-bound subway on my first day of work. While campaigning in June I found myself standing next to Shelly Israel Mark, '68. Shelly seems to live a few blocks from Richard and me in Forest Hills.

I am not the only member of our class to have left Baltimore this past year. Helen Pollock Starr is now living "at home" in Bethesda while going to graduate school in political science at American University and waiting for Jud to return from Vietnam. The Starrs spent a few weeks in Spain before Jud left in November. In December Helen and Carolyn Taylor Heysek saw Tina Satz Miracle.

Sue Porter Walker has finished her waiting for Earl to return. After their marriage in the summer of 1968 Sue and Earl spent nine months in Bamberg, Germany. Following that Earl went to Viet Nam, and, after summer school at the University of Virginia, Sue returned to Fickes to finish her Chatham requirements. The Walkers have been at Fort Knox since last May but by this writing should be gone—to graduate school they hope.

Kathy Perrone Van Wassen, after completing her master's in English at C.M.U., has left the ranks of full-time student to teach eleventh grade English at Churchill Area High School. Bob is working at the Edgar-Thomson works in Braddock on the basic oxygen process facility that has been designed to reduce pollution. He expects to receive his M.B.A. from Pitt in April.

Lynn Osterloh is also teaching, first grade in the Duval County School System. She, however, has the advantage of warm winters as Duval County includes Jacksonville, Florida. Lynn was in Cleveland in October for Barbara Willis' wedding. Most important, Lynn invites all to visit in "SUN AND FUN LAND."

Ann Posner Fox and Arthur are living in Columbus where Arthur is a second year medical student at Ohio State.

Bill and Carol Zurheide Block's wedding took place in front of Mellon Pond. Bill, whose studies were interrupted by Uncle Sam and Vietnam, is in his second year of law school at Washington and Lee. Carol, a sculptress, has a studio and teaches small classes to help support it. She also has a part-time newspaper job and is a substitute teacher in the public school system. They expect to be in Pittsburgh for the summer where Bill will be working for a law firm.

I have just returned from Jody Drooz Yoffie's wedding where Josie Campbell Dellenbaugh and I were bridesmaids. Jody and Alan will live in Washington until June when Alan will graduate from George Washington Law School. Then they will live in Wilmington, where Alan will relocate from his home in Wooster, Mass. Jody will finish her final year of law school at some as yet unknown place.

Richard and I are living in Queens and I am working in the Medical office of Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn. Connie Weiss has been to New York to visit twice since we have been here and we are now waiting for Marsha Weiss to appear. Marsha, still in Chicago, is now teaching and working on her thesis. On a recent trip to Kalamazoo, Michigan she viewed Marshall David, offspring of Eleanor Levinson Peris and Dr. Jeffrey P., "a real cute kid!"

Richard and I have spent whatever free time my accountant husband has in the winter, skiing. I keep looking for Chatham faces on the slopes but I haven't seen any. Are any of you around?

Dottie reporting:

Tina Satz Miracle's husband Andrew is working on his master's in Latin American studies at the University of Florida in the department of educational anthropology. Tina, along with Lynn Stewart, Linda Richman, and Faye Singer Rosch send greetings. Lynn is attending John Carroll University working toward her master's in English. Linda is anticipating the completion of her master's work this June from Columbia in social work. Her fiancé is a third year medical student at New York University.

While Kathy Wright Mueller's husband Donald is working on his Ph.D. at Illinois in organic chemistry, Kathy is busy doing master's work and acting as a full-time research assistant in the department of microbiology.

Linda Scholle is at Boston University Law School and working part time in a legal assistance office.

Barbara Willis Bittenbender has been quite busy in the past year finishing her M.A. at Wisconsin in English literature, beginning a new job in college advertising with Little, Brown and Company, and planning her wedding. Harriet Dye Bakalar ('68) was in the wedding. Lynne Osterlob, JoAnn Watson Pearson, Karen Polinsky and Sue Cosgroves Jones ('68) attended. Barbara visited Washington, D.C. and saw Alexis MacMillan ('68) where she is working for Senator Percy. JoAnn is in graduate school at the University of Pittsburgh in reading and the language arts while she teaches full time.

Laura Weill Brown plans to get her MAT in French this May. She comments that taking nine credits a semester and teaching full time has been no easy chore. Her husband, Jack, is now working with Bonwit Teller in New York.

Sue Trees Juliano is still working as a computer programmer at the home office of Utica Mutual Insurance Company. Her husband, Jim, is an engineer at G.E. Aerospace Electronics. They visited St. Thomas last summer and are using those memories to sustain them through the frigid winter months.

Chatham College Alumnae Recorder

POLICY STATEMENT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF CHATHAM COLLEGE

This policy statement of the Board of Trustees of Chatham College, adopted unanimously October 23, 1973, is the culmination of a number of committee studies and decisions within the College in recent years. At this same time the Trustees also voted unanimously to support the proposal to enrich the liberal arts with more explicit concern for career orientation for the contemporary woman. In anticipation of additional support for these purposes, the Trustees requested the President and Faculty to begin the detailed planning for the early introduction of programs in Administration and Management and in Human Expression and Communication. The Board also expressed the hope that the College would be developing further innovative approaches to the education of women, with attention also to programs for the older student.

We believe that Chatham College's most important contribution continues to be the education of women including women of all ages. Recent developments in our society point increasingly to the importance of maintaining the opportunity for women to attend a college for women. We applaud the conclusion of the Carnegie Commission that it "explicitly favors the continuation of colleges for women" because "they provide an element of diversity among institutions of higher education and an additional option for women students. The Commission points especially to the unusual proportion of women leaders who are graduates of such colleges.

By remaining a college for women, Chatham does not imply that the present can be projected unchanged into the future. Indeed, if it is to serve best the women students who choose to enroll, it must pay attention to the changing life patterns of its graduates. In decades past, the college-educated woman often was expected to be a supplement to, rather than to make an essential contribution to the professions. Now the high probability of gainful employment has substantial ramifications for the kind of education a woman pursues. Today, for example, nearly seven out of ten women between the ages of 45 and 54 with four or more years of college education are gainfully employed.

An awareness of previous discriminatory practices plus the teeth of Federal and state legislation have led institutions in our society, i.e., business, industrial, social, educational, service, to look increasingly to women for some of the leadership previously supplied almost exclusively by men. The Carnegie Commission asserts that "the largest unused supply of superior intelligence in the United States is found among women."

We continue to believe that a liberal arts education offers the best preparation for making a living as well as living a life. If, as we fully anticipate and hope, women are to be drawn increasingly into leadership roles in all society, the liberal arts in a college for women take on a new significance. The ability to think clearly and logically, to analyze with perception, to write and speak with clarity both in one's own tongue and in other languages, to have some sense of history and of the impact of technology, to comprehend the subject from many angles, to weigh moral responsibilities, and to appreciate the human attempt at expression through the arts are clearly, requirements for genuine leadership in a civilized society. They are likewise the aims and substance of the liberal arts.

But especially for women in the decades ahead the liberal arts must provide an added dimension which recognizes that living and working are not separable. Traditionally many of Chatham's graduates, approximately 45% each year, have sought advanced degrees. Others have chosen the important role of wife and mother. Still others have gone directly into careers. We foresee an increasing number who will want to combine parts or all of these various options. The education which Chatham offers must, therefore, prepare the Chatham student to choose wisely and achieve well in whatever directions her life proceeds.

We have taken note of the many signs that women will be given career opportunities of a far wider variety than ever before. In particular, we note the possibilities for women administrators and managers in social service agencies, businesses, national and multi-national industries, finance, the health services, government and law, and education at all levels. In addition, opportunities are opening in the administration of the arts, in communications media such as television and publishing, and in public relations and advertising. Each of these fields needs badly the creative talents, wisdom and sensitivity of the liberally educated woman.

In its particular location, Chatham College is fortunate that it can supplement its resources by drawing upon experts and facilities beyond the traditional boundaries of the campus. Chatham can offer its students the opportunity to test their abilities and interests through internships and independent study projects. Beyond these engagements, the College may add or restructure some courses to afford a wider dimension to the liberal arts with the professional future of its graduate clearly in mind. In addition, as the Special Study Committee on the Education of Women observed, "the College's commitment to the education of women implies close attention to those psychological and social factors that inhibit genuine learning and achievement."

In summary, we hold that women should and will have a larger role to play in society and that Chatham College should and will play a larger role in their essential preparation. Chatham College needs, therefore, to make a clear and concentrated effort to offer an education of special relevance to the woman student and her future.

Editorial

You have read, and will continue to read in the RECORDER, about the efforts of Chatham College to expand its undergraduate community by including in it women of all races, colors, creeds, and, more recently, ages. It is the last of these — the inclusion of all ages — which has gained the spotlight recently, and continues to do so at this writing. As a recent graduate of the college, and a comparatively doddering one at that, I am encouraged by the present efforts of the Admissions Office to seek out those women who are older than the traditionally defined college age.

I was, at the beginning of my Chatham career, designated a "special student," which designation signified that I was a part-time, non-degree student. My identification number was 00700, a fact which amused me, and I contemplated, if only briefly, the role of a female James Bond. But I had too much catching up to do. When, after two years, I decided to go for broke, my designation was changed to "Degree Candidate." While I had liked the idea of being "special," I confess that the new category sounded more serious, and, indeed, I was treated more seriously. There were, of course, still male faculty members who would eye me with that "Why-aren't-you-at-home-cooking-dinner" look, but I found them easy to ignore. I was not alone.

As the numbers of older students increased, and as the semesters marched inexorably forward, we became, at one time or another, "Adult students," a designation which cannot have amused our younger colleagues, and "Married students," inappropriate for its lack of precision, and even "Retreads," although I confess that the term was coined by one of "us."

In the past two years there has been a distinct effort on the part of the college to shift the emphasis of distinction from the older student herself to her educational needs. The education we pursue is now called "Continuing Education." It is a step in the right direction, certainly, but I don't know what the phrase means. I was under the impression that life itself is a continuing process of education, in one direction or another. Nevertheless, since the college is quite properly seeking older applicants and wishes to be open and flexible enough to allow for the particular schedules which older women may need, some designation may be necessary, if only to decorate brochures and validate the Chatham booth at Adult Education Week fairs.

It is my fervent hope that the day will soon come when such terms as "Adult Education" and "Continuing Education" will become obsolete. For now they may be useful. In the future Chatham will, we hope, be a college for women — women of all ages and persuasions. Then the college can concentrate on what it excels in, the job of educating and preparing twentieth-century women for whatever roles they wish in an open and exciting society. Chatham can be a challenging and "ageless" intellectual community even today. Not all Alumnae Support is financial; the Alumnae can support Chatham by finding, informing, and helping to enroll students . . . OF ALL AGES!

Chatham Libraries From a Librarian's Point of View

by

Jennifer Gearhart Grason '69

The concrete and bustle of Fifth Avenue recedes behind me as I wind slowly up Woodland Road to the Chapel. This much of the drive is familiar to me, since I drove it many times as a student, and later as the evening reference assistant in the Laughlin Library. I turn left to pass Woodland Hall as I always have, to be stopped by a set of steps. Ahead lies a grassy park with slender trees scattered across it, criss-crossed with asphalt walks. The walk stretching directly ahead soon changes to brick stairs that lead to the new Jennie King Mellon Library. The impressive pre-cast concrete and glass structure is situated to leave one with the impression that it is the most important building on campus, a concept appropriate to the individually-oriented study program of the College.

The Chatham community calls the park the Forum. It extends from Dilworth to Coolidge Hall, and from Woodland Hall to the Jennie King Mellon Library. The College Theatre, which is connected to the left of the Library, is constructed of the same pre-cast concrete.

The Library and Theatre contrast pleasantly with the rest of the campus, demonstrating that a mixture of architectural styles need not necessarily result in discord. The past and present provide a contrast also. While I cannot help but feel a certain nostalgia for the coziness and traditionalism of the Laughlin Library, the College student body and book collection had outgrown it. Mellon Library, while it lacks the old-fashioned quaintness of Laughlin, is equally attractive in its own distinctively modern way, and much more functional.

Clean lines and geometric forms characterize not only the architecture but the furnishings of the Mellon Library. Study tables and carrels are simple rectangles, saved from austerity by a natural wood finish. Matching chairs have cushioned vinyl seats and backs, comfortable enough to let one sit for long periods, but not comfortable enough to put one to sleep. Shelving on the main floor bibliography reference and periodical areas is a simple design of natural wood. Furniture arrangement rather than walls separate these areas, preserving a sense of spaciousness. An orange-tone carpet and orange draperies with a muted stripe help to add warmth to the main floor.

To the left of the main entrance is a massive circulation desk, with a reserve book room behind it, facilitating control of those materials. Beyond these are the librarians' offices and the technical services area. The head librarian's office, which was merely a cubicle in Laughlin, containing a desk, chair, some shelving and one book truck, now contains a sofa, chair and coffee table, a conference table surrounded by chairs, lots of shelving and room for several book trucks. The technical services area, the place where books are chosen, ordered, received, cataloged and classified, and prepared for the open shelves, and where periodicals are received and processed, is five times as large as the space available in the Laughlin Library. It is also easily accessible from the card catalog area. Interested Library users ought to ask to see the technical services area to discover what happens to library materials before they appear in the public areas.

To the right of the main entrance lies the Mary Helen Marks Study Room. This room has the special advantage of a separate entrance to the outside. When the inside doors of this room are secured, it can be left open all night for late study, and can always be accessible whether or not the Library is open.

The Mellon Library has distinct advantages over the Laughlin Library in terms of lighting, space, study areas and noise control. Although the individual incandescent lighting that characterized Laughlin was very cozy, the subdued fluorescent lighting of the Mellon Library provides adequate intensity with far fewer shadows and no glare, and is much easier on a reader's eyes. Natural light streams in from glass panels over what seems to be a balcony overlooking the main floor, but which is actually a camouflage for part of the air conditioning and heating systems.

While the Laughlin Library could not hold the 98,000 plus books comprising the College's collection, the Mellon Library will hold 200,000 volumes, leaving ample room for growth. The ground floor houses the periodical collection and the circulating book collection is on the second and third floors.

The Mellon Library provides many different types of study areas to serve nearly any type of study pattern short of reading in bed. Individual study carrels are scattered throughout the Library, as are tables that seat up to four. Four conference or seminar rooms provide ample space for group study. Four additional study rooms are furnished with comfortable sofas and chairs. And for those who study best with their heads on the floor and their feet on a chair the Library offers an area of brightly colored "fun furniture" including cushions that can be scattered on the floor and chairs shaped like potato chips. An added attraction of this area, located on the third floor, is a magnificent view of Shadyside and East Liberty.

The physical layout of the Mellon Library makes noise much less of a problem than it was in Laughlin. The circulation desk is far enough away from the reference and periodical areas that the inevitable noise that goes on there, unless it is excessive, should not be disturbing. The librarians' offices and technical services areas connect, yet can be shut off from the main part of the library, saving library users from the unavoidable noise of librarians conducting their work. Seminar and conference rooms provide ample space for group study. And since study areas are spread throughout the Library, separated by walls and book stacks, subdued conversation in one area need not be heard by everyone else in the room.

Although the Mellon Library now stands as a well organized physical facility, the staff and some of the students devoted a tremendous amount of energy to make this occur, and even with this effort the goal was not achieved by opening day. The College did not employ a moving company to transfer the library from Laughlin to Mellon. The staff started packing books in the middle of the spring term of 1973. The packing boxes were left on the shelves so the books would still be accessible, until the Library closed for the summer and the move. A group of Chatham work-study students, two recent graduates and the Library staff worked together to get the collection ready for opening day. The move, which would be a massive undertaking under any circumstances, was all the more difficult since the building was still under construction. In addition, the furniture did not arrive until two days before opening day. As of this writing (late September), a few packing crates are still lying around, but the library is in working order, thanks to the cooperation of several students and a couple of recent alumnae.

Chatham can be proud of a facility like The Jennie King Mellon Library. It is functional, aesthetically pleasing and spacious, and truly one of the most attractive libraries in the city.

Editor's note: The former Laughlin Library is now known as James Laughlin Hall and was recently renovated for use by the Department of Music.

A Gracious Lady

Mary Helen Marks was attracted to Chatham College at an early age. Her middle name was given for Miss Helen Pelletreau, President of Pennsylvania Female College (now called Chatham College) where her mother had graduated in the Class of 1881. As Mary Helen was growing up she cherished stories of Miss Pelletreau and the College, told over and over by her mother. When she had finished high school her parents sent her to Smith College, but her greatest contribution was to Chatham College.

When Miss Marks came to the College in 1916 she felt at home. For a brief period she served as field representative. Soon thereafter she was made Dean of the College, a position that put her in touch with everyone on the campus. She had a gift for getting along with people.

She worked harmoniously with four successive presidents — John Carey Acheson, Cora Helen Coolidge, Herbert Lincoln Spencer and Paul Russell Anderson. When Miss Coolidge died Miss Marks was given the office of Acting President with all the responsibilities pertaining to it, together with those of the deanship. For three years she carried the heavy load ably. Miss Effie L. Walker has written of her recently, "I'll never forget the chapel she had the day Miss Coolidge died. She read the 90th Psalm. That expressed her feeling perfectly, I'm sure."

Miss Marks had strong convictions. At the same time she was tolerant and respectful of opinions other than her own. For example, when Dr. Anderson first came to the College he questioned her about an important procedure in the office, asking why it was done in such a way. She said, "It has always been done that way and has seemed to be successful, but that does not mean it is the only good way. Perhaps you know a better one."

The most valuable of all Miss Marks' services to the College is what she did for the students. The motto on the College seal meant something real to her. Wherever she was she set an example of gracious manners in everyday living.

For thirty-six years her office door was open to the students and they took advantage of it. She understood the students and their problems and they had confidence in her advice. She was their friend. Now, more than ever before, they appreciate her counsel. The influence of Mary Helen Marks will live on through the coming years and bear fruit for our College and for our country.

Laberta Dysart

Mary Helen Marks died in Pittsburgh on July 23, 1973, at the age of 87. The name of Laberta Dysart, former faculty member and author of "The First Ninety Years," a history of the College, came to mind immediately as the person who could most fittingly, knowingly and lovingly write about her because she had known her probably better and longer than anyone else connected with the College.

At the time of Miss Marks' retirement in 1952, Dr. Paul R. Anderson, then president of the College, said "... cannot help but feel that the College might not have been in existence today had it not been for the influence which Miss Marks provided under many and varied circumstances. There will probably not be another Mary Helen Marks in the life of this College, but we are all happy indeed that there has been one." Amen.

The Marks family has suggested that if anyone wishes to make a gift in memory of Miss Marks that all such contributions be made to Chatham College.

Women's Rights:

AN INVITATION TO THE DANCE

by Dr. Douglas Camp Chaffey
Asst. Prof. of Political Science

Anglo-Saxon law and the United States Constitution have changed, developed, grown and attenuated considerably in the past 100 years. And it may well be that the most remarkable and profound changes have occurred in the area of treatment of traditional "unequals" before the law. Male-female and master-servant relationships and statuses were carefully delineated and enforced in feudal and Tudor policies through the law. As we know, the married woman and the servant or slave were legally the property of the male and master both in England and in the early United States.

However, by 1900, the traditional role and legal status of American women had changed a great deal. Undoubtedly the growing industrial labor needs of the Nineteenth Century were partly responsible for such steps as the "Married Women's Acts" of many states, which for the first time acknowledged the wife's legal personality and which conveyed in a limited way ability to hold and convey property. As women began to enter the labor market in significant numbers, the first laws regulating female and child labor were adopted, and women began the long drive to attain the right to vote — culminating in the Nineteenth Amendment in 1920. Since the achievement of suffrage, the most significant changes in laws affecting women are seen in the federal Equal Pay Act of 1963, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and in recent Supreme Court decisions dealing with state abortion laws.

Many American women can and do point with pride to such indicators of their growing "equality before the law." And certainly we have come some distance from the Tudor polity in terms of the treatment of people before the law. Yet no one can seriously argue that American law or the courts treat women and men in all respects as equals, although ostensibly well-meaning people will not agree as to whether absolute equality before the law is a good thing for men and women. If we look from state to state, we see that laws in at least some states still restrict women's rights in at least one of the following ways: (1) the ability of married women to own free title to or to convey property without husband's consent; (2) the possibility of retaining the "maiden" name after marriage or of retaining a legal residence apart from the husband; (3) the legal right to compete with male employees in terms of overtime, night employment, or amount of weight which may be lifted. Finally, we still find laws in many states which established different majority ages for men and women, and which restrict or limit females in jury service.

Suppose, for the purposes of argument, that a group of women desire to sweep away all such laws and to achieve full equality before the law with respect to all matters not based on a valid sexual distinction. It seems they have three possible approaches. First, they may attack such laws on a state-by-state basis, both in the state legislatures and before the state courts. This approach, of course, has been taken and especially in recent years some state laws enforcing unequal status have been amended or altered. Successes via this route, however, will be scattered and slow. Legislatures and courts are predominantly male institutions and adhere generally to the idea that women can and should be treated separately as a class (female protection rather than equal protection).

A second approach may be to attack such statutes and practices as violative of the "Equal Protection Clause" of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. This will seem a better approach, since successful court decisions culminating in definitive U. S. Supreme Court affirmation will tend to make the rulings against unequal treatment uniform across the country. It would seem a better approach also because the words of that clause of the Fourteenth Amendment seem on their face so absolute: "No state [may] — deny to persons within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." But here the group would encounter the "absolutist fallacy." Justice Black notwithstanding, the U. S. Supreme Court has never accepted the argument that the words of the Constitution are absolute in their meaning. For example, a person who, by shouting "fire!" in a crowded theatre, causes panic, will not escape prosecution for his speech, despite the absolute words of the First Amendment. Relative to the Fourteenth Amendment, the U. S. Supreme Court has consistently held that state laws may indeed treat different classes of persons differently, provided there is a valid reason for the distinction.

For most of the Fourteenth Amendment's history, the U. S. Supreme Court readily accepted sex as a valid basis for legal classification and legal treatment. Indeed, early cases on this point are shocking by our standards. For example, in the 1860's one Myra Bradwell attempted to become a lawyer in Illinois by applying for admission to the state bar. She was refused on the basis of her sex. In 1872 a unanimous U. S. Supreme Court found that Myra Bradwell had no natural right to practice law. This was so not only because of the laws of Illinois, which specified the qualifications required of "persons," but also "because of the very disabilities of nature itself, the general constitution of things which created women's paramount destiny and mission — to fulfill the noble and benign offices of wife and mother" (Bradwell v. Illinois, 16 Wall. 130-1872). The same Court held that, while black defendants were denied equal protection of the laws if black men were excluded from jury service, nevertheless female defendants would not be denied such protection where women were excluded from jury service (Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 310-1880). This last decision, applied to state juries, was considered "good law" until the late 1960's, forty-five years after female suffrage. And consider the Court's attitude some years later relative to state laws regulating female hours and wages, while not regulating those of male employees: "She is not upon an equality. — She is properly placed in a class by herself, and legislation designed for her protection may be sustained, even when like legislation is not necessary for men and could not be sustained (Muller v. Oregon, 208 U. S. 412-1908)."

Congress, rather than the Court, recently made sex a suspect classification through passage and enforcement of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In sustaining the Act as it applies to discrimination against women in employment, the U. S. Supreme Court implicitly recognized that sex had become a suspect classification for employment practices and statutes. But the Court has yet to say definitively that sex, as race, is an impermissible classification generally, or that "persons" means "women" as well as "race, color, creed or national origin." And our troubled group of feminists might forever be uncertain, even if a 1973 Supreme Court did make such an inclusive ruling, because the 1974 Court could always un-make it.

It is for these reasons that our feminist group will try a third approach, amendment to the U. S. Constitution to prohibit legal discrimination on the basis of sex by state or federal governments. Even though many years of legislative and court action would be necessary, the desirability and fundamental importance of the concept of equality of the sexes before the law would no longer be open to debate or institutional vagaries. It would become an operating principle of the democratic polity.

As we know, feminists have followed this third alternative. In 1920, the first such amendment was introduced in Congress. Immediately their efforts were stymied by that supreme male club with its very different concept of "female protection." Finally, in 1971, and after extensive organizational work and hearings, both houses of Congress passed what we now refer to as the "Equal Rights Amendment." The proposal was then submitted to the states for ratification, which must occur by March 22, 1979.

The proposed amendment reads as follows:

"Section 1: Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Section 2: The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

Section 3: This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

If thirty-eight states ratify the amendment within the seven year limitation, it will become the Twenty-Seventh Amendment. As of September 15, 1973, twenty-nine states have ratified the proposal, and Nebraska has first ratified it then rescinded it (Congress must decide if Nebraska may legally do so). Thirteen states rejected the proposal in year in floor votes (Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Missouri, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, and Utah). In additional states the proposal was killed before the stage of final vote (Arizona, Georgia, Mississippi, Montana, Ohio, Virginia). One state, Louisiana, may still consider the proposal in this legislative session. Therefore, the future of this particular amendment is in doubt. Most of the ratifications came in 1971, and most recent actions have been adverse, largely under the pressures of a well-financed anti-amendment lobby.

Debates in the state capitols and in the media have produced more heat than light on the probable effects of this amendment if adopted. If we piece together an analysis of (1) the intent of Congress in proposing the Equal Rights Amendment, and (2) a consideration of the history of the Fourteenth and other amendments, we can begin to predict the effects of the Twenty-Seventh Amendment. I use these as guideposts because (1) the intent of Congress will be the prime factor in early Court interpretations, and (2) the Court must in the end balance this amendment with existing rights (the "absolutist" problem).

Kathleen Lucas Barber, in a closely-reasoned and brilliant paper, recently stated what most students of the law and courts will generally agree to be the effects of the amendment:

"In general, laws will be invalidated by the Equal Rights Amendment if they treat the members of one sex differently from members of the other sex. Although most members of one sex may share a particular characteristic which few members of the other sex possess, this imbalance in fact, will not justify inequality in the law. The reason for this is basic: sex discrimination may itself have caused the widely shared attribute in question —.

Discriminatory laws will be discarded altogether, or written in sex-neutral terms, so that burdens and benefits may be distributed according to individual capacity, not by the prohibited classification of sex. Laws which provide compensating inequalities will no longer be constitutionally permissible."

(Kathleen Lucas Barber, "Equal Rights and the Double-Edged Sword of Protection," paper prepared for delivery at the 1973 Annual Meeting of the Midwest Political Science Association).

How would these general principles operate in practice? Perhaps some examples will demonstrate the sorts of laws which would be invalidated:

1. A law prohibiting women from becoming professional wrestlers — or anything else permitted to men — would be impermissible and could not be justified either on the ground that few women choose the profession or that they need protection from its "evil" effects.
2. Social Security Laws and regulations which provide earlier and, in some cases, more substantial benefits to women than to men would have to be re-drawn, and could not be defended on the ground that women were discriminated against while employed and should be compensated for this inequality.
3. State laws which require a wife to obtain her husband's signature before conveying property or opening a business would be invalid — unless the law required like action on the part of the husband relative to his transactions.
4. State laws which exclude women from jury service or treat them as a separate class for exemption from jury duty would be invalid.
5. If the United States government reinstituted a military draft, the law could not exempt women as such from its requirements.
6. If a state is to have laws regulating hours, wages and conditions of employment, such laws must apply equally to both sexes.
7. Laws which regulate adult status, marriage, divorce, child custody or alimony could not discriminate on their face or in practice against the male or female, nor apply differentially to the sexes.
8. Laws establishing and providing punishments of criminal acts must be written in sex-neutral terms, unless the act could be committed only by a member of one sex against a member of the other sex. For example, both the prostitute and his or her customer would be subject to punishment for the crime of prostitution.

These examples indicate the very important impact of the proposed amendment if enforced, and demonstrate the wisdom of the two-year period between ratification and enforcement. We should also be aware that the amendment would have a broader impact than just that on state and federal law. As the courts interpret "state action," the prohibition against state discrimination extends to the acts and policies of public officials at all levels, to lower public agencies, and to the actions of state-supported and state-related institutions — whether primarily public or private in governance. The concept of "state-relatedness" is a fuzzy one. Certainly the Equal Rights Amendment would not apply to purely private relations between persons, or to institutions which do not receive funds or any very substantial support from public government. Courts have already struck down racial discrimination by private schools, private libraries, private swimming pools, and some private organizations — either because they receive public funds or are open to the public. It is then by no means certain that single-sex schools would survive the adoption of the Equal Rights Amendment in the face of qualified applicants of the unwanted sex.

Two arguments are frequently offered against adoption of the amendment: (1) that it would legislate away the difference between the sexes; (2) that it would destroy the American family either by destroying the traditional husband-wife symbiosis or by removing the husband's legally-imposed necessity to support the family. As to the first argument, it is important to remember again that the amendment would be interpreted in light of Congress's intent, and that no amendment is absolute. The written proceedings before Congress clearly demonstrate that Congress did not have a "unisex" world in mind. It intended that maternity benefits continue to women and that rape could still be classified as a crime by male against female. There are unlegislable differences between the sexes which no amendment can be expected to reach. Nor would "men" and "women" signs disappear from restrooms. It is difficult to see who would call for such an action, and again the words of the amendment are not absolute. There is a right to privacy which lurks behind several amendments, and the Court does and will consider the need to balance the one right against the other.

The question of the American family is more complicated. As an institution it is basically patterned by culture and social mores, rather than by law as such. Surely there is little damage which an amendment could do which has not already occurred from other forces operating on the family. Legally the amendment would make husband and wife equal partners in the marriage — whether it will do so in fact depends very much on the particular couple. Culturally male-female equality in the family is the state of affairs in an increasing number of marriages. Since child support and alimony laws are seldom enforced presently in our states, no harm would come from equalizing the legal responsibility for child support or partner support. In fact, each couple does and will continue to decide how they work out earnings and responsibilities. The most important impact of the amendment on the family will be in bringing about more equitable divorce, support, and inheritance laws. And in the final analysis, if all state legislatures are as concerned with the "sanctity of the American family" as is Pennsylvania's, I am sure inventive legislators will find sex-neutral ways to continue to pass such ineffective but popular measures.

I have betrayed my personal bias in favor of the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. In the long run, it will usher in the next great "liberation" — that of the American male. Many people see in the great changes which have already occurred in the legal status of women the forward and upward march of historical inevitability. I am not sure whether change generally is in this direction. Very often the movement of history seems more sideways (or "concrevans" as one of my colleagues loves to say). I am sure that this amendment or another like it will eventually become part of the Constitution. And this in turn shows again how much we all have changed in so short a time in the general dance.

...AND NARY

I never intended to become an archaeologist. I was sure that it was a glamorous life — full of sun-bronzed types in pith helmets carefully brushing the dust of ages away from fabulous treasure troves or discovering documents which solve the mysteries of the millenia — but I also had a strong suspicion that it involved long hours, a sunburn, and an all too intimate acquaintance with dirt. I opted for the quieter life of the political science major and settled down to become a Congresswoman or Supreme Court Justice.

Alas for all things that will never be: Fate conspired against me, propelled me into a class in ancient history (I had intended to take German), transformed my applications to law school into applications to graduate school and made sure that one of my first professors in graduate school was also the director of one of the three American digs in Greece.

So here I am in the wilds of southwestern Greece, working ten to twelve hours a day, sunburnt and freckled, terrified of scorpions, despairing of ever getting my hands, face, and clothes completely clean, and having the time of my life. After three years of working on excavation I have seen no pith helmets, no vital written documents, and very few treasure troves, but I suspect that these commodities have always been more common in Hollywood than in real life. Besides, reality is a great deal more interesting than the movies: Hollywood never said anything about dawn over the Taygetos mountains, picnics under the Milky Way, or fireworks inside the church at Greek Easter.

The dig with which I am associated is the University of Minnesota excavation at Nichoria, in Messenia, a province in the southwestern Peloponnesos. The excavation is under the direction of Professor William A. McDonald. The site itself is located on an olive and fig-covered ridge overlooking the Gulf of Messenia and the fertile Messenian plain, an area which has always been one of the most productive agricultural areas in Greece. Although the ridge is now occupied only by olives, sheep, goats, and archaeologists, for more than fifteen hundred years (2300-700 B.C.) it housed a thriving Bronze Age settlement. The purpose of the University of Minnesota dig is to try to re-create an understanding of that settlement and its environment.

A surprising range of talents and techniques is brought to bear on the problem of reconstructing the history and ecology of the site; in fact, one of the things which surprised me the most when I first got involved with the dig was the number of different disciplines which were represented on the staff. I had always envisioned archaeologists as people who simply dug things up out of the ground (or possibly supervised other people digging) and recorded the position of everything they found before they carted it off to a museum somewhere. It never occurred to me that the process of recording, conserving, and analyzing the finds would prove more complex than actually digging them up. Reality once again proved me wrong: out of some thirty staff members only seven or eight are trenchmasters — the people who, with the assistance of workmen recruited from the local villages, actually do the excavation. The rest of the staff tries to cope with the great volume of material coming out of the ground or tries to gather collateral information from the current environment which may make possible a reconstruction of the Bronze and Early Iron age environment. Thus the staff includes people doing work in geology, botany, palaeontology, physical anthropology, cultural anthropology, conservation, architecture, and photography, as well as specialists in dealing with pottery and small finds. My own work on the dig has been with the pottery: trying, with two other people, to make sense of the thousands of dirty, broken potsherds which are sent down to us every day.

Pottery has a very special role in archaeology. In the first place, it is virtually indestructible: whole pots are easily broken, but unless the broken sherds are ground to powder or exposed to constantly running water, they are likely to hang around for thousands or (who knows) millions of years, cluttering up the landscape and providing manna for archaeologists. Moreover, in the time span with which we are dealing, pottery is the most accurate source of dates. Archaeologists have established a pretty clear sequence of stylistic changes in some kinds of prehistoric Greek pottery which can be linked to already established dates in better known civilizations. Thus a close study of the shape and decoration of the pottery may enable us to date otherwise undatable artifacts as closely as within fifty to seventy-five years.

All of the finds from the excavation must be cleaned, identified, analyzed, catalogued, and filed away for future study, and pottery is no exception. The pottery is sent down to us in large rubber baskets called zembils. Each zambil contains a separately labelled lot of pottery from a specific area of a specific trench, and each lot remains separate and coherent throughout the process of cleaning, sorting and analyzing. In this way it is possible to be very specific in recognizing and identifying chronological changes on the site.

Our first major problem is getting the pottery clean. We have two women from the village who wash the pottery carefully, using water and very soft brushes, and then spread it out to dry in the shade of a large pear tree. Their technique is successful for the most part, but the salts in the local soil have an unfortunate tendency to resist cleaning and dirt clings stubbornly to the surface of many sherds. Important pottery may, therefore, be treated with hydrochloric acid, which is often successful in dissolving stubborn dirt. (It is, however, equally successful in dissolving the soles of sandals onto which it is accidentally splashed — as I learned to my sorrow!)

When the pottery is dry, each lot is spread out on a long wooden table and sorted into piles of different shapes (rims, handles, bases, etc.) and fabrics (coarse, plain, fine, and decorated). These are studied, given a date, and a detailed description of the lot and its characteristics is written up. This description becomes part of a pottery notebook which records the nature and fate of every basket of pottery excavated. Each lot is then packed into a wooden box and stored for future reference or study. Unbroken pots and other pots that can be at least partially restored are photographed, catalogued, and stored individually. Whenever possible, broken pots are mended and, if necessary, missing portions may be restored. This work is done by our two conservators who are highly trained specialists in the arts of cleaning, preserving, and restoring all of the artifacts from an excavation.

Those of us who deal with the pottery are particularly fortunate in our working area. Most of our work is done on a shady, vine-covered porch with a spectacular view of the mountains and sea, and with a constant faint scent of jasmine. The porch is a part of the dig house — a combination living-working center which was built specifically to fit the needs of the excavation and which sits on a bluff overlooking the sea about three miles from the site. In addition to eating and sleeping quarters (one large dormitory room for the men, another for the women, and a few private rooms for married couples), the house includes several work areas, photographic darkrooms, and storage areas for both equipment and finds. One of the great advantages of working at the dig house is that there is usually a sea breeze to keep us cool in the hot Mediterranean summer, a blessing which the people who work at the site must do without.

We also try to avoid the heat by starting work early. Breakfast is at five in the morning, and work starts at six. This is a little hard on those of us who would prefer to be late to bed and late to rise, but it is at least partially compensated for by the view of the sunrise over the Taygetos Mountains across the bay. We work from six to two, with a half-hour break at ten, then have lunch and a free period during the hottest part of the day which we can use for a siesta, swimming, writing letters, or indulging in a mystery. (It is my private conviction that archaeologists have a higher addiction rate to detective fiction than any other group in the world.) Tea, to please the British and Canadian members of our staff, is at five and then work continues until seven-thirty. Dinner is at eight and lights are usually out by ten. Saturday afternoons and Sundays are free.

One of the nicest things about archaeology is the opportunity to get to know the people of the area in which you are working, and our dig is fortunate in having developed cordial relations with the nearby village which supplies many of our workmen. The village is very small, very rural, and relatively poor, but what it lacks in modern conveniences it more than makes up in the warmth and generosity of its people. The village itself is about one hundred and fifty years old and filled with whitewashed stone and mudbrick houses, dusty unpaved lanes, dozens of chickens, and a fair number of donkeys, goats, and pigs. The dig rents a house in the village to accommodate the overflow from the dig house (which can comfortably house only about twenty-five), and so for three weeks I have been able to experience the joys and woes of living in a house with no plumbing, no running water, a courtyard, a very loud rooster next door, and a balcony with a terrific view of the mountains and the sea.

Hollywood is welcome to its view of archaeology, and the Congress and the Supreme Court will have to do without me. I've never appreciated hot showers, American plumbing, and peanut butter more, but I wouldn't trade my summers in Nichoria for anything in the world.

Education For Women—

CAMBRIDGE STYLE

Since January of 1971 my husband and I have been living in the village of Offord D'Arcy, located approximately twenty miles northwest of Cambridge — England. Living so close to Cambridge was a once in a lifetime opportunity so I decided to take advantage of it and applied to Cambridge University to read Economics as an affiliated student. The classification "affiliated" means simply that I already have a B.A. from a college other than Cambridge and as an affiliated student I would take the last two years of a three year undergraduate course leading to a degree with honors. Luckily, I was one of twenty-two women accepted by Lucy Cavendish College, previously a graduate society, but now for the first time admitting "mature" (ages 25 and over) and affiliated female undergraduates. My good fortune at being discovered by Lucy Cavendish was frequently made evident to me during my first year of study, completed in June, 1973. Lucy Cavendish was established especially for women whose academic careers had been interrupted by marriage and/or families. As a result, although students of all colleges must abide by the University regulations, Lucy Cavendish students were left to themselves, the College providing help and advice when needed, but otherwise leaving the students to arrange their own schedules around husbands and children.

The academic year consists of three terms of eight weeks duration. Each course of study differs but economics is fairly typical. The normal three year course consists of a Tripos Part I examination at the end of the first year, Preliminary Examination for Part II at the end of the second year, and Tripos Part II exam at the end of the third year. The term "Tripos" derives from a three-legged stool which the earliest students at Cambridge sat upon while being tested. Technically a student can fail Part I and the Prelim exam and still receive an honors degree provided he passes Part II. In fact, however, under such circumstances the student's college may suggest that he leave Cambridge or perhaps change his course.

For my first year I would be taking the Prelim exams which consist of two compulsory exams (or papers, as they are called), Economic Principles I and II, and an optional paper—Statistics. My second year will be somewhat more rigorous as I'll be required to take three compulsory papers and three optional papers. At the beginning of each term a lecture list is published and students are free to attend all or none of those listed. The good lecturers are soon distinguished from the bad, as all lecture rooms are filled to capacity the first week, but only the interesting lecturers manage to attract more than a handful of students the second and following weeks. I found most lectures, in fact, to be rather boring, and in most it was not necessary to take notes. The nature of the lectures seemed to be introductory and lengthy reading lists are given out so that students can do their own reading and learning. The system is completely unlike Chatham classes where the learning process takes place during the class session. Of course the habit of attending classes at Chatham had been so ingrained in me that I wasted a bit of time my first year attending worthless lectures simply because I felt I "ought" to be there.

In addition to lectures, an average week consisted of about twelve, there were supervisions. I received one supervision per week in economic principles, and two per week in statistics. There was also one class a week in statistics for which students were expected to complete problems and go over any difficulties they had. The supervisions are by far the most important element in the student's learning process. They are rather similar to the tutorial system at Chatham. Usually two students meet together with their supervisor and are given an essay topic and suggested reading. The essays are about three or four pages in length and must be handed in to the supervisor the day before the supervision. At the supervision the essays are criticized and the topic discussed. At the end of each term the supervisors must send a written report on each student to his or her college, and if the report suggests some failing in the student's performance it is brought to the attention of the student by his college tutor. I found the supervision to be quite interesting and stimulating, although overcoming one's feelings of ignorance takes some time. The supervision essays are the only written work required by the students and they are ungraded and carry no weight in the determination of the student's final grade. Everything rests on his performance in the Tripos exam, which, in turn, covers an entire year's work.

I found Cambridge to be a marvelous experience my first year and by correcting my early mistakes I hope my second year is even better. In the exams one is not asked to write everything he knows, rather he must use his accumulated knowledge to solve a problem which has been presented to him. The town of Cambridge itself offers much in the way of cultural and athletic activities and is a beautiful city. I always used to love Chatham in the spring and I have had a similar love affair with Cambridge in the spring. It is a truly exciting atmosphere and I feel very fortunate to have been given the unforgettable opportunity to study there.

Feedback

To Ms. or not to Ms.

... I do not care for Ms. but with many years experience in acknowledging contributions to a charitable organization with only "Mary Smith" given (plus address), I have to admit it is practical.

If you want a comment — why that cover on the RECORDER? All right for the So and So Missionary Journal, National Geographic, Newsweek, but a campus scene would suit me better.

Margaret Gilfillan '21
Pittsburgh, Pa.

... Herewith one vote for the use of Ms. It gets around Victorian hangups in re spinsterhood, simplifies etiquette re proper address for divorcees and widows, is a help in business correspondence, and serves as a symbol of deep concern for equal rights. Perhaps we could eventually do without all such titles and be simply Jane or John Doe.

The spring issue had several articles which I not only enjoyed, but shared with others. Thank you.

Elizabeth Coates Elliot '38
Birmingham, Michigan

... I did want to commend you on the "New Look" of the RECORDER. The class news was always fun to read, but the addition of articles written by other alumnae is a fantastic asset and truly makes this "our" magazine.

The first nice day this spring I put my son in the stroller and started out in the direction of the campus. When I got there I was appalled and could have screamed. I realize that cars are more important than people everywhere else in the United States, but I naively hoped our campus would be immune to that horrid disease called "black tar road syndrome." I had just recently become accustomed to the road in the quad and even could understand the reasoning behind it, but you will never convince me that there was any necessity for the ruination of the lovely little path that used to go from Dilworth to the Music Center with the smaller paths leading to Mellon Pond and Mellon Center. No trees, no flowers, no path — just ugly black tar. Why don't you black tar Chapel Hill and make it into a parking lot? That would have as much rhyme or reason as the ruining of the one lovely, quiet little sanctuary left on the campus. Everyone I have spoken with completely agrees with me and they ... urged me to write and explain our feelings. ... If I wanted to go to a City Campus School, I would have gone to Pitt. Besides, it is a lot cheaper.

Cheri Kohn Schwartz '70
Pittsburgh

Dear Cheri,

No campus under construction is aesthetically pleasing. We hope you have resumed your walks and that the views expressed in your letter have been, if not changed, tempered by the new expanses of green grass and trees which replace the ugly old parking lot above Woodland. Eds.

... I did not get a chance to say (at reunion) how much I enjoy the RECORDER. It is developing into so much more than just a vehicle for class news.

Loretta E. Troyer '58
Madison, Wisconsin

... It seemed to me that during our days at Chatham involvement in community affairs was stressed as well as a general awareness of what was happening in the world around us. God knows there were certain courses geared to this which most students were required to take, for better or worse. Now that we have graduated from Chatham, that aspect, let alone stress, seems to have disappeared from the general alumnae correspondence. Is not the Equal Rights Amendment and Nixon's various beyond the law acts, i.e., impoundment of funds to education, a subject or subjects which graduates of an all-women's college might be interested in receiving information about or expressing an opinion on. Perhaps a local alumnae club could become involved in some type of direct action program in the ERA. I believe that if such a program for involvement and information were initiated for the alumnae that involvement in the college through donations and prospective student recommendations by the alumnae would be much greater. Mere requests to the alumnae for funds and statistics is not sufficient if Chatham is to be a distinctive institution of higher learning. . .

Rose Mary Liguori Dahood '70
Chicago, Illinois

... For a change, I have a few quiet minutes and in going through the desk, I found your note for news for the RECORDER (and probably a week past your deadline). Nevertheless your request for "meaty" information hits home. Quite frankly I'm not that interested in Mary Jane's working hard in the garden and Lynn Marie's fifth baby, etc. which is why I haven't written in for quite some time. I'm not interested in that sort of trivia.

Everyone's talking about relevance and I don't think the RECORDER is measuring up to its potential. Chatham graduates are spread throughout the country and in certain parts of the world it would seem to me that we have more to offer one another than feats of propagation.

I wonder if the RECORDER couldn't serve as a forum for a collection of ideas and reports from various parts of the country and the world.

For example, pollution is a popular subject. What are various communities and states doing about it? What success and what have the failures been? Has it really been worthwhile, etc.

To me it would be interesting to hear the opinions of various localities as well as personal opinions of fellow graduates. We often hear about events through national publications such as TIME but never have a deeper view.

I really haven't given this a great deal of thought, but would it be possible to propose a wide variety of subjects for comment. I'd be interested in hearing about the experience of girls returning to the work force and types of jobs they found compatible with bringing up school-age children. How do women that I know beyond their present circle feel about the women's rights amendment.

At the moment I am involved in a Natural Resource Inventory for our town. Within our perimeters we have a large swamp, the Passaic River and acres of open space with drainage problems being snatched up by developers. Development of marginal land results in problems and in order to avoid these problems in the future we are collecting information on soils, geology, rainfall, slope, etc. In coordinating all the data, we should be able to anticipate the problems to minimize the impact. The result to date has been a hundred hours on the telephone, running from place to place to collect data and juggling the children from one babysitter to another.

Another thought on a "meaty" RECORDER. I would think it would also be interesting to hear comments from various age groups.

Anne Crone Nagy '63 — Too late for inclusion in her secretarial report, Fall, 1972.

(Anne — We hope recent issues of RECORDER have been more "relevant" and, therefore, more to your liking. We encourage you and all your alumnae sisters to submit articles and suggestions at any time. Eds.)

Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213

NEW ADDRESS

Seba South McCaw (Mrs. T. W.), 2919 Neil Avenue, Apt 321-B, Columbus, Oh. 43202

Margaret Lee reporting for Frances Boale Belding:

Our sincere sympathy goes to Seba South McCaw in the loss of her husband in September of last year; and we are saddened to hear of the passing of our dear Rebekah Crouse Costanza the same month.

Seba has moved to an apartment which she describes as conveniently located and with a pleasant outlook.

Following a trip abroad in May, Mildred Nicholls Kohman enjoyed a long holiday at her summer home.

Dorothy Errett finds time to read, exercises in many ways and spends a part of each day with her grand-niece and grand-nephews.

In spite of her cane and a running combat with weeds, Mary Stratton finished the season with a harvest from her home garden.

Frances Boale Belding spent a quiet summer in Pittsburgh.

Jeanne Mahey Smith is at home following an operation. She longs for news and hints that telephone calls are welcome.

Grace Woodrow and Melba Martin Ingersoll, together with Frances, Dorothy, Mary and Gertrude Patterson extend greetings to all.

Time no longer marches. It's jet-propelled. This is Gertrude's observation. The pro-tem Class Secretary is running to keep up with the slow marchers. One is reluctant to believe that many of our once-bursting-with-conversation classmates have lost their tongues to the cat. In the absence of replies to the Recorder's questionnaires, let us assume that "no news is good news."

NEW ADDRESS

Dorothy Bergman, 137 Primrose Drive, R.D. #1, Irwin, Pa. 15642.

Rachel Alexander Christie writes — "A week before we were to leave for Canada Bob fell and broke his hip. He is mending nicely but is still in the nursing home. We hope he will soon be home."

Kamala Cornelius Asirvatham writes: "I wish I could find time to write to each one of my class, but it is not possible so I send one letter to all my classmates through the Alumnae Recorder. My three girls are all married and settled. One girl is in London with a little son ten years old. My eldest daughter is in U. S. A. at Great Neck teaching in school. Her two daughters are in Great Neck Public School. My third daughter is married to an Air Force Officer. I own a nice large all furnished bungalow and live very comfortably with my husband's widowed sister, who keeps house for me. I read and write to keep busy. I am very comfortable and happy in my home."

Eulalia Fournier Babbitt says, "I am still at home in Warren — all alone now that my granddaughter Martha was married last October." Lala sends greetings to everyone.

Charlotte Hunker Hays has sold her home in North Carolina with mixed emotions and says her permanent address will be Cleveland. "If anyone of 1918 gets near — look me up."

Ruth Kauffman Morrison says, "We went to Pennsylvania last summer to our family reunion but had to return in ten days due to physical conditions of both Bill and myself. I think of my college days frequently — I enjoyed the association with the class."

Ruth Long has taken several interesting trips during the past year and has kept busy with volunteer work and family.

Congratulations to Winona Sterling Hopwood and her husband. She writes: "I am happy to report that Harold and I observed our 53rd wedding on August 12th and are thankful that we could be together for it and in pretty good health."

Florence Younkins Fowler says, "I spent a few weeks in Florida — then my daughter and I had a very nice trip to Spain just before Christmas." She send best wishes to all the "girls."

We are sorry to lose another classmate in the death of Elinor Goldsmit Hast. We extend our condolences to her family.

Your secretary had a trip to Traverse City, Michigan in July. I was there for the National Cherry Festival and had one week-end in Hart, Michigan where I used to live. Thanks to all of you who replied to my cards. It was good to hear from you.

DEATHS

Elizabeth Shipley Brainerd, March 11, 1973

Loretta Warrick Wayman, August 16, 1972

It is with a feeling of genuine personal loss that we report the passing of these classmates.

NEW ADDRESSES

Imogene Armstrong, 140 Shadow Mt. Drive, E.-26, El Paso, Texas 79912

Ethel Perry, Crestwood Nursing Home, 101 Whippany Road, Whippany, N.J. 07981

From Imogene Armstrong we learn that her brother-in-law had died and her sister needed her. "It is nice to be needed" says Imogene so she moved in with the sister. However, the temperature in El Paso varies 30°—40° from day to night and that is hard on her heart.

Helen Bennett Nelson says, "We keep busy with our civic, church and home activities. Once a year, we enjoy a short trip to Massachusetts and Virginia."

Willard Crane Peebles asks, "What is there to say except that I am a year older and, believe me, I feel it. We made our first trip back to Pittsburgh this summer. Imagine our chagrin when I had to ask directions in a place I'd lived for fifty years. Everything downtown had changed. When I learned people didn't meet anymore in Horne's balcony, we went on our way. We love our life here in Florida. Greetings to all."

Rita Criste says, "I had a stimulating trip this summer. Since they say that passenger ocean liners may be a luxury of the past, I decided to indulge myself. We were ten days crossing, stopping for a day at Madeira, Malta and Naples where I left the ship and spent a week each in Rome and Florence, and a few days in Vienna and Paris."

Elizabeth Davidson Davidson enjoyed a trip to Israel last winter. We extend real sympathy to Betty in the sudden death of her husband, George.

Gladys Fournier Todd writes. "I haven't any front page news. My physical check-up showed that my system was all on the go. But, oh, my aching back! I move around more comfortably on all fours. So, my main concern is sitting and that is when I write for my club, such as Aftermath

Our votes are cast, we've made our choice
And some are sad and some rejoice,
What matter if we're Democrats
For some of them are real cool cats,
Or if the GOP's are in,
We know that someone had to win.
At times it's hard to understand Why things don't turn out as they should Or, rather as we hoped they would

Greetings and love to 1920."

Margaret Hare Hurst-Brown says, "I am well, fat and lonely without my dear Kenneth but otherwise happy. I go to England twice a year and will spend this summer in Nova Scotia. I am grandmother to eleven in England and eleven in the United States. Too good soccer teams!" To Peg our sincere sympathy in the passing of Kenneth.

Helen Horix Fairbanks saw Ethel Perry in the Nursing Home and found her looking well. "I go to work daily at the Horix Manufacturing Plant but have quite short hours. My son, his wife and three children live nearby in Mt. Lebanon."

Minnie McGrew Coyle writes "We are living a life of quiet contentment. For over a year, due to my sister's illness from which she is now recovering we have found our chief employment in my "Talking Book." We enjoy visits from our nieces and nephews, and live vicariously through their wide interests, even to mountain climbing in the Himalayas."

Mary Luella Stevenson is growing older and hasn't learned to do it gracefully. Mary, as always, expresses her own opinion on the current issues of busing, taxes, crime and prices. Like others who live along rivers, she suffered from the floods of 1972-73.

Virginia Wilcox Gilbert is happy with her two daughters and their families who live nearby. They keep her young in spirit. "Our church, our many friends and golf for Percy fill our days to capacity. With love to all."

Gladys Wilson Green writes: "I am lucky to have nine grandchildren all bright and healthy. My home is my hobby. Built in the 18th century, it has been on the list of Pennsylvania Historical Sites. Ed and I work hard trying to keep our place looking as if we had three servants. It keeps us healthy."

Your secretary has just returned from a trip to the Pacific Northwest. Words cannot express the beauty, majesty and grandeur of the National Parks and so we close with the puzzled questions. From where did it all come? Whence are we all going?

NEW ADDRESS

Harriet Hill Kraus (Mrs. William A.), 145 Lemoyne Avenue, Apartment 9, Washington, Pa. 15301

Helen Allison Dunbar writes that she had done nothing exciting but is happy to be able to do the routine things. Plays bridge with Jane Taylor frequently and occasionally sees Betty Sprowls Spragg. She talked with Harriet Krause at a W. and J. College affair. Harriet's daughter is married to an English professor at the college.

Betty Dean Boots says that she has not been well since April but is now on the mend. She has no new activities which must seem strange to Betty.

Dorothy Burleigh Courtney sends word that their safari to Africa was just great. After a month in the hospital due to phlebitis she now feels good as new. They are having the usual busy summer with the fourteen grandchildren.

Marjorie Caskey Curran writes that she seldom sees or hears from any of her classmates and would enjoy doing so.

Ina Connelly Cross says that family affairs keep her busy, otherwise it has been a quiet year. She expects to get to Florida after Christmas for a visit.

Margaret Gray Harlor feels she has no excitement or statistics to report. When her husband is able they winter on Sanibel Island in Florida. Otherwise, they remain in Cleveland Heights. She sends her love to all her classmates.

Helen Gross Alderman is sorry she missed catching up on all the news at reunion. In her area there are so many universities yet no one seems to have heard of Chatham. Out of the two million visitors to Hot Springs yearly, she hopes some day somebody from Chatham '22 will visit Mark and her. Her box number is 763 not 422 E.

Anne Jay says the status quo has not changed. She has enjoyed a summer at home gardening and redecorating. Her last year's foliage trip from Nova Scotia to Tennessee was cancelled but she hopes to start out after October 1st.

Ruth Keck Schell has no news but says she is enjoying news to the fullest.

Florence Newmaker Knapp and Byron spent Christmas with their two families of children and grandchildren. Then they took the auto-train to Florida and spent the winter at Fort Myers Beach. This summer they drove to Stratford, Ontario to the Shakespeare Festival. They were elated that their daughter Patty's husband had just been appointed Secretary of the Air Force.

Susan Scott Tucker had a very successful one-man show at Arts and Crafts Center — Gallery Upstairs of Associated Artists of Pittsburgh held May 5 through May 28. I would like to have seen more than just her picture and one of the paintings shown in the Pittsburgh Press. Last winter they enjoyed a trip to the Caribbean and South America.

Jane Taylor says she has spent the summer doing very little and playing cards with friends. She hopes to visit her niece in California in September.

Betty Wilson Lorenz and husband still enjoy Florida living. In March they took a trip to North Carolina and stopped at Callaway Gardens in Georgia at the height of the rhododendron season. In June, they had a trip to St. Thomas, Puerto Rico and Montego Bay. Her husband became ill and was hospitalized upon reaching home but was improving when Betty wrote.

Ella May Wilson Clark works on the Conservation Committee of the League of Women Voters, helps in a Child Development Center and Junior Audubon. For fun she plays bridge and swims almost every day.

We extend our deep sympathy to the family of Margaret Brown Spurr.

Your secretary is sorry that more of our class did not send news. After a vacation with my sister and her husband it was hard to leave Cape Cod and get back into routine. I am still looking after my ninety-three year old aunt. As often as possible I go back to New Castle to be with friends and to look after business affairs. Sometimes I wonder where I really do live.

NEW ADDRESSES

Gertrude Mixer Henry (Mrs. Norton D.), 3 Terrace Lane, Imperial Terrace, Tavares, Florida 32778

Elsie Goldberg Rosenshine (Mrs. Reuben), 460 Washington Road, Apt. 115, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15228

Helen reporting:

Mark it down, "girls" — next June is our 50th Anniversary. More to come on this.

Florida brings new of four: Leaneore Allen still enjoying her Penney Farms, was in Pittsburgh in early summer visiting her sister in Monroeville so got the latest. Barbara Coit Templeton despite her sister retiring and living near is held close to home by illness of her husband, yet hopes to make the 50th. Gertrude Mixer Henry, newly moved from Ohio, likes where they are and is still working with the Red Cross, her prime interest thru the years, and Virginia Lilley Christ is still living six months in Florida and six at Hawley, Pa. and still finding it the perfect combination.

The preacher-husband of Dorothy Cooke Ortnier who always wrote for her, finally told me of her death in Zelenople on the last day of the year and being buried in Corry, where they lived a long time. "The end was very peaceful and a blessing" he wants us to know.

Letters from out of towners find Martha Glandon Luthringer taking granddaughters on trips instead of themselves. Will be back in October for Trustees' Meeting. Olive Keck Comfort loves it still in South Yarmouth. Has son in California and daughter living near. Has some great memories for the 50th. Marion Stewart Smith met a Chathamite from 1913 at Maple Springs near Chautauqua this summer, still likes golf, bridge, church activities and will definitely be at the 50th. Louise Hamilton Haase had a visit from Martha Luthringer, a sad loss of a son, but still has daughter and family living in New Jersey and visits there, and went with Bob to her husband's 50th at Annapolis and these have compensated. Alberta Sexauer Ressler now with 15 grandchildren still loves Bristol Village in Ohio. She's coming to the 50th, her sister to the 45th. Atta girl! Esther Miller Kagan lives creatively now and has a new life since widowhood, in Philadelphia in music, while her daughter wins recognition with her art, and whose son is now in publishing, a new magazine, Photo World. Esther ("Sis" to us) is a freelance editor, but one son is in eye medicine and another a film director working on big time assignments. She and her daughter visited Pittsburgh briefly last spring and had a tour of Chatham which she says looks great.

Locally, those stalwarts Stella Wagenfehr Shane and Grace Davis Mechling are both interested in their grandchildren and active in community affairs still. They also are going to help me on my 3-way committee for the 50th.

Tracked down by phone, Elizabeth Frederick Donaldson has had severe leg trouble since retiring from the Munhall schools and is grounded temporarily. Visited Elsie Goldberg Rosenshine living now in middle of Mt. Lebanon and nice to hear that both daughters are married and living in Atlanta. Billie Hibbs Williams is still limited in activity but loves having another granddaughter. Helen Leggett Corbett, getting used to apartment living in the Arlington, has a daughter who does brass rubbings of distinction. Helen still pitches for the Calvary church and is an avid reader. Carolyn Lohr Steele spends all the time she can with grandsons who live at Valley Forge but will not budge from her convenient Mt. Lebanon location. Anna Mary Orr, retired in 1970 from Carnegie Mellon where she was a secretary, starting in registrar's office and ending with the Vice President, for forty years. Dr. Hedwig Pregler, is still supervising teaching at Duquesne University, loves it, and spends summers at cottage in Vermilion, Ohio. And Marian Taylor Clark has been living in three different retired spots since her husband retired about six years ago. Found from Elizabeth Frederick that she and Marian started teaching together in the Monongahela Schools and had a ball then.

Your secretary has obviously recovered from the heart attack she suffered after sending out the letters last year, and appreciated being rescued in the writing up by Stella Shane. Thanks for all the good wishes that came thru the mail and otherwise. See you at the 50th.

NEW ADDRESSES

Ruth Campbell Millar (Mrs. Hugh S.), 530 N. Main Street, Apt. 407, Butler, Pa. 16001

Julia Kadlecik Little (Mrs. Wallace H.), 6258 Del Loma, San Gabriel, Cal. 91776

Helen Simons Polhemus (Mrs. Oscar M.), Route 2, Box 218, Meredith, N.H. 03253

Mabel Breitwiser Hann (Mrs. R. D.), 4002 Hermitage Hills, Apt. 8, Sharon, Pa. 16146

Estelle Silverman Small (Mrs. Horace), 4215 Harding Road, Apt. 710, Nashville, Tenn. 37205

Gertrude reporting:

Although our 50th reunion is approaching at an alarming rate, the replies to our annual plea for word from our classmates proves that there is plenty of life in the old girls yet. We travel, act in and coach plays, teach, occasionally break a bone, we are engrossed in a variety of hobbies and volunteer activities.

Mary Ailes Sechler spent several months this year recovering from a broken ankle which she acquired last October on a cruise to Nassau. However, she was able to visit her youngest daughter who lives in Connecticut, and while there to talk to Ruth Justice Rowley, who was, as usual, immersed in Little Theatre. When home, Mary is a volunteer in the gift shop at Mercy Hospital and she enjoys the activities of the College Club.

Ruth Bodner Decker spent June visiting in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Sometimes they go twice a year to their son's in Colorado, where the three small granddaughters, ages 8, 4 and 1 are a great attraction. Fishing is one of their hobbies and they find retirement "very pleasant."

We send our deepest sympathy to Helen Bromley in the loss of her 92 year old mother who had been an invalid for the last seven years. Helen hopes that she will be able to resume her travels soon and take her place in community activities, including her church and A.A.U.W.

Hazelle Chessman Lancaster has become very interested in politics and volunteer work, in addition to her many hobbies; but she still has a longing to "see the '26ers again." I hope that means she has put us on her 1976 agenda!

Church, bridge, reading and travel fill Abigail Cresswell's days. Since last October she has visited Hawaii, London, Paris, Florida and Michigan.

In answer to the question "What are you doing?" Eleanor Fulton McCracken says: "Absolutely nothing. Retirement is wonderful. I never thought I would so thoroughly enjoy loafing."

Louise Harcom Einstein still teaches English at Youngstown State University. She spent six weeks in Europe this summer including a James Joyce seminar in Dublin, then Mexico. She asked about Mary Jane Paul and I hasten to remind you all that hers was the first acceptance to our next reunion.

Marion Johnson Kipp joyously announces the arrival of a new granddaughter, born to Kathy and Dan McKelvey after 13 years of marriage. She makes the 6th grandchild.

Ruth Justice Rowley and Millard celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary last June. Ruth keeps very busy with her great love, little theatre, where she acts, directs and serves on the board as Vice President of Public Relations. However, she took time out for a trip to Hawaii last spring. Speaking of parents, Ruth reports that Millard's 97 year old mother still keeps house — "a ten room one, at that!"

Perhaps our greatest traveler of all is Julia Kadlecik Little. Last fall they spent two months in South America and now they have just returned from Scandinavia. Scotland where they visited their daughter. Julia says, "This makes all of the world for us, but California is still God's country." She wants to stay home now to enjoy their small new house and their three grandchildren. She plans to come for our 50th.

We send our sympathy to Elizabeth Koehn Butler in the passing of Lib's 94 year old mother who had made me at home with them for the last few years. Lib and Marvin plan to spend the winter in North Carolina — hopefully away from snow.

Martina Oetting and her sister are enjoying their new home in Florida. That makes five of our classmates living there.

The big news from Audrey Reebel Early is that they and Kay Reebel, class of '29, are busy planning a party for David Reebel's 100th birthday in October, which they expect to celebrate in Florida.

Ruth Rimer Hooton and Don were in Pittsburgh this summer for a family reunion — children and all eight grandchildren together for the first time. She says she and Don spend their days doing all the things that interest them and that they have time for fishing, some church work, bridge.

Catherine Sayers reports that she is enjoying life to the fullest as well as good health. She says she is "not too decrepit to drive yet" and when she wrote she was in Berea, Kentucky en route to North Carolina. In October she will go to New Hampshire and Maine.

The years invariably bring tragedy to some of our friends and our deepest love goes out to Dorothy Schmidt Clark in the death of her daughter, Barbara Clark O'Shaughnessy, last spring, leaving her husband and three children.

Helen Simons Polhemus and her husband are going to live on a farm that their two sons bought, and which will eventually be used as a retreat center. The older son is teaching in the Academy of Health Sciences at Brook Army Hospital, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and will retire from the Army Chaplaincy in four years. Their younger son, a Methodist minister, is starting work on his Doctor of Ministry degree at Andover-Newton Seminary.

Irene Stevens Masters reports that she spends much of her time being a "homebody" as Paul has not been very well recently. She is able to attend plays at the Playhouse and Apple Hill and do some church work, and she is happy and contented now that her years of teaching are ended.

From Carolyn Timothy Mountford comes news of our "class baby," Carolyn Timothy Mountford De France, class of Chatham 1949. She received her master's in Science of Education as a Master Teacher from Youngstown State University in August where she will be teaching this fall.

Eileen Borland spent five weeks at Chatham, Cape Cod where she says there is lots of good bird watching.

Mabel Breitwiser Hann's only granddaughter, Lynn Baxter, is a sophomore at Chatham this year, and this, she says, gives her a good excuse for frequent trips to the campus. How she finds time is a mystery, with her busy schedule of volunteer activities.

Bertha Gates Goodrich has been abroad twice since she wrote us last: first, to Europe, more recently to Egypt and the Holy Land. Her other activities include speaking engagements, Garden Club and many church activities. Incidentally, she, too, is anticipating our 50th with pleasure.

As for your secretary, the high light of the year was a trip to Israel via London, Rome, Athens and Amsterdam. Most of all I remember the view of the Dome of the Rock that we had from our balcony in Jerusalem, and all the sights and sounds of the ancient city.

Catherine Jeha Cotts (Mrs. James W.), 5923 Howe Street, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15232

Kay Caldwell Mayer spent several weeks in Pittsburgh his fall with her family. (Sorry you could not make it in June.) She finds Charleston's weather rather hot and is fast becoming a Southerner in that she does only what has to be done. She moved into a new apartment located on the route to the famous gardens and hopes that any of you who come south will stop to see her.

Our deepest sympathy to Fran Frost Brumbaugh whose husband, Jim, died June 24th.

Helen Gordon's advertising agency is "absorbing and demanding, but I still have time for things that interest me." A year ago she became a member of the Northeast Ohio Sierra Club and recently did some writing to promote the establishment of the Cuyahoga River Valley area as a national park.

Madeline Teets Bathrick sold her duplex in June and moved into a double mobile home in the country, surrounded by mountains, halfway between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara. "Good clean air, nearer the ocean, peaceful quietness, no big city traffic and congestion will more than compensate for not having six super markets within a few blocks." She keeps in touch with Henri Spelsburg Coston and Betty Corey Wallis. She sent her very best wishes for health and happiness to all.

Ruth Mary Wilkinson and her sister, Honor, took the picture of those at the reunion. They took a trip to the Finger Lakes this fall.

I do hope you all received the letter I sent in July about our reunion. There were a few errors in the class list: Helen Gordon, 1808, zip code for Mardy Jones Ruthart is 17551, Katherine Craig Morgan (Mrs. Lewis), Mina Teichart McKain, and Madeline Teets Bathrick (Mrs. J. J.). If there are any more please let me know. Thank you for the checks that have been sent for our 1978 fund. We will be glad to receive them at any time. I look forward to your letters so keep them coming. Jimmy and I attended his 50th reunion at Auburn in October.

Meredith Murray Heckman (Mrs. Joseph), 1721 Forest Green Drive, Coraopolis, Pa. 15108

Ann Saxman Underwood (Mrs. James M.), Saxman Drive Ext., Latrobe, Pa. 15650

Louise Vallowe Spinelli (Mrs. Phillip P.), 3010 Clermont Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15227

Geri Anderson Daum tells us that all is well now, but that Bob was hospitalized three times during the past year. The Daums own a small travel-trailer and they have managed enough time for some sightseeing although Geri is still the librarian at Laurence University.

Catherine Backofen enjoyed a second trip with A.A.R.P., this time to Portugal and Spain. Catherine serves as a volunteer at "The Little Sisters of the Poor."

Madeline Barnhart Mandy spent last winter in Florida.

Annamae Betty Dreibelis has retired, but is kept very busy. They enjoy their cabin in the woods near Butler, Pa.

Miriam Bulger continues to spend a month each winter in the Virgin Islands. She serves on the Altar Guild at Trinity Cathedral.

Pauline Bickhart Garratt reports that her son Frank was married in June and that her daughter Sue has moved from Tacoma to Washington, D.C.

Viola Chadwick Rosso now has a second granddaughter. Her son John teaches Latin and Greek at West Chester College and Vi's third son was graduated from Temple University in May. Vi had a three week stay in the hospital last summer and may decide to retire if teaching proves too tiring.

Dorothy Collins Pierce and her husband Bill, who retired last year, spent two months in the Florida Keys. Dotti is a very active member of the board for the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. Her son Bill is now with Time magazine.

Eleanor Diskin Houghton interrupted the routine of Maine in summer and Florida in winter for a fly-drive-cruise trip to Portugal, Spain, Morocco and Madeira. She is still working as a volunteer at "Happiness House" in the audiology department, testing hearing and speech of pre-school children in Sarasota and Manatee Counties. Bernie is raising orchids as well as directing the church choir.

Dorothy Fisher Maury plans to move to a new home. Her daughter Virginia has received her master's degree and her son now has two little boys.

Imogene Flanagan Truman and Tucker have given up their summer camp, but I'my was busy helping her daughter Brigid move from the East to California. The Trumans then explored the western coastline and sailed with friends from British Columbia through the inland water-way.

Mary Frye Llewellyn could find no silver lining in the last year. She would enjoy hearing from her classmates.

Marian Haines Schap found the first year of retirement unbelievably busy. Ed taught retrainees for Amoco and she started a "Piano Dusters" class for housewives. Their son Keith is now teaching at Purdue University.

Winnie Hartman Whiteman was overjoyed with Sonny's retirement as Senior Vice-President at the bank, but was saddened by the death of his mother.

Helen Ensminger Hughes reports that Jim retired in January. She keeps in touch with Chatham through the alumnae group. Her youngest son will be graduated from Monmouth College in '74.

Adelaide Hyndman McLaughlin spent the past summer on the west coast. She continues to teach French and enjoys her work very much.

Lucille Jackson Strauss and Jerome spent five weeks abroad as a finale to her retirement as of July 10. Helsinki was the new spot on this trip and Lucille was surprised to find it so very hot. She is gratified to be able to do things in a leisurely way after so many years of tight schedules.

Mary King Guckert attends all the theatrical productions and all the concerts that she possibly can. She is active in the Opera Workshop.

Amelia Lockard Moul and Loyd returned East so that he could attend a meeting at Princeton, N.J., then visited in Florida. Amelia has taken up golf, but has not given up dancing.

Peg Loeffler Loftus devotes all her time to the Opera Workshop.

Nancy McIlwain Sweet helps Coburn with tours of the museum and the beautiful Wayside Gardens. One of her daughters lives in New York, the other in Chicago.

Marcy Murray has recovered and is going top speed again after having had thyroid surgery last spring. She is active in the Alumnae Association and plans to be with us in '75.

Eleanor Nevins Rubenstein enjoyed the theater trip she took with the College Club. She also spent some time in Washington, D.C. where she renewed her acquaintance with her three grandchildren.

Peg Post Giffen keeps so busy in retirement that she wonders how she found time to work. She spent the summer entertaining her family at her cabin on Lake Tahoe. She leaves this fall to spend a month touring England, Scotland and France.

Sally Reamer Matlack still divides her time between Fort Lauderdale, Florida and Media, Pa. She spent three weeks last spring visiting England, Scotland and Ireland.

Dorothea Ryman Neilson reported about so many of you, but said nothing about herself except that she was still with Westinghouse.

Mary E. Woodworth Nelan returned from Alaska to spend Thanksgiving with friends in Ocean City, N.J. and Christmas in Williamsburg, Va. In June they motored 6000 miles through the West and are now packing for a European trip.

Lois Watt Cooper visited in Greece last summer. She has just been made President for National Lawyers' Wives. She divides her time between Pittsburgh and her home in Florida.

Florence Brown Stage and Edward received the Cody award from the Cleveland Figure Skating Club. The Stages give travel talks after their trips. They visited Yucatan last spring and are working on "Land of the Maya" to add to "Egypt, Land of the Pharaohs," "The Myth and Magic that is Greece," "Portrait of Russia," and some thirty others.

Alice Hewitt Murphy plans to retire in June '74 after 35 years service as an educator advancing from elementary teacher to district superintendent. She was the author of "Agricultural America" which was used as a text for a social studies unit for the 8th grades of San Bernardino county. Her husband Clell retired from the San Bernardino City Water Department. They have 13 grandchildren.

Mary Frances Tarr Peat (Mrs. R. M.), Carriage Hill Apts., #77, 545 Goucher Street, Johnstown, Pa. 15905

Lil reporting:

Alice Bair Albright has just returned from Russia and the Chinese frontier. She also visited Helsinki, Stockholm and Copenhagen. On her way home she stopped in Switzerland to visit with Ruth Gardill, who is living there.

Louise Blank Lecky writes that they have four grandsons. Her husband is retired from the St. Regis Paper Company and they have just moved to Florida.

Caroline Brady Wilson is busy gardening and studying Spanish at a local college.

Betsy Dearborn Souren has a granddaughter that was born in May of last year. Betsy's husband is Director of Transportation for the Kennecott Copper Corporation. We extend our sympathy for the loss of her father who died last December. He had actively practiced patent law until he was eighty.

Margaret Eisaman Muranyi reports that she and her husband, a retired minister, were the superintendents in charge of the United Presbyterian Headquarters in Chautauqua, New York for the 1973 season.

Elizabeth Ewing Cogbill and her husband Mac are the proud grandparents of red-headed Lynn born in July 1973. They flew out to Chicago just to give her a bottle and take her for a walk. Lib and Mac spent the summer at their cottage at Van Buren Point, playing golf and swimming.

Ruth Grafman Weiner says hello to everyone.

Charlotte Graham Dight writes that their daughter and her two children visit them often, especially when her daughter's husband is traveling world-wide, which he does so often. Charlotte and her husband live in Chautauqua in the summer and Florida in the winter. She says that they have many visitors, besides family, and that we all are welcome.

Marie Hahn Lewis is busy working at the family plant with her brother Edward. She says business is a nightmare to be in now, considering federal inspection and other problems.

Jean Houghtelin Phillips and her husband, who is a dentist, are living in Mt. Lebanon. I saw her about a year ago and she looks great.

Jane Norman Widdowson is working as a secretary to the clergy at Calvary Episcopal Church in East Liberty. Her children are married and she has one grandchild.

You were all very generous in your contributions to our almost depleted treasury. Many thanks to all of you who responded. It was so nice to hear from you.

Peggy reporting:

I wish to thank all of you who responded so graciously and generously to the questionnaire. As you know, it is our custom to place a memorial book in the library for each departed classmate. Your response makes it possible to continue this custom.

We would like to extend our sympathy to the family of Katherine Lee Sisco (Mrs. Edward R.), who died May 11, 1973 and to Rita Lefton Pincus whose husband Irving passed away last September.

Isabella Lindsay Thornton has retired from the export division of Peavey Company Flour Mills and is now involved in U.N.A. activities, UNICEF, a gift shop and secretary of her bowling league. We are sorry that unknown to us she has been widowed since 1964.

Ruth Miller Page spent three and a half months in Clearwater last year and hopes to be there the entire 1974 winter.

Sally Miller Brash just returned from a European trip. All's well! Still at Harcum Jr. College. Her son Edward is to be district managing editor of a new magazine, called "Photo World" coming out in October.

Bertha Phillips Brown was recently widowed. Our sympathy to Bertha. She is keeping busy with her family, especially nine grandchildren.

Dorothy Russell is still at Columbia Hospital, busily engaged in plans for the new hospital at Monroeville and the merger with Pittsburgh. Her mother is still with her and well. Dorothy is also involved in the "Meals on Wheels" program in Wilkensburg and a Senior Citizens Centre at her church.

Sara Stevenson is still teaching Latin and English in Indiana Area Senior High.

Viola Swenson Leeper and her husband Don are enjoying their new home, situated on a golf course and within five hundred yards from the beach. Vi says she would welcome a call from anyone who gets down her way.

Mary Tarr Peat reports that after thirty-one years in the same house, they are now apartment dwellers. We are sorry that your husband is not well.

Jane Mitchell Carpenter (Mrs. T. Bruce), 53 Highland Terrace, Lynch, Ky. 40855
Margaret L. White, 400 Swissvale Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15221

Peggy reporting:

Fran Alter Mitchell says she has done her stint of volunteer work, "organized, unorganized and some disorganized," and now is mainly interested in the Women's Board of the Youngstown Hospital. She hopes to see us at our 40th reunion next year. (So far, the response to our reminder of this reunion has been gratifying.)

Harriet Cole Lewis and her lawyer husband, Bill, spent the month of July in Maine, restoring and repairing her great-grandparents' house. Although she says it will never be finished, at least it should last for another 50 years! The Lewises moved to Coral Gables about a year ago and enjoy being near their son, Harriet, too, hopes to be at our 40th reunion.

Peggy Donaldson says she had a note from Ruth Miller Allen who had not been well, but was improving. All of us send Ruth our regards and best wishes for a speedy recovery. Peggy, too, hopes to be at our next reunion.

Hazel Ellwood McClure writes that Margaret Stockdale Jenkins and husband paid them a visit in London last fall, and Mary Jane Young and a friend went to see them in April. She says she and her husband love to see all who come by and sometimes think London is the crossroads of the world, especially since they live in the Marble Arch area which is a central location. Their daughter Kathy is working at the University of Colorado Medical Center.

Eleanor Ewing Wilson (Nookie) sent her new address, telling us that her new home is on the St. Lucie River, and they are loving her husband's early retirement.

Marjorie Gibson Shoemaker thinks Topeka a delightful place to be — completely without air pollution. She and Ed both do volunteer work at the Hospital and Presbyterian Manor. Edwin is supposed to be a retired minister, but he has preached in many churches out there and is Interim Pastor at present in the Central UP Church in Topeka.

Synнове Haugom had an "absolutely perfect" vacation in Norway visiting friends and her home town, besides doing a bit of book research and visiting museums nearly every day. She is now preparing a William Thon exhibit for her gallery at Bates College.

Rose Hollingsworth Stambaugh visited Ann Irwin Hoffman this summer and reports that Ann has made some exquisite copper-enameled items and 3-D pictures. Rose has retired from teaching and has two grandchildren at present.

This has been a rewarding five years although I am not much of a writer personally. But I enjoyed hearing from all of you and hope I see everyone of our classmates at our 40th reunion in June of 1974. My husband and I took a long-dreamed of Canadian vacation by rail to see Banff, Lake Louise and Jasper. After we arrived home, our son's wife presented us with a grandson (our fourth grandchild), and we are enjoying a good life.

Special thanks to Mary Jane Young for all the work she has done in getting the Recorder news to Chatham and to wish her a grand holiday and a continued successful retirement.

Mary Jane reporting:

Jean Ludebuehl Fisher writes that her husband retired the first of July, and they are both enjoying the lack of pressure and responsibility. They have a home in the woods near Meadville and had considered moving to a better climate; but their son, Charles and his family live nearby. Their other son, John, who was in the Air Force, is now working in Columbus, Ohio, where his wife is teaching school. Jean looks forward to seeing all at the reunion.

Mary Louise Martin remains at the same job, but with a new boss. She spent her vacation in North Carolina with her brother and his family. "Can't believe our 40th is coming up!"

Alice McCarthy Bowman went to Florida in December to see the night moon shot at the Cape, and last summer saw some of the Bahama Islands Independent Celebration with Prince Charles in sight occasionally. Her eldest son, Peter, was married in August. "40th reunion! Where do the years go?"

Dorothy Schenck Van der Voort is delighted with her new home with all of the newest conveniences which make housekeeping a joy. All of the children are very busy with their own lives and seem to be doing well in their respective fields. Betsy, the youngest, was married in June and has moved to Iowa Falls. The big thrust for Dorothy and Bob this year is his campaign for the Pennsylvania Superior Court. Dorothy hopes to be with us for our 40th.

The sympathy of the class is extended to Marion Starkey Hamlet in the death of her father at the age of 90%, and the illness of her mother. Daughter Debbie has had an exciting year as Assistant Art Director for an eastern advertising firm and was married in September. Son Jeff returns to Tufts University, and daughter Sue to Mount Holyoke as a junior and sophomore, respectively. Frank and Marion keep endlessly occupied with property upkeep and caring for the aged. She looks forward to our 40th Reunion.

Harriet Stephenson Stearns has driven approximately 5,000 miles in what is turning out to be an annual tour of her widespread family who live in Illinois, Georgia, Kentucky, New York, and Texas. Her son and eldest daughter have provided her with four "super" grandchildren. Harriet loves living in a carefree apartment. She is still much involved in the work of her church and with community problems. It keeps her stimulated even if she now takes back seat and tries to help the younger women do the more active tasks.

Harriet Tyler Martin spent the summer preparing for Fairfield University's comprehensive exam and writing her thesis, so she expects to receive her Master of Science Education degree soon. Husband Paul retired as of May 1 and Harriet enjoys having him home. They had a short but delightful visit with Jim and Helen Empfield early in June while the latter couple were on their eastward trek.

During the Empfield's stopover in Pittsburgh, they visited with Dot Schenck Van der Voort and her husband had lunch with Marjorie Larimer, and saw several friends, and while in Maine they saw Synнове Haugom. Helen's job at the library is still very satisfactory. Her daughter is within walking distance, and they enjoy the grandchildren very much. Helen is looking forward to June 1974.

The past year has been a busy year, but all work for Oliver Walker Beatty and her husband. In September, however, they are going on a vacation to the Scandinavian countries, Russia, and Poland. Later in the year, they go to New Zealand where Bob is the architect for the new Embassy being built there. Their daughter and son each with two children, keep grandmother very busy. "Grandparents have quite a role to play, and any idea of their retiring, restful years is just not so. We seem to have more to do."

Margaret White has two pieces of news this year. First, she moved to an apartment after living 50 years in the same house. Second, she spent the month of August in the British Isles, visiting with friends in both Scotland and Wales. She looks forward to seeing her classmates next June.

Ellen Yeager Husak and husband are very happy with their new granddaughter and find baby-sitting is delightful for them. They spent their vacation in the Smokies and plan to visit San Francisco in the fall.

Luise Link Ely had a wonderful summer, spending the month in North Carolina, then to daughter Lynn's new home in New Jersey, and finally home. She was delighted to find a note from Nook Ewing that she and Bud have just built in nearby Stuart.

Avanelle Schlosser Grafton still works as Counselor at Kittanning Senior High. She had a marvelous six weeks this summer traveling through the Southwest, Mexico, Washington, and Oregon.

Since my retirement from Federal service in December I have been doing part-time work through secretarial agencies. In the spring, my roommate and I spent a week in Germany and one in London where we had the pleasure of visiting with Hazel Ellwood McClure and her husband in their delightful apartment. I want to take this opportunity to thank all of you who have provided me with news reports for the past five years. I echo Peggy's hope of seeing everyone of you at our 40th Reunion in June 1974. I perchance you cannot attend, won't you please send newsletter or pictures to one of us?

NEW ADDRESSES

Miriam Brunt Smith (Mrs. Edward C.), 1160 Bower Hill Road, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15243
Olga Catizone Bonaddio (Mrs. Ernest), 2461 Rose Garden Road, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15220
Betty McLaughlin Bryant (Mrs. F. M.), 684 Solana Circle West, Solana Beach, Cal. 92075

Sally reporting:

Harriet Bannatyne Moelmann writes that her "life seems to be living out of a suitcase, but it's fine," as she endeavors to keep three homes going. Last fall they moved into the new condominium in Boca Raton; still enjoy their home at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin; but home base is still Oak Park, Illinois. Their youngest, Larry, was graduated with honors from Michigan Law School and is now preparing for his bar exam. Jack, a Captain in the Air Force, was invited to give an organ concert at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. Daughter Lynde and family moved to Florida, so the grandchildren are within easy visiting from Boca Raton.

Helen Brown Buchanan reports that they are still holding down the pharmacy, but are taking more time off. Jim and Helen, using son Jim's truck camper, while he is in Germany, plan a trip to Colorado to see Bill and to New Mexico to see Nancy. Later they plan to spend the Christmas holidays with Jim in Germany.

Mary Virginia Brown Bowden and husband Bill enjoyed a month in Greece, Turkey, and England. She is still working for New York Life and Bill, for AT&T. Daughter Kathie is working at Harvard and their son, at Stanford.

Our sympathy to Miriam Brunt Smith, who reported that death of her father, an aunt and an uncle within the past year. In addition to her new job, Administrative Coordinator of an Adolescent Treatment Unit for Southwestern Pennsylvania at Woodville State Hospital, Miriam has her mother, who is very frail and unable to live alone, and a companion under her care at home.

Betty McLaughlin Bryant reports that although they have moved up the coast a short distance, she continues as librarian at the Bishop's Schools in La Jolla. Bus has become Western Representative for Culver Military Academy and Culver Academy for Girls, and he is looking forward to the challenge. They still thoroughly enjoy California.

Mary Jane Carmichael Garvin and daughter Jane accompanied Garvin to Seattle this summer for the Million Dollar Round Table insurance convention. They spent seven weeks touring the west. Upon their return they spent ten days in Rosslyn Farms with Rose Marie Weller Black '39 and her husband.

Olga Catizone Bonaddio spent a restful summer after moving to Greentree in March, while her husband was in the hospital; teaching full-time at Allegheny Campus of the Allegheny Community College; and arranging her daughter's wedding in April. All missions were accomplished, although Olga felt that she was "going on radar at times."

Mary-Stuart Clements Harriman reports a very busy year. She and Ben had a very eventful trip behind the Iron Curtain, when Ben was attending a Macro-Molecule Congress in Prague. Mary-Stuart's luggage was stolen and she didn't buy any clothes until they reached Berlin. Their hotel was full of Red Army officers and Japanese. When she tried to call her mother, she was informed, "We do not book calls to capitalistic countries." A traveling companion on the Moscow-Paris Express was a Polish woman who was smuggling an 18 year old boy into Western Europe. In Belgium they overheard some dope peddlers discussing their plans and by reporting what they heard to Interpol were instrumental in their arrest. They did hear some wonderful music in Amsterdam and Vienna. After this trip Mary-Stuart urges everyone to support NATO.

Nancy L. Davis enjoyed a three-week Carnegie-Mellon tour this spring which included an 800-mile bus trip through Austria and Germany. After her return, Nancy helped with the National Open Golf Match at Oakmont.

From Ocean City Jody Dodds Shrader sent a note that everything was as usual. John is in the Business Administration Grad School at Duquesne, and Nancy is employed in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit at St. Francis Hospital in Pittsburgh.

Frances Ferguson O'Callaghan reports that work is still progressing on their house in the Blue Ridge Mountains, where they look forward to cool and pleasant living when the Florida scene becomes hectic although Fort Myers Beach will still be home headquarters.

Ruth Frost is keeping busy with school and brief vacations with friends during the summer.

Jane Griffith Potter will accompany Charlie to the American Mining Congress again this year in Denver and they plan to spend two weeks seeing the beauty spots of Colorado.

Nancy Henderson O'Dell writes that she and Bill enjoyed a spring vacation in Florida, a reunion with Charlie and Jane Griffith Potter at the U. S. Open; and a week at Atlanta with the Shrine, as guests of Nancy's brother Ben, Potentate of Syria Temple.

Marian Johnson Woodfield reports that all four of her children are now married and she has four grandchildren. This summer Marian enjoyed a North Cape cruise.

Charlotte Ley Glover and Harry enjoyed a vacation with their daughter and family who just moved to Birmingham, Alabama. Their son Allen is a sophomore at the University of Virginia Law School this year.

Helen Lindsay Lee and husband Ed are still writing books and painting. Helen is now interested in color etching. She had a one-man show this past year. Ed has published his second book. This one is on planning personal finances, which Helen feels would be great for widows, though it was written for college students.

Agnes Ralston belatedly reported to Katrina that she spent 2 weeks in Palm Beach, her first winter vacation. Although fully recovered Agnes hasn't used her skis this year, the first since 1946.

I do wish to thank all of you for responding so quickly. Katrina and I managed to get our job done a little ahead of time this year. The Bowdens are still busy. I am still working as a caseworker for the Welfare; Bob is now Chairman of the Religion and Philosophy Dept. at the College. Bob II continues his work as a technical editor for Boeing Aircraft in Philadelphia; and Bill will graduate from Waynesburg this year.

Katrina reporting:

First, let me thank all of you who replied so promptly. I do hope that next year — my last on this five-year secretarial job — there will be news from everyone!

From Virginia Wertz Potter we learn that she has three grandchildren who live close enough so they can enjoy their company. Ginny gardens all summer and is working with ceramics the rest of the year, even selling her things at the Women's Exchange, and working with the Girl Scouts and Women's Club. Ginny's mother is in the Methodist Home in Mt. Lebanon and will be 93. Since Ginny's husband retired in June, they are wondering what to do.

Helen Martin Woods reports that they are still in Weirton, West Virginia in their third house, which, with passing time, each succeeding one gets smaller. They are looking forward to retirement in Florida and visiting their three grandsons scattered over the U.S.

Dot Wirth Carpenter has been learning to put hammer to a nail, redesigning the houses they moved. They hope soon to wind up the project and retire to the Chesapeake for sailing. If anyone knows of a house for sale on the bay which needs to be rebuilt, Dot requests that we not tell them about it!

Last year Jean Swauger's card came too late, but I've saved it for this year. She is working for the Institute for Behavioral Research in Silver Spring, Maryland as editor for their Educational Facility Press and teaching a small class in technical writing in their Experimental College. It keeps Jean busy, even though it is a radical change from defense-oriented contract research. She hopes to make a reunion, but the timing near the end of a fiscal year is conflicting.

Jane Unger Raaflaub checks in to say "Hello" from Detroit.

Kay Ward Parshall has completed her 40th summer in Hyannis Port! Son Ward has returned to Yale Divinity School for his last year. Daughter Nancy lives in Shrewsbury, N.J. with her two daughters. Larry and Kay live five months in Pittsburgh, five months in the Cape and two months in Delray, Florida.

Ruth Simpson Woolford, as of now, has four grand children. Son Sam was graduated magna cum laude from Brown in June, but is now at Purdue on a teaching fellowship in math, starting toward a doctorate. "Big Sam" and Ruth are the same as usual — both still working!

Mary Adah Trussell Gray was to be off for two weeks in Idaho by train! Son Chris is in his last year at W & J, working for an M.A. in English Lit, while daughter Anne is pre-med at Brandeis.

Elizabeth Saffer sent the most fascinating report last year about a trip she took to Turkey exploring the land of the Hittites. (It took me back to Dr. Evans and World Civilization which I must confess I hadn't thought much about lately.) Anyway, Liz is still in the same job at the Medical School but, at time of writing, was to be off this autumn for Ethiopia! She is certain the trip will be even more uncomfortable and that she'll bring back a more virulent intestinal infection, but Abyssinia calls — especially before tourists overrun it. Liz says to say "Hello" to everyone.

Sana Moumoureff still works in a bank in Reading and now is looking forward to a vacation in October in Puerto Rico.

Ruth Rosen Hartz has been spending a lot of time on campus lately, reading to a blind Chatham student and playing tennis. In addition, she has been doing volunteer work for almost two years with "Reading is FUNDamental," a national program locally co-sponsored by Chatham and the Urban League. Ruth is still employed as a translator by Koppers.

Doris Pierce is enjoying Ft. Lauderdale as much as ever and nearly every summer travels to Minnesota to visit relatives.

As for this reporter, life isn't too bad in a tiny condominium overlooking Long Island Sound. In a nearby house I have come across Martha Enright Shaff '49 who is in the Language Department of Guilford High School! (Chatham alumnae are real rarities in this neck of the woods!) and it has been very pleasant to see Mary Virginia Brown Bowden and Bill. Mary Virginia has recently been named an Assistant Vice President of New York Life Insurance Company, and that is really marvelous! Everyone in the class of '36 should be very proud of her accomplishments for the college, too! When this goes to press Cam and I will be vacationing again in Spain to grab a few rays before winter sets in.

Again, many thanks to all of you for your nice letters.

MARRIAGE

Dorothy V. Kirkland to Harold N. Baumler

NEW ADDRESSES

Mary Alice Buckmaster, 2100 Hillsboro Drive, Los Angeles, Cal. 90034
Dorothy Kirkland Baumler (Mrs. Harold) R.D. #2, Box 294-A, Howard, Pa. 16841
Sara Marks Volkwein (Mrs. Edward L.) Box #1, Ortega Station, Jacksonville, Fla. 32210
Barbara McCormick Tener (Mrs. Edward H., Jr.), 9830 Sunset Drive, Stone Harbor, N.J. 08247

Christine Price Cannon (Mrs. Thomas L., Jr.), The Three Arts Club of Chicago, 1300 N. Dearborn Parkway, Chicago, Ill. 60610

Mildred reporting:

Kay Arnold Dague echoes the sentiments of all nine of us when she wrote: "if regretting that so few of us were able to share our pleasant 35th reunion."

Mary Baldwin is enjoying her retirement and added zest to her summer with a trip to San Francisco in August where she attended the wedding of Chita Cate Beal's son, Peter.

Marg Chubb Randall and her husband are on a freighter trip to Singapore, Australia and New Zealand. Last fall, while they vacationed at Hilton Head, South Carolina, they met and visited with Lois Kramer Boyd.

Elizabeth Coates Elliott wrote that she was sorry to miss the reunion and "peeved" at herself for not getting a message to the reunion. It's been a busy year family-wise for them. Their younger son was married in May in Massachusetts and in July the Elliott family had a reunion in Pittsburgh. Elizabeth and Paul are fortunate that all of their family live within 300 miles, so visits are easy.

Mary Deemer Nagel and husband are now in Eastern Europe on a three week seminar in connection with Mary's work as president of the Pittsburgh Presbyterial. Mary and George enjoyed our reunion luncheon but had to hurry away to Elkins, West Virginia where their son, Charles, was graduating from Davis and Elkins and receiving a second lieutenant's commission in the Air Force.

Dora Diamond Hake and husband have bought a summer and/or retirement home on the Potomac River in Maryland. They are still dividing their time between both homes and have had lots of summer visitors.

We send our sympathy to Helen Finkel Eger whose father died in May. Helen's daughter, Terry, was married in June and her son, Jan, is teaching English conversation in Japan. Helen is teaching at Moon Senior High School and earned her master's degree last December.

Florence Gibbs Momeyer regretted missing our 35th reunion and suggested that Hawaii would be a lovely spot for a future reunion. Florence is still executive director of the Hawaii Association for Retarded Children. She and Glenn love Hawaii but regret that 5000 miles separate them from their children.

Hespie Godlove Gillette writes that "all her chicks have flown." Her youngest daughter joined the WAVES in March. Penny, a parasocial worker and Bob, with Southern Bell, are both students in Jacksonville.

Dorothy Hauk Bryen sends her regrets at missing our reunion but explains that she was in the throes of planning the wedding of their daughter, Becky, who was married July 7th to a Columbia Law School student.

Dorothea Hunter Haas writes that she and her husband are still traveling and loving it. In February they enjoyed a 27,000 mile safari in Africa using planes, buses, mini-buses and land rovers. By now they should be enjoying the Greek Islands and next March they plan to see the Middle East.

Helen Johnson Montgomery had no exciting news but said she was enjoying the "lazy, hazy days of summer" to store up stamina for the coming school year.

Dorothy Kirkland Baumler is enjoying her new country home about 23 miles from State College, Pa. Dorothy is Head Secretary in the Department of Religious Studies at Pennsylvania State University with an office that has beautiful views for 20 miles in all directions. Her daughter, Linda, was married last year and is now a case worker for the Department of Public Assistance in Pittsburgh.

Ruth Kleitz Buel also missed our reunion because of wedding plans. Her daughter, Barbara, was married July 7th to W. C. Fleckenstein. Her daughter, Virginia, is a third year student at Penn State where she is training to be a medical technologist.

Writing up the class news may be a bit of a chore but I want to tell each of you who answered my cards that it has been a delightful experience for me to become reacquainted with my class mates. I sincerely hope that next fall when the cards go out again that I will hear from all of you. I particularly want to thank those who responded to the request for money. Our treasury has been enriched by $40.00 from our half of the class. I understand we will make a final disposition of the funds for the memorial to Jane Caughey and Betty Fickes when we meet for our 40th reunion.

Since the first of January, Lee and I have been enjoying his retirement. We have two projects at the moment — planning, with our architect, son-in-law, Vance Titus, to remodel our home in Johnstown and making wedding plans for our younger daughter, Claire, a senior at the University of Connecticut.

Martha reporting:

I've received $29.00 from members of the class to be given to the memorial fund for Jane Caughey Spicer, and Betty Fickes Stallings — both died in summer of 1972.

Christine Price Cannon writes sad news about the death of her husband, Tod, on August 3rd. He had been ill for about a year. Shortly after that, Chris obtained a job working at the Three Arts Club, as a receptionist — "almost like being in the hotel business again." Be sure to look her up, if anyone happens to be in Chicago.

Dorothy Ringler Creutzer reports she is off on a short trip to Finland, Poland and Russia. Hopes to see the girls soon.

Florence Shields Kevan reports that they like their new home but they miss her aunt, Mrs. Florence Andrews, so much. "Aunt" who was well known to many of the P.C.W. girls, passed away this year.

Sally Reese Warrick writes that she has become quite adept at "goofing off" since quitting her job last winter. Her husband, Richard, commutes from Washington, Pa. to Pittsburgh every day. Her son, Dick, Jr. is now working for a furniture company and in his spare time is quite involved with local ambulance work.

Mary Margaret Schmitt — "The 35th Reunion was interesting." This past year she attended the 15th Quadrennial meeting of the International Council of Nurses in Mexico City in May. She hopes to attend the World Federation for Mental Health meeting in Sydney, Australia in October, 1973.

Helen Thomas Nevin thought that it was just too bad more of our gals didn't come out for our 35th reunion — it was a lovely day. Helen's brother, Don, passed away in August after a lengthy illness.

Edith Thompson says, "It was so good to see the girls at our 35th Class reunion." She corresponds regularly with Miss Walker who was our class advisor. Edith traveled this summer to Virginia and to the Smoky Mountains.

Barbara McCormick Tener, Jr. is now executive secretary to the vice president of a firm that designs new condominiums. Their daughter, Connie, teaches French; and Kathleen was just made a vice president of Chase-Manhattan Bank in New York, as well as working on her Ph.D. at Harvard.

I attended the 35th Class reunion and stayed in one of the "new Dorms" with my husband. We were greeted and treated royally — and it was good to see the girls again. Our daughter, Barbara is a senior at Purdue University and hopes to go on for her master's in psychology. Pittsburgh has changed so much in the 21 years that I have lived in Dayton.

Janet (Pat) Brennan Aull (Mrs. Keith), 1272 Ocean Front, Laguna Beach, Cal. 92651

Audrey Horton Skillman (Mrs. Paul), 710 Legrande Apts., 1411 Grandview Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15211

Anne Ludlow Kinney (Mrs. David W.), R.F.D. 8, Box 64, Parkersburg, W. Va. 26101

Mary Ostergard Lutz (Mrs. John W.), 120 West Way, Camillus, N.Y. 13031

Nelle Richards Offutt (Mrs. James H.), 500 So. Park Blvd., (L-209), Venice, Fla. 33595

Janet C. Ross, Sedgley Road, Hinsdale, Ill. 60521

Pauline Sommerfield Liebel (Mrs. Robert C.), 7805 Barbour Manor Drive, Louisville, Ky. 40222

Jean Watson Williams (Mrs. John S.), 13127 Collingwood Terrace, Silver Spring, Md. 20904

After spending a year in Bombay (which they loved) and a taste of world travel, Ruth Bauer Greenawalt and Don are back in Charlelot. Number three daughter was married in August, so now all young Greenawalts are through college and married.

Jean Bury Patten substitute teaches and Sam is still with University of Rochester Research Corporation. Rick is at University of Washington finishing his M.A.; Leslie is a pediatric nurse in Fairfax, Virginia and Laura is a senior at Syracuse.

With both sons now out of college and working but living at home, Ruth Nelson Clark is up to her ears in cooking and laundry and "trying to remember that parental prerogatives are as extinct as the dodo." She relents, however, and says that it's good to have them even though life is very full with her usual church and civic responsibilities.

Peggy Christie Graham and Barry have children in Bath, San Diego and Philadelphia and are pleased with their two grandchildren.

William H. Colbert ran for judge in Allegheny County this fall with the help of his wife, Betty Crawford. After the campaign she planned to teach part-time again. Betty also says that Ginny Scott Bruntjen has an interesting shop. May we hear more, please?

Eleanor Gangloff Morris is working in general practice daily; lives with her 87 year old father and adopted son; raises horses, dogs, cats, deer; has a great time.

Among 1940's best travelers is Eleanor Hackett who took a journey to Israel, Greece and the Greek Islands.

Audrey Horton Skillman lives in Duquesne Heights now after a year and a half in Canada. They are enjoying the view and commuting via incline.

"With 4 (count 'em four) teenagers still at home, being treasurer of three groups, church work, bowling and bridge." Pat Krause Kosco says, "I still find time for reading, cooking and keeping house. Life is a ball and I'm looking forward to reunion in '75."

Rachel Kirk Bobo says she could not describe her trip to Greece and Turkey in the spring on a post card — it was that wonderful.

Helen Lohr Wright is the proud grandmother of a granddaughter and a new grandson, John E. Wright, III.

Flash Harry helped Ann Miller Mayer win her first blue ribbon in dressage — he's a horse. Ann also raises Doberman and teaches school in California.

Ada Lee Mangum Clark visited her daughter and grandson and also relatives in Texas this summer. She still loves teaching kindergarten.

The Roosas have lived in the same house for twenty-three years where all children (now married) return semi-annually. "Not a wildly exciting life, but thoroughly comfortable, satisfying and happy," says Ruth Mengel Roos.

The fact that she's sitting on a bench in back of the Bell Tower at Chautauqua doesn't mean, says Meo Ostergard Lutz that she's joined the senior citizens. They are enjoying their home and location.

Janet Ross reports that she has retired from her job and is now living with a sister outside of Chicago.

We are all grieved to learn from Mooch Shoemaker Hockensmith that her husband died a year ago in October. She goes on to say that her son, Frank, is taking a Hotel and Motel management course and that she, too, is working.

It's good to hear from Polly Sommerfield Liebel again who says that Paula is working as a secretary, Mark was graduated from Gilmore Academy in Cleveland, Bob is busy with the modular building of "Ollie's Trolley's" and she is selling real estate in Louisville.

Frances Shoup Brant took a short vacation to the Adirondacks and White Mountains since she spent most of the summer working on a special curriculum development study in Greensburg for the educable mentally retarded children. She was looking forward to the new school year when she could test some of the new ideas.

Gardening and bridge occupy Betty Sweeney Taylor when she isn't visiting her children and grandchild. Her daughter lives in Connecticut and one son is in Boston and the other in Washington, D.C.

Nancy Wilson Patterson and Tom are enjoying their home in Hampton Bays and working together to build their business. Her son Tom, a doctor, is with the Navy in Florida with his wife and son, Betsy and her husband live in California so Louise is the last at home and she is a senior in high school. She also says that Tom Senior is associate Rector of the Church in Hampton Bays.

Mary Wolff Gamble says she has no news but that she has just learned that Rachel Carson '29 lived in their neighborhood.

Our golf champion, Peg Dunseath Wilson, has done it again! She won the Allegheny County Women's Golf Championship at North Park with a career low score of 80. Congratulations, Peg!

We had cards with warm greetings from Caddie Lou Kinzer Trapp, Alida Spinning and Jane Viehman. Thank you, ladies.

For the secs. — Jean and Bob went to Arizona and New Mexico in April and she keeps busy as President of the Auxiliary of the Ward Home for Children and with her work for the church and the Allegheny General Hospital Auxiliary, friends and family. She found Beryl Bahr Redington for us, too. They had lunch together and Jean says all four of Beryl's children are married and there are several grandchildren. She teaches first grade and loves it.

For the last four years the Martins have journeyed to the North Carolina mountains where our daughters spent two weeks each summer and thence to Nags Head for a week or two. I feel like a yoyo. But Jean started college this year and Ellen finishes high school in June so I imagine our summers will change too. I'm retiring as president of Garden Club and have retired as Chairman of the Mothers' Library committee at the Ellis School and I'm not looking for anything else to do.

Thank you all for writing — it's a delight to hear from you always.

Janet reporting:

Phyllis Keister Semple writes that their second daughter Carol, has won the National Amateur Golf Championship of the United States Golf Association. Congratulations Semples!

Sunny Croft Armstrong has both the young people back at college and the Armstrongs are devoting time to their horses. Sunny says it keeps her on her toes. (I'm not sure that's where it would keep me!)

We're going to call her "Lucky" Anderson instead of Mocky for this lady has won an XL55 movie camera projector and screen, had a trip to Nova Scotia, and is off to the South Pacific in October. Needless to say, she is on leave of absence from school.

Jane Chantler is still sending people all over the world for Union National Bank and seeing America first for herself. California, Florida and the Virgin Islands are this year's selections. She is also serving as vice-president of the Butler Branch of the A.A.U.W. and writing for the bank magazine.

Having two in college, one in law school, and one off to Japan has the Webbers rattling around in their house this year. KDKA's Call for Action now absorbs some of Betty Hazeltine Webber's newfound free time.

Margaret Hibbs Keller is employed at the Passport Office while her husband is enjoying retirement.

Virginia Crouch Everett got together with her old roommate, Joyce Wallis Brode who was vacationing nearby. They hadn't seen one another for years, but say they look the same. (Don't we all?)

Mary Elizabeth Rope LaHue reports all the children are away at school or working. She and Roy have bought a 40 foot ketch in which they plan to do some cruising. She is painting, doing volunteer work and being happy. Now, that is a good report!

Ruth Demmler Benner is teaching nursery school, planning her daughter's wedding, and enjoying Krista, her year-old granddaughter.

Jean Burchinal Purvis is busy with the Butler Area School Board, State Advisory Council for Vocational Education and the Irene Stacy Mental Health Center. All this plus golf, tennis and graduate English should fill in the days!

A new home in Florida and an apartment in Windsor Connecticut give Betty Baker Patterson two addresses. The Florida one allows her to be near her little granddaughter.

Marden Armstrong Dahlstedt is in the "Granny Group" too with two little grandsons nearby. She is still involved with the antique shop, part-time work as a librarian and the publication of her second book, "Shadow of the Light House" which will appear in the spring of 1974. Her daughter, Ellen, has published some poetry. Like mother, like daughter.

Greetings to everyone from Ethel Herrod Blackburn and Nancy Scott Ralston.

As for this reporter — we still have three children at home to keep us young and two adorable granddaughters to mature us a bit. I am involved in politics for the first time and am running for tax collector here in Forest Hills. It's different!

Alice reporting:

Mary Singer Samson's husband Jack wrote to tell us that Mary had died of cancer on February 13, 1973, following an illness of approximately three months. We extend our sympathy to family and friends.

Alice McKain Porter says that she has no special news but that she is glad others do. She turns very quickly to the '42 Class section, even though we are getting nearer the front of the Recorder.

Joan Myers Rankin reports that this has been the "Year of the Graduates" in her family — Jay from college, Jamie from high school, and Joan received an M.A. in Religion from Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. Jay is taking training in Medical Technology in Asheville, North Carolina. Jamie is a freshman at Wheaton College, and Joan is working as Director of Christian Education at Hickory United Presbyterian Church, and keeping up with Paul's schedule as a tenth-grader and stock boy at the drug store.

Helen Shellkopf Cline says she had a good summer. She and Harold went to Memphis to visit their daughter Karen, a physical therapist, and her husband. Tom is back at Denison University for his sophomore year. Helen and Harold are editing the Edgewood Community Newsletter each month and are fast becoming "inquiring reporters."

Mary Alice Spellmire Girts writes that her husband Bob is working on renovations at Eye and Ear Hospital; also at Presbyterian Hospital. Son Rob is a Project Engineer at Westinghouse and daughter Michelle is working in San Francisco and going to City College at night. As for Mary Alice herself, she is still enjoying modern dance classes at Arts and Crafts and flower arranging classes at the Garden Center.

Betty Steffler Baker's major news is the birth of Amy dele Baker, her first grandchild, and daughter of son Richard and wife Cathy, on August 21, 1973.

Claire Stewart Burkhart spent summer afternoons swimming in a kind neighbor's pool, and one morning a week playing tennis with other matronly partners, ages thirty-two to sixty-five. Claire's vacation will come during Christmas holidays between kindergarten sessions, when she and her husband will make their annual trip to Nassau to visit their eldest daughter and her family. Her second daughter, Kathamite Sally, is still in Vancouver, British Columbia, getting yet another degree in veterinary science. Her youngest daughter is still near home working in architectural services.

Florence Succop Klotz and her husband John spent the Christmas holidays in South America. Fred (who was married in March) is teaching at Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland. Ken will be teaching at California State College in Arcata, and Barbara starts Yale Medical School. The others are moving a year farther in their same schools.

Betty Sundberg Miebach has been very busy with her new job, church and hospital work and tutoring the underprivileged in her Presbytery. She enjoyed a very crowded but enjoyable opera and concert season last year. Betty says she would love to see anyone passing through the vicinity of Summit.

Dorothy Vale Roberts has begun her sixth year of teaching at Enterprise School, Logan, Ohio. Dorothy says that Cec has another patent at Anchor Hocking, Lancaster, Ohio; Pam is doing interviewing for a city planning project or Columbus, Ohio; and that Heather is a freshman at Chatham this fall.

Marjorie Wood Yearick had a nice vacation through Canada and Nova Scotia, but ended it by falling on the rocks at Bar Harbor, Maine, and breaking her wrist. That was her third trip to the hospital since January! However, she says, all systems are go again, but she's keeping her fingers crossed.

Bob and I and Bob, Jr. (who was graduated from Duke University in May), Connie (who is a sophomore at Chatham), Andy (junior high) spent a week in New Jersey in August. Jon (high school senior) rode to Cross-Country Camp at Seven Springs that week.

Jan reporting:

Jean Bacon Smith's children Eric and Ingrid are only 11 and 8. They are happy to be in their new home in Aspen, Colo., where Knut works in the post office. They have picnicked, hiked, and camped in the mountains, and of course, they ski!

Ruth (Peggy) Craig Murray says "things are about the same." They went to a wedding in Ft. Worth, Texas this summer and found that area "really a different world (from Akron, Ohio) and we liked it." While in Texas they visited Agnes Conner Davis and her husband Jim in Greenville. Agnes operates the physical therapy wing of a small local hospital as a private practice, using their equipment. Sounds great, Agnes!

Jeanne DeHaven Uhl has moved from New Jersey where they were transferred two years ago. They are renting and storing until their new house is finished. She is beginning a new job as Therapeutic Dietician at West Virginia University Medical Center. Their third son, Gary, is a junior at University of Bridgeport, Conn. At home, they have only the twins, now in the 8th grade. Husband John is a V. Pres. of the Rockwell International Division in Morgantown.

I saw Peggy Donaldson at Chatham. No coaxing will get her to divulge any of her interests or activities. I can just tell you she looks great in a short shag haircut.

Barbara Findley Copeland writes that son Jim was married Sept. 8 in Washington, D.C. At the same time they were helping daughter Anne furnish her apartment there where she is a graduate student at American University.

Two months after Evelyn Glick Bloom's daughter Shanon graduated from Chatham (Phi Beta Kappa) she was married and will pursue her master's at Rutgers. They plan to settle in Israel next year. Evelyn's other children include Eliana, spending the year on a work-study program in Israel. Dov at Yeshiva University and Mike in 10th grade.

Evlyn Fulton is now working for the Synodical of the South of the United Presbyterian Church. Perhaps I will get to see her in her travels. At Christmas Evlyn took a charter flight to Egypt. Then in March a "quickie" vacation to Spain.

Martha Harlan Kaufman and daughters Lynn and Betsy traveled to England, Germany, Italy, and Switzerland, finally leaving Betsy in Vienna where she is studying German and music history on a program offered by Hope College, Michigan. Martha's husband Fred met them in Geneva and Munich. Lynn is teaching art in an elementary school in Louisville, Ky., after getting a master's degree from Indiana Univ. (Pa.) which allowed her to live at home this summer.

Gladys Heimert Aye, with her husband Tom, attended a Pitt Medical School reunion in Bermuda in May — that location both impresses and intrigues me! There she renewed "old times" with Ruth Jenkins Allen. Gladys' and Tom's son Ralph was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Dartmouth College in June and is now in Medical School at Pitt. Daughter Pam is in her second year of nursing school at New England Baptist Hospital in Boston.

Ruth Laird Grant writes that they will spend their winters in Naples, Florida, where they now have a second home. Their son, Russ, Jr. is working with his dad, and daughter Chris is working for a health foundation. Leslie is at home.

Dorcas Leibold spent her vacation this summer with her brother and his wife at a beach house at Malibu, Calif.

Patty Leonard Bodle is building a new house in the country outside High Point, N.C., where they now live. Patty continues to work at her art and exhibit it. Bob, Jr., is working with an advertising agency in Rocky Mount, doing their writing. Trish is a junior at St. Andrews majoring in art.

Gladys Bistline Belz is teaching piano, daughter Carol is in her second year at Radford College and her son is a high school senior. Gladys says "no news from here."

Our family has moved again — same city, but a new house. We have been working at it since last Christmas and moved in October. We have a beautiful mountain view and love the new location. Rundown on our children finds 2 in college 2 thinking about what to do with their lives while they work at sundry jobs and travel, and, at home, we have Carol in her last year of high school and Bruce in 8th grade. My contact with Chatham will be frequent now that our daughter Marlane is a freshman (living at Woodland Hall). I was dazzled by the beautiful campus and the curriculum opportunities.

See you all for our 30th reunion in June! Ruth Laird Grant has offered to take my job. It's been fun, but I wish I could have heard from more of you!

I speak for all the class in sending our deep, heartfelt sympathy to Ann McClymonds Turnock and her husband who lost their son Paul this past February.

Ann reporting:

The sympathy of the class is extended to Mary Lou Reiber Peter for the death of her mother.

Betsy Meader Downing reports that her birds have flown. Debby is married and living in Connecticut. John is in graduate school at the State University of North Dakota specializing in environmental limnology. Elizabeth is a sophomore at Hamline University. Husband Bill continues in the biology department there, but has a sabbatical leave in January and they hope to go to Europe on a research tour of self-sufficient villages. Betsy says, "Cheers to Chatham — love Dr. Eddy's letters."

Betty Monroe Musselman's daughter Peggy was graduated from Mary Baldwin College and is continuing at the University of Virginia. Son Paul has completed his first year at Wittenberg University. Bill and she were getting ready to go to Mexico and points south.

Mary Lou Reiber Peter was in town last fall, and her mother planned a reunion lunch for Chatham friends. Mrs. Reiber enjoyed it as much as any of us; she was a most gracious lady. Mary Lou and Emile went to western Africa in March as guests of Air Afrique, and sat in the cockpit of the DC-10 going over the Atlantic.

Lillian Sheasby Bauer sent greetings from Deer Isle, Maine, and says it's been their "year to roam." Ever since Bob started on the European marketing scene for Koppers, she has found it increasingly difficult to stay put in Sewickley. She's accompanied him to Paris, Rome, London, and Lisbon. Later, they went to Spain and England. But, she says, "Deer Lake is my favorite spot in the world; I guess I'm a true 'Mainiac.'" She has a friend there who is a cousin of Mary McGuire, the recently retired professor of English at Chatham. Lil's boys are 22 and 26, and are both working but unmarried.

Helen Heath Smith gives a medical report, and after what she's been through this past year she has the credentials. "Should anyone else be considering the merits of a total hip joint replacement, I can vouch for the success of the procedure. My stainless steel and plastic equipment, installed last March, is working well. Unintentionally, I gave it an acid test in May by doing a complete somersault down a steep flight of stairs. I believe that was my first somersault in roughly 35 years, and I am not moved to practice the maneuver further. Despite gold-plated pork chops, pollution, Watergate, a psychotic stock market, and, most of all, despite the often bewildering toughness/fragility of human life and relationships, I'm pleased to be in the middle of my first hundred years."

Marion Springer Edmunds is going into the "empty nest" syndrome. Lindsay was graduated from Mount Holyoke in 3 years and attended Trinity College, Oxford University, for graduate work. She is now continuing at Penn State. David is starting his freshman year at Dickinson.

Nancy Stauffer Grantham had two children graduate from college a week apart. Mark, from the University of Virginia, and Dana from Hollins. The whole family celebrated by spending a week in the Bahamas. Mark is in executive training with a bank, and Dana is hunting for an interesting way to use her Russian major. Nancy is ready to start a year of teaching Spanish, with a new M.A. proudly in hand. "We plan to stay in Atlanta — like camellias blooming at Christmas."

Patty Wright Matheral is the grandmother of a fine boy, Joshua. He is the son of their oldest girl, whose husband is in chiropractic school in Illinois. A younger daughter is working on an ecology program with sea turtles on an island in Georgia, and plans to major in anthropology. Patty and Knox have a little vegetable garden, and still play tennis.

This has been a year of many blessings and one great tragedy for the Turnocks. I live in the hope they will dilute each other. Our Christine (24) announced at Christmas that she wanted a formal wedding on February 3. Laura (17) designed and made all the bridesmaids' dresses. Ann flew home from Bogota, Colombia for the wedding and then returned again just a few days before our beloved Paul died. He had been thrown from a car in a skidding accident on the way home for Chris's wedding, and seemed to be all right, but evidently a stray blood clot continued to circulate and hit the brain on June 17. He was 20, and already in his second year of medical school. He died in his sleep in Philadelphia. Such a promising career, cut short too soon. Ann has since entered Fuller Theological Seminary in California to pursue her Doctor of Divinity degree. Jim (22) will graduate from Pitt soon. Laura and Julie (15) are doing fine.

We have been sustained by our faith and by an army of stalwart friends, not the least of whom have been those from Chatham. I quote one letter in particular from Mickey McCullough Lohmeyer, who has had to travel this same path. "Few people are free of problems. We all have a cross to bear. The question is, will we drag our cross or carry it?" Carry on! And keep writing.

Lucy reporting:

Betty Beck Wiedenman had a wonderful time in Hawaii this year plus going to Los Angeles and San Francisco. She has three graduated or graduating from college and one still in school.

Janet Bovard Poole has a new granddaughter, Jennifer, son, Tom is in Taiwan for two years and she also has children in college or high school. She also visited Carol Thorne King in the Poconos.

Eva Caloyer Nassikas has a daughter going to Chatham and one who recently graduated from there. She also visited Greece and the Greek Isles last year.

Susan Campbell McConnell went to Russia and Hungary this spring

Patricia Cochran Brown is keeping busy with church work and needlepoint or sewing with all the children in college.

Barbara Cox Campbell is Principal of Blythe Elementary School and has a sixth year certificate in administration. Her children are all in college.

Joan Davies Bream is working with the Shadyside Boys' Club Women's Aux. and is president.

Miriam Egger Hosack celebrated her 25th wedding anniversary with a trip to the southwest which included a white-water raft adventure down the Colorado River. (You're braver than I am).

Agnes Filippelli Walsh lost her mother last year.

Doris Fairfield Jamison reports a quiet year with all children in school as has Dorothy Groves Carson.

Jane Field Taylor is still in Naples, Italy and is teaching English to people from 17 to 50. She and her husband are having fun traveling and had a reunion with Nancy Means Hudson who was in Europe with her husband.

Helen Gilmore Reinhard reports that she has lost her mother this year. She also reports on Mary Ann Letsche Yockey, who we are sorry to hear, has lost her husband, Jack.

Helen Hunter White is still working full time as sales assistant and enjoying it. She spent her vacation in Florida and learned to sail a boat on Tampa Bay — Fun!!!

Lois Jackson Ritenbaugh married off her son, Howard, this summer. Lot of activities with this Peggy Korb Smith is having fun traveling with Bob with no children at home.

Marian Lean Tarrant has a daughter, Janet Christie, who was graduated from Chatham last year and the other daughter, Barbara, is at the U. of Fla.

Margaret McKee Barnes and her husband are building a summer and retirement home in Martha's Vineyard and Hap has been transferred back to Pittsburgh as Adm. Ass't. to Exec. V.P. International, U. S. Steel.

Jane McPherson Graber's, husband Ed received an award from NASA for his contribution to the "Mariner 9" mission to Mars.

Lucy Dorsey had a year to end all years. I celebrated my 25th year with the Citizens National Bank, Orlando, Fla. The bank really did it up brown by giving me a watch, red roses, and an engraved plaque. It was marvelous! I cried all day. In March I had another honor given me by the Central Florida Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, the "Banker of the Year Award" for outstanding work in banking and work with A.I.B.

Helen Croak Johnson (Mrs. W. C.) is lost. Does anyone have any knowledge of her?

Doris reporting:

Helen Louise Myers Duerring and Burt spent the summer tending their large vegetable garden and retreating to their mountain home. Christine started her first year at Westminster College.

Penny Myers Smith is still teaching. Son Rob was graduated from college and then took a trip to Europe.

Jean Purves Bowman recently returned from a six-week vacation, visiting her mother in England and her youngest daughter who is in Germany as an army wife. Jean wonders when that peace, which is supposed to come when your children are grown, will come.

Peggy Riffle Kirby says that life is really changing. After 15 years, she is not teaching. She and Tom are moving to the New York City area (will send address later). Son Mike was married in May. Son Jim is considering California for graduate school.

Mariellen Roche Duval's family had a reunion to celebrate the return of Dave and family from the Aleutians and to wish Tom good luck on his semester of study at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland. Lynn is in Boston. Gary transferred to West Chester State College. Dale (junior) is undergraduate editor of his high school yearbook.

Helen Parkinson Gambridge and Bill managed one week vacation. Don played basketball at the Civic Arena for the Dapper Dan Roundball Classic and received the big trophy for the most valuable player. Parkie said they had basketball coaches in the livingroom for three weeks. Don is going to Duquesne. David is at St. Vincent.

Doris Rowand Schroth has been living an exciting life for two months since Chuck sold his interest in the plastic forging company in Alabama. They have been traveling since July 10th. Doris said, "I call it being foot-loose and fancy-free — some might call it being unemployed."

Ellen Saylor Lewis had a leisurely vacation at the shore and worked at the U.S. Open Golf Tournament at the Oakmont Country Club. Ginny was married in June after graduating from Pitt. Marie is a sophomore at Ohio University. Tom and Anne are in the 7th and 8th grades.

June Sinewe Moffatt is back to teaching after a delightful summer at Stone Harbor and a trip to Switzerland. She saw Mary Ann Yockey at her gift shop at the shore. Nancy is a sophomore at Thiel, Susan, a freshman at Winchester-Thurston.

Ruth Teplitz Goodman says, "All is well and hello to all."

Jean Thompson Johnson has an increasing appreciation for her college years and feels that "we really are a very privileged group of girls."

Joan Titus Dunlop and Dick ended their annual travel writers' get-together with a 4-day float down the Snake River. Nancy was graduated cum laude from Knox College

Next year Rick, Jim and Jeff will be in college. Joan finds time for the Harper College Orchestra rehearsals, her baroque music group, and reading by the midnight oil.

Carol Thorne King is taking an art appreciation course, tutoring and doing Meals on Wheels. Bill's new job (Energy Crisis) takes him to Washington, D.C. Thorne is a freshman at Bucknell; Raffy, a junior at Princeton; Louise, a senior at Fox Chapel High and Andy is in the 8th grade.

We are sorry to report that Ginny Uber Haug's grandson died last October. Pamela (third daughter) is a senior at Augustana College; Leigh was graduated from high school and youngest son (4) loves Montessori School.

Ruth Ann Weigel Gourley says that it was "Westward Ho" for her family in June. She regrets leaving her job, working with retarded children, but hopes to find similar work in Columbus. Sam, Jr. is completing his master's degree at CMU and reported attending a party at Chatham recently.

Barbara Work Coleman had many jaunts East with Ed while on assignment this past year, and then a family vacation thru the South. Scott is a junior at Pitt. Liz is in the 9th grade. Barbara met Helen Jane Shriner Irvin at a picnic recently. She said that Helen is doing social work with the handicapped and loves it. Barbara also saw Joan Davies Bream, at the edge of the Spa's whirlpool last winter.

Marty Yorkin Berman dashed off a hasty note while trying to stave off the kids and schedule changes at school. The Bermans had a lovely vacation in Massachusetts. Diane starts her last year at Pitt Law School and Linda begins her second year at Pitt Medical School.

This secretary, Doris Sisler White discovered that jury duty last spring was an enlightening experience. Diana is a senior at Roanoke College. Son, Jamie, returned to Lynchburg College for his senior year after a month in Europe this summer.

Everyone who sent news sent money. Thanks! Great letters too!

25th REUNION NEWS, by Joy Wilson Douglas, retiring sec.

Chatham saluted its 25 year class at the June reunion, and the seventeen members present were pleased to present an unrestricted gift of $600 to the College. After a delightful lunch we enjoyed a tour of the new library, Forum, dining hall, and the remodeled Mellon Hall. The next stop was the Mellon sun porch and our class talkathon to catch up with one another's comings and goings during the past years. With the arrival of husbands, cocktails and dinner were served at the fabulous Benedum Hall. Even the weather cooperated to make it a lovely day for everyone. We missed Ginger Long Carlson your other class secretary, who had just moved to Evanston, Illinois but were happy to welcome Honey Holland Rank from Texas. She brought along Rosie Bowie Sloan, long absent from our ranks. Others present for the celebration were: Audrey Bigelow Baur, Lefty Doolittle Collins, Hilda Fish Bricker, Sally Geary Hansen, Suz Harton Conklin, Mary Ann Houck Brown, Wandalea Johnson Smith, Alma Lapsley, Carol Lenz Houck, Ceil McKay Geddis, Henrietta Meyer Garrett, Shirley Morrow Hedenberg, Helen Suckling Beckert, Suzy Sutton Hepler, and your retiring secretary.

New class secretaries for the next five years are Betsy Ross Kuhn and Suzy Sutton Hepler. It's been fun getting mail from all of you these past six years and I thank you for your cooperation. When you're asked to take the job, may I recommend that you accept. You'll find it most rewarding.

Suzy reporting:

Our class advisor Dr. Phyllis Martin has been Professor of Behavioral Science at Point Park College for the past ten years. In August '73 she became Professor Emerita and part-time instructor of journalism at the same college. Remember her children? Ralph, a Lieutenant Commander USN and currently with Strategic Arms Limitations Talks in Washington, D.C., is married and has two daughters. Patricia, single, is teaching at the Cumberland Valley School near Harrisburg. Richard, married, is a software designer for

Our sympathy to Eleanor Robinson Hastings for the loss of her daughter Mary Kathryn, aged fifteen, by a canoe accident in the Caribbean last April. Keep your chin up Robbie! Her oldest daughter Fredricka was married in May. Ed, child #2, is attending the University of Wyoming and Jimmy, 12 is in special education and the only child left at home. Robbie is working for APS Publishing and editing two visitors magazines. She sees Betty L'Hote Frank frequently and visited Randy Ullom Doig in June.

Mary Ruth Forney Snyder and family are off to Hawaii to see their new condominium and celebrate Patty's twenty-first birthday. Mary Ruth is now a grandmother with the arrival of Mark II seven months ago.

Ginger Long Carlson was sorry to have missed the reunion but was transferred to Evanston, Illinois and now has been moved again to Boston. She is still apartment hunting but can be contacted at the school where she works. She would love to hear from Chatham friends any time.

To celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary, Norman MacMillen Morris and George were planning a trip to the British Isles in September. Their youngest son Ron goes off to college in Vermont this year. Jeff has graduated from the University of Connecticut and plans to return for his master's degree in marine biology. Richard has his M.A. in history and is now getting teacher certification.

The first person with class news was Nancy MacDonald Sutherland. How wonderful to be so prompt with a family of eight other Sutherlands! Bill and Jack are at Duke University and Holly attends Vanderbilt. Three are still in high school and Heather just turned eight. Much as Nancy longs for a ladies' luncheon, most of her time is spent at the smelly old gyms, tennis courts, or at tracks.

The high points of '73 in Ceil McKay Geddis' life are a Caribbean cruise, daughter Gail's high school graduation (as class valedictorian), the Chatham reunion, and a July vacation in Ontario. Her oldest daughter Chris will be spending her junior year in Marburg, Germany. Gail will attend William & Mary College. Sue, 15, and Amy, 8, are still at home to keep things lively.

Henrietta Meyer Garrett, Paul and their two children went camping in Colorado this summer, but they still think that Deer Valley, the family camp near Somerset belonging to the Pittsburgh Y, is the greatest.

Helen Suckling Beckert and family also vacationed at Deer Valley the same week the Garrets were there this summer. Henrietta wants Sally Geary Hansen to know that while out West, they visited the D. Ford Flute factory that Sally told her about at the reunion.

Grace Migliore Frances' husband Philip will have his book "No Greater Love" published this fall by Vantage Press. Congratulations to you both!

The three children of Shirley Morrow Hedenberg and John vacationed with them at their cabin in New Hampshire this summer. Daughter Jackie is enrolled at the Rhode Island School of Design and Shirley is back in the Cheswick school system.

Bobby Mueller Baylor and George had their fourth children camping this summer — probably for the last time. Private tutoring in German and technical translations keeps Bobby busy the rest of the year.

Helen Obermayer Sellers and Joe also took an automobile trip to Colorado this summer. Hao works on hospital committees for the University of Pennsylvania and keeps busy with the "usual things that keep middle aged, graying, suburban housewives occupied." Helen son Joe is an enthusiastic junior at Brown and David is a high school senior.

While in Pittsburgh this summer, Janie Picard Pursell got together with Shirley McKay Taubeneck, Mary Ann Houck Brown, and Corrine Trout Smith. Had a great time getting reacquainted.

I already have my ticket for the Mendelssohn Choir concert in Butler September 22nd, so I can go back stage and see Marge Reckard. This reporter is sorry to learn of the death of Marge's father in February. Our sympathy to you and your mother. Other difficulties this year included having her car stolen twice. She's still teaching in Pittsburgh.

Ruth Shaffer Loughney taught a summer class of advanced eleventh grade English at Peabody High and then went to the country to ride, swim, and enjoy the company of her granddaughter Ruthie. Her daughter Ellen lives in Saxton, Pa. and is married to a coach. Her son Patrick, back from Vietnam and Alaska, is going to law school.

Donnie Vail Rea's daughter Ginny chose June 2nd to get married, so for the first time Donnie missed a class reunion. Now that she's settled in a new apartment in Sandusky, Ohio and Joanne is a senior down in Kentucky, Donnie is back to the "grind" of Eastern Star, church work, and community affairs on the homefront.

Joy Wilson Douglas, our retiring secretary, has had quite a summer with ailing parents, so is looking forward to a second honeymoon in Bermuda this fall. She has a son beginning law school and another son in his senior year at the University of Maryland.

Busy on a research program at Children's Hospital is Ruthie Zucker Bachman. For at least the next three years she will be working on "Tonsil and Adenoid Evaluation" — riteria for or against surgery . . . she thinks she may be the only Pediatric Nurse Practitioner to be conducting a research program. Her twenty-one year old son David is a happy auto mechanic and Anne, eighteen, is a happy ophomore at Penn State. Ruthie and Jim vacationed in Mexico last winter and plan to see St. Martins this winter.

No special news but "Hello" from Wilma Moore Hiebert and Anne Wallace Hunter. Anne is working again now that the children are grown up.

Many thanks to everyone who returned class news. As I was getting the cards ready to mail, I kept thinking "Is anybody out there!" Such a good response makes this job worth while. On the returned cards, many said they would try to make it to the next reunion if they could "get it all together." You'd really enjoy it. Ask those who attend. The college is considering a return to the regular five year plan or reunions, as most classes seem to prefer that arrangement.

Our daughter Debbie is now a senior elementary education major at Westminster College. The summer family project was painting our stucco house green for the fifth time. Then the four of us went to Florida Keys by way of Colorado. Have a happy prosperous year everybody.

Betsy reporting:

Audrey Bigelow Baur's family at home is diminishing with Freddie (20) at Tulsa University in Radio Communication and Kurt (18), freshman at Kent State University studying architecture. They have John (8) to keep them young (not old, Audrey!) with Cub Scouts and those "neat" activities. Audrey will return in September as Assistant to the Executive Director of Masterwork Music - Art Foundation. Audrey made it to reunion.

Sally Boggs Campbell was disappointed that she was unable to attend the reunion. She has been in business for herself since last spring in Gallipolis as a Communications Consultant, which she finds challenging and exciting. She completed a year as National President of American Women in Radio and Television and is presently Chairman of the Educational Foundation of AWRT. Their big project, currently in the pilot stage, is doing closed circuit television programming for children in hospitals, which they hope to expand nationwide.

Marie Cohn Chiles had a pleasant summer and is glad to be back in the swing of activities with symphony, old folks home, Bayou Bend Museum of American Decorative Arts, Women's Club and Bar Auxiliary. She had a good phone visit with Dorothy Doolittle Collins while in Washington.

Hilda Fish Bricker was happy to see everyone in June, and reported that due to her mother's failing health they remained close to home this summer. Their youngest, Richard, will be going off to school in Hyde Park, N.Y., which she says hardly seems possible.

Amy Gage Skallerup's Tom will be a freshman at Susquehanna University. Susan just received her driving license and daughter, Janet, had a paper route all year. Amy worked for the State, January through April, during the legislature and is indexing at home for them this summer. She and other librarians were invited to attend the dedication of the USNA library in September.

Sally Geary Hansen had such a good time at reunion that she's already planning to attend the 30th! She felt the turnout was small, considering it was the 25th, however. She is busy with the same activities, mainly her sheet music business, which is growing all the time. Sally just contributed to the outside painting of their house by doing three coats of 60 porch railing spindles as well as digging up some huge bushes, which she says qualifies her for Women's Lib.

Honey Holland Rank also enjoyed the reunion, she was impressed by everyone's good figures! She stayed with her ex-room-mate, Rosie Bowie Sloan, who will be visiting Honey in Texas in November. Honey has been active on the sports scene this past year; she fought a baby bull in Mexico City! Learned to ice skate, and golfed in Palm Springs. Both boys are in high school.

Mary Jane Humbert Upshaw loves her new home. Larry is in his 3rd year of Architecture at the University of Virginia; Will, a senior at Hampton Roads Academy, and "Chip," now a bundle of boyish energy entering 5th grade. She hoped the reunion was glorious and wished she could have been there.

The class extends sincerest sympathy to Jean Hadfield Smith whose husband, Bob, passed away last January. Please know that we are thinking of you and your children, Jean.

Jerry Kimball Wells missed the reunion due to the celebration of her own 25th anniversary as well as a graduation. Her 4th and last will be off to college this fall! She sends her best to everyone.

Les and I recently spent a wonderful weekend visiting Jessie Gilbert Chew and Tom. "Catching up" was fun, as was tennis and a dinner party which included Randy Ulom Doig and Hal. Both gals look great. Our daughter Janet (10) went along, too, and enjoyed Ginny and Geof Chew. Our eldest, David (20) joined the Navy in January and attended Navy schools for eight months. He is now on an aircraft carrier heading for Japan for two years. Paul (17) is a high school senior and plans to study agriculture in college. As of this writing my foot is still swollen from a foot infection which landed me in the hospital for a week in mid-August.

Then followed three weeks at home "keeping off" the foot — very difficult for the home-maker. We were very disappointed in missing the 25th reunion, as I'd looked forward to being there.

Mercedes reporting:

Sally Altmeyer Buske was too late to be included in the last Recorder and so, I'm including her this year. Her daughter Barbara is a student at Broward Community College and son, Walter, a sophomore at Hollywood Hills High. They all love Florida.

Ellen Archer sent a long letter and caught me up on her news. She started a new job in Sept., 1972 which has kept her very busy organizing a new research laboratory for The Psychiatric Institute Foundation. She extends a wish that any classmates coming to Washington, D.C. call our "Dr." Ellen Archer. She'd love to see or hear from any former classmates.

Marion Baker Powell tells us that her husband Cliff was inducted into the Quarter Century Club marking his 25 years service with Johns Manville Products Corp.

Dolores Baney Conley and Duane had a marvelous two weeks in Hawaii last February. This past summer Do said she played more golf than ever and didn't improve one bit!

Nancy Beamer Stewart and family had a great trip via Motorhome to Nova Scotia and Cape Breton with stopovers in Sturbridge and Bar Harbor. Nancy says their school has started a modified Open Classroom and so far she likes teaching in that situation.

Gertrude Beiswenger Tourtellot reports that her husband is Vice President and General Manager of Gladding Cordage and that they are pleased to be back in New England but do miss living on the Finger Lakes. They moved in August and it's been rather hectic getting settled, getting the children ready for school, etc.

Shirley "Buzz" Bemis Martin says that so much has been happening in her life that she really doesn't know what to say. She's been raising her 4½ year old granddaughter for the past year and has found that a real joy. Her daughter Kim is a freshman at Chatham. Kim was viewing some college movies being shown to the freshmen when all of a sudden she realized that she was watching films of her mother in our last May Day in 1947. There was Buzz as a Tumbler and playing the piano and clowning around. Kim yelled out, "Hey, there's my mother!" and broke everyone up — how time does fly! It seems just like yesterday that we were all so involved in that May Day.

Barbara Berkman Roth reports that son, Steven, went off as a freshman to Oberlin and she is working in the administration at the Riverdale County School in charge of student activities in the Middle School. Barb and Ellie Hirsch (47) saw a good deal of each other before Ellie's family moved to California.

Barbara Black Bloomstrom reports son John is a senior pre-dental student at Ohio State, Karen, a sophomore at Wittenberg University and Beth a freshman in high school. She and John have become avid golfers in their "old age" — so the summers are never long enough. Barb says that their door is always open to you-all whenever you're in Cincinnati.

Shirley Chelsted Nichols didn't explain just why the change from an R.D. address to a house number but maybe it's just civilization catching up to them! She sends wishes to all and a "Chatham in 1975 or Bust" to all classmates!

Lee Corey Hanson said she had nothing to report then proceeded to tell me about the addition they were putting on their house. Lee's parents have moved from Guam to Washington and are working with them on the house. Then they gut the original part of the house and re-do it! Guess they'll never sit on the deck and watch the water go by in quiet retirement!

Betty Davis Herzberg brings us up to date on her family — son Lee is a junior at W&J and Sue entered Grove City this year. Betty received her M.Ed. from Pitt last year and has been teaching chemistry at Brentwood High School.

Sue Ferris Townsell reports that their oldest daughter started college this fall at Lafayette. Younger daughter plays on the high school tennis team and dances and dances. Sue has started working — selling real estate so if you're moving east look her up!

Ruth Fabry sent a card from Hollywood, Calif. asking that I correct my report of last year. Her parents died 3 years apart, not the same year. Sorry, Ruth. Please forgive the error.

Katie Fisher Ammon is our other grandma. But, unfortunately, Leah and Wayne will soon be off to Durham, N.C. where Wayne is working on his doctorate in English at Duke and Leah is in training as a respiratory technician at the University Hospital. This is the 19th year in Florida for the Ammons. The five Ammons at home lead full and diversified lives but with time to spare.

Nancy Gwosden Curry and family, went back to the great East this summer to visit. The Curry family is enjoying being "whole" after a very bad winter. Ben had a broken leg, his mother a broken hip, Nancy's mother in surgery and the kids with their ups and downs. They feel grateful to be back to normal.

Nancy Hughes Evans reports both Bob and Linda in high school — junior and freshman, respectively. Nancy says she is narrowing her efforts to some church activities this year — she decided the P.T.A. deserved some new blood!

Marilyn Keister Kiefer sent no news just greetings.

Betty Langer Feathers tells us that her son Eric is a senior this year and was student trainer for the W. Va.-Ohio All Star football game and they won! Daughter Nancy is a freshman in high school and won the Golden Horseshoe Award in West Virginia History last spring. Congratulations.

Dottie MacPhee Hunter reports that the Hunters are having a good year. Cathy, 13 and Beth, 11 are doing well in school. Dottie had major surgery and is feeling fine now. They took their vacation in June via the Auto-Train. Dottie is busy being president of the South Miami Hospital Auxiliary.

Barbara Mader Knight has moved and gotten out of government and social work and into private industry. She is the assistant to the V.P. Personnel for an insurance company and loves it (especially the pay check). After six months she says she's a confirmed Texan!

Ann Morgan Cascorbi and family had a grand vacation but came home to a broken water pipe in the third floor, so, they're painting, sanding and peeling paper, etc. Phoebe Thorne Birmingham's Joan is one of Andy's painter's! Kathy is in kindergarten and Alice in second grade.

Gretchen Schmidt Kulberg was appointed Director of the West Bloomfield Township Public Library last March and has been busy lately as they are expanding an area.

Betty Schweider DeBono reports that their new boat was of major importance this summer. Lorin, 16 and Bill, 12 met and became good friends of David Amram. Lorin plays the guitar and Bill the drums. David is giving a concert soon and has asked both of the boys to play with him. Betty is an officer in the Women's Club.

Dodie Seale Warren reports that all is well with their family. Anne was graduated from Swarthmore, Phi Beta Kappa. Dodie and Janet are going to U.H. where Dodie says she'll get her MFA when she's 108 years old (still finishing up her BFA)!

Phoebe Thorne Birmingham tells us that they have bought their first house after living in church manses for their 22 years of married life! Bill is going to school full time to be a social worker and will hopefully be able to get a job doing counselling as he did in the church. Carolyn and David are also in college — part time, working part time. Joan will be ready next year — hopefully Chatham! That leaves Susan in 6th grade. Phoebe is substituting after getting her Ohio Certification last spring. Bill's health is still holding up — it's 3 years now since his vein transplant operation.

Jessie Tomlin McCurdy reports their third daughter, Suzanne is a freshman at Duquesne University, her father's school. Yolande is in graduate school at the University of North Carolina and Paul is in his second year at Pine Crest Bible Training Center. The rest of the family are running to keep ahead of inflation and losing ground, according to Jessie.

Nina Weaver Peters moved to Chicago suburbs last November as Earl was transferred to the headquarters of Continental Assurance Co. After 15 years in one house it was an upheaval for all of them, the least for Rob who entered Indiana U. of Pa. last September. This spring Phil Streander Betz called Nina and told her about her family. "Stre" lives in Mt. Prospect and is busy with her family, class of third graders, and hobby — square dancing.

Barbara Whiteside Harris reports that since their daughter's death from cancer a year and a half ago their life has been quite uneventful. I don't know about your daughter, Barb, please accept our sympathies even at this late date. Son Bill is a junior in high school — a sailor and photographic nut who is hoping to learn to fly this year (before he can drive, no less). Barb does a volunteer reading tutoring program three days a week on the high school level. She said that she thoroughly enjoyed her term on the Alumnae Association Board and highly recommended it to everyone who would like to know what's going on at Chatham today. It would be great to start all over again at that exciting place!

And now, the news from the Cowles Clan. Our son Ivan joined the Navy, stationed in San Diego for his basic training. He will be going to Electronics School. Stephanie is a grown-up seventh grader! I am still available for substitute teaching but did not get called for even one day last year — perhaps this year will be better! I began selling Avon last January and I love being the "Ding-Dong lady." I'm still active in church and civic club work and of course, Girl Scouts.

I want to thank all of the girls who responded to my call for contributions to our Special Fund. A total of seventy of you have come forth with something, and added $107 to that previously collected. We're still a long way from our goal so, if you didn't send anything don't wait until next year — do it now!

No class news was received from Judith Bierman Linowes.

Barbara reporting:

Janet Fitzsimmons Carr reports that she and her husband have left the broadcasting industry and formed their own production company, Bob and Jan Productions, in New Orleans. Good luck to you both, Jan.

Doris Fritschi sent back word that all is well and she's teaching kindergarten in the Carlynton School District.

I was so pleased to hear from Nancy Galey Wigton who is a secretary for the Oswick Medical Association. Her children are spread geographically far and wide at schools. Eighteen year old Barb is in Munich, Germany at the University of Maryland campus there. Mark, 16, is a senior at Quaker Valley and they hope to see their daughter, Galey, 14, in Naples, Italy at Christmas time where she is a sophomore at the Forrest Sherman school.

Nancy Garlow Hoop sends us happy news of her family. Daughter, Betsy, a Merit Scholar, is entering Duke University this fall even though her parents tried to guide her to Chatham. Nancy saw Joan Hebrank Smith on the William and Mary campus last summer. Nancy is pursuing a master's degree in reading after going back to teaching two years ago and becoming interested in reading disabilities. The Hoops also have a ten year old son, Paul.

Artie Gianopoulos Helgason writes of three wonderful weeks in Iceland this past summer. They visited Sig's family and camped out in a green valley surrounded by three glaciers. She says sightseeing there is truly unique and beautiful.

Your secretary, Barbara Armstrong, reports nothing new but a driveway this summer. The kids were so busy with various summer courses and camp plus Rob's illustrious position as Fuller Brush man that Bob and I were kept busy organizing them all. It's always nice to receive your news especially a name that appears for the first time in awhile. Please keep the responses coming. It gives my morale a boost.

Elsa reporting:

Christine Metro Kachulis writes that she, Tom and children, had an unforgettable trip this summer to Greece and the Greek Islands.

Tomi Jones Miller has started to teach first grade at the Charlotte County Day School where her daughter Susan, in tenth grade, and Jennifer, in sixth grade, go to school. Tomi just completed her Master's in Education from the University of North Carolina.

Another gal to join the working ranks is Nancy Kelly Hilland. Nancy and her husband Carl are happy to be back in Albuquerque where their two sons are in college.

It seems a good many of our children have reached college age. Janet Houston Rhein has a daughter at Denison and one at the Shipley School in Bryn Mawr. Janet sends her best along with Pauline Massey Hill whose two oldest boys are in college and younger ones start eighth and first grade.

Ann Hafer Berry is enjoying fixing up her home now that she and Charles are back in Conneaut. Her oldest is working for A.B.C. Wide World of Sports while a senior at Claremont in California. Ann extends an invitation to "stop by" to those passing on trips or vacations.

We extend our sympathy to Nancy McFarland Pollock and her family on the tragic death of her brother this past August. Nancy hopes to see Martha McLaughlin Eilers this fall. Martha finished her second book for the Warren City Schools on the role of federal money in public education. Her husband Dick provided the art work for the book. We also hope Martha is making a good recovery after her surgery this summer.

I was pleased to hear that Lois Miltner Rothrock and family are all doing well and she is busy with her home and church activities. Her son Richard is a sophomore and Cynthia is in middle school.

I thank you all for your response. My home and church work keeps me busy. Our oldest boy is at West Point and the younger one is a freshman at Westminster College. Mary, 14, is an active ninth grader.

Ginny reporting:

Pat Nauman Kramer will be moving in late fall to Wheeling from Martin's Ferry — no earth shaking distance — just across the river, but any move is upsetting.

Sending a cheery "hello" but no news are Ann Orner Davidson and Edie Pennoyer Vassamillet.

Five sons, ages 5 to 18, keep Janie Oellig Gould very busy. Oregon provides great skiing during the winter and fine camping sites in the summer. She is active in Newcomers Club and plays bridge and bowls in addition to being a spectator at the sports activities of her sons.

Molly Oehlschlager Schardt has a son who is a junior at the University of Iowa; another who is a sophomore at Penn State; while the youngest is a high school sophomore. They manage a trip Florida every year and at least one visit to Iowa to see Bob who is on a baseball scholarship. She sees Lois MacGregor Stewart, Edie Pennoyer Vassamillet, Elsa Morris Cameron and Alice Dykema Oehlschlager frequently.

Nora Patterson White's son, Gordon, was graduated from Purdue in May with a B.S. in Microbiology and is now working for Hazelton Labs in Virginia. Lisa, (12), Lyle and Nora were in Mexico last December and in the Canadian bush this summer. Susan (19) will tour Italy.

Beverly Roush Johnston finds that family vacations are fast becoming a thing of the past. Carl, at 18, and Jody, 14, have too many interests of their own to travel. Carl plays the tuba and won a week at band camp at Purdue. Jody had knee surgery in March but she is back playing tennis. Bev teaches 3 classes of 8th grade math and loves the vacations.

Our special happening this year was the Grand Opening of the Sweet & Sons Building in Mount Lebanon, housing Phil's corporation. All the kids are doing their own thing — Jeff, back at SMU for his junior year and playing golf to a 2 handicap; Dan, working at the Newport News Shipyards building submarines; Becky (14) playing spectacular golf and Leslie (2½) just being loved. Phil and I have weathered 22 years of marriage in great shape and think it will last. I hope more of you gals whom I contacted this summer will choose to reply next year. The same faithful ones always come through — thank you.

Barbara B. reporting:

Evelyn Skalican Nestor tells us she has had a rough time in 1972 with 4 operations and problems with her eyesight. Fortunately she is much improved in 1973. She has worked as a middle school librarian the past 3 years after obtaining a graduate degree in library science from Duquesne.

Marilyn Toner Wiley, Roy and daughters 13 and 15½ moved this year to Virginia Beach, Va. where Roy is a physician's assistant in ophthalmology and Marilyn is doing substitute teaching in English. If anyone lives nearby, please call and say hello.

Ruth Washburn Loucks and John transferred to Charlotte last October where John is district sales manager of National Steel Corp.

Sally Weissberg Nussbaum and Paul have two sons who entered college this year, Bob at Emory University, Atlanta and Steve at Washington University in St. Louis. Selma is senior at Oberlin and Hope is in 10th grade. Sally is working part-time in a fabric store operated by her husband's company — Berkshire Apparel.

Marilyn Wolfert Zimmerman also has a son entering college and two teenage girls. The family enjoyed skiing in Michigan and Colorado last year.

Nancy Vahey Eldridge and Sara Jane Smyser have no special news but say "hi" to all.

Jody Shelley Davis and her family visited in Florida in April, then she and Bob flew to Europe, touring the Scandinavian countries with a one day trip to Leningrad, Russia. The ballet and the few people they met were pleasant, but the country was rather grim and depressing.

Doris Warner Brown continues with her routine of girl scout leader, church, PTA, etc. Her oldest daughter spent 10 weeks in a cast this summer after falling from a horse but fortunately is recovered completely.

Bette Shapiro Bigler after many years of volunteer work is finally going to take some courses that may lead to a job or career. Her older son, Marshall, started as a freshman at the University of Colorado and her younger son Cliff, age 14, is in the 9th grade.

Anne Wood Pawlyk writes that she still works on PTA and studies art and cares for her children like most of us.

John, the children and I have had a quiet year, spending as much vacation time in Florida on the beach as we can. Thanks for the class fund money to those who donated.

Greetings from Isabelle Allias, still in Harrisburg and Elsa Duncan Reagan, way out in South Dakota.

Mary Anderson Sheehan, our Alumnae Prez., sends the news that she has made several trips this year, New Orleans, New York, and New England, and spent a good month in Ligonier this summer. I attended the Alumnae Meeting at Chatham this June, and Mary conducted the meeting like the real pro she is.

Pat Bennett Nicholson also traveled this summer — from Ohio to Mexico in a camper trailer with Heather, 15, Mark, 13, and Jamie, 11.

Marilyn Bickmore Boleky is the new president of her hospital auxiliary. She traveled to Florida this summer after the Little League and Pony Season in which both of her boys participated was finally over.

Barbara Bolger Collett was another visitor to the West this summer. She visited with Judy Whitmer, her room mate for two years at Chatham. Judy is living in Salt Lake City and is the first woman Juvenile Court Judge in the history of Utah. Bo's husband, Bill, is now the Assistant Dean for Student Affairs at the University of Florida.

Lois Bradley Fegley took on a new job . . . unpacking boxes. Frank is now with Harris-Intertype. Barb Wynn Hopkins and husband John visited with them shortly after their move into a new home.

Joan Brown Thompson enjoyed a visit from Lois Sherris Schworm and her family this summer. Lois is still very busy with volunteer work. Joan asks, "Sophie Yanchewski Engels, where are you?"

Shoppers alert!!! Jane Core McCombs writes that she is starting her own salad dressing business. Look for "Mac Terry's Dressing." It should be sold state-wide within a year. Janie has been teaching nursery school for the past eight years. Her husband, Jack, is in commercial real estate. Heidi, 19, is a sophomore at Hood, Clark, 17, is a freshman at Franklin and Marshall and Katie, 15, is a sophomore in high school.

Marlene Frost Ewing was another class traveler. She and her family either visited relatives or entertained them this summer. Pat, 3, is learning to swim. Eric and Kris, the teenagers, are in love with trail riding on their motorcycles. Husband Jim travels all over the United States with an occasional trip abroad.

Elsie Gage Balano will be in Austria through 1975 and John are at the American International School where Alice Ann Jones Winner '51 is teaching the fifth grade. Richard is continuing at the English School.

After many active years in politics, during which time he led an effort to get a lunch program in their elementary school and won, Joan Hagler Saklad is running for Alderwoman in the city of Newton. There is only one woman on the Board of twenty-four at the present time and we all hope Joan wins the race this fall.

Laura Hammer Inglis has some free time now. Her son began kindergarten this fall and she has 2½ hours each afternoon to "do her own thing."

Shirley Hartman Heil obtained her Master of Education degree in May and will start to teach the sixth grade in the fall. Her busy schedule includes their farm, Cub Scouts, and two cheerleaders to organize into carpoles.

Althea Hockensmith Lozick has a new job as Secretary for the City of Richmond Heights. Robert, #1 son, is a freshman at Marietta College. He is 6'6" and received a basketball scholarship award. Eric, #2 son, is in the seventh grade and has won three gold medals in school-sponsored Olympics and has all indications of being taller than his brother. Al and her husband spent two weeks in Brazil in January which Al recommends to everyone.

Mary Alice Jackson Regan and her husband, Bob, are both playing the clarinet in the South Hills Community Band. Their teen-agers refer to it as "The Old Timers Band." This, as well as substitute teaching and serving as a Cadette Girl Scout Leader, keeps Mary Alice busy.

Greetings from Jackie Legros Beveridge who is deep in college catalogues with her oldest son graduating from high school this year.

Marilyn Lenchner Applebaum has a new job in Tel Aviv. She is a teacher of gifted children. Her oldest daughter was graduated from high school and is now serving in the Army. The other three are in high school this year, which makes Marilyn feel "old." She sends best wishes to all.

Jane Miller Sumner is the Editor of Women in Change newspaper in Dallas. She was the hired writer for the campaign against canalization of the Trinity River, one of the leading environmental battles in the country last spring. The voters overwhelmingly turned back the "billion dollar ditch." Janie is also doing free lance writing and advance work.

Two new jobs for Barb Maloy Titelman. She is the new Secretary of the Chatham Alumnae Association and also Public Relations Director for the Central Blair United Fund. She and Jimmy were in Rome this June for the opening of the Contemporary Art Wing at the Vatican. Liz started to Chatham this fall.

Jane Rowlett Stuart writes that she has dropped out of all organized activities with all of their luncheons, meetings, etc., to do her "own thing" — tennis, needlepoint, and earning backgammon. She and Jim took their two teenagers to Colorado to ski and plan to take them back, plus Sally and Adam, in March. Jane commented that she was raised in New England and never took up the sport until they moved to Florida.

Her family, Tracy in 10th grade and Wendy in 8th, call her "Ambulance Annie" and no wonder. Bobby Senior Stewart became involved with the local ambulance association and now has the rank of Emergency Medical Technician, ambulance division, with the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians. This plus serving as a regular volunteer in the intensive care unit at Lancaster General Hospital keeps her busy.

Rose Spoa will be teaching kindergarten this fall. Lucky kids. Rose spent the summer traveling, attending the NEA Convention in Portland, Oregon, and also touring the Florida Keys.

"Travel with teen-agers whenever possible as the benefits to their maturity are so obvious and many" is the advice of Mary Ann Taptich Barnes. She and Bill took their oldest child, 13, to the Scandinavian countries and Russia last year. They are now planning a trip to South America in 1974. (Tap, take note of Al Hockensmith's comments!).

Long lost Jo Ann Trevasakis Evans sends the news that her oldest child, Debbie, will be attending the University of Delaware this fall to major in Nursing. Bob and Doug will be respective sophomores and juniors at Deerfield Academy this fall. Gregg, 11, is keeping busy with golf, tennis, and hockey.

Nancy Lee Williams sends to us the following list of her performances which sound absolutely great. Metropolitan Opera at the Forum-2 title roles, February, March, 1973. St. Paul Opera Association-2 leading roles, Summer of 1973; Film and Recording for Columbia Records of Leonard Bernstein's Opera, "Trouble in Tahiti" — Bernstein conducting, Summer, 1973; Dallas Civic Opera Company, Fall, 1973; Affiliate Artist with St. Paul Opera Association, 1973-1974.

Kathy Wragg Batson sends greetings to all. They are back in Potsdam after a year's sabbatical spent in Champaign, Illinois where Gordon worked at the CERL Lab.

The Fox Chapel School District is lucky to have Barb Young Hopkins working this year as an Audio-Visual-Motor Development Aide. Barb says that this will be a real challenge after not working for almost ten years. Heidi is in the fourth grade and David in first.

Condolences to Janet Loos Seibert who was widowed this past year. Janet and her family have moved to Lancaster, Pa. where she is connected with the Lancaster Hospital in a supervisory position.

News from me: Arch and I took the four kids to Vail, Colorado this March for a ski week. The kids left old mom at the bottom of the mountain. Oh, well... Our big news is we bought a farm in Somerset County and moved up there for the summer. We loved it!!! To pull three-teenagers and a nine year old away from the city, their friends, the pool, the telephone, the Pirates, for a very different type life was a gamble, but they loved it so much they didn't want to come back to Pittsburgh. We are looking forward to next year with horses for all again, chickens which are great fun, and we are hoping to con Arch into a lamb and some ducks. Love to all, Janie.

Sali Moore Sharaf

Dana Rose Sleppy (Mrs. Robert C.)

Mary Irwin, who served on the National Cherry Blossom Festival Committee this year, and is serving a two year term on the Office of Education Advisory Council, took a well deserved vacation in London this fall.

Judy Pitasky Markstein, busy with two PTA boards, serving with the Hospital Ladies Aid Society and as Voter Service Chairman for the League of Women Voters, also found time to vacation in New England and London.

Carolyn Mapp Cuneo, and Nick vacationed in Italy in May, and also had a visit from Judy Torin Orr and family.

Sonya Klein Vernau vacationed in Virginia and North Carolina, as well as attending the Florists Convention in Las Vegas with Walt.

Pat Egry Curreri and Bill did a lot of traveling this year. They spent three weeks in Mexico City where Bill attended a medical meeting; then toured the Yucatan to see the Mayan ruins; took the family to Lake Tahoe and Wisconsin, then she and Bill went to Cali, Colombia, where Bill was guest speaker at the Colombian Congress of Surgeons.

Peggy Pattison Moore and family toured California, from San Francisco to San Diego, visiting with relatives and friends along the way.

Sunny Koehler Peterson and family had a "super" year — a two week cruise on the Queen Elizabeth II to the Caribbean and South America in March, Florida in April, Atlanta and New Orleans in July, then off to England, France and Scotland in August.

Martha Kovalovsky Frew had a busy summer, with visitors in and out most of the time, but she and the family did manage to get to the beach, as well as trips to Florida and California last fall.

Delight Reed Dann sandwiched in vacations in Colorado and Canada while working with Planned Parenthood, Red Cross, serving as a church deacon, and working on both hospital and school sale committees.

Barb Komlynn Meder and Zoltan both changed jobs this year — he to an administrative position in Dunellon High School and she from an inner city school to a rural school in the middle of the Ocala National Forest. They are still enjoying Florida living.

Joanne Dawson Waltman is working on her master's degree in Guidance and Counseling, which she expects to complete in December 1973.

Liz Miller Tutchings is making pots!!!

Lois Katz Blaufeld is now the owner/area director of the international weight reduction organization, THE DIET WORKSHOP, in Western Pennsylvania.

Lori Barry Hoskins is in her second year of a four year program at the Western State University School of Law. Aside from the challenge of law school, the family is busy decorating and painting their new home. Lori's husband, Bill, is now Director, McDonnell-Douglas Automation Company.

Suzanne Klopp Seyler writes that her husband has been promoted to Director of Education at the newly acquired Federal Correctional Institution in Oxford, Wisconsin.

Christie Walter Rinehart is the Consciousness Raising

Coordinator for Northern Westchester County, as well as being Assistant to the President, National Student Book Club. She is also studying the science of consciousness (Parapsychology).

Grace Nardulli Regutti is still busy with her four children, PTA, community and church affairs, and with guitar playing for recreation.

Cynthia Snider Greene, who is taking Spanish lessons, was at Chatham in May with daughter Jill for an interview, and had a lovely chat with Miss Eldredge, who had only known Jill pre-natally.

Jacy Kurtz Meyers has been traveling again — Israel in October, skiing in Vermont in December, and Barbados in March. She is now Chairman of the Executive Committee, Pittsburgh Region, Women's American ORT. The two older children, Alan and Beth, did very well this year in the Junior Olympics.

Joanne Cochran Ellery reports that she still has seven healthy, happy children and just passed the longest non-pregnant period in fifteen years.

Patty White Payne has become interested in township affairs and has joined a concerned citizens' group.

Carol Schmitt Schug writes that she is trying to survive the shock of being old enough to have two teenage sons, one of them learning to drive.

Mary Jo McKee Groppe has spent the past few months in interior decorating. Her eleven year old son was in Europe this summer on a study tour with his choir.

Greetings to all from Maggie Siviter Emery, Carole Williams, Mary Bailey, Barb Delaney Brown, Sally Weise Hall, and Barb Evans Danver.

We extend our sympathy to Gretchen Eichlepp Smith whose husband died unexpectedly of a heart attack in July 1973.

The Lewis family is doing just fine. My big news is that I was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel in June, which is not too bad considering that there were only eight women and about 2300 men selected. Thanks to all who contributed to the class treasury, and who responded with their news

Lorrie reporting:

It was heartwarming as a new secretary to get a 38% response to my call for news. It revived my memory of the lovely 15th reunion day festivities for our class this past June. It was a small, but fun group returning Barbara Asche, Jean Babb Ersoz, Anna Irwin Few, Nancy Galley, Carol Jeffreys Heiser, Barbara Goodstein Selbst, Mary Ann Knuth Braithwaite, Elizabeth Farmerie Seaborn, Martha Lasky Sanders, Barbara Sickles Bernstein and Lorrie Edwards Troyer. In case you're wondering, we all looked great! The weather was marvelous, making the perfect opportunity to view the changing scene occurring on campus. Wait 'til you all see The Jennie King Mellon Library!

Noting so few moves this times makes one wonder if a new trend is emerging for the class. Pat Martin Kennedy had to take three weeks at the shore to recuperate after relocating 2 kids, 2 cats, a dog, themselves and 31 houseplants via station wagon from Texas to New Jersey. Many classmates are "discovering America" while vacationing as Barbara Sickles Bernstein, Elaine Rockwood Cummings, Anna Liadis Zervos and Barbara Sanford report Barbara Sanford also took trips to Scandinavia and Russia and recently purchased a mobile home on a lake near Dallas. Betty Ann Maruca Wolke lived 4 months in Venezuela while Bob was on U.S.A.I.D. assignment. Perhaps she and Barbara will cross paths as they are both currently doing assignments for the U.S. Department of Labor.

Other signs of activity in the gainful and other forms of rewarding employment-occupation are evident. Kay Harper Kerr's response perhaps reflects many of the classmates' situations these days. "Love to read about everyone else. My life sounds so dull, but it isn't. It's filled with love, excitement and happiness of every day living." Denise Zadeik Chatfield reports she may be given a gold watch or something for being an elementary school mother for so many consecutive years. She also worked for Senator McGovern's campaign. It appears every one's children are growing up. Joan Herman Coleman's son was Bar Mitzvahed in March. She also taught a learning disability first grade. Bobbie Weitsman Marks has just redecorated her downstairs. Claudette Smith Cooper's activities include part time evening nursing in McNamara Hospital and Ford Motor Plant Emergency Rooms. Elaine Rockwood Cummings earned her permanent NY Secondary Teachers' Certification after 39 hours, 3 states and 3 schools. Marty Lasky Sanders has accepted presidency of an Atlanta Education group and is also involved with teacher inservice courses. Phyllis Prinzo McShea does volunteer work in the school library and saw Anna Liados Zervos this summer.

Other back to work teachers are Barbara Sickles Bernstein and Rosemary Leet Stark (her second year with teaching dropouts and career counseling). Ai Rin Lee Kim will stop teaching (1/2 day for the past three years) to catch up on some things at home. Jay has been promoted to First Vice President at Shearson, Hammill. He is also quite involved in training young Koreans in electronic data processing skills.

Your reporter is continuing into her third year in her joint service/faculty nursing appointment. New challenges keep appearing on the health scene which make working exciting. Husband Bill has resigned at the UW Medical School and is looking elsewhere. We'll be moving some place next June. Our vacation this year was sending the boys off to 7½ weeks at camp and Judy off to visit grandma. How quiet and clean the house was!

Nancy reporting:

Barbara Asche took her second Caribbean cruise this summer. She's now back in school to work on her Ph.D. Barbara enjoyed visiting with friends from the classes of '57 and '58 at the Reunion.

Jean Babb Ersoz reports having a nice vacation at Deep Creek Lake with her family. Her children attended Chatham's Music and Arts Day Camp and found it very rewarding.

Barbara Berg Morrison reports that at the last minute she was unable to make our reunion which was disappointing to her. She is in her second year as President of the Harrisburg Section, National Council of Jewish Women, and also does the buying for the Pro Shop at her husband's indoor tennis club. Barbara says she enjoys being the alumnae representative in her area.

Carol Cowley Ross has just returned from driving over 4,000 miles this summer visiting friends around the country, including Pat Gardner MacDonald and Inna Komarnitsky Hays.

Jean Dym Shapera reports that she is busy with her new home and is active at Temple and at the Ellis School where her daughter, Abbey, will be in the 7th grade. She and her husband went skiing in Colorado this past year and at home they play a lot of tennis.

Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow reports having moved from Tokyo after a three week trip to Thailand, Ceylon, Athens and Rome. She says that living there was a wonderful experience and that they miss it already. She and Sam are now house hunting as Sam's next assignment with IBM is in Harrison, New York. Aaron is in the 6th grade and Ronna in the 3rd.

Barbara Goodstein Selbst writes that she loved seeing the gang at the Reunion. She has three girls in school now and Dave is in nursery school so she is having her first free mornings in eleven years. She is on the Board of Directors of the Y.W.C.A. and is planning to play tennis twice a week this winter.

Lois Ingham Peeler is beginning her second year in the Social Services Component of Lebanon, New Hampshire, Follow Through. She writes that she is still trying to work out what Mabel Elliott talked about in Sociology. Lois is also Chairperson of their Town Plan Health and Well Being Committee. She wants to know of any Chathamites living in Vermont or northern New Hampshire — "more Chathamites should move north — beautiful country."

Sally Johnston Woods writes that she is in her "second year of full-time teaching three year-olds at Swarthmore Presbyterian Church Weekday Nursery School and truly loves it!!" She is active in the church and Joe was recently elected an Elder. They spent a glorious week in Bermuda and took the boys on a tour of Canada and New England last summer. The Christmas holiday was spent in Florida and the Easter holiday in London. Joe IV and Jim are now 14 and 12 and both active in Boy Scouts, baseball, football, and basketball.

Mary Anne Knuth Braithwaite writes how nice it was to see her classmates at the Reunion, but hopes that more people will attend our 20th. She visited this summer with Anna Liados Zervos and Phyllis Prinzo McShea so that she had a lot to tell her sister when they vacationed at the Jersey shore.

Carole Koko Ward reports that she is single again and happy. Her three children are in junior high. Doug is in the 9th grade, 6 feet tall, and an honor student, a quarterback on the football team, and center on the basketball team. Wendy is in the 8th grade and Gregg, also deep in sports, is in the 7th grade. Carole would love to see anyone who's out her way — which is very close to Chicago.

Carole Ashman Briggs reports that she was graduated from Clarion State College in December, 1972. She was lucky to obtain a teaching position two days before graduation because of her teaching experience in Iran.

Peggy Burgette Newman sends her regards to everyone. At our Reunion this year Lorrie Edwards Troyer and I volunteered to become your new class secretaries. It certainly has been an interesting experience thus far but I would like to see more of our classmates send in news of themselves. I have had a busy year with planning and implementing the new nursing program. During the spring semester the faculty went out on strike which was a traumatic experience that I wouldn't want to experience again. This year was the year of Reunions — not only the one at Chatham but also one from high school. It seems to me that we "girls" are getting better looking with the passing years. However, it was most disappointing to have so few classmates at our Chatham Reunion.

Susan Schlotterer Davis (Mrs. Philip C.)

Dibbie reporting:

From England, Sorel Berman writes of just completing a sabbatical year which included travel in Russia, Israel, the Continent, Wales and England. Sorel received her diploma for work in Linguistics at the University of Birmingham and has returned to Brookline, Mass. where she continues teaching. Another traveler . . . Margaret Cooke Skidmore and Louis spent three weeks in Europe. "Super chuckle of the year," writes Margaret, was when she and a friend had their names added to a local school ballot for Parent Trustees and won, defeating the four slated men!

Sandra DeBroff Roth has assumed the presidency of the Brandeis University National Women's Committee now that the youngest of her three girls has entered first grade. Spare time finds her designing original needlepoint designs. Nancy Cohen Stein's Mark has also begun first grade and she is using her time on community and Temple commitments as well as in redecorating her house.

Also on the redecorating kick is Ann Curry Haux. She and George have virtually doubled their house (and their taxes!) and have remodelled three-fourths of the old half! They have bought land on Martha's Vineyard and plan to build on "our own little piece of paradise."

Speaking of paradise . . . (in this reporter's viewpoint), Lee Davidson and Roger brought the children from Bermuda for a tour of Florida in April. She enjoyed a visit in August from Ann Linhart Hearn and spent a week in Washington, Pa. visiting her mother.

Alice (Laddie) Lochner Kruiten, after nine years of not working, took a refresher course in nursing in the spring and loved it. "May join the inservice in the fall" she says. Her husband, Jack, a Port Captain for the Royal Netherlands Steamship Co., had a heart attack in March but has recovered nicely and is back on the job.

Betty Goodridge Westgard wrote that she and family were about to embark on a six-week trip to Montana "using our 'trailerable' sailboat for a camper and parking it under trees at night." She adds that she "actually earned some money this summer playing her flute in an ensemble accompanying a play."

Pat Evans Burns is working on her master's at Pitt ("iO credits down — 20 to go") while serving as a research assistant there. "No news" she writes, and Bobbi Friedman London sends greetings to all. She and Ralph moved again this spring.

Many thanks to those gals who took time this summer to answer my note. Hope to hear from even more of you next time. I enjoyed eight gorgeous weeks at our cottage in Canada and am now back to my usual volunteer jobs which include Jr. League, P.T.A., church and others. For 'fun and profit,' I am peddling my hand-painted goodies to several gift shops and am still working on a children's story. Enjoyed a visit with Lee Davidson Davidson on Labor Day. Cheers to all!

Arleen reporting:

Many of those who responded this year are working at a variety of jobs either full time or on a part time basis.

Faith Magdovitz Willis who is teaching Sociology at Brunswick College is also national chairwoman for the AAUW topic "Women: Searching for Self." This involves writing program materials and speaking nationally. In addition, she writes materials for the county unit of the Cancer Society.

Besides traveling to Jamaica and Mexico this year Marjorie Marcus Krinzman is busy working full-time as an ophthalmic assistant for her husband.

JoAnn Iorio Menzemer is a full time Silva Mind Control Instructor at the Silva Mind Control Center in Pittsburgh. According to JoAnn, Silva Mind Control is a method of mental training that enables us to use our mind better so as to become more creative, productive and healthy. JoAnn invites all Chathamites to an introductory session.

Working part time for Weight Watchers is Bette Nadeau Balk. Bette says that she lectures to several classes a week and really enjoys it.

After nine years, Nancy Levendorf Recht still enjoys California living. Nancy was busy doing volunteer teaching of Spanish this past year and now plans to substitute teach in Spanish and in the regular elementary school curriculum.

Joan Munroe Mahoney reports that she is in her third year of watching a medical school grow and is intrigued by the differences in students year to year. Joan and Ann continue to enjoy cave trips and fossil hunting expeditions to Louisville and Missouri.

Other class members are busy with volunteer activities that show a great diversity of interests. Included in this list are Kay McLaughlin Elder, Barbara Kurtz Brody, and Dorothy Sch Schweiger.

Kay is very active in the LWV serving on the Allegheny County Council Board. When she wrote her letter, Kay's family was preparing for a vacation in South Carolina. Kay enjoyed a visit from Margaret Cooke Skidmore and children while the Skidmores were enroute to Maine.

Barbara Kurtz Brody serves as co-chairman of children's after-school study center. While her children were away at camp this year, Barbara did the first painting she done since graduation and now hopes to pursue it further. The Brodys enjoy both sailing and traveling in their new trailer. On one of their trips, Barbara had lunch with Sandra DeBroff Roth.

Dottie's husband is partner in a CPA firm in the Fox Lauderdale area. Dottie's activities include teaching Sunday School, singing in the Church Choir, and helping with the reading clinic and library at the local school.

Another busy person is Carole Koepke Brown. Carole is presently working on the second chapter of her thesis and planning to take a Shakespeare course this fall. She has written an article on The Canterbury Tales which she hopes to have published.

"Bill and I thoroughly enjoyed our Reunion, with friends we hadn't seen in 13 years," reported Mary-Anne Koenig Pomputius. Their son Billy was graduated from the Valley School of Ligonier winning prizes in latin, math and french and is now at the Lawrenceville School. Anne upgraded school experience telescoped Mary Alice's education; she entered 4th grade at age 7½. MAK keeps more than busy with several historical projects, the AM auxiliary and the League of Women Voters as well as serving as chairman of the Annual Fund for the Alumnae Association.

Your reporter enjoyed seeing those who made our reunion this June. I would like to remind classmates that there is going to be a change in the reunion procedure which would enable us to have another one in two years at our 15th! Let's plan ahead and make it a nostalgic occasion!

Claire reporting:

Jane Sanford vacationed in Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand, Australia and Tahiti. She sends greetings and the following travel report. "New Zealand is spectacularly beautiful and we all enjoyed the friendly people in Australia. Not so Tahiti, it is lovely and tropical there, . . . people aren't too friendly . . . Fiji is quite primitive."

Off to New Zealand this year will be Glenda Rie DeBroff and Bob, along with Sandy DeBroff Roth and Ronnie. They will visit Sandy and Bob's mother's family. Glenda still works as law librarian in Bob's office and enjoyed a trip to Mexico City — on twelve hours' notice!

Donna Vignec Painter continues to teach and wait as now Manager of Product Safety at Rockwell International. Their son attended the Boy Scout Jamboree-East and the entire family vacationed in the Rockies.

Enjoying their vacation home in Vermont are Ann Turner Arnold and family. Anne is active on the board of directors of League of Women Voters and Paul continues with the bank and graduate teaching at the University of low Haven.

Melanie Souza Matthews reports that they still enjoy the Ozark mountains — it is the ideal country for them to use their new Honda trail bikes.

"Jeep" Snodgrass Owens sends regards to all and brings us up to date on her activities. They have now lived in (and enjoyed) California for five years, where Henry has begun his own investment firm. Their sons are Hank, 10, and Reed, 4. Jeep also wrote of seeing Winnie McDowell on a recent trip to Philadelphia and Joan Shultz Shively who lives nearby in California.

Carole Smith Petro's plans to attend our reunion were cancelled, but she hopes to make it next time. She began her doctoral studies in counseling this summer and during his first year "will be full time and working two days in the Psychiatric section of Niagara Falls Memorial Hospital." Carole says that Buffalo doors are always open to Chatham alumni.

Marcia Rubinoff Rosenthal spends much time in her hobby greenhouse, which has led her into doing some "indoor landscaping" and Audrey Rosen Sandson writes of her new position as "girl Friday" to an interior designer.

Ruthann Vance Vero sends greetings and news of remodeling their barn into a home. I join her in sending regards to all of you. Ed and I had hoped to see more of you at the reunion — maybe next time. My thanks to those who wrote and I hope to hear from more of you next year.

Faith reporting:

Terri Abrams Zions writes that the family has moved to Brussels. Stan's new job is with the European Institute for Advance Studies in Management. David and Michael attend the International School and Beica and Andrew go to a French school. They traveled to Hong Kong and Japan before going to Belgium and are now exploring Europe on weekends.

Wendy Barton Christner is still managing an erection company and loves it. Her oldest son starts junior high this fall and will be wearing three tone shoes with two inch heels!

Maxine Basson Vasquez has no special news, but sends greetings.

Carol Baumann Knox is still teaching biology. Last summer they camped coast to coast as part of a travel grant. This summer is relaxed and uneventful.

Carol Black Radack and Dave have purchased the West River Marina in Galesville, Maryland which they operate. They are building a new home and plan to move in October.

Margie Brown White passed the boards in Pathology and is now a Diplomate of the American Board of Pathology with certification in both Anatomic and Clinical Pathology. Congratulations! Now she is busy getting settled and enjoying Washington.

Carol Jo Bullen wrote from Japan where she is teaching university students' and businessmen's courses in English language training. During vacation she has been seeing many Japanese friends from her three-year stay a few years ago. She will continue teaching third grade and invites anyone to call her if they're in the Rochester area.

This summer the tennis bug struck and Jane Chittenden Hopkins is advancing in local playoffs. Last spring they had about ten for an alumnae get together in Atlanta.

Dot Christman Lilja has enjoyed short vacations to Honolulu and Sun Valley where John attended conventions. Dot is busy with the League of Women Voters and periodically gets involved in education issues.

Sally Clarke Veil's big news is Fred's graduation from law school in June. They're now awaiting results of the Bar exam. Sally keeps busy with Scouts and Field Club activities. Her current project is to teach Mark and Jodie that non-meat products can be good to eat too.

Linda Clinton Henschel and Matt farm 550 acres of fruits and vegetables. The hours are long, but they love it. And I, Faith Buchner Zarro, am enjoying our new baby.

Joseph is a good big brother but is a typical terrible two. Pat is caught up in going to flea markets and fairs, so we have accumulated some "new treasures" this summer. We had a lovely weekend with Helen Hirsch Bostock and her family. I frequently see Ethel Woelfel Fiderer and occasionally Karen Batt Cohen.

No class news was received for this issue from Gail Siegrist Naftel.

Mildred reporting:

Connie Merlino Tamburo writes that she was elected President of the Pittsburgh Opera Guild and that anyone in the 20-35 age group who is interested in the Pittsburgh Opera is welcome as a member and should call her at 782-6599. Connie and Vince had a "whirlwind one-week" trip to Rome with the County Bar Association in March.

Arlene Koegler will spend November and December visiting friends and traveling in Nigeria.

Mary Loughran Fell and Joe plan to take a sailing yacht with another couple in February and cruise the Virgin Islands. She also reports that this year has been home improvement year for them — a new patio, new aluminum siding, new car and new upholstery.

Julia Loubriss Hanson is busy with a new baby and a two year old, garden work, League of Women Voters and Mother's Day Out. She says she is "looking ahead to a return to work when the kids are older."

After an "extended stay in America" — the first in five years — Judy Malmquist Banz and Richard moved to Paris where Richard has joined the Paris office of Morgan Stanley. Judy sent a note telling of the 17th century farm house in Tuscany, south of Florence, which she and Richard are restoring and which should be completed this fall. Judy writes: "We've put in central heating and plumbing and the community plans to bring electricity to our valley this fall. We are amused to learn that our electrical requirements: T.V., hi-fi, stove and washing machine, put us in the heavy industrial category electrically speaking so that we have had to wait for electricity. In the meantime we are already enjoying our own wine and olive oil." The Banz children are three and four years old.

From San Francisco comes the news that Lila Latham McGrouther has stopped teaching after eleven years following the birth of her son. She writes that she "just experienced what most of you underwent years ago. At one time I couldn't imagine myself home all day with an infant but sorry, Women's Libbers, I'm loving it."

Sally McGuigan Dauer and Jack have bought a home with a lovely view of the Hudson River. Their boys are in kindergarten and second grade. Sally met Judy Malmquist Banz, Molly Fletcher Abt and Barbara Bunker Faughnan in New York City before Judy moved to Paris.

Nancy McQuillan Bolanis and Peter have planned an early fall vacation in San Francisco. Three year old George and eighteen month Michael keep Nancy busy.

Katie Kerrigan Miller and Selly vacationed in Hawaii and plan to spend Thanksgiving in Nassau. She visited Fran Dunlap Marciano this spring and saw Fran's twins for the first time. Katie is still teaching and has added new duties as girls' basketball coach and J.V. cheerleading advisor. Frannie K. is in the first grade.

I wrote to twenty-six people asking for news, the result — as you can see — was not overwhelming. Perhaps we will do better next year. Best wishes to all.

Zoe reporting:

Changes in lifestyle are not as common this year. Yet all who responded have deepened their commitment to learning, instructing and helping others outside the family unit. The variety of activities is as interesting this year as it was five years ago.

While putting together three audio-visual kits, Ellie Schreiber McBride is also doing photo research for a book called 'Memories and Memoirs' for Stonehouse Press. The new-old home they moved into is being renovated before or after commuting to New York City and being "quite involved in two women's groups." Her oldest child is starting school and the youngest is finally in nursery school.

Kathi Otto McDowell, also with Chip entering first grade, Drew in nursery school, plus Meghan, 16 months, is beginning her presidency of the Junior Women's Club after a month's camping trip in the northeast. Husband Mac's Temporary Housing Program has involved 250 kids and 50 local families and has now expanded to a dozen in the state of Connecticut.

Betsy Potter Oller is still working at Northwestern and is studying Fibrinolysis. Nancy Stein Elman continues to teach at Pitt and is learning ceramics. Ethel Woelfel Fiderer has her Master's in Library Science. Heather Muir Meacham is busy, as are 1½ year old Tommie and 4½ year old Laurie. Gretchen Wright Gantzer is still tutoring at the elementary school level, mostly eye and hand co-ordination problems. 10 year old Amy lives for her riding lessons. Son Fritz keeps them both busy while Jack is traveling all over the world.

Being a volunteer docent at the National Collection of Fine Arts in D.C., finds Linda Ruttenberg Ackerman giving art tours to children, teens and adults. She is also secretary for the PTA in the school where her children are entering sixth, fourth, and first grades. Car-pooling opportunities galore!

Sherry Trautman Freeman car-pools too, with her incidental involvement with Campfire Girls, Vice President of the Junior Women's Club, member of the PTA Council. Yet last spring she ran for nomination to a six-year term as School Director. She filed on both tickets, coffee'd and campaigned, and won the Democratic nomination. She now "must struggle with the psychological confusion of running on the Democratic ticket in November — as a Republican!"

To every generality there is a specific exception, Judy Schenk Eley and John have changed many things this past year. Wade joined them last October, they sold their house, moved temporarily to Mass where John will have a job outside of academics after having 2 articles published and 3 papers presented at professional meetings. Judy, with her growing family says all are adjusting well and she is very busy sewing while she waits for her family to settle down.

The Sherman's changed location, after two weeks the kids still love it. I (Zoe) have buried at least 50 boxes in the basement so I can walk through the upstairs. After working in Pittsburgh as the Class director for the Renaissance Center for the Arts, a job I'll miss very much, I've settled into the Leisure Life — repainting, papering and looking into the 50 unopened boxes (specially the ones emulsifying my potter's wheel and kiln.) For anyone coming this way, the pot of coffee is ever on and the welcome mat is out

LOST

Valerie Valentine Mabbott (Mrs. Peter Orde)

Karen reporting:

Carol Daugherty Heierman writes of sailing, singing and consulting. John is now Commodore of the Long Island Multi-Hull Association, an offshoot of living near the water in Port Washington. Carol has spent a year singing with the Metropolitan Opera Studio, a branch of the Met comprised of young professionals. Their most recent news is John accepting a position with Pfizer International as an internal consultant which means a trip for both to Paris, Algeria, Morocco, Egypt and Kenya. Other travelers are Phyllis Fox Catz and Sandy who just returned from Switzerland and Italy. Phyllis' response is indicative of how much we can do if willing to expend the energy. She is teaching, going to graduate school, active in women's lib and the AAUW. When you add keeping up with their two girls, four and six, that's busy! Joan Bailey Sawyer also is "on the road." Joan, teaching at New England College, has developed an interest in international education and educational institutions and practices. She took two groups of students on a January interim term-study to the West Indies and fell in love with that part of the world. Joan is engrossed in writing a paper on "self-respect" which she believes may be a key to real liberation. Attention, girls!

On the home front, Kathy Coyle Guenther and George have moved twice, produced their fourth son and taken on a new job, all this summer. George is now a Senior Vice-President of Insurance Company of North America in Philadelphia. Gig, Todd and Jed are pushing for a Guenther basketball team since Greg joined the family. Many thanks to the Guenthers from all of us with girl offspring for providing so many potential husbands! Speaking of babies, Carole DeLaMotte Litt and Dan have joined the many other La Maze advocates after the birth of their daughter. Carole is working part time as a pediatric psychologist at University Hospital and as an assistant professor of psychology at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine. From Will, Mimi and Katy Stryker comes news of their parents, Bill and Ellie Finger Stryker. They are now stationed at West Point where Bill is a member of the history faculty. And, from colorful Colorado, yours truly, Karen Blomquist Struckman, reports the most uneventful year since I left Chatham. . . guess we're slowing up in our old age. Our highlights are our annual dude ranch vacation, a short jaunt to Vail and my bowling a 202 game. We're really surprised more of you are not coming to the land where mountains are mountains and men are men! You're welcome any time.

Millie reporting:

After beginning this paragraph for the fourth time, I've concluded that there really is no witty way to introduce commentary from females who are about to celebrate a tenth reunion. For most of us, the past ten years have neatly fit into the stereotype of the adult woman who populates leaving otherwise fruitful, i.e. intellectual, pursuits for another time. Yet, for me, writing this from yet another inner city classroom, the wheel has come full circle. From what I can gather, there are others who also are about to return to the non-Pampers world, or who have at least contemplated doing so.

Mary Fay Africa is back to work part-time at the Counseling Center of the University of California at Berkeley, after her son's birth. She counsels those of us who work to liberate our families into helping with the housework now. Mary "Mac" Ferry, is also quite productive while Beth is in school. As she puts it, "this enables me to 'dabble nicely,'" although the work she's done for the League of Women Voters and the ERA (Equal Rights Amendment for Women) deserves more than volunteer rating. "While I don't classify myself as a radical feminist. . . I find it thrilling to be living now when the options for women are continually being challenged. . ." Mary's words may express some of what many of us are feeling in 1973.

Marian Friedman Siegel returns to school this year for a Master's in Early Childhood, as she sees both boys off to school. Her father died last December and we send her our sympathies. Marian has seen Nancy Greco Moran and Joanne Zweig Freedman, during the past year. Nancy says she's enjoying her first full year away from teaching while she tends to her young daughter. She apologizes for "no real news," but since she managed to teach through two pregnancies and children, she certainly deserves some time at home.

Also up there in the Connecticut woods is Julie Givner Reppenhausen as busy as ever running the small town of Sherman. What would things like co-op nursery schools and churches do without energetic, creative people like Julie and Charlie? Jane Hantman Perrin, too, qualifies as energetic. She is now a Reading Therapist for West Penn Hospital, but is also thinking of returning for courses in Special Ed. Her daughters are now eleven and six.

Gwenn Gurnack has left advertising for the world of real estate and is now a licensed N.J. saleswoman. Continuing as her ever diversified self, she was also graduated "Psi Operator" from the Silva Mind Control Course. Lucille Hillman Cesarone also finds herself with new employment as a WAIF Director. Although she didn't explain those initials, her job consists of coordinating PR work. Without the threat of any more robberies, she and her husband have been doing a lot of traveling. Sue Haskell Clokey keeps in touch with Lucille and has started a new job at HEW in personnel.

Karen Gemassmer Ehle sends greeting to all from Germany and the North Sea, while Ginny Host Himmelrich is finally in her first house. As for me, I must say that it is discouraging to come back to teaching after 7 years to find that all those special reading programs, all those government funds, haven't seemed to change the functioning of the inner city middle school. Most of my 8th graders still read at the 4th grade level. Perhaps the changes will occur in the next generation.

Ruth Anne reporting:

Nancy McBride French and Marty Richards Cummings have their bags packed already, anticipating our tenth reunion! Even Nancy Pierson Tolley is seriously contemplating making the scene! If she can come all the way from England, surely the rest of us can make the effort.

A definite thread of social consciousness carries through a number of my replies. Nancy McBride French is lecturing throughout Buffalo on the Attica Bridge program in which she is actively involved. Volunteers in this program sponsor an inmate, lending primarily friendship and encouragement, as well as help in finding employment, medical aid and outlets for talents. (I wish I had endeavored to which I could sign my name!)

Bonnie Podolsky Theiner is still teaching at the School of Advanced Jewish Studies, but she and her husband have been active in a group which founded a Jewish day school, the Community Day School, which opened in September. And Mary Ann McCormick Tucker reports that she went back door-to-door campaigning last fall, as in Modesto, Society, but this time it was for her own husband, who was elected a council seat in their village of Deerpheaven.

Two gals in business in addition to rearing children are Ronnie Rittmaster Brenner and Nancy Munson McCormack. I'd so hoped to visit Ronnie's gallery of prints which was in New Orleans last fall. Alas, it was her day off! Before the birth of their baby, she made a last minute buying trip to New York, finished renovating their house and moved her gallery from the French Quarter to her house, where she now operates by appointment. Nancy says she "kind of fell into" the business of sewing for bridal parties, and that it's become a full time thing for her!

Families always fill the news! With all the activity reported above, Ronnie Rittmaster Brenner joined the ranks of us Lamaze enthusiasts, saying their "great excitement" was the birth of their "first Southern belle or Yankee family. . ." Next year, Ronnie will probably be Nancy Pierson Tolley and me in the knowledge of Nancy's words! "what mothers do all day — work hard. Especially chasing after one-year-olds!" Nancy McBride French's Amy has discovered about cram courses already as she had to be able to write her name, cross the street, tie her shoes in order to make it into kindergarten! Ann McCormick Tucker is dreading car pooling, four-year-old Jimmie to Montessori School, and has decided "four is much more difficult than two." She's also trying hard to be a better "first mate" at sailing, but her husband Jay's "handicap in the weekend races at the Y Club!" Jay changed jobs and is now Assistant Counselor at the Ravenhorst Corporation, an engineering and development firm. Barbara Morris Stock's son Aric, age 7, thought he was "in heaven" this summer while they lived in married student housing at Stanford with lots of children to play with. Lee was taking a Basic Science of Ophthalmology course there. Even baby Adam saw some swimming action! My sixteen-month-old Sallie had her first swimming experience too and may grow up to be a fish! Nancy Munson McCormack's husband was transferred south now they're eleven miles from a beach and a five mile bike ride from a lake. (Shouldn't have told us that, Nancy. We may all come to visit!) Her "chillens" all go to school this year and she's looking forward to going back to work and sewing for pleasure. Bonnie Podolsky Theiner reports that her four-year-old Immanuel will be a "senior" in nursery school this year! And Suanne Pollack Singer says she is trying singlehandedly to keep pediatrician husband Howard, in business. Four boys and the new housekeeping her "busy, busy."

Karin Rumstedt packed up sixth-grade son, Paul, took a month's vacation combined with business, and returned to Washington, D.C., New York and Canada. She receives BA from Berkeley and hopes to go on to graduate school. On the way to Stanford, Barbara Morris Stock and family itinerary included the Rocky Mountains and Lake Tahoe. They enjoyed the tourist role of wine-tasting and cable car riding but will be unhappily back in Lexington, Kentucky by this time, where Lee finishes his residency in July. They hope to spend a year in London, which answers Nancy Pierson Tolley's query: "Doesn't anyone ever come to England?" Marty Richards Cummings' husband, Rod, joined the staff of the Scott and White Clinic, the fourth largest private Ob-Gyn clinic in the United States, in Temple, Texas. After six moves in nine years, they are happily settled in their own home.

The baking business, music business and pleasure have taken Bruce and me (Ruth Ann Maier Bengtson) to New Orleans, Pittsburgh, New York, Atlantic City and Toronto this year. It's always nostalgic to get back to Pittsburgh, New Orleans and Toronto are the real big all-time winners in our book for this year. I've seen Jo Ann Rymer Light very briefly, plan to attend Barb Stein's wedding in October, and just had a fabulous visit from Margaret Fulwiler Jerneid and her two girls, Greta, age 7; Heidi, age 5. We held a non-stop talkathon and reached the conclusion that we both surely have changed!

Janet reporting:

At this point in time, with better hindsight, I would have mailed 28 letters only to receive seven replies. Therefore, I shall release the names of those I did not hear from, making my "list" known. Where are Jo Ann Rymer

Lightcap, Joan Scott, Barbara Silverman Freed, Linda Simmons Bacon, Carolyn Tamplin Ward, Carroll Terry, Susan Uptegraff Endersbe, Linda Wasson Bardonner, Grace Wilson Sundelin, Susan Wolpert, Linda Young, Joanne Zweig Freedman, and several associate members? Perhaps the postal service is inoperative.

Of those who did reply Mary Shaker certainly has the most dangerous job, teaching school (English), in Beirut, Lebanon along with attending graduate school in Beirut.

Mary Ann Wrigley Church is safer in Saginaw where she is active in the local La Leche League, church groups and Parent education which teaches prepared childbirth. Since she just had her third son, she was able to practice what she preaches.

It was good to hear from Barbara Stein after all these years. She is teaching pre-kindergarten in New York City, and will continue to work after her marriage.

Bonnie Taschler Casey has moved from the suburbs of Seattle to the inner city. She is teaching at two community colleges. Bonnie says she misses the east and might come back for a year's leave of absence — after she is tenured.

Linda Weinberg Rosensweig will be ready to teach shortly. She will complete her degree at Carnegie-Mellon in the not too distant future.

Betty Watson Merchant is working part-time at her husband's office and is president of the Community Preschool in Reston. Betty and Dave were able to go to Europe for three weeks without the children for a much needed vacation.

Sally TerBush Dreschler has moved as her husband is now general manager of the Gordon Terminal Services. She said one of the first people she met in New Jersey was a Chatham grad and also the tax assessor. Sally enjoys the Princeton area with its many cultural advantages.

Back in good old Pittsburgh, Natalie Selkovits Lustig is busy with her new son. She says hello to all.

Toba Schwaber spent the summer in England doing a field study. She says "I am struck by the unliberated form which is taken by this questionnaire." Even my husband agrees with Toba, but I am so tired from housework and children that I have not had time to liberate the form. It was a good year for us as Malcolm was elected a Fellow of the American Academy of Microbiology and I had my second son. We have decided that second babies should be born first. I do hope to see everyone at the tenth reunion. After all, to quote a Pittsburgh radio station's slogan, "Pittsburgh is someplace special."

Susie reporting:

Even with a new baby, Jackie Cain Miller manages to work two days a week coordinating a community controlled program for pregnant teens. Suzi Callas Francis is involved with the politics of daycare centers in her position as administrator of a cooperative playcenter. She and Dave just bought a house in time for a visit from Paul and Carolyn Smyser Hammer. Suzi is also busy with swimming, tailoring, and counseling at Planned Parenthood.

Leslie Caplan Itskowitz spent a winter week in Puerto Rico and is taking a course in the English novel at the University of Pittsburgh.

Susan Coleman Heckman is doing some substitute teaching while enjoying Jim's last year as a resident in orthopedics. The Heckmans have a house and are waiting to hear from the Army regarding plans for next year . . . Greetings, too, from Jane Coulter Burger.

Barbara Crick Klingsporn just had a visit from Anne Marie Oyex, a former French speaking Chatham exchange student. She also sees Scott and Kathy Hoover Hill frequently. The Klingsporns are involved with a new home and a cooperative nursery for their twin boys.

Louise DeCarl Malugen is still busy with her own law practice while husband John has switched to a larger San Diego firm. They are now condominium owners and see Mike and Rachel Stein Gragg often.

Nancy Dechter is still on the same job but is now practicing raja yoga meditation as a member of a Self

Realization Fellowship

Jerilyn Donahoe Lazor moved back to Pittsburgh from New York City and is working for Town Consultants, Inc. Does anyone know how she can get in touch with Joan Saglio?

The Brenners continue to enjoy New York. Josh, too, is in a co-op preschool and Mom is the president of the association while little Matt takes up the slack. In October we will have seen Dave and Ruehly Gallagher in Switzer land. Hopefully, by June Paul will have his doctorate, and we will take up our nomadic existence with the U.S. Army again.

Kathy reporting:

Carole Early Cupps reports a lot of summer activity considering her daughter's arrival at the end of June, vacation at Mackinac Island ("kids traveled well"), swimming, tennis, and crafts.

Marnie Elder Hodil and Ray have been transferred from Exxon International in New York to Esso Europe in London, where they expect to be for a few years. When she wrote, they were in transition between house in Westport and townhouse in London, which they chose after a whirlwind tour of the area. All this and a new baby girl!

Hannah Gilman reports "no real change." At University of Massachusetts-Boston's Institute for Learning and Teaching, she has been involved with community school groups and some in-service training for Boston teachers. She looks forward to the coming year and the school's move to a new campus outside Boston.

After three years as a social worker for Denver Welfare Dept., Sally Goedicke Payne is finishing a graduate degree in philosophy. She is "living in a feminist collective household, doing feminist theater and various political activities (women's center, publications, city administration)." In February she attended the national convention of NOW in Washington.

Irene Fraser Rothenberg receives her Ph.D. from the University of Illinois in October, 1973. She spent most of the summer in Mexico doing research on a new planned city outside the capital, and is teaching a course in Urban Politics this fall at Northeastern Illinois University.

Marjorie Friday Roberts, at Boston University, says she is halfway through the data collection for her dissertation in psych and hopes to finish the thesis in another year. Marty is also teaching part-time at a community college. In her "spare time" she helps Tom and Bronwyn, 2½, work on their almost 250-year-old house.

Ann Greenhouse Klein sounds busy. As if two sons, aged 4 and 2½, aren't enough, she is active in Chatham's Philadelphia alumnae group. This year she will be office coordinator for Resources for Women at U. of Pa. and does Problem Pregnancy counseling at Planned Parenthood.

Bill and Raquel Halty Ferguson "hope to get those elusive Ph.D.'s by June of '74." They taught last year at Boston U. and Tufts, and worked on their Halty-Ferguson Publishing Co. and Ferguson Press. In December they had a glorious trip to Paris, and in June a few days in Puerto Rico.

Bobbie Hewitt Orloff sends this postcard message "We renew each year our love for life in this tropical rain forest called Portland, Oregon. While the outside world rumbles and crumbles, we take shelter and love from our extended family, and Nixon is only a dirty word. Soon the country will be made whole again."

The arrival of her second son kept Judy Howard Reilly busy. She has become an "avid, if not good," tennis player.

It was a joy to get long letters this year from two old friends, Jarene Frances Lee and Isabel Hausner.

Jarene got a master's in journalism at Syracuse, and then became director of volunteer services at Trenton Psychiatric Hospital, a 1700-bed state facility. She enjoys working with the area college students who serve as volunteers, about 100 each semester. Jarene commented that while "Chatham may not have prepared me for a vocation," a liberal education makes sense to her.

Isabel has been a Community Development Field Representative for the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development for three years, administering Urban Renewal and Model Cities programs in 16 upstate New York communities. A long paper which Isabel prepared for the U.N. Centre for Housing Building and Planning, on housing policy formulation in developing countries, will be published as an official U.N. document this fall and was used as the basis for conferences in Puerto Rico and Moscow. For the present year Isabel has a Loeb Fellowship in Advanced Environmental Studies from the Harvard Graduate School of Design. She will be able to continue with her present job and to compare New York and Cambridge.

We were jostled out of our suburban routine by an Exxon transfer to Baton Rouge, La. from January to July. We had a warm winter of plantation tours, Mardi Gras, and early swimming, but a hot summer starting April 1! In August we moved to Wilmington, Del., my home town, where Scott has a new job at duPont's Chambers Works. Baby John arrived, fortunately, after the moving van got here and in time to be in this year's Recorder. My thanks to all who sent news this year.

Judy reporting:

Kris Jellison Casteel wrote a long letter about the joys of mothering one year old Glenn, who sounds like a challenge. She attended Barb Brennan's wedding in May.

Pat Kane has had an exciting year working on the installation of the American Arts Collection, "The American Arts and The American Experience," at the Yale Art Gallery, completed her catalogue and exhibition, New England Furniture: The Seventeenth-Century Style, and completed The American Clock, a catalogue of fifty clocks which she co-authored. This year she will continue to work full-time at her job and study part-time as a doctoral candidate in the History of Art Department at Yale.

Donna Kwall Smith and John moved into their new home and are both working as psychologists for ARIN a special service unit serving Armstrong and Indiana Counties in Pennsylvania.

Carol Levin Hill returns to school this fall at California State for her MA in Educational Psychology, while daughter Jennifer goes to kindergarten. Husband Ed is now in private law practice.

Rebecca Mark Orlinsky directed a day care program for elementary school children. Supposedly a part-time job, it turned out to be full-time, so with Ari only 3, she is looking for another part-time job. Husband Zeke's weekly paper continues to grow as does his printing company.

Bonnie Markey Seasonwein's husband Roger started his own marketing research business which is exciting but busy for both. When Bonnie is not working with Roger, or chasing Heather, she is doing various kinds of volunteer work.

Berry Marshall Hoak is back in Florida after 6 months in England. Husband Dale is a Professor of English History and will have his book published. Son Brady 2½ enjoys his new sister, Megan and swimming.

A freelance editor, Beth Marty Lentz has been working hard on several projects including a text on water quality control. In her spare time, she has been redecorating her home, gardening and sailing. She and Jack have had a steady stream of visitors including Barb Wallace from San Francisco. Jack is the publisher of Business Forum Magazine and Director of Marketing for a printing company.

Betsy McGregor Cooley writes that she is "combining the best of both worlds" with daughter, Alison and her job for Federal Women's Programs.

Nancy McNabb Davis wrote from the hospital while recovering from the birth of her first child, Andrew.

The big news for Marjorie Morrison Hofer and Bill is the "receipt" of their daughter Stacey Elizabeth on January 9, after a very long wait! Bill has changed jobs because the Hofers did not want to leave Florida. Besides Stacey and Bill, Marge is occupying herself with sewing, macramé and weaving.

Paula Mysell Evans also joined the ranks of motherhood with the birth of Nicholas. She will continue to teach psychology and history part-time. Husband Robert is a clinical psychologist.

Mary Bruce McCulloch Mitchell has revived her interest in gymnastics now that all three children are in school or nursery school.

The Pikes have spent a delightful year getting to know our daughter, Abby. Harl was ordained and we moved here to Arizona in June. We have national forest outside our backdoor and all kinds of sports near by. It feels good to be finished with studies and internship and really working. Besides taking care of Abby, I will do volunteer work at the local guidance clinic. If anyone is in or near the White Mountains, please stop by — the bears are not much company!

From India comes news from Shad Mirza Ahmad that she is "neek deep in work" — teaching at Aligarh Muslim University, Dept. of Sociology, and trying to finish the field work for her Ph.D. dissertation with the hopeful cooperation of Sophia and her new baby brother. She says she is looking forward to a reunion here in the near future.

Betsy reporting:

Patricia Mullen Tamura's biggest news is the arrival of their son, Cary. She may have to curtail her substitute teaching in private schools this year but plans to continue teaching ballet at the Brooklyn Music School and remedial reading in Harlem. Pat writes, "One of the schools I've been substituting in is for emotionally disturbed students — mostly from ghetto areas — and their real problem is an inability to cope with frustration in any way but slashing out." Sounds like Pat has her hands full.

Majoring in French at West Chester State College is keeping Deborah Payson Dechert busy. Both her children go to playschool in the mornings. George is now five and Martha three. Jackie Smythe Gawthrop '65 lives next door to Debby and is a wonderful neighbor.

Betsy Pincus Candler, besides doing family duties, is working with children who have learning disabilities and she is starting Montessori training in September.

Jennie (who belongs to Nancy Ross Delatash) crawls and gets into absolutely everything. Nancy received her Master of Library Science a year ago from the University of Maryland.

Nancy Ruehl Gallagher and her husband, David, are living it up overseas. Nancy writes that it's easy to go broke saving money on all the bargains. She is teaching at the base school while David finishes his last year of duty in the Navy as flight surgeon. She extends a warm welcome to Chathamites touring in the Naples area. When does the next flight leave?

Sheila Sadin Nevins is busy with Elizabeth (3) and Andrew (1), an on-the-go husband, and a new house. Sounds like fun!

Catherine St. Clair Sustarich has a new job in the accounting department of the Coca Cola Bottling Company of Palo Alto. Cathy has joined the Peninsula Symphony Association, promoted advertisements for the programs, sold fashion show tickets, and modeled for the newspaper. In July Cathy was in Pittsburgh for her brother's wedding and had time to visit Chatham and Myrna Hill in the Alumnæ Office.

Mike and Sally Saunders Johnston visited Ann Sparks Haight and George in Louisville, Kentucky during their vacation. Sally writes that this is their last year in Baltimore and that next year is in the hands of the Army.

Carol Sheldon Hylton is half way through her Advanced Specialist degree which is a master's plus thirty credits. She is enjoying studying human development. Carol has also been receiving training in Gestalt Therapy since December. Her husband, Bob, has his A.G.S. degree and is practicing Gestalt therapy and rehabilitative counseling. In the fall, Carol will be teaching a multi-aged group at the North Lake Elementary School again.

Sandi Smith Mueller is busy with a new baby and a new old home — a century old New England Colonial. The Muellers are living in Illinois where Jim is teaching an advanced field course for Northwestern. Jim also conducted field school in Massachusetts.

Our outdoor enthusiast, Sherrie Smith, taught skiing at Loon Mountain in North Woodstock, New Hampshire. It was fun despite a disastrous winter in New England for skiing. Being in a place that people like to visit, Sherrie sees lots of people. Pat Blayden and Carol Brown (former English prof) came from Pittsburgh and Sally Mercke Heym '63 from Boston. Since Larry Cox was a PR man at Loon, Sherrie saw lots of Susie Soule Cox '65. She later worked for the Tamworth Summer Enrichment Program, directed by Helen Reed Steele's husband, Dana. The fall brings a new job for Sherrie — teaching art in the Franklin Schools in Franklin, New Hampshire.

As for myself, I don't know where to begin! Last year I helped to start Penn Circle Community High School, an alternative school for truants and drop outs in Pittsburgh. Once opened, my duties included fund raising, publicity and teaching. I also completed my Master of Theatre Arts degree at the University of Pittsburgh. On June 30th, my father married Gene and me in my parents' living room. This coming year I'll be directing a church choir, singing and staging a Christmas play. I can hardly wait to get back into music and drama! This September Gene and I are spending two weeks vacation in Deming, New Mexico where we met. We will be married a second time there in a church ceremony.

Barb reporting:

Jane Trader Moore writes that she has retired from teaching biology and ecology and is playing the role of mother to Andy. She and Rich have bought a home in the country and have a large vegetable garden which takes a lot of time. Janice Thomas Wolf is also very much occupied with her children, Beth who is 3 and baby Heather. She writes that her husband has been working hard in his profession and is now a registered jeweler through the American Gem Society. Janice is currently co-registrar of the Rodef Shalom's Mother's Day Out Program.

Sue Taylor Colgan and her husband Peter have been working on renovating an old rooming house and turning it into a liveable townhouse. She still likes her job as senior Pension Marketing Analyst for the New England Life Insurance Co. It gives her management freedom and satisfaction. She frequently sees Kit Fenninger Ramage and Hilary Prouty Van Rennselaer.

Patty Williamson Baker writes that she has her old job and a new apartment and is both content and restless. She and Don are traveling less so any visitors are welcome.

Sage Tower Mumma is always so busy that I barely know where to begin. She writes that a large amount of time is spent running after Peter, age 4½, and Amy, 2, and in between that she and Mike are still fixing up their house, growing vegetables and Sage is leading a Girl Scout Troop. She eventually hopes to return to school for some refresher courses which she hopes will help her entry in a Physicians Assistant Program. Mike is fine and still likes his job with NASA.

Joan Stahlbrodt Lewis returned to teaching a year ago and found that David, her youngest, adjusted more quickly to it than she did. This year she is teaching 6th grade. Between the children and various pets at home, Joan says she sometimes feels like she lives in a zoo of mischievous animals.

As for me, all is well in San Francisco. I still like my job at the University of California Medical Center but as winter approaches find myself involved in great schemes to figure out how to keep my job but ski most of the winter. Any ideas are welcome.

Macquie reporting:

Cathy Beard Davidson writes that she is "trying to raise two boys with a minimum of shouting, on my part at least, growing vegetables, beheading ducks, canning excellent tomato puree; reading May Sarton books; and drinking wine in the evenings with John." Sounds pretty nice, doesn't it?

Vera Berkowitz Greenberg saw her son Martin depart on the bus for nursery school this fall with mixed feelings. She writes, "I was excited for him, but sad to see him growing up so fast." Vera is working a few hours a week in the family clothing business, and planning to get more involved when her children are older.

Marcia Binstock Swartz writes, "Louis and I are extremely enjoying our roles as new home owners. Our new areas of education include the effects of aphids on shrubbery, the construction of a household wiring diagram, and methods of eliminating rainwater in the kitchen during storms with northwesterly winds! I am still kept busy working two days a week as a systems analyst at Westinghouse and marvelling at the ceaseless energy exhibited by Justin, who is now a year and a half."

Susan Brewer Dempster and husband Jim are very much caught up in their rapidly growing importing business. She writes, "We travel much of the time with one aspect or another of the business, so it has pretty much consumed us. . . . In the past two years I've lost all idyllic views I had of self-employment as a 'soft life.'"

Kathy Carlson Schuchat is very excited about her program at the University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Medicine, where she has a year and a half to go until finishing. While she attends school in Kansas City, her husband Bill is "financing this madness" by working as a newly promoted senior engineer with Monsanto Company in St. Louis. Kathy writes, "It's so exhilarating to realize that some men are really willing to live in such a way as to optimize opportunities for both halves of the marriage. He's unhappy with me gone (so am I!) but proud and supportive." They are both looking forward to Kathy's graduation. While Kathy was "Back East," as she now calls it, she saw Pam Davis Eldredge, who has finished her Ph.D. in French at Harvard and will probably go on to law school this fall. Pam's husband Charles is already practicing law.

Kathy Chalmers Kondylas loves their new home state of Alaska, where she spends much time skiing, camping, climbing mountains and enjoying the Alaska wilderness with her husband Andrew. She has recently learned to start a car at -30°, avoid "very hungry" bears and cut a Christmas tree in nine feet of snow. I am wondering about that last item. Do you get a tall one and just cut off the top or do you go right down to the ground? See next year's Recorder for the answer, if it comes at all.

OiFan Chan Linsley is in her second year of graduate school at the University of Pennsylvania, where she is studying Chinese and Japanese literature. She and Tom moved into a house at the beginning of September. Tom is an attorney with Community Legal Services. That is all I heard from OiFan, because her "mail was just forwarded to us in a package." She sends best regards to the class.

Becky Conrad Hahn and Larry are also in a new house. Becky writes, "I know it won't suit me 'til about five years from now and then everything will get paint and wallpapered all over again!" She is in her last semester of graduate school and teaching second grade. Larry received his master's degree last spring.

Jane Cooper is starting at Rutgers Law School in Newark this fall, and is doing a lot of new things after her divorce, including stopping smoking, buying a house, competing in class long distance swimming events and traveling.

My three Basenji dogs are lolling in the study as I write, and I am thinking that if I don't get cracking on my dissertation I will be spending all my days sleeping in the sun with them before long. I am again teaching political science at Kent State University, which I find to be a very exciting and time-consuming occupation. We moved into a house of our own about a year ago, aided greatly by Linsie Whitlock who helped us pack up family things in New York and drive the truck to Pittsburgh. Our house is just a few blocks from good old Chatham, and Kevin, the husband architect, has some great plans, which, of course, are going very slowly.

This is my first year as a class secretary, and I want to mention how much I appreciated the warmth and affection in the letters of those who replied to my somewhat late solicitation of news. I send thanks to those who wrote and hope more classmates will write, call or visit in the future, not just at class news time, but anytime at all.

Goldie reporting:

It's always a little difficult to find a single theme which will blend this column together. Everyone seems to be doing something a little different than the other, but this year my job is easier because I have the "movers" and the "non-movers!"

Most of those who changed residences did so because their husbands' jobs dictated the move. Alice Ireland Fesmire reports that Steve finished his Ph.D. at Carnegie-Mellon and has taken a research position at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Nova Scotia. Alice expects to enter the M.B.A. program at the same university. After 2 years in California Judy Herbst Goozh and Steve have moved back east where Steve is practicing dentistry. Before leaving California, Steve and Judy visited Hawaii.

Cathy Horowitz Saltzman also reports a new job for husband Marc and a new location. They're moving to Dallas, Texas where Marc will be a manufacturers' representative. There was an extra dose of love around the Saltzman household on Valentine's Day as Emily Rachel was born. Cathy taught practically until the day Emily was born but doesn't miss teaching a bit now.

Don't be surprised if a future issue of Better Homes and Gardens highlights a farm house renovated by Judy Hormats Stahl and husband, Danny. With the 100 year old farm house goes a farm on which the Stahls are boarding horses. Judy reports that she has quit teaching and is working full time in their store in Shadyside named "Oddities."

Sounds like Sue Esterman Borish could use some of the Stahls' furniture building talents. There was enough smoke damage during a recent fire to persuade Sue to move to another apartment and start anew. Before returning to her 8th grade English teaching position, Sue spent 2 fabulous weeks in Greece touring Athens and the Greek Islands.

While Sue's new apartment is in center city Philadelphia, Shelly Israel Mark and her husband have moved from the city to the suburbs of Long Island. An advantage (?) of suburban life is a lawn but Shelly says it's like another mouth to feed. She enjoys working for her local B'nai Brith Chapter and taking care of 2 year old Valerie. She also sees Nat Dingle Bazzell '67 who does not live too far away.

The "non-movers" haven't changed residences but nor have they stayed put! Pat Elio Cash traveled in Japan last fall and just returned from a backpacking trip to Glacier National Park. She and Dennis hope to have some alumnae visit them in California soon.

Gail Fishberg is teaching 6th grade this year and spent the summer working with children at the Mercer County Camp for Handicapped Children. She found it to be one of the most rewarding jobs she's had in the teaching profession. Gail has also traveled to the Virgin Islands and plans to go to Europe this year.

Jill Dworkin Eisner is really moving, too, but not to a new home. Jill and Irwin's new son keeps them on the move! And if things aren't busy enough, Jill has been tutoring in math and hopes to substitute in the fall.

As for me, Goldie Jaffe Katz, I belong in the category of "non-mover" as Joel and I moved into a new house last year. "We did get to vacation in Florida and New York and took our daughter, Amy, to Philadelphia for a weekend. We had a marvelous summer with her and can't believe how fast she's growing."

Heard from Bobbi Livingston Reitzes who would like to visit Chatham and Pittsburgh soon. Hope to have a larger response next year.

Zelda reporting:

Jennifer Johnson Rettig is now both church organist and choir director. Christine Joyce Miller and her husband, Ray, are moving to larger quarters and have joined the ranks and taken up sailing. Alice Kessler is teaching, and has taken on a first and second grade combination class. Last year she was a Pilot Teacher in a child-centered and activity oriented classroom.

Mary Knipmeyer is working on her Ph.D. at Catholic University. For the last year she has been working at a community mental health center in the research and clinical information unit. She passed her doctoral exams and is looking forward to researching sex role development in young children in Spain.

Kathy Kratt Neeley is medical librarian for the School of Medicine at the University of Minnesota in Duluth. When Jim gets out of the Coast Guard next June, they hope to return to the Pittsburgh area. Gisela Krueger Fashing and her husband Norman have also been traveling. They crossed the country several times this summer and were relieved to finally settle in Williamsburg, though they miss the clean air of the prairies.

Carole Kuhn Silver is a supervising teacher for the Department of Mental Health, working in day care centers for severely retarded children. She notes that there's a big push in Massachusetts and in the community to keep these children out of state institutions and bring out those in state schools. She mentions the frustrations of handling bureaucratic politics, but firmly believes that the new program is extremely worthwhile. We couldn't agree with her more.

Jennifer Lewis has a job now on the technical staff at M.I.T. in their Center for Policy Alternatives, doing what she has wanted to do for a long time—substantive research in the environmental area, studying such things as energy research and development and coastal zone management.

Bobbi Livingston Reitzes hopes to find a part time teaching job and spend the rest of the time with her son, Benji, "just watching him grow." Sarah Llewellyn is Organizing Secretary for the Oldham District Community Council. She says a community council is a voluntary organization which supplements statutory social services through voluntary action, especially in such areas as community development and self help.

Dorothy Lowenthal Raizman has just started law school at American University, and we all wish her luck. I just started this summer as an instructor in psychology at Kentucky State University in Frankfort. Besides teaching, I'm doing research studying subclinical malnutrition as related to intelligence and am trying to set up a complete major area in psychology. Teaching General Psychology is great, and I'm looking forward to teaching Abnormal Psychology spring semester.

As part of a continuing plan to explore the changes we are experiencing as people and as women, changes that aren't reflected in statistics, this year we discussed what we want to do with our lives, our goals. Many of us are primarily concerned with the job that needs to be done now. We have taken on challenges, and seeing them through fills most of our time. Alice Kessler tries to look at her life year by year — and hopes to teach her classes to be self sustaining, yet sensitive to others. Goals for herself include seeking to understand past experience while remaining open to the new. Bobbi Livingston Reitzes wants to bring up unscrewed children, to teach, and to become fulfilled. She says, too, that she may just choose to sit back and watch everyone else accomplish.

Longer term goals are even harder for us to define. Dorothy Lowenthal Raizman hopes to learn to apply the idea of "innocence to experience" to her own life — and notes that goals and people change, as she feels she has since she was a student. Kathy Kratt Neeley, with marvelous candor, wrote that her goal in life is to have everything she's always wanted, and intends to reach that by making money, not babies. I also would like to be rich, but for the meantime, I've found that teaching college and doing research is everything I've ever wanted out of a career.

Perhaps the most comprehensive reply is that from Gisela Krueger Fashing, who, when asked what she wanted to accomplish with her life, wrote, "I wish I could tell you!"

Georgia reporting:

Fall has indeed fallen upon me this year with a great thump, and I almost didn't make the deadline to include all the news that fits, to coin a phrase. My Ph.D. overview was accepted at Pitt in May, and since then I have been frantic in my attempts at research. Jim is an Assistant Professor at Allegheny County Community College, and has been asked to present a professional paper at the Community College Social Science Association Convention in Chicago in November.

Emily Hill Buka, her husband, Jack, and daughters Stephanie (3 years old) and Adrienne (born July 14, 1973) visited us Labor Day weekend. Ann Joseph will be visiting me this weekend. Her new job as Federal Women's Coordinator for the Environmental Protection Agency, Region III, requires extensive travel. The position involves seeing that women in that field realize full potential in their career development. In addition, Ann has been promoted to Acting Chief of Water Enforcement, for the E.P.A.

Also forging ahead in her field is Audrey Pysh This, who is "a thesis away" from an M.A. in Elementary Education at Pitt. Steve is in his last year of orthopedic residency at University of Pittsburgh Medical Center. They are presently living in a renovated 125 year old house, on a 7 acre farm. Audrey tells me that her eldest daughter, Kimberly, starts kindergarten this year, and her youngest daughter, Melissa, will be in nursery school.

Caroline Roth Petit has married, and is working on her M.S. at Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health, in the field of public health education.

Pam Poch Foote has a new job in personnel work with Citicorp Leasing, part of First National City Corporation, the parent company of First National City Bank. Pam and John cruised the Caribbean on the Queen Elizabeth II and spent two weeks at Cape Cod this past year. While in Massachusetts, they visited Cris Joyce Miller and her husband, in Marblehead.

Leslie Miller Eggers has traded her job at I.B.M. for a year of domesticity. She keeps busy professionally as a part-time consultant on systems analysis, and attended a seminar at Chatham on Women and Career Opportunities Maury's Ph.D. overview has also been accepted (welcome to the club!), and he works as a systems analyst at Pitt's Computer Center.

In addition to planning her wedding, Marcia Mount has received a promotion. She will be supervising Bryn Mawr College graduate students in Social Work at the Central Montgomery Health Clinic.

Chilton Richardson Knudsen is now teaching advanced biology at my old alma-mater, Winchester-Thurston School. (She attended the Ellis School. For those of you who were girls' field hockey fans when dinosaurs ruled the earth, 1960-1964, we were contemporary adversaries on the "turf.") Chilton writes that she enjoyed traveling in Scandinavia this past summer. Michael is currently on the research faculty at Carnegie-Mellon.

The population of the United States has been complemented by the progeny of two class-mates. Barbara Morgan Spiegelman, and Deborah Rosch Blanchard. Although the Spiegelmans have a new house and two boys now, Barb is involved in recruiting people to organize the Pittsburgh Juniors Alumnae Club. Any volunteers? Stan passed the state examination and is now a registered Professional Engineer.

Debbie not only has a new daughter, but also has completed 18 credits towards her Ph.D. in Semitic Studies and Ancient Cultures, while Dick is a first-year resident in Internal Medicine. Incidentally, Debbie writes very enthusiastically of the Lamaze prepared child-birth method, for those of you who may be "considering."

Kathy Osmond is now settled in a new apartment in Natick, Massachusetts. She works in the Financial Aid Office at Wellesley College. Kathy also has promised to visit me, so I shall close, as I began, a fixed orb in the revolving world of ex-Chathamites. Thanks to all of you who responded this year.

Pati reporting:

The news seems to be sparse this season, but greetings have come from Davida Tunis Philips who reports that she, Richard, and Marc are all fine. Marianne Schlittler Haller sends news of her marriage in May to Eugene Haller, a post-doctorate fellow in physics, and says that she is now studying arts and crafts.

Leslie Tarr Laurie has a new job as the Executive Director of the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts and is attempting to provide comprehensive family planning services (both medical and social) to those who desire such advice. Elie Scheerer reports having a new job, too. Elie is an assistant professor in the College of Education at the University of North Florida in Jacksonville. She is an academic and career advisor as well as counselor and teacher at this new university. Barb Stern Heffer is teaching, too. She teaches children with learning disabilities and enjoys it. Barb and John visited Bobbi Livingston Reitzes and her family last winter.

Gail Young Browne sends news from Kansas. She is working on her Ph.D. in Psychology and has a "half time" research position with the Menninger Foundation. Gail's husband, Dick, is working on his internship in Clinical Psychology at the Kansas City V.A.

Laurie Weiss Rothman writes from Canada that she is still recruiting and interviewing foster parents, while also enjoying Reuven, who is now 18 months old and a "real challenge." She extends an invitation to anyone who is visiting in the Toronto area.

Candy Saly Curry and her husband Norman are enjoying life in Bowling Green, Ohio where Norm is a teaching fellow while working on his Ph.D. in English. Candy has been keeping busy and enjoys being a "housewife."

As I am writing this report with one hand, I am unpacking boxes with the other! Jay and I just moved into our first home. It's a 40 year old house and we are learning a lot about papering, painting, plastering, and plumbing. In my "free" time I am beginning another year of teaching. I hope that I received all the news which was sent to me in spite of moving!

Diane reporting:

It is, as I write this, a perfectly vile day in New York and I am deeply envious of those who have had the good sense to avoid Fun City as a place to live.

Betsy Belcher MacMillan is presently doing her avocation with a vengeance: she and husband John are living in Vermont, where Betsy is directing a Head Start program. Rutland and John is a consulting forester. Vermont can claim Bonnie Brown Mooney as a part time resident. Bonnie and Richard own their second home near Mt. Snow where they enjoy skiing in the winter and clean air year-round. During the week, Bonnie is a sales representative of Xerox, a job which offers her ample freedom. She hopes to be visiting Chris Andrews Houghtlin in Cleveland in the fall as Richard will have a business show there, by the time it reaches print, they may have had a mini-reunion of two.

Pennsylvania still attracts a number of class members. Mary Archick Antimary and Ralph are living near Pittsburgh now. Ralph is part owner and manager of a music store, and most of Mary's day is spent caring for actor Michael, who's nearly three. A young son also occupies the attention of Linda Caplan Goldman; Linda's Michael was two in June.

Vicki Aldridge Ross is working as a conciliator for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Pittsburgh. Her husband Charles is in law school at Pitt.

Out on the West Coast, Linda Canan Horn is a social worker placing foster children and doing volunteer work with Planned Parenthood. She and her husband Ronald run "Hotel Horn" on occasion; they've received visits this year from Naida Karoly Finane and Karen Niles Crichton.

And on the East Coast, Massachusetts is home for at least three Chathamites. Pru Brighton is a reporter on the Lowell Sun, Nancy Clark is studying nursing, and Carol Botula is teaching in a newly opened school in the Boston area.

Anne Bucher Ertel and Jeff have sold their trailer and moved to New Jersey while contemplating how to finance a house. Anne is with the telephone company in Pennsylvania, and Jeff is attending school at night.

Closer to home (mine, that is), Trinka Bickler and Chris Biel are living and working in New York. Trinka has been promoted to art director for Opera News, and Chris is assistant buyer at Sears, Roebuck. Oh, to be an up-and-coming young executive!

And I, after six months of staring at the ceiling and wondering "What am I going to do with My Life?," decided that the lure of the urban environment was just what I needed to break the monotony of small town after small town. So I'm working for a Japanese bank and wondering what I really needed may have been another small town after all. Nevertheless, I do enjoy my work and my environment, and I trust that this issue of the Recorder finds you all equally content.

scale. On the subject of address change, if anyone knows whereabouts of Judy Robbins '71, please let me know. Robin Weiss, '72, and I have been trying to track her down over a year. Thanks!

Katrine Geha Kirm and husband Steve moved from Missouri to Kentucky this fall to assume staff psychologist positions with the North Central Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board in Elizabethtown, Kentucky. Katrine and Steve are both slated to receive their Ph.D.'s in psychology this December. Congratulations!

Aleta Giacobine Bremer is now residing in Houston, Texas where husband Malcolm is a resident in cardiac surgery. Aleta saw Nance Jacobson '69 who was married to Ian Davidson in June, 1973, and visited Anne Murton who is finishing a graduate degree in cinema at Columbia University.

Sherry Handsman Steiner has returned to Chatham County. Her husband, Julius, is a lawyer with the National Labor Relations Board in Pittsburgh. Sherry is Assistant Director of Sales Service for KDKA-TV.

Judy Foecking is in Germany with a program sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of German. She is teaching English to 8th, 9th and 10th graders. Judy also plans to begin work on her Ph.D. dissertation.

Melissa Dodge Lloyd and husband Mike have bought a new condominium in Farmington, Connecticut. Melissa saw Abbie Grey Loving last spring.

Several alumni traveled and vacationed this summer. Pam East traveled in Nova Scotia and Ellen Gonchar spent time at Martha's Vineyard with Cindy Plotkin. Caryn Hall, Ernstine and Larry vacationed in Georgia, Disneyworld and Pennsylvania.

Bev Hardy Bogley spent the summer in Williamsburg, Virginia, on an archaeological dig of colonial sites. The dig marked the interest of National Geographic Magazine who came to take pictures.

Good luck to Laura Cordrey Rossmore who is currently writing her master's thesis in occupational therapy. I know what that's like!

As for me, Harvey and I had a beautiful summer exploring Greece and Israel. It was difficult getting back to work, but after three weeks of teaching I'm readjusted. Our school is experimenting with a nongraded structure which is quite challenging. I had a fantastic reunion last spring in Boston with Cathy O'Daniel, Cindy Plotkin, Pam Gast, Jane Jarusch, Phoebe Morse, Cookie Ungar, and Ellen Weller et al. Shalom!

heri reporting:

Ann Lange received her M.A. from Boston College last spring and sometimes works on her thesis for her Ph.D. She is now the instructor of philosophy at Queens College in Charlotte, N.C., an institution apparently structured very much like Chatham. Because Ann is the philosophy department at her new campus, she writes that she has a free ticket as to what she will teach. Sounds terrific, Ann, and good luck.

Another classmate who has become a college instructor is Janet Kugler James. Jan and Gene have moved "to the country" and she now has the position of composition instructor at Seton Hill College in Greensburg while taking pursues toward her teaching certificate. She writes of a joyful summer and enjoyed seeing Ellen Judson, Charlie and Vicki Aldridge Ross, and Naida Karoly Finane.

Now that Kitty Kramer Kraji is a free spirit, she has more time to devote to her career. She is still a senior programmer at Mellon Bank and is also in the M.B.A. program at Pitt.

Peggy Kerestes Chain is still in Ithaca, N.Y. where husband Michael will receive his master's degree from Cornell and finish his M.P.S. program in May. Peggy saw Ray and Pris Jameson Richardson with their little boy over the summer. She also writes that there is nothing new with her, that she has no idea where they will be living next year, and sends her best to all.

Jim and Naida Karoly Finane took a camping trip out West in June. While touring Frisco they stayed with Ron and Linda Canan Horn who reside in Berkeley. Jim is still budget analyst for the Dept. of Administration of Wisconsin.

I don't know whether Betzi Jackson's life is that interesting or whether it is just her writing style. I will try to coherently condense her three page letter into one paragraph. Please forgive me if I botch it — remember I was psych. major. Last year Betzi worked for Readak Educational Services of New Orleans and taught a developmental reading course in four schools all over the country. When in June she took a two week weaving course at Johnson State College in Vermont. In between the above and before her bicycle trip to Nova Scotia she saw Phoebe Morse who a) has a new dog, b) looks terrific and c) is law clerk for the Vermont Supreme Court after graduating from law school. Betzi also saw Annie Wakely at the Farm and Wilderness Camps in Plymouth, Vermont. She also recommends for all of us to look at MS, magazine which she says speaks to all of us. She has no idea what she will be doing next year and yes, Betzi, I am a mother.

And so is Pris Jameson Richardson who is busy with the little Willie but found time to visit with Lin Sigg '71. Not much other news, she writes, just "hi" to all.

Sue Dann Rothenberg writes that Craig is almost a year old, takes up all of her time and that she loves every second of it. (I dare you to say that when he is two, Sue.) Sue's husband Rick has gone into a dental practice, is the head of the dental department of Kessler's Institute, and is remaining on the staff of Beth Israel Center.

Speaking of busy husbands, Joel is now an M.D. He is in a residency at Eye and Ear Hospital. I saw a lot of Ellen Judson and Gail Whitman Rudenstein '71 at the pre-graduation affairs. Matt is in a toddler play group at the Y-1KC where Sharyn Fireman Ruben is on the staff so I see her occasionally. Kathy Donahue Freyvogel lives across the street from me, and I saw Julie Metzger at the club where she taught tennis over the summer. Everything in my life was going really well, and then my father suddenly passed away. My best to all who wrote this year. I hope more of you write next time and my final word today is — Sherry Handsman Steiner — if you are in the city, please call me.

Jane reporting:

Strange as it seems, sending out questionnaires late brings great results — sixteen out of twenty-one responses filled my mailbox! I'd better leave the country next summer too!

The biggest surprises this year are babies. Both Sue Morehouse Wandell and Corky McCutcheon Jobin have toddlers who are over a year old by now. Sue and Raymond not only moved, but brought their brick house with them! Sue's working on her M.A. in History at West Virginia University. Corky, George and Lindsey are now living in the great climate of suburban Atlanta. George is a radio and sports broadcaster and Corky's job hunting. Gregory is the latest arrival at the Paull house. Sue Narrow Paull and Irwin are working full-time at being parents. Irwin's babysitting when he's not studying and Sue hopes to go back to work for the Hamilton County Welfare Department in foster home placement. Best wishes to them and all the proud parents!

A few 1970 graduates are still at school themselves. Delphine McMaster is a senior medical student at Temple University Medical School. Dena Loncoske Boxler is at Pitt teaching chemistry and doing research.

Barb McEliece and Janet Olds Davison sends regards and want to be sure folks know their current addresses.

Cheryl Oikes, as she wishes to remain, and her husband Paul Stoller are in Watergate — oops, I mean Washington, D.C. Cheryl's a "demi-bureaucrat information type" in HEW's Office for Civil Rights, handling enforcement of anti-race and sex-discrimination laws. To keep from ossifying, she says, she's freelance editing a promising first novel. Paul's a graduate student in sociolinguistics at Georgetown University. David Crichton, husband of Karen Niles Crichton, is a graduate student at the University of Michigan. Karen's a physical therapist at St. Joseph-Mercy Hospital. She spoke with Mary Kay Connell who is happy and well in San Diego. ATTENTION Sheila Willard! Karen would love to hear from you.

Dede Newport's a busy librarian at the Alpha Park Library in Peoria, Illinois. The library's growing and a new job is in the picture for Dede as a special services consultant providing the governor signs the necessary bill. New neighbors of ours are Kim Oates Tumbler and Joe. After a bad experience in Philly, they've moved to the quieter suburbs of New Jersey. Joe finished at Pitt Graduate School and is now a securities analyst at Girard Trust Bank. As of this writing, Kim had just started working as a gal-Friday for an insurance management firm.

Phoebe Morse is an esquire now! Before graduating from Boston College Law School, she worked for their Legal Assistance Bureau and the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights doing prison work. After the ordeals of the Massachusetts and Vermont Bar Exams, she began clerking for the Vermont Supreme Court. The clerkship has a one year term and then she'll be seeking a job in criminal law. In August Phoebe attended Suzanne Wilson's wedding. Maggie Dawson was a beautiful maid of honor. Rose Mary Liguori Dahood has been going to weddings too. First, her own to Michael which had Alison Oakes, '69, and Sally Coburn as attendants. Rose went to New York for the festivities of Susan Thorne's wedding to J. Paul Chautemps, a classmate of Michael's. Sherry Handsman Steiner, Andy Pratt and Ginger Allen Taylor were also on hand. Rose and Michael are both working in banks — he's an analyst — and they're busy moving all their books and other belongings to their new condominium. I must apologize to both Phoebe and Rose for the "green questionnaire." I returned from Israel too late to do anything about its inadequacies. Next year I promise revisions — suggestions are more than welcome.

And last but not least, the teachers! Molly Miesse Patterson is beginning her fourth year as a French teacher in the Pittsburgh Public Schools. In her spare time she attends Duquesne Grad School, does volunteer work for Kingsley House, freezes and cans her home-grown produce, repairs antique furniture, and does needlework and gourmet cooking! David's beautifying the house, too, when he's not working at a Pittsburgh law firm or studying at law school. Molly writes of seeing Nedra Sheatz and Kathy Donahue Freyvogel and Ty in the Pittsburgh area. Sally Miesse's living in Shadyside and Beth's a sophomore at Chatham — quite a dynasty.

Normandie Lee Childs and Geoffrey have forsaken New York City for the clean air of Vermont. She's completed her M.A. in Education at New York University and the Childs are planning a six month trip to Europe before settling down to teaching in Vermont or New Hampshire. Normandie saw Melanie Duncan and Trinka Bickie in the city. They seem to like it, but Normandie and Geoffrey are happy to be able to breathe again.

Gayle Parker Celayir has begun teaching at a very innovative school. The Academy of the Holy Cross in Kensington, Maryland, is far removed from the traditional image of a private Catholic girls' school. Gayle's also taking yoga and oil painting, and hopes to begin a Ph.D. program in Curriculum and Instruction. This summer she visited her husband's family's summer home near Istanbul. Along with meeting many new relatives, she had a lot of adventures and a great time.

As you've already guessed, I've been traveling too. I spent two weeks in Greece, then went on to Israel. The summer was marvelous and it's hard to return to teaching in Philadelphia. Ellen Gonchar and I hope to pull each other through the long cold winter. I'm taking Hebrew lessons, so don't be surprised if next year's alumni report arrives air mail from you know where. Shalom!

P.S. — The most sincere condolences to Cheri Kohn Schwartz and her family on the sudden death of her father.

Susan reporting:

I'm happy to report that my questionnaire return rate was much higher this year than last (although not 100%, alas!), and my paranoia has temporarily subsided. The first questionnaire to come back to me was from Susie Patton. In fact, Susie has been first two years in a row! She's in graduate school at the University of Wisconsin and expects to complete an M.A. in Arts Administration next May. She spent last summer as an assistant at the Lake George Opera Festival in Glens Falls, N.Y.

Pat Peckinpugh reports that she finally moved to the mountains outside of Denver and doubts that she'll ever be able to live in a city again. She has started a dance company and a contemporary dance guild and adds that she's done quite a bit of performing in the last year.

Susan Rice Miller is still in Berlin with husband Robert, who is director of the America Haus there. Susan's as busy as ever, teaching English in an adult education program, studying the German language and the literature in courses offered in a University of Maryland program there. Robert is still trying to finish his M.A. in International Relations from Pitt, which he expects to do by December. Susan sends greetings to everyone.

Julia Pollock is now a manager in a department store and is still interested in history — she's the editor of a local historical journal. She spent part of the summer in New England and New Brunswick, Canada.

Esi Palar Martowardojo notes that she has become the "proverbial decadent housewife" since her marriage last February to Bambang, who studied mathematics at Oxford.

Cynthia Plotkin reports that she's turning 25! (Aren't we, or haven't we all!) She goes into more detail and it appears that she's very much in transition (again, aren't we all?). She has just completed a year in Boston, sharing an apartment with Cathy O'Daniel. She worked for the past eight months with acute psychotic patients at Worcester State Hospital and during that time began to study art therapy. Cynthia's now back in Pittsburgh, looking for a job in the mental health area and hoping to get a master's in that field.

Karen Schultz received her M.S. in Speech and Audiology last May, and is now working as a speech correctionist in Paterson, New Jersey. She also directs a children's choir at a local church.

Marilyn Scaranino Jones and husband Bruce are in Cleveland, where Bruce has joined a law firm. Wong has completed her Ph.D. at Brown and is an Assistant Professor of Spanish at Hiram College. She notes that with the job shortage, she feels very lucky to have her job. And I say that Hiram College is very, very lucky to have Wong!

I believe this is the first time that Jonnie Pearson McElroy has sent back her questionnaire to me. (I may be wrong about that.) She reports, also from Cleveland, that she's working on a master's of education at the state university there. She is tutoring in the Cleveland Public Schools, is involved in political campaign work, and attended Joni Potter's wedding in Long Island last December.

And I know that Clare Ruthenburg Silet is responding for the first time, because she enclosed a separate note telling me so. Her husband, Loring, teaches English at Iowa State, and Clare is finishing her M.S. in Special Education at Indiana University.

Wow! That's a lot of news! I have very little to add of my own. I went back to Pittsburgh last May for the International Folk Dance Festival and saw the campus for the first time since graduation. I was generally thrilled with the new construction, but I agree with Cynthia that the road through the quad is a bit unsettling. Spent my summer vacation camping on Cape Breton Island in Nova Scotia, and, like Pat, vowed never to return to the city again. But here I am, back in the Big Apple, and loving every minute of it. I'm on the verge of being promoted to assistant editor at Doubleday, but it hasn't officially happened yet, so I'll keep you all in suspense. And you'll have to wait until next year to find out which (handsome, young, Republican) Senator on Sam Ervin's committee has just signed up with my editor to do — yes! — a novel! Dvora Seff Millstone (one of my regular respondees), where are you? And my sincere apologies to Elinor Serotkin Biryani for never mailing you a questionnaire. A regrettable oversight and I promise it won't happen again. Auf Wiedersehen!

No 1970 class news was received from Patricia Williams.

No class news was received from Julie Wilkins.

Sally reporting:

There are quite a few of us still in school it seems. Carol Goldfarb is finishing her internship for grad school at the American University School of Government and Public Administration. At the same time she's working in the Department of Finance and Revenue in D.C.

Sue Galloway reports that she is "still plugging away" at her degree in library science from UNC. After spending the summer as an assistant librarian she's now certain she's in the right field.

Still in Pittsburgh is Mindy Genstein Sanjana, very excited about teaching, sixth, seventh, and eighth grade English in an experimental program at Arsenal. Meanwhile, she's working on her master's in reading and language arts at Pitt. Mindy's husband, Fal, by the way, is an engineer.

Linda Elkins attends Duquesne University majoring in reading in the Graduate School of Education.

Susan Hill is back in school after teaching 1½ years. She's in the Pitt Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences and hopes to return to the teaching profession by September of 1974.

Janis Glick Barthélemy is excited because she gets to take graduate courses free due to Jean's position at the University of Ottawa (he's Ass't. Professor of Management!) She's quickly learning French and takes anything else she desires. Before arriving in Ottawa, they spent three months in Switzerland (Jean was working), traveled all over Europe, and then went to Paris to meet Jean's non-English speaking parents.

Sally Davoren informs me she is still working as an Assistant Program Planner in the Mayor's office. She's happy, but a possible nervous wreck as her job encompasses almost everything dealing with people under twenty-five "who want to temporarily work with or learn about" Pittsburgh. She also endorses visiting in Malbaie, Quebec. With this vacation and her involvement in Mayor Flaherty's campaign, Sally's had a fulfilling year. She, like others, is thinking about graduate school in the future.

Charlotte Desmond Vaidya's plans include a trip to India with engineer-husband Nish in January. 'Til then she'll probably continue doing temporary work. Next September, she hopes to return to school; probably library science.

November 1, 1973, Billie Goldstein Narayanan and Kesh are moving to Massachusetts so that Kesh may begin his new job as Senior Research Engineer for Norton Company. The last year has been especially interesting for Billie since she visited India and spent some time as a mail "person" in Pittsburgh. Now she is applying to Harvard's Graduate School of Public Health for 1974.

Shari Goldstein Leibowitz's husband was graduated early from dental school. Now they're at Kessler AFB while Bruce practices and Shari looks for a new job.

Kathie Ferraro is still busy "writing about stoves and refrigerators" at Kaufmann's in advertising. In addition, she does free lance writing. She plans to begin work on contributing articles to a career journal for high school students.

Also working are Susan Gottlieb, as a travel agent in Florida, and Janice Crookham Riemer, as Director of the Farmington Historical Museum. Jan's husband Mark is practicing optician now.

As for myself, I am still in Pittsburgh, working for Torrich's Custom Hairpiece Shop. The next time any of you have a spare ten or twelve hours, call and I'll explain what I do!

Until next year —

Anne reporting:

Thank you H's through O's for all your replies and for being willing to submit your activities to my pedantic prose. I was really pleased to hear from so many people and to hear that you were doing some very constructive and interesting things. I have been attempting to find the time to do justice to your lives in between running a dorm and teaching American Studies at Concord Academy, but things have been hectic, meaning that very little creativity was able to go into this. Maybe next year . . .

The elementary schools are certainly being taken care of, in some classes at least. Melanie Morton will join the ranks in a fourth grade class in Pittsfield, Vermont. She received her M.S. in Elementary Education from S.U.N.Y. at Geneseo. Freddy Jo Levin Grafman continues to teach 6th grade while finishing a Master's in Public Administration at George Washington. She and Lew spent the summer in Chicago and saw Lisa Shuman, Sharon Gen Ray, Kevin Cartwright Cornell, and Jan Barr. During the summer, Carol Goldfarb, who is finishing her Master's in Public Administration at American University, apartment-sat for their place.

Jake is still working at the Western Pennsylvania School for the Deaf as art coordinator for the after-school program. She is considering graduate school in Special Ed and hopes to escape the environs of Pittsburgh. June Lovelace Davis will be teaching Special Ed. classes at Hinton, W. Va., and took courses in the field at the Virginia College of Graduate Studies. She and Glenn have been living out in the country and hope to find a place similarly located in Hinton.

Graduate school, however, seems to occupy much of our time and money. Pam Howard Lange was graduated from University of Connecticut with a Master's in Economics and is a junior analyst for the Hartford Insurance Company Group. Kathy Jenks is attending graduate school at Keene State College. She sends greetings and news of her engagement to Randall Elder, who is a landscape architecture student at Iowa State University. Barb Metzler Rial is beginning a Master's in Education and Elementary Guidance Certification at Gannon College. She was married to Fred Rial on July 14, 1973, with Judy Rea as bridesmaid and Peggy Yockey Marycz, Phyllis Patricia Cathy Setzer, and Susan Vance representing Chatham. Marian Marconyak is studying exercise Physiology at University of Pittsburgh. Last year she worked for Dr. James Diggory as a research assistant on a suicide prevention research project. Where is Anne Katsampes?

And, I wouldn't forget the lawyers. Maureen O'Neill still at Pitt, and doing damage to the marriage questions in the Recorder news forms. Dee Kopcha is taking a year off from law school and is moving to Baltimore with her husband, Mark Katlic, who is a med student at Johns Hopkins. Chris Santucci and Terri Rupani Nagel will be bridesmaids at the October wedding. Dee is intending to reapply to law school in the Baltimore-Washington area, the Katlic future salary level should be quite fat. Joy Kossack is rambling around at Georgetown Law and is secretly practicing a serious courtroom manner in her bathroom. Franc Keally writes that she plans to go to Africa for three months beginning January and hopes to enter law school in the fall.

Late news. Pip Merrick is studying conducting at Manhattan School of Music. Sunny Jenks is working for Master's in Instructional Technology (industrial training films) at Syracuse University. I'd just like to say that I have a lovely time at Amy Wroldstad and Jim Burger's wedding in Cleveland and at Anne Pantelich and Doug Hepper's wedding at Benedum, Shame and eternal damnation on J. Singer and Laura Merritt Comstock for not showing up!!!!

B. J. reporting:

First of all, I want to thank everyone for answering me because now I don't have to worry about taking up space with a lot of unnecessary words. I'll just start right in. Anne Pantelich was married this summer to Doug Hepper at Benedum lawn, which I heard was really nice. They're both out in California now. Anne is getting ready for architecture school in 1974, and Doug is a chemist with PPG. Lydia Paul Tapley and Dean were in England for a while this summer and will be returning to England permanently in the end of October. The man who gave the invocation at graduation was called to a church in Essex, about an hour and a half from London. Lydia invites anyone to visit who might be anywhere in the area.

Sharon Ray is with Market Facts, Inc., in Chicago. She is now Associate Director of Qualitative Research, doing work related to consumer behavior and motivation. Sounds like a good set up, especially because she travels to some pretty good towns. She is also starting grad school this fall in marketing, and sharing an apartment with Lisa Shuman.

Diane Pfanner is living in Vermont and starting her pottery again, as well as tending the garden, baking bread and doing some housework. She's up there with Tim Mueller and together they're enjoying life very much. Dianne and several other people have commented to me about the Recorder questionnaire, to the fact that more emphasis is placed on the "Husband's job" etc, as opposed to what we're all doing. If anyone would like to revise the whole thing, I'd appreciate if you'd send it to me or the Alumnae office. If not, I'll see what I can come up with next year.

Kathy Plunkett just got settled in Reading, Pa. as a claims adjuster for Travelers Insurance, Inc., and Kathy says it's a great job and has also found a fantastic house on the river. I heard from Susie Pons as well. She'd been working for a hi-fi company for eight months and is now working for the Hong Kong government.

Gayle Rose landed a job with Air France, and sounds happy with that. Karen Roberts Sellman is still out in Columbus, Ohio. She's teaching second graders, and Jerry is in law school. Suzanne Robblee Cottrelle is presently working for the Econ. Dept. at Pitt and will be starting grad school in history at Pitt this fall. Sydney Pool Scarborough completed her MBA in August and is now employed by the Mellon Bank as a management trainee. Pat Patterson Verschulz is at Pitt now in an MAT program. Jocelyn Rose Chapin is still in the Pittsburgh area as well. Her husband is Vice-President of Culverts, Inc.

Shelly Rosen wrote that she's now studying at the Medical College of Pennsylvania. Sheila Rosenbaum is back in Pittsburgh teaching at the new open-plan school in the Northside. She completed her MA in Elementary Math Education in June from the University of Michigan. Come and visit her, she says.

This past summer Terri Rupani Nagel and Rich together with Jene Schiros Beran and Bruce traveled across the country, sharing a lot of driving, camping and good times. Terri is working with her pottery again.

Among a number of other things Chris Sage has worked as a disc jockey and as a houseparent in a child care center. However, like a lot of us, she is looking for some other type of employment but is not sure just what! Ileana Saros is presently in her second year at Rutgers Law School in Newark. She worked as a legal intern in the Florida State Attorney's Office this past summer doing research.

Linda Schneider is working in PR at Gettysburg College. By October she'll be married to Paul John Miller who works for the government at Fort Ritchie as a comptroller. Linda mentioned that Lou Marsh will be in the wedding party.

While still working at the School for the Deaf in Pittsburgh Ellie Schechter Maney has begun her MA program at Pitt in education for the deaf. It isn't so easy getting back into school after a year off. I know how Ellie feels and I only took a 4½ month summer vacation. I hope to finish my MA in Russian Studies by early January. Right now I'm back in D.C. I had no place to live and Rhoda McLeod took me in. Occasionally I see Barb Studenmund around town and several other old friends. Enough for this year!

Amy reporting:

I seem to be the only one on my list with a marriage and new address to report: I am now Amy Burger and live on Hidden Valley Road, still in Pownal, Vermont 05261. Teaching is great — love those first graders! and Vermont is gorgeous. I saw Anne Peirce and Julie Wilkins in Cleveland this summer, and B. J. Singer drove up here in August for a quick weekend. Vermont really isn't that far away for visitors!

Several people have reported that they are in graduate school, will start, or have finished. Mary Stackpole is going to start Pitt in the Graduate School of Education this fall while still teaching second grade, and Robin Weiss has applied to Case-Western Reserve School of Medicine in Cleveland. Rob Weinbrenner Schuler is going to Carnegie-Mellon part-time for her master's in English while teaching high-school English. Sue Vance is at Temple University in her second year of their Ph.D. program in Child Clinical Psychology. She will be interning at a children's hospital, while pursuing field hockey with the Philadelphia Field Hockey Association and singing with the Philadelphia Chorale. Sue Tashoff received her M.A. in legal history from the University of Virginia and has entered their Ph.D. program for another three years of school — Cheers!! Carol Wuchina Snyder has received her Master's of Education from Pitt and is still teaching high school.

Nancy Tuttle Adam is teaching creative writing at Ellis School in Pittsburgh and is having some of her poetry published — yay!! Last, but hardly least (I just don't know how to take this bit of news!), Lynne Stauffer was made "manager of the Doubleday Newspaper Syndicate." Hello... I guess New York City agrees with her.

That's all from Vermont. Hope this is a good year for all.

OF SPECIAL INTEREST

President Eddy has made available eight double rooms on the first floor of Dilworth Hall for the use of alumnae who are visiting in this area and want to stay overnight on campus. An extremely nominal charge will be made and all reservations must be made in advance through the Alumnae Office.

Entering this September as members of the class of 1977 were six alumnae daughters: Marlane Agriesti, daughter of Jane Humphries Agriesti S'43; Kim Martin, Shirley Bemis Martin x'50; Heather Roberts, Dorothy Vale Roberts '42; Deborah Schaudt, Dolores Clayton Schaudt x'52; Ellen Stewart, Marcia Mamolen Stewart '52; and Liz Titelman, Barbara Maloy Titelman '54. Two freshman granddaughters are Cynthia Muir, granddaughter of Mary Shane Muir '25 and Marie Loxterman, granddaughter of Elise Searing Loxterman x'30 and great granddaughter of the late Elsa Braun Searing '02. Junior transfer Lydia Nassikas is the daughter of Eva Caloyer Nassikas '46.

Alumnae and English majors in particular will be saddened to learn of the deaths this past summer of Dr. Hazel Shupp Hutson and Dr. Robert L. Zetler. Mrs. Shupp, as she was better known to PCW-ites, died June 26, 1973 in Pittsburgh following a long illness. She served Chatham College as director of public relations and member of the English department from 1935 until 1953 when she joined Winchester Thurston School as acting headmistress and then head of the girls' secondary school until her retirement in 1964. Dr. Zetler died in Tampa, Florida on August 25, 1973. He was a member of the English department here from 1945 to 1960 when he left to become one of the first faculty members of the new University of South Florida.

Be sure to check the back cover of this issue of the RECORDER for the reunion schedule for June 1, 1974. It was felt by the Executive Board that alumnae were missing the opportunity to reunite more often than the schedule set by the modified Dix system under which the Alumnae Association has been operating. By returning to the five year reunion schedule and, at the same time, keeping the group reunion plan, it is hoped that "more alumnae could be pleased more of the time."

More than 160 Pittsburgh and Allegheny County residents enrolled in two informal, non-credit evening courses offered this fall by Chatham. Dr. Wing-tsit Chan, Gillespie Professor of Philosophy, taught a course on "The Cultural Heritage of China: Forces at Work." The course "Understanding People: Psychological Principles of Human Behavior" was taught by Dr. Frank Lackner, Professor of Psychology.

Have you wondered when your next class reunion will be?

Reunions will be held every five years as well as in groups of four.

The entire Alumnae Day program is open to all alumnae. Plan to attend whether it is your reunion year or not. You will be most welcome — and you will have fun.

PEOPLE AND THINGS

The Class of 1931 announces the establishment of the Beatrice Lewis Creative Writing Prize, named in memory of a classmate. The prize will be awarded annually with the advice of the English Department for an outstanding piece of creative writing by a Chatham student. Consideration will be directed first, but not confined to, tutorial writing. The prize, derived from income from a fund accumulated by the Class, will be in the $25 to $30 range.

Peg Heiman, for ten years a mainstay of the Alumnae Office, whom many of the alumnae came to know as their source of information about meetings, retriever of lost classmates and new addresses and many other services too numerous to mention, left the College last November and moved to Miami, Florida where her husband is now employed. Her successor is Myrna Hill whom many of the more recent alumnae may remember as a member of the library staff since 1965. She is a most welcome addition to the Alumnae Office staff and has quickly settled into the routine of the office.

Stephen Borsody, Professor of History, attended an international conference on "Eastern Europe: The Impact of Modernization on Political Development." The conference was held at Columbia University in New York in March.

Mona N. Generett, Director of Student Services and Financial Aid, was appointed by the Governor as a member of the Board of Directors of the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency. The Board makes all policy for the state's $530 million scholarship and loan program. There are twenty board members including sixteen members of the General Assembly and Secretary of Education. Her term expires June 30, 1977.

Karen C. Holden, Instructor in Economics, spoke at the University of Pennsylvania last fall to a seminar in the Department of Oriental Studies on the "Participation of Women in the Japanese and United States Labor Force."

Cynthia Linhart Williams '71, head resident of Pelletreau, presented a paper at the National Council on Measurement in Education convention in New Orleans in February. Her paper, "The Effects of Training on Rating Reliability, as Estimated by ANOVA Procedures, for Fluency Tests of Creativity," was her master's thesis at the University of Pittsburgh, Department of Educational Research.

The Alumnae Office sincerely regrets that it neglected to report the death in December, 1971 of Dr. Carl W. Doxsee who had been head of the English Department from 1920 to 1953. As Miss Laberta Dysart states in her history of the College, "Throughout the thirty-three years he was a member of the faculty, his colleagues revered him for his broad learning and great humility." Several of his students described him as "quiet, knowing and brilliant" and "a constant challenge."

Feedback:

Normally this column would be reserved for you, the readers of RECORDER. We have, alas, received no letters to print as yet, although we find it hard to believe that you have no opinions you wish to air either about the RECORDER itself, or any other subject of interest to the alumnae of Chatham/PCW.

Some of you very kindly included notes in your Alumnae Fund replies to the effect that you enjoyed the fall issue, and for these we are grateful. We have received some personal messages of encouragement, also appreciated, but somewhere out there we are sure some of you are saying, "Why don't they do an article about," or "I could write something better than that!" We are straining our ears and pestering the mailman. Please Write!

In the Fall 1973 issue of RECORDER look for articles on the opening of the new Jennie King Mellon Library, a report from Graduate student/Archeologist Suzanne Martin '69 on sorting chards in Greece, and more, much more. September 15 is the deadline if you have something to send us.

IN THE MEANTIME

We have a question for all our readers and we would like to hear your thoughts on this subject. As many responses as space permits will be published in the next issue. The question is:

In view of the present concern for equal rights for women, what form of address do you feel is appropriate for a woman, married or single? Why?

Alumna Honored by Chatham

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on Chatham College alumna Mary Virginia Brown Bowden '36 (Mrs. Gordon T. Bowden) at the May 26, 1972 Chatham graduation. Mrs. Bowden is presently Supervisor of the Economic Research Department of New York Life Insurance Company and serves as an officer in numerous economic and statistics associations. She was an alumnae trustee from 1964 to 1967 and is currently a term trustee of the College.

KENYA

A Journal of Impressions

JANE MARTIN GRAWE S'63, '66g

Recently, a young man I knew to be sensitive and well-travelled asked me one of those dinner-party-superlative questions about my experiences in Kenya: "Just tell me what was the one thing that most . . .?" I protested; how can you make one statement about climate, beautiful scenery, the extended family and polygyny, the attempts of a developing political system to unify diverse peoples and the resulting constant pressures on peasant farmers to become full-time members of the cash economy. Capsulizing all these, I told him I had seen that peasants still could be contented and happy, leading simple and hardworking lives. My husband and I have each spent more than three and a half years living in Kenya so we are prepared for such questions but sometimes wish we could just tell these interrogators about birds, elephants and giraffes. Perhaps that's really what he wanted.

By now, most Americans have outlived the Tarzan age of characterizing Africa as a jungle continent—open savannah, desert, mixed grasslands, fertile highlands, tropical rainforest are all needed to describe the continent. In all of these types of ecological zones dwells man—and in the past if not today—zebra, elephant or antelopes. It is no surprise that in the agricultural highlands the animals have retreated to small dense pockets of forest where man has been kept out by climate and rugged terrain, and more recently by National Parks. Similarly, in the drier lowlands, the pastoral peoples share the limited resources of grass and water—some areas are used by both zebra and cow or goat while others are protected exclusively for the wild animal.

Kenya, a country a little larger than the state of Texas, has a population of twelve and a half million, and covers a dramatic and diverse terrain, of which only 17% is arable land. There are nearly 40 different tribes, each with its own language and customs. Whether talking about language groups or social organization, it is continually necessary to distinguish those people who are settled agriculturalists from those who are pastoral nomads. The extent of modernization, adapting of new values and beliefs, as well as the basic economics of "development" will generally affect these two groups quite differently.

Economic and social development proceeds more rapidly with settled agriculturists than with pastoralists, though the efforts of Julius Nyerere, President of Tanzania, to settle the pastoral Masai, (and incidentally require them to replace with trousers their flapping red-ochred cloths) are well known. At the same time, it is easier for an outsider to observe and study the habits, customs and practices of the more settled agricultural peoples—roads, housing, food source, a semi-regular water supply—just a few aspects which make the outsider's life easier. The comments which follow are based almost entirely on observations of settled agriculturalists: particularly five distinct groups, the Kikuyu, Kipsigis, Luo, Gusii and Maragoli. These five represent different cultural heritages and linguistic affiliations: the Kikuyu and Gusii though located some 200 miles apart belong to the cluster Highland Bantu; the Maragoli, another Bantu group belong to the Interlacustrine Bantu; the Luo are River-Lake Nilotes; and the Kipsigis, Highland Nilotes.

In 1967 I was given the opportunity to go to Kenya to help collect data for a large research project in comparative child development, directed by John and Beatrice Whiting of Harvard University. The aims of the project were not only to collect such data and to replicate studies made in the western world on Kenyan children, but also to interest and train Kenyan university students who at that time had no Psychology Department in which the study of Child Development could be placed in an African context. Orientation included familiarizing myself with aspects of psychological testing and field work that would be pertinent in different cultures, and tutoring sessions in Swahili, the trade language of East Africa. Swahili is spoken by all men but by few women or children, and is more useful for domestic purposes that it turned out to be for work, which mainly involved interviewing women and children. Being appropriately outfitted with properly lengthy skirts well-tailored with pockets, some "Miss Marple shoes," gumboots for the wet season, a Volkswagen camper bus which would be my mobile laboratory and a bag full of psychological testing equipment, I was ready for "the field." "The field" was five communities each representing one of the five culture and language groups mentioned above. These communities are located from thirty to two hundred and fifty miles from the capital city of Nairobi, my home base.

1. A typical Kipsigis house. Note the very high well-thatched roof and spike on top. So long as the man of the house is alive, the spike stands.

2. Some Kipsigis women and my research assistant (in the center) working on baskets. These are used primarily as a bowl would be for storing food.

3. One of many social gatherings I attended. The newspapers on the walls are decorative.

4. A young girl childtending.

5. The bus I drove is parked for testing, with a large and curious group gathered.

1.

3.

In each community there was or had been a resident anthropologist, collecting background information from my potential subjects (100 children in each community). When a university student with the appropriate linguistic background was available and interested, she was hired as my interpreter. Otherwise I contacted Labor Offices, or secondary schools to find someone to work with me. Unwed mothers with a few years of secondary education were my best and most frequent source of assistants. These young women are not allowed to remain in their schools after the pregnancy is discovered; nearly all higher schools are boarding schools.

In each community my task was to be the same—to test as many children older than approximately six years as possible, as well as a sample of women in three of the communities. Some of the children would be attending schools, others not. There is not yet universal nor free education. Fees for primary school are approximately $20 a year, plus the cost of a uniform. In some communities nursery schools swell and attract large numbers of children since their fees are very much lower, about $5 to $10 a year. In fact, parents are sometimes reluctant to move their children into the more costly primary schools and often equate nursery education with primary education. Rules prohibiting a child's attendance in nursery school beyond three years have been established in some areas, and often pressure from the next younger sibling to enter the nursery school is additional incentive for the parents to move the older child into primary school. At the same time, when they start the next younger child in nursery school, the status of the other, even younger children at home is changed. A carefree four year old is suddenly put in the position of being his or her mother's primary babytender.

The testing procedure was to park the bus in a reasonably central location, roads and tracks permitting. Sometimes this was just far enough away from the local trading center not to be too much the center of attraction, but most usually in a school yard. At the beginning of my stay in each community, curious children gathered around the bus and were eager to be tested, and given in return some candies. Just so long as the goats didn't get in a garden, or a young baby was taken care of, there was no reason a child couldn't take time off from his chores to sit for our experiments. Enticing children into a VW bus to manipulate strange shapes and to look at pictures is more easily accomplished than doing the same with their parents. "This is kids' stuff" was a common adult reply, but I was even told by one nice grandmother, "I've told that other person (the resident anthropologist) everything I know. Why don't you go elsewhere to write your book?"

In all five areas people live on dispersed homesteads, as do our American farmers; the distance between homesteads can vary from a few yards to a lengthy trek. Making appointments and reminding the forgetful was a time consuming aspect of our work. Those who were hospitable would want to offer some food or a drink. Fortunately I have a curious palate and a hearty digestive system: soured milk, roasted maize, millet porridge and several types of homemade beer can become part of the daily routine. Furthermore a tea growing country in the English tradition of course drinks tea. "Just stay for a cup of tea" can mean missing up to two hours of testing, since a mere cup of tea may involve a trip to the river for water, to the cow for milk, and to the store for sugar or even the tea. Soon I realized I was getting impatient and feeling guilty about those long mornings spent waiting for cups of tea (though they were entirely enjoyable mornings, whether waiting for tea or helping to harvest maize), but in the end decided I should carry knitting around with me, and to accept the tea before pressing a mother to perform the tests. Two sweaters later, the female adults in all three communities were tested. For a young female to test the adult males was more difficult.

The community of adult males living in the country and not cultivating cash crops keep themselves "busy" with very mysterious and supposedly important matters. Not infrequently this involves a hunt for the freshest source of newly made beer, discussion under a shady tree about cattle, community affairs, the seasons and ceremonies. They weren't interested in sitting for a few hours with a "European" woman, unmarried at that, to exchange information on cultural practices over cups of tea as their wives had. Women were eager to know, for example, why European women have so few children; how a young woman could not be married, wasn't my father interested in the land or especially cattle he could receive as bride price; do American ways of growing food, preparing it, building houses differ from their own; how could I have helped my mother if my hands were so soft. There is a lot to be said, and many long and enjoyable conversations covered such topics as these.

From these long hours of discussion with the mothers in the communities where I had worked, both during my testing days and in the subsequent visits for later research projects, friendship and trust built on the rapport established by fieldworker and subject. Thus, many shared with me their hopes and efforts to raise their children as best they could—land, the availability of food and educational opportunities permitting. Marriages, births, harvests, housebuilding, and ceremonies for such occasions as circumcision go on at all times. In some cases I was allowed to observe; in others not. Not being a circumcized Kipsigis woman, for example, I could not witness the actual circumcision of the adolescent girls though I was invited to attend all the accompanying festivities and to remain nearby during the ceremony (standing with the young men and other uninitiated children). In return women called on me to assist their cooperative efforts in marketing local handicrafts, and acquiring new domestic skills. One group of women wanted to know how to cut out a dress by making a paper pattern, another was interested in the "secrets" of baking powder biscuits to be cooked over their hearth fires on a griddle. Although all women were adept at basketweaving or jewelry making, skills they perfect after initiation or schooling and before marriage, they lacked the commercial experience that would enable them to produce marketable items for sale in Nairobi or shipment abroad. Helping to fill this gap was something I could contribute. With the money earned through such "self-help" activities, women were able to achieve some slight independence, using their new income to educate, clothe and feed their children more adequately than before. I gained a lifetime of wonderful memories from months of driving and walking around the Kenya countryside. I hope at least some of the women in whose homes I spent so many hours have gained some new impetus for their self-help efforts beyond the daily routine of cooking, gardening and childtending.

THE POETRY OF Andrea Dubs Moorhead

Andrea Dubs Moorhead majored in French and Philosophy, graduating from Chatham in 1969. Her poetry began appearing in journals in 1970, and two volumes of her work are in print. The first, IRIS, is a privately printed limited edition, and the second MORGAN-STALL, was published by Fiddlehead Press in Canada in 1971. Andrea, and her husband, Robert Moorhead, have recently published the first issue of a new journal, OSIRIS, which they co-edit (see review below). The following are remarks excerpted from a statement by the poet concerning the influence of her education on her work.

"My poetry is derived from Vergil and from the French writers of the late 19th century and early 20th century. The richness of sound, internal nuance and mood, characteristic both of Vergil and the French writers has grown into a concern with sound clusters, ritual development of poetic line and a feeling for human meter and mood in my own work.

I feel I escaped the psychological pinions of English poetry by studying French and Philosophy. Philosophy had a strong humanizing effect on my thinking and obliterated any attempt to use literature as a didactic platform for self concerns."

"Nexus Given," a recent poem, appears on page 8.

A NEW JOURNAL

Osiris 1

Edited by Andrea Moorhead and Robert Moorhead

Review by D. G. Adam, Assistant Prof. of English

In the four years since her graduation, Andrea Dubs Moorhead has published two volumes of verse and has, now, brought out the first issue of an "international journal of the arts," OSIRIS. Its international quality is attested in the first issue by several contributors from Canada and several pieces in French, and its commitment to all the arts is reflected in the contents: poetry, prose, prose-poetry, reviews, an Old English Riddle, several works of graphic art, and a musical piece composed for violin, cello, and piano.

The editorial manifesto of the journal asserts that Art is Radical Expression, and the title of the first issue proclaims Art as Radical Being. It is an extraordinary act of faith and industry to initiate a journal of the arts; it is even more impressive when that journal takes as its mission the "expression of man's spiritual being in time." The expressions which satisfy the demands of this definition are often difficult, personal, intense, tortuous, and less direct than David Shirm's assertion:

Poets and pregnant people see the moon through clouds the sun through smog and feel stars with their fingers.

More aptly illustrative of her manifesto are the lines by Andrea Moorhead, herself: "your prurient case of/ once begotten tone of day you'll find in buried light the/ rotting spells of flesh be worn be queer be torn in flight." One may not always agree that the selections in OSIRIS demonstrate the "strength and elegance of formal structure" which the editors perceive, but radical expressions of man's spirit do not often come in traditional forms.

Andrea Dubs composed, in 1969, a tutorial in Philosophy, a dialogue with Saint-John Perse, in which her present concerns were apparent. The form of her composition was as important as, and inseparable from, its "prose paraphrase." She avoided the discursive analysis of idea, supplanting it with what one might call "counter expressions." So, four years later, she has birthed a journal whose aims are her own. The constant renewal of poetic tradition through such journals as OSIRIS is laudable and important, and OSIRIS 1 is an impressive beginning.

and this vast unquenchable sadness, fruit vastness of a time known only seen in days, that i bring, flower sweetness quelling heart and bone and stump of a thousand dreams, that you've poured, too, from roof, valley and stream, vast unknowing into all realms of defeat; for the wide is blood and telling not only of hope but of a day beyond compare, where death alone with splendor wings attached, in a veil, low train of words not withstanding my heart's sorrow, will tell, pull, squeeze the very vapors, and low your train unquenchable sadness, is finding shape and daze, bonedust and this very mellow moss of hearts in stone.

for from your wings, i draw flesh.
and from this feeling, drenched in wine,
a blood of being, soaked in rain.
blood coming silence, of another man, that in your hands i feel rain and in this flowering darkness, stillness grown, chain sweet bone and these eyes so cried in time.

exquisite, for night remains, intranscient victor, as others too in darkness cloak, o these faces born of rage, sweetly flowing anger mists the air very air I am incarnate captive, made so well of stones: and of your coming shall i really tell, of others' haunted moments, and a band of trees beyond belief: green redness and a flow of time so thick . . .

that from your wings i draw fruit, wings' shape and o your face in splendor throated willow, tombs rich havens. o silence craft and a woman appears; white drenching sadness, from these bones unturning veils . . . o i bring in sorrow fruited waves, o i bring in plaintive feeling from a ghost beyond compare; holy riddled silence and these sheets of mana cloaked wine. and yes before only night remains and bulbs beneath frost. river mud and clays.
your heart too pouring veins; mist boneblood and a wreath beyond despair.
for i am the nexus-given, man beyond repair.

A Chatham Education For Today and Tomorrow

On the 1st of February, 1973, thirty alumnae from the Pittsburgh area spent a day on campus as guests of the Admissions Office. The day was planned to acquaint the alumnae with the programs at Chatham which are a part of the on-going effort to educate women of all ages; educate them in such a way they may choose a career, marriage, or a combination of the two. It was, and is, the hope of the Admissions Office that the more familiar the alumnae are with the present aims of the college, the better they are able to talk to young (and not so young) friends who might be interested in applying to Chatham.

The Alumnae were welcomed by Marjorie Ladley, Director of Alumnae Affairs, and by President Eddy who spoke to the group by video-tape. Doreen Boyce, newly appointed Dean of Studies, narrated a brief slide show representative of those shown by members of the Admissions Office in visits around the country.

Following the slide presentation, Dr. Janelle Greenberg, moderator for the Special Study Committee on the Education of Women, gave a report on the work of the committee thus far, their concerns and aims for the future.

The socialization of women to a traditionally specified role in life begins at birth. This assertion, backed by much research, and the personal experiences of each of us as women, is the raison d'être for the new and important Study Committee at Chatham College.

Studies by Matina Horner, Psychologist and President of Radcliffe College, show conclusively that women lack motivation for success, and, in fact, are afraid of success. Ms. Greenberg presented some of the materials from Dr. Horner's studies, and materials from other similar studies, to introduce for discussion four ways in which the long process of socialization might best be confronted and changed to provide an atmosphere of support which may offer the college woman new and higher aspirations.

The committee is agreed, first, that the college must provide a supportive environment, including exposure to role models and alternative lifestyles. Women at Chatham should be exposed to the possibilities of success. Secondly, the student should be encouraged to consider her post-college plans early in her college career in order that she may utilize the available courses and programs which will be most important to her future. It is to be understood that whatever special direction the student may pursue, it will be focused within a liberal arts course of study.

A third and tremendously important assertion of the committee is that the faculty of the college should be consistently a body which takes the student seriously, thereby improving the self-image of each individual student. Lastly, the college should encourage women of all ages to return to college. Experience has proven that the older woman is highly motivated and does excellent academic work. Her presence on campus is enjoyed by the younger students, and the mixture of ages on campus can only broaden the parameters of the college environment.

Ms. Greenberg is an eloquent spokeswoman and her address evoked serious questions from the audience which were fielded by a panel of members of the committee. Panel members present were: Nancy Crumbine, Assistant Professor of Philosophy; Frances Eldredge, Professor of English; Kay Ericson, Director-Pittsburgh Chatham Program; Judith Gale '73; Mona Generett, Director of Financial Aid and Student Services; Nancy Schwartz '73; and Arthur Smith, Assistant Professor of History.

After a luncheon in Woodland, the alumnae gathered in the Andrew W. Mellon Center for three presentations.

Ms. Boyce gave a short talk on the economic future of women. She began by pointing out some of the changes that have taken place recently.

In 1920, 23% of all women were in the labor force. Today, 43.8% of all women and 50% of women 18-64 years old are in the working force, and this percentage is rising.

Nine out of 10 young women today will likely work outside the home some time during their lives.

In 1920, a woman was likely to work prior to marriage, or if she remained single.

The average working woman was single and 28 years old. Today, the average working woman is married and 39 years old.

In 1920, life expectancy for a baby girl was just 55 years. In 1972, life expectancy for a baby girl was 79 years.

In 1920, there were 20 out of every 100 17-year-old girls graduating from high school. In 1972, 80 out of 100 graduate. In 1920, two women graduated from college for every 100 21-years-old. In 1972, there are 18 women college graduates within this category. The more education a woman has, the greater the likelihood that she will seek paid employment. Nearly 7 out of 10 women 45 to 54 years of age with four or more years of college are in the labor force.

She then proposed that the lack of awareness of these facts leads to discriminatory behavior on the part of employers. On the part of women, it leads to lack of motivation and planning for a life which will include work outside the home.

Women workers are concentrated in low-paying, dead-end jobs. As a result, the average woman worker earns about three-fifths of what a man does, even when both work full-time, year-round.

Median earnings of women working full-time, year-round are about 58% of those of men. This gap is growing larger, not smaller. Their aspirations have tended to be low and conventional. This has also had very important effects on the education that women have sought for themselves. Nor have they found education the key to good, well paid jobs.

Fully employed women high school graduates have less income on the average than fully employed men with less than 8 years of schooling. The average woman worker is as well educated as the average man worker. Women have completed 12.5 years and men 12.4 years of school. Yet, a woman earns $\frac{3}{5}$ of what a man does. This may partly be accounted for by experience, but not entirely.

There is legal support for women who will no longer tolerate discrimination against them. It is a challenge to the education of women to help them make intelligent decisions about their future.

Women now have the right to work outside the home. It now remains for them to claim the right to work in any field they may choose and are qualified for—and to go as far as they can go.

If economic man emerged with the passing of the middle ages, we may now be witnessing the emergence of the economic woman.

Following Ms. Boyce's address Kay Ericson, Coordinator for the Pittsburgh-Chatham program outlined her work and presented two students who have, or are completing, independent studies working with Pittsburgh businesses and agencies under the aegis of the program, and Nancy Fultz, Coordinator of Student Activities and Career Information discussed Career Planning on the Chatham Campus.

In the "Wrap-up" session, Peggy Donaldson, Director of Admissions, discussed ways in which the alumnae could "carry the good word" back to the young women in their area who might be interested in the unique programs Chatham has to offer.

Over afternoon refreshments the alumnae, students, and members of the faculty and administration seemed unanimous in their approval of the interest generated by a workshop of this kind.

Poetry As Therapy

By Alice MacKenzie Swaim 'x32

Although the official title "Poetry Therapy" was not always used, who of us, down through the ages, has not found comfort and inspiration from noble and poetic thoughts. Since time immemorial mothers have soothed sleepy, fretful babies with lullabies; lovers have serenaded their sweethearts with poetry and song; men at work or going to war have been moved to action by rhythmic music or chant. Since the shepherd boy, David, chased away King Saul's black moods by playing the harp and singing psalms, many people have found comfort and inspiration in the Psalms and hymns of their faith. It is not without reason that the god Apollo was not only the god of medicine and healing, but also of music and poetry.

Physicians today recognize that mental, physical and emotional health are closely interwoven. Poetry is being used as therapy by psychiatrists, social workers and guidance counselors with surprising success in reaching and helping emotionally troubled people, from college students to patients in mental hospitals. For over two hundred years, the Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia has used it. It has guided patients to constructive adjustments after all other approaches have been tried and have failed. Often a poem labelled mediocre by poetry critics contains so much instinctive truth that it is a better bridge to reality than a more technically perfect or sophisticated poem.

Among the most enthusiastic pioneers in the Poetry Therapy movement are the late Dr. Smiley Blanton and Dr. Jack Leedy of the Mental Hygiene Clinic, Cumberland Hospital, Brooklyn, who founded the official Poetry as Therapy Association. The members include psychiatrists, clinical psychologists, psychiatric social workers, guidance counselors, philosophers, literary critics, college professors and all who wish to play a more active role in dealing with the major contemporary problems of emotionally troubled people.

In 1970, The Poetry Society of America arranged a Poetry Therapy Seminar under the guidance of the late Gustav Davidson, to demonstrate how poetry nourishes the health of the spirit and keeps us in touch with truth, beauty and goodness. The English poet, Robert Graves, said, "A well chosen anthology is a complete dispensary of medicine for the more common mental disorders and may be used as much for prevention as cure." The magic of verse is that it reaches us on all levels with its combination of thought, feeling and music.

Since I am pretty much a shut-in, my work has been through correspondence with interested people, through magazine articles and through the use of my own poems. As a result of those published in Strophes (The National Federation of Poetry Societies' Bulletin) and in Sunshine Magazine, I was swamped with inquiries from sixteen states, a leper sanitarium in the Philippines, and from Australia.

More than half were from individuals and organizations who wanted to undertake some worthwhile service project, and who have followed through enthusiastically. Many editors of poetry magazines are vitally interested, also poetry clubs in various states. The remaining responses were from the lonely and/or handicapped who wanted help and encouragement for themselves or for relatives.

Poems used in poetry therapy must never be preachy, for many troubled people are rebelling against authority in one form or another—parents, teachers, bosses or just "The System." All helpful poems must end on a note of affirmation, however sad their mood. Their importance lies in the meaning they have for different people, and the acceptance of the fact that the same poem can mean different things to different people.

There are as many variations of poetry therapy as there are people and situations. It is a means of communicating affirmatively and constructively with the forgotten people—those in prisons, mental hospitals, county homes and shut-ins.

Two Poems by Alice Mackenzie Swaim

THE DEER TREE FELL

All day, the whirring of machinery,
the hum of buzz saws,
the bite of axes.
The deer tree fell leaving green pheasant aisles of underbrush and rabbit paths revealed, all the barren bumpiness of sod with weeds at half-mast and the fallen leaves a sodden drift
no self-respecting mouse would think of twice for nesting purposes.
All day, the whirring of machinery
then the dead branches piled in an awkward unbecoming pyre; incense of sumac, sassafras and cedar curled skyward all day long, and, after dark,
smoke wisps still sought the enigmatic moon.

TORNADO

The trees have tripped the wind
And he falls heavily,
Flattening the grasses
And the ripened grain,
Leaving his awkward signature
Scrawled silver on the plain.

Alice Mackenzie Swaim has been writing and publishing her poetry for many years. The two poems reprinted in this issue were published in 1962 and precede her present work in Poetry Therapy. The Editors chose these poems as representative of her work as a poet, rather than as specific examples to be used in Poetry Therapy. Readers interested in pursuing further the field of Poetry Therapy are encouraged to read Poetry Therapy by J. J. Leedy, M.D., published by J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

The Terrible Wave

By Marden Armstrong Dahlstedt '42

Review by Nancy Adam

Book Review: THE TERRIBLE WAVE by Marden Armstrong Dahlstedt '42; illustrated by Charles Robinson. Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, Inc. New York, 1972.

Do you remember the Johnstown Flood? Probably not. If you are a resident of Pennsylvania it is more likely you remember Agnes. Marden Dahlstedt does not personally remember the flood either, but her grandparents not only remembered it, they survived it. From the exciting stories she heard as a child, and from the investigation and research she has compiled since, Mrs. Armstrong has recreated the great flood in fiction for young readers. Although the flood itself is the great and awe-inspiring protagonist, we follow its progress, devastation and retreat through the adventures of a young girl who is trapped and separated from her family by the "terrible wave."

THE TERRIBLE WAVE is Marden Dahlstedt's first novel for children and was the November 1972 selection of the Junior Literary Guild. The illustrations by Charles Robinson are, as they should be, skillful in complementing the story; they are forceful and dramatic but they do not overpower the story, nor do they influence or interrupt the reader's own imagined pictures of the events as they happen. It is a compelling book. Buy it for your young friends, but take an hour to read it before you give it away.

Marden Armstrong Dahlstedt '42 is a poet, writer of children's books (see review of her first, above), and proprietress of an antique shop in New Jersey. The order of these priorities may change with the season or the mood. Her poetry has appeared in numerous prestigious journals and her work is included in the anthology, BEST POEMS OF 1960. Mrs. Dahlstedt writes "to a schedule, several hours a day" and works with a group of young poets and writers on Long Beach Island where she lives. She says of her Chatham education: "My college experience not only widened my horizon, but helped give a focus to my thinking and ambition. The recognition I received at Chatham with publication in THE ARROW, as editor of THE PENNSYLVANIAN, and later as editor of THE RECORDER was wonderfully encouraging, and the writing experience was invaluable."

The RECORDER gratefully acknowledges the poet's permission to print two of her poems. "Transcendental Horse" was first published in AUDIENCE in 1961.

FOSSIL

Already I lean upon the parapet of my own past.

Now, beneath blooded flesh,
my bone skeletons its own future.

Behind my eyes memory is scrolled to its present being,

and brain patterns,
like prehistoric ferns, fine tracteries

to leave layered on this day the past
I am becoming.

TRANSCENDENTAL HORSE

These are old, old trees but horse is older than these, and where she walks the hills are primal hills but she is older, old as wind that fills the furrows of her flying mane, ancient as rain that stains her sensuous sides.

O, the free-running of this horse makes music more time hallowed than drums drumming dawn-rites among high stones, wearing brown thunder as she comes crashing into the valley of bones.

October horse to the sacrifice
she comes in mist-and-flame,
See her—"thirteen hands high,
cream-coloured, long head, bluish eye," lashed to ecstasy by a charred holly-twigg she speeds to the final flaming honor of her name apace the horses of the old year's flight.

Now, treading this delicate, civilized wheat with her small curved feet, the mocking, mettlesome mare, fresh from her nest of night
littered with poet's bones, tramples this cool and present light, this day, this hour, this last with the fearsome, fiery, implicit Past.

A Quality Life

By Cathy Beard '68

If you are familiar with Harry's in Oakland, then you will recognize at once our preference in life style. Harry's is a small tavern that advertises without neon. There are never many people there, and those that are are regulars. It was in the second to last booth that John, my husband, and I, plotted our strategy. What is funny about all this in retrospect is that we never really did have a strategy. We only knew that our direction would be rural and so we less than methodically traveled first to an unlikely apartment in Chevy Chase, Maryland. We were forced to drink at home then. When Vermillion, South Dakota was decided upon as The Place, John promised that he would buy me a bicycle. One year later I was peddling about town and never had to dodge a car. I could sniff what other people were cooking for dinner, peer into windows (made easy at dusk when lights are on!) and listen to household sounds which could reverberate rather than get stuck between walls. I peddled so slowly that a few times I almost fell over. One afternoon I had to get off my bicycle completely and walked it home, the wind was so strong. I had stupidly ridden to the bluffs overlooking the Missouri River. Nebraska's bluffs, bigger than ours, are clearly visible on the other side and very nice to look at. But town, as compact and charming as it is, did not hold us for long. We bought a house, 10 miles north of town, with 4 red barns, 2 pastures and 35 acres. It looks flat here but in reality the land rolls and dips and then irons out for spaces here and there. I can look east from our home and see shadows covering the landscape for 2 or 3 miles and then suddenly the hills 4 miles off are lit like candles.

When we first moved out here, to our little farm, people wondered if it would not be a difficult adjustment for us. "... from the East, to live here, on the prairie, remote from town and other houses?" "The only adjustment for me," I said, "is when I have to go back." The closest houses are a quarter mile away in each direction and the houses and barns are hidden behind a shelter break of trees. An occasional silo goes higher.

Like a lot of people, we are trying to simplify our lifestyle. But in the process, things have gotten more complicated. For one thing, now that we have a house, we tend to fill it up. I did, however, set up a booth at the Flea Market in town this summer to unload 27 years of accumulated junk. I had been a rather remarkable collector and it was evident by the number of people who flocked to my booth and exclaimed over my wares and giveaway prices. (What they didn't know was that I was going to give the stuff away if they didn't buy it!)

To mow the large areas of grass on our place we hired 10 ewes with lambs at the side (I am getting good at the lingo) and 1 buck. They chomped away all summer and earned many times over their minimum wage. Two of the lambs we kept for our freezer and the others met their maker elsewhere. We also bought 3 runt pigs, having in mind that 2 were for us and 1 for a family in town. But after 6 weeks one of them died and we suspected (someone told us) that it was the mange. I remember as a child, or I should say kid, that my mother used to look at me often and say with disgust, "Cathy, you look mangy!" From her inflection I gathered that I looked pretty awful but never did I suspect the real meaning of that word, or my appearance, until our pig died of it. I wrote my mother a scorching letter! I ought to add here that when friends ask how we know how to do these things, like buying sheep and raising pigs, I say, and truthfully, "We don't. But we do it once and then we know."

The auctions are great fun to attend. It tickles me to watch what I consider a proper way to recycle junk. I suppose if you live here long enough you will begin seeing the same junk recycled for a third and fourth time. I especially enjoy the auctions which include farm equipment because then all the farmers come and Cathy Beard is a member of the class of 1968. When we read in the class news that she had moved from Washington, D.C. (population 800,000) to Vermillion, South Dakota (population 5,500; 5,000 of which are students at the University of South Dakota) we knew there had to be a good story. John Davidson, Cathy's husband, teaches at the Law School and they have two children, Ben, age 4 and Felix, 2½.

their humors are good and affections open. This past summer I bought 2 iron bedsteads for 50¢ but that's because no one else wanted them. As a matter of fact, I only wanted 1 bed but when no one bid on the first I had to take it with the second. And the other day I braved the cold and bought an old wood trunk which, when it is lined with cedar, will be perfect for storing blankets. I paid $1.75. You must realize, of course, that I get bargains because nobody wants what I want. I attend auctions whenever I can. Observing the people, their faces, manners, dress and style is not entertainment. I feel, rather, that I am, however slightly, touching a fragment of the past here on the prairie; and indeed, the past never seems far away. Many of these people are the sons and daughters of the original homesteaders. They have had childhoods which will never be relived by another generation, simply because of the technology of farming today. And their children have been as altered by television as children anywhere. History out here seems harder to come by, partly because people have tended to be more private and largely, I think, because distance has forced them to become more inward. But pride and interest in the past here is surfacing and in any state or city you might see a car or truck sticker which says "I'm proud to be a farmer." If you don't see it on a vehicle at least you will hear it on the news or read about it in the paper. What would the farmers say if I told them they were simply raising their consciousness? I don't dare, not yet.

What brings history close to me are not restored buildings or towns like a Sturbridge or a Williamsburg but rather the very opposite. I drive past an old abandoned homestead when I go into town. As on many of these properties, the conestoga wagon stands in among the trees, rotting and long since forgotten. It lost its usefulness long ago but served its purpose well. The farmers here are generally prosperous. Each time I drive past this particular homestead, it brings to mind the 1880's when the Dakota Territory opened up for settlement. A man or a woman could file a claim for 160 acres free if they lived on it 6 months out of every year, for 5 years, and cultivated it besides. Many farmers today live on the farms their grandfathers homesteaded and the original house is often left standing, just barely, and the chickens use it. Seeing history in this way is a melancholy experience. But it serves to remind me of the immense fragility that living out here must have been, just 100 years ago. To a Yankee, that is a short time span! 100 years ago there were not trees. The wind swept harder and deeper then. Now the wind and snows are broken every 160 acres in every direction. The trees which the farmers planted on the north and west sides of their homesites make a vast difference in the severity of a storm. The Missouri River no longer floods. A series of dams controls it. Electricity did not come to the farms until the late 40's and early 50's. Until then, a family did not even have a radio to listen to at night. Going to town was an event. It meant news, both local and world wide. There is so much I have grown up with and taken for granted. These old homesteads remind me of my past which gave me quantities of objects and expectations. I am shedding these now for what I hope will be quality substitutions. However, I do not mean to paint a picture of America in the 40's. Visual evidence remains but there are very few people who live in that difficult and isolated environment. Many farmers work their fields in air conditioned cabs and they can wear earphones and listen to the radio. This part of South Dakota is fairly prosperous. Yet the country school houses have closed. Yellow buses roll the roads and I could be anywhere. But I'm not.

Some of my friends, while they admire my life style tell me that they could never live so far from a cultural center. Perhaps I could not either were it not for that first year I spent in Pittsburgh, faithfully riding the trolley down 5th Avenue every Friday night, and sometimes on Sunday afternoon if the performance had been exceptional. If I had a test on Monday I would weigh the relative merits and ask, "When I am 50 which will I care most about to remember?" The symphony always won. Sometimes it was The Playhouse or Carnegie Hall that triumphed and thank goodness, because now I have a wealth of memories. Small, perhaps, by a city dweller's standards, but in Vermilion, William Steinberg, Aaron Copland, Isaac Stern and many others, sound clear to my ears.

I could say that being here is like being on a second honeymoon, except we have two children. I counted this by saying there is no way to measure the delight I feel when my two young sons can go outside to play and have acres to roam, woods, old barns and 45 steers next door who love to look back. At age 2 Felix could hold out a hand full of oats and 10 ewes would crowd around him trying to eat. He was totally unafraid. The boys are equally comfortable around the pigs which, of all farm animals, are the smartest. I read in the paper the other day of a pig in Bulgaria who walked 40 miles to his original home after having been sold the day before. Our pigs, when they one time could not get to the corral where the water barrel was, made such a commotion that John, in bewilderment, finally discovered that the gate to that corral was shut. When he opened it, they rushed past and gulped down the water. Pigs are clean animals. The reason they roll in the mud is not for the same reason that we all played in it as children. A pig has no pores on his skin and wallowing in mud cools him off.

Our boys also help in the garden. This year they are each going to have a plot of their own. When we sit down to a meal and the pork is delicious and ours the applesauce, green beans, squash and wine are all products of our farm and labor, then we feel well satisfied, both physically and mentally. In the 2 years we have lived here my affection and need for this style of life has deepened. I do not feel that I haven't 'bested' anyone by "getting away from it all." On the contrary, with 2 sons, pigs, sheep, cats, dog and husband, I often feel I am in the thick of it. What I mean to say is that I like the way we have chosen to live our life. It is not better than a town or city which is thicker with people, nor is it less than our neighbor who earns his livelihood entirely from the land. We have come from one landscape to another and remain, I think, outsiders of both. We would like to think that our sons will have access to the one of their choosing, simplified by the fact that they recognize the merits and distractions of both.

I feel neither great nor diminished by life here. A few years ago this admission would have startled and upset me. I feel, at 27, what many people have reluctantly confessed to feeling: an acceptance of one's limitations. But this also can mean a realization of those desires and talents which stretch to that limit, wherever it is. Few of us find it, much less accept it. So perhaps I am on my way to becoming old at a young age, and therefore wise at an even younger one.

AN INTERVIEW WITH

Granville Hicks

By Gail Whitman Rudenstein '71

When I learned that Granville Hicks was teaching during the January Interim and the second semester at Chatham this year, memories of my senior year poured over me. After all, one third of my Tutorial had been written about this leading Marxist literary critic in 1930's America and contributor to The Saturday Review. I remembered days in the library searching for his essays in crumbled yellow copies of New Masses and Partisan Review. I even found myself scanning my Tutorial, not having opened it since the day of my Tutorial Board, nearly two years ago! Naturally, I was eager to interview Chatham's guest professor.

Granville Hicks met me at the door of Spencer House where he is living, a tall man with white hair, steel-rimmed glasses, and a firm handshake. He was pleased as well to meet someone who had bothered to write a senior paper about him. I noticed issues of the New Yorker on the coffee table and a copy of John Gardner's The Sunlight Dialogues next to his chair. Mr. Hicks made a favorable comment about the latter and we began the formalities of the interview.

I confined the subjects of the hour to Mr. Hicks' impressions of Pittsburgh and Chatham, the courses he teaches, and his views on writing today. Mr. Hicks had definite opinions about Pittsburgh and Chatham. Although he does not enjoy cities as a rule, he admitted that Pittsburgh's skyline at night is attractive. He and his wife are impressed with Chatham's location and quiet beauty. His wife looks forward to pursuing her gardening here in the spring.

During the Interim Mr. Hicks taught "Politics and Literature in the 1930's." He said he anticipated his students to take responsibilities like graduate students—research an appropriate topic for a month and share information at each weekly meeting. This was not the case in reality, however. Although the students wrote satisfactory papers, he found that they were extremely reticent about sharing information or even speaking up in class. Mr. Hicks admitted that he did most of the talking, which was disappointing. He hopes that his students will be more vocal in the semester classes when he will be teaching "American Literature Since 1865" and "Modern American Fiction."

When I asked Mr. Hicks about differences between teaching at a coeducational versus single-sex institution, he made clear his neutrality on the issue. He said that in his teaching experience (which included appointments at Smith, Syracuse, and Ohio State), students generally participated in classes vocally, regardless of sex. He confided that he sent his daughter to a coeducational college because it was her choice and because he felt the climate there was more "natural." (I prudently decided to drop this subject immediately!)

Mr. Hicks seemed much more relaxed and involved when he spoke about literature and literary criticism today. He believes that modern critics of literature should instruct readers on how to read a work, rather than instruct writers on how to practice their craft. He asserted that a critic who writes that a book or poem should have been constructed in a totally different manner, is overstepping his responsibility as a critic. Mr. Hicks seems satisfied that today's literary critics are performing their task.

Mr. Hicks also had thoughts about the responsibilities of writers. Instead of attempting to set forth significant statements about politics, writers today should and do stress the importance of human relationships. He found that several contemporary writers deal with the quality of compassion toward others. Mr. Hicks discussed his course, "Modern American Fiction," in terms of modern authors' expressions of compassion during a time when traditional values have been uprooted. He cited Bernard Malamud's concerns about understanding among people in The Assistant, The Fixer, and The Tenants. He also includes Saul Bellow's recent book, Mr. Sammler's Planet, in the course because he feels that Bellow's protagonist experiences the need for compassion in a way with which today's reader and resident of the 1970's can identify. Mr. Hicks gave me a copy of the reading list for his course. He will examine works by Eudora Welty, Wright Morris, Norman Mailer, Flannery O'Connor, John Updike, Joyce Carroll Oates, Kurt Vonnegut, John Barth, and Shirley Jackson. It is an impressive list of novels, novels which Mr. Hicks judges to be among the more significant fiction of recent years.

I remembered from my Tutorial research that during the 1930's Mr. Hicks wrote articles dismissing such writers as F. Scott Fitzgerald and William Faulkner because of their artistic disinterest in, and exclusion of, political considerations from their works. In our interview, I asked him if there were any writers that he had learned to value since the 1930's. It was interesting that he said he had been "off the track" during the 1930's and that today he does indeed acknowledge these very writers as figures of importance he had neglected in his earlier days.

In preparing to interview Granville Hicks, I conscientiously prepared a list of questions to ask him. I had covered half of them and was eager to hear his thoughts about the responsibility of writers and critics today to address themselves to political matters, about the future of the printed word, and about restrictions on freedom of the press in recent years. Unfortunately my hour with Mr. Hicks was over before some of these questions were articulated. Before I knew it, he had finished his remarks, given me my coat and a gracious farewell, and seen me to the door of Spencer House. My first interview of a literary celebrity had ended.

Class News

NEW ADDRESSES

Emma Geiselhart Osterloh (Mrs. C. T.), Perrytown Place, 101 Highland Pines Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15237.

It is with genuine grief that we record the deaths within this past year of two of our classmates—Helen Blair Baumann and Marguerite Titzell. When a class is as small as ours and has been as closely knit the parting is very hard.

Marguerite died in Lake Worth, Florida where she was spending the winter, as she and her sister, Carolyn Titzell '22, had been doing for several years.

Helen had been in the Negley Nursing Home for many months. It was hard to believe that our lively Helen was so afflicted and no longer active in our midst. Of all the class members none other had provided the leadership with which Helen was gifted. Her propensity for friendship included us all and from us all she drew admiration, respect and love. We loved her whimsical ways, her sense of humor, her knack of thinking up jolly good times, and her solid beliefs in her religion and the principles of justice and integrity. We believe we all had her devoted love and she never lost her interest in or her loyalty to our college. We shall always think of her in words of one of our classmates as such a vital person with an appreciation of the good things in life.

Faye Atkinson McCune and her husband seem to be getting along quite well. Faye has written that her only news is that they are far behind with things that need to be done. She says she thinks they really should move into an apartment, but it would entail a lot of work with which they feel they would be unable to cope. Their daughter, Peggy, lives in Lake Worth, Florida and goes up to do all kinds of helpful things.

Being asked for news for this letter Lucille Atkinson Baker found her mind dwelling on Helen Baumann, for Helen was so closely identified with the class. Lucille says her life is now mostly centered in their large house which contains so many pictures and mementoes of her life and travel in distant lands. Her granddaughter is finding much of the material useful in her teaching. As do many of the rest of us, Lucille realizes the need of organizing their many possessions, but hasn't been able to find the time.

Christine Cameron Bryan reports she has nothing new to tell us, so we shall take that to mean "no news is good news."

Laila Clark Ament and I have had even more phone chats than usual this past year. Early in December Laila had the misfortune to have a bad fall on her stairs and while she broke no bones, she really has had plenty of misery since. She was pretty much housed for weeks but at this writing is improving. Meanwhile Laila's aunt, Mrs. Dilley, has been quite well. Due to the distinction of being the oldest member of Blue Cross and Blue Shield in a group of two and a quarter million people, her picture appeared in the Pittsburgh Press one evening this winter. She will be celebrating her 109th birthday on May 21.

On Helen Craig Culley's Christmas card she merely wrote "All aboard for Australia" and she must have gone as I have had no reply to my request for news.

It is good to know that Louise Fletcher is still able to divide the year between Lake Chautauqua and Sarasota, Florida. She reports that she has not been too well having been suffering with bursitis in one knee, but at least she hasn't been a victim of the flu. Louise finds it hard to believe that it is sixty years since we graduated and wonders where the years have gone. She still attends A.A.U.W. affairs thanks to the kindness of Lois Hinckley '31.

Emma Geiselhart Osterloh will be moving this spring into a new apartment building in the same general area, closer to her son's, which is an advantage.

Emma's health has not been good this past year and her eye trouble still does not allow for much reading or writing.

Jeanne Gray Orcutt and her daughter, Jeanne, flew to Sarasota, Florida last May to visit Jeanne's youngest daughter, Marian, and had a delightful time.

Mildred Weston Rogers has not been very well for one reason or another including a case of flu. Her poems continue to get published even some of the ones published years ago. The day she wrote me she had just had another request to reprint a poem called "Central Park Journey" which originally appeared in the New Yorker twenty years ago and has since been included in about thirty anthologies. The young people's biography of Gertrude Stein which her husband was working on when we reported last year is now due to be published in April. Its title is "Gertrude Stein is Gertrude Stein is Gertrude Stein." Mildred mentions two of the illustrations in the book, one of which is a picture of Mr. Rogers, Gertrude Stein and Alice Toklas which Mildred took in France. The other is a picture of Gertrude Stein and Mildred.

My note from Grace Wilson brings us word that she is well and grateful for that. Grace keeps in touch with several of us.

Life in Toronto seems to go along happily for Martha Young McKeon with her bridge games, Current Events study group, and symphony concerts. It is good to hear that the members of her family are well, busy and happy. Martha says that her grandsons fairly ooze hockey while Cathy settles for piano and figure skating. Peggy went as planned to Europe with the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir and enjoyed the experience very much.

I have no items of personal interest worth recording but as I write this letter the prison war have started to return home from Vietnam and I think that is an event to make us all aware and take notice. We are thrilled at their return and rejoice with them and their families.

June of 1973 is fast approaching and now remind my classmates that this June will be the sixtieth anniversary of our graduation. I am writing each of you about our reunion.

Olga Losa goes to Florida each year in March and last summer she took a train trip through the Canadian Rockies.

Mary Estep Starr and family spent last July in Siesta Key, Florida. She reports that her granddaughter attends Ohio University in Athens, Ohio. Two teen-agers make things lively and interesting at home.

Mary Ruth Jeffery planned a trip to Berlin in April to see the lilies, something she has always wanted to do.

Betty Cameron Frank and your secretary send greetings and best wishes.

The Class of 1917 has received cordial greetings from most of its members. Many of these or have winter homes in Florida. Agnes D. Walling spends the winter in St. Petersburg. Martha Dunbar Say in Lakeland; Lillian Lichtenstahl lives in Miami Beach. Dorothy S. Eder Markell's home in Pompano Beach seems to be blissfully comfortable. Mona Crytzer wrote from Pittsburgh but will be in Pompano Beach in February and March. In Pittsburgh enjoys the programs of music and drama, gives time to Shadyside Boys' Club Auxiliary.

Edna Evans Peterson leads a quiet life in Greensburg where she takes care of her mother. Pauline McCaw Patterson enjoys grandmother life near her daughter's children in Dayton, Ohio, while she is a volunteer hospital aide.

Elizabeth McClelland Crawford, Helen F. Nichol and Louise Reinecke Thorne keep in touch in Pittsburgh. Louise has her family on one continent now and fairly near home back in Pittsburgh.

Marian White Landis sends greetings on behalf of her mother Estelle Shepard White and her who are in poor health.

Martha Crandall Noyes' report is unique. She and Charles joined a guided tour of Europe, visiting six countries. Near Lucerne, while shopping, they went by funicular railway to the top of Mount Pilatus, and came down the other side of the mountain in a swinging cable car. Bad for 83 and 78. In Paris, as they waited aboard the huge 747 plane, homeward bound, discovered among their fellow passengers Chatham-Hamilton College Choirs. These people had completed a successful concert of Europe and were happy and charming as greeted Martha, a "senior" alumna. About way home, high above the mid-Atlantic, asked her to stand and be introduced. Standing in the wide aisles near their seats, sang to her "The Ivy of Chatham" exclaiming a fellow traveler remarked: "We have seen things, but this is the icing on the cake."

Your secretary stays well and whole, plays the piano, drives her car, and enjoys her village life.

Elmer McElroy Guthrie did not solicit news for this issue of the RECORDER and would very much like to have a volunteer to take her place as class secretary.

NEW ADDRESSES

Edith Honsaker Schumacher (Mrs. Carl), 1050 Meadow Lake Dr., Apt. 10, Vista, Calif. 92083
Edith Pew, 100 Bryn Mawr Court, Apt. 504 West, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15221

Lois Farr Hamilton is still enthusiastic about the Northwest and continues her work at the Tucson Red Bank which sends supplies to thirty-two hospitals in southern Arizona.

Edith Pew, besides moving, spent Christmas in class with her niece and went with Stella Espy to New York.

Florence Fast McIntyre had all her children for their last summer and also trips to New England and to Williamsburg.

It is a pleasure to quote from Mabel Shaffer's card, "This has been the best year of my life because of honors and pleasures given to me, but they were too personal for publicity." However, deep interest—or curiosity—moved me to tell Ella Martin who thought it quite right to say that one was the dedication of a plaque in her church honoring Mabel for her many and varied contributions there. Ella is well and active too.

Gladys Sullivan Peters lives a very quiet life, she says. One of her granddaughters is at McGill University working toward a medical course. Elizabeth Murphy Walter is still trying to do her best and wishes it were better. She is unhappy to hear some of the speakers heard on the campus.

Marcella Geary and Ada Lou Andrew Day send their wishes to all as did the others who responded.

Mary Reed Reeves was hospitalized last spring but enjoyed the summer at her Rector summer home and her grandchildren. Marjorie Caughey also finds great enjoyment in her two, and being the third generation to attend Lady Side Academy and Ellen is at Ellis School.

Edith Honsaker Schumacher has permanently left Illinois for Vista, California because of her husband's health. They have an apartment that is just right for them in a lovely location, "an ideal spot to spend their golden years."

Ellen Treloar McGarity thinks Florida equally good and enjoys especially the A.A.U.W. which has members from Pittsburgh including some Chatham grads.

Lucile Long Haseltine said she was healthy, happy, and enjoying life, which is my wish for all of you.

NEW ADDRESSES

Josephine Dickey, 168 Medford Leas, Medford, New Jersey, 08055

Edith Foster Bergstrom, (Mrs. Edw. W.), 651 South West Sixth Street, Pompano Beach, Florida, 33060

Marion Moffett Barnes, (Mrs. Francis N.), 17 Beaver Road, Sewickley, Pa. 15143

Louise Wilson Matthews, (Mrs. J. MacDowell), 2814 Griffiths Avenue, Apt. 4, Cincinnati, Ohio 45208

Harriette Bowers Sime writes she surely will be happy to see everybody again at our Fiftieth Reunion in June. She has unloaded all her class pictures between living in the Orient twelve years, Boston and New York.

Jean Bumgarner provided new addresses for Edith and Marion and is inviting Alice to stay with her in June.

Josephine Dickey informed me in September

she had left her busy New York life and retired to a quiet community development near Philadelphia where she is enjoying some group activities with interesting people from all over the country. In January her brother, Lloyd, died in St. Petersburg, Florida. We sympathize in her bereavement.

Lyda Hamilton is looking forward to seeing every member of the class of '23 and wonders who has changed the least or the most.

Martha Leslie Stewart's husband died unexpectedly last spring in Delray Beach, Florida. In her loneliness she finds busy days help but the days are long. The Class sends their heartfelt sympathy.

Sara MacGonagle responded in June she had received her M.A. degree in 1926 from the University of Pittsburgh and her Ph.D. from the Graduate Faculty of Philosophy of Columbia University in 1936—Department of French. Congratulations to Sara and Judy Matthews Kirk, our two classmates with doctorates.

Elizabeth Mason Richards opines "A 50th should be celebrated by pealing chimes and the Hallelujah Chorus." Although it has been thirty years since she has been in Pittsburgh and all her ties are broken she is giving thought to returning and hopes the graduating class of 1973 will look back in fifty years with the warmth and gratitude we all feel for the privilege of our college years.

Julia Matthews Kirk will certainly make an appearance, if possible, at Reunion. She sends her greetings in case she doesn't get back. She enjoys the South and will be Hawaii bound in March with Myron.

Dorothy McCormick Means is looking forward to Reunion and is so interested in all the plans, especially rounding up former members of the class. She enjoyed a wonderful family reunion at Chautauqua the month of August.

Helen McKenzie Jamison expects to attend Reunion and is anxious to see everyone again. She and John leave March 9 for a holiday in Italy.

Martha McKibbin Tatnall will not promise at this early date (February) to be at our 50th but will keep it in mind and do her best. "Our biggest event was our trip to Eastern Europe in September. Our crash landing in a Russian plane afire near Warsaw naturally took the edge off our visit to Russia. And, being locked up in the Warsaw Airport for 18 hours did not help either. The trip was educational more than pleasurable. If I were thirty years younger I might want to go again. Tom had a heart attack in October but is recovering nicely."

Mary McKinney Wilson tells me to include her in the list returning for Reunion.

Margaret McRoberts Egbert is not planning to attend Reunion. She does not want to leave Jack who is suffering from the after effects of a broken hip and crushed ankle and her own navigating is difficult at times due to her hip. She was so kind to enclose eight snapshots of "Victory Through Conflict," the 1920 Jubilee pageant of our freshman year.

Marion Moffett Barnes is enjoying the relaxation of Jekyll Island for two months after moving. "Of course I am planning to be at Reunion and hope we have a large attendance as I am eager to see everyone."

Marie Ohle Craig writes from Arizona that except for a worsening of her health she hopes to attend Reunion. "I still have my teeth and hair but I have lost a lot of my zip, I can tell you."

Marjorie Patterson Kaiser hopes to attend Reunion but can not promise because of incomplete travel plans. The graphic account of their trip through eleven countries in a rented Simca during Carl's sabbatical leaves you with the happy feeling you were along. It all began with Marjorie being subjected to questioning at Kennedy Airport after an alert guard found a weapon, (a can opener), in her handbag. It ended in Holland in a state of suspension and fear lasting over an hour preparing for a crash landing when the wheels of their plane would not stay locked down. Her most exciting news is the birth of a grandson, Christopher William.

Eliza Peterson hopes she is able to be back in June and has loads of awful pictures. "We are better looking fifty years later."

Marion Rainey Johnston informs me her attendance at Reunion will hinge on her son's vacation plans which may coincide, but will come if she can.

Helen Sapper Rider thought she was late and phoned her news. She expects to come to Reunion and is really enthused. Last summer she visited Ruth Baxter Hill '24 in Hendersonville, North Carolina and while there phoned Helen McKenzie Jamison.

Edith Wilds Clark is doing all the work of Reunion Chairman making frequent contacts with the College. She has been the greatest help to me as well as Treasurer of the Reunion Fund. She visits Mildred Clyde recovering from major surgery last fall, to whom we send our love. We sincerely hope her trip to Arizona in March will benefit her arthritis.

The sympathy of the class is extended to Helen Brown Cook who lost her sister, Margaret Brown Spurr '22, last July.

Louise Wilson Matthews regrets deeply that returning for the 50th will be impossible as it will be between trips which she and her husband are blessed with good health to enjoy.

After fifty years we have cause to rejoice knowing that Miss Vanda E. Kerst, our class adviser, is living. We only wish she could be with us June 2. Could we all reunite with her via congratulatory cards at Fairhaven Home, Nursing Unit, 850 Marseilles Avenue, Upper Sandusky, Ohio 43351?

Pittsburgh area members attended class luncheons in June and October. The next is scheduled for April 28 at the College. We hope as many as can will register to stay at the College over the Reunion. Town and gown anniversaries have engrossed your secretary's time and interest. In September it was the 175th Anniversary of Phillipsburg and now our own 50th. Remember all roads lead to Chatham College where you are wanted.

Catherine Humbert Good (Mrs. Joseph N.), 617 Ululani Street, Kailua, Oahu, Hawaii 96724

Lois Brown Nabors writes that she has had a wonderful trip to California to visit friends. She says she keeps busy with church and club work and sees a lot of Sally Chisholm Springer.

Louise Bumgarner tells us that her health is still quite poor since she had her second heart attack. I'm sure she has the sympathy of the class. Keep your chin up, Louise.

Amelia Aiello Cangi, Louise Graham Brown, Margaret Herron, Mary Shane Muir and Bee Stevenson McQuiston all send their greetings. It has been fun hearing from them. I'm sure some of the rest of you have been doing things we would be interested in hearing about. Why not tell us about them next time?

So now we get down to me (still reluctant). Last fall Gordon and I went on a photographic safari to East Africa. Then, "being in the neighborhood" we toured South Africa as far as Durban. We came back via Addis Ababa, Athens and Rome arriving in Cleveland about December first. Then we shifted into high gear to "catch up," so are now relaxing in the lovely Keys.

DEATHS

Frances Ray Dunlevy (Mrs. Risher), November 1, 1972, Brookline, Mass. Frances had written a letter last February 23, too late (purposely) to be included in the Class News. She wrote about her illness and still hoped to attend our 45th Reunion. But she could not make it. Also we are sorry to hear of the death of our class adviser, Lois Hartman Wilson (Mrs. George E.), January 27, 1973, Mt. Lebanon.

The 19 members who attended our 45th Reunion are: Mary Bradshaw, Elizabeth Crawford, Miriam Kirkell, Isabel Epley, Ray Stevenson Bair, Clara Colteryahn, Anne Negley Brunot, Marian Connelly Bowers, Marybelle Carroll Emerick, Emelyn Taylor Rohlfis, Mary Harner Britton, Mabel Hugus, Margaret Gibson McCrum, Mary K. Reed Lose, Ella English Daub, Peggy Johnston McClintock, Inez Wallis, Isabel Watson Druschel and Kathryn McPeake Arnold. I want to thank publicly Ella and Isabel (Druschel) for Reunion pictures, and Kay (Arnold) for the signatures of all 19. By all accounts it was a fine affair!

We extend our sympathy to Frances House Deiter whose mother died in 1971, to Kay McPeake Arnold whose father died in March 1972; and to Isabel Epley whose Aunt Isabel (Young) died February 3, 1973. I think most of our class had a special feeling and deep regard for Aunt Isabel over the years—from our undergraduate days to the present time.

Ruth Allman Jones and her sister maintain their old family home and are busy with volunteer work and their families. There are 2 new grandchildren this past year. They have done a lot of visiting with friends and relatives and flew to Arizona for New Years.

Clara Colteryahn had an extended visit to Hawaii with niece and husband whose new home overlooks Pearl Harbor. She is busy in her garden and has joined the College Club (of Pittsburgh).

Elizabeth Crawford has been busy with her usual activities in Princeton and with 3 family weddings. Last summer she was at the sea shore and made "my usual camp visit with the Appalachian Mountain Club in New Hampshire."

Ella English Daub is still hoping for more money for the 50th Anniversary Fund. Make checks payable to: Chatham Alumnae Class Account, and mail to Mrs. J. C. Daub, 9656 42nd Street North, Pinellas Park, Florida, 33565. Ella and her husband had another trip West.

Harriet Evans continues with the Meals on Wheels project in Albuquerque which has expanded to 75 deliveries 5 days a week to shut-ins. The food is obtained from the kitchens of 2 hospitals.

Eleanor Ewing Buterbaugh writes, "The Recorder arrives. I sit down at once and spend happy minutes with friends. . . I like to imagine everyone chuckling when they read the witty description of my life! But, no, not witty—it reads this way: It is being a nice lot of years, good health, and pleasant living each day."

Mary Harner Britton and husband in April 1972 made their third trip to Spain where they traveled 3,000 miles by rail. They like Pennsylvania even in winter and do not anticipate leaving it to live in Florida or Arizona.

Elizabeth Hewill Holland will concentrate on being Citizenship Action Chairman for Texas Church Women United for 1973-1976. This covers various denominations who will work toward educating, motivating, and inspiring church women to be informed and active citizens.

Frances House Deiter wrote that her mother was 93 when she died and until just a few months before her death she was able to care for herself—even pampering her (Frances.) She and her husband have lived with her mother in "the big old 104 year old house" in Pleasantville, since the '40's. Their 2 children and grandchildren love coming home to it. In 1971 Frances retired from teaching college preparatory English to juniors in Oil City Senior High School, and says No Substituting.

Pegg Johnston McClintock is glad she attended our 45th Reunion and saw so many classmates all looking so well. She hopes to make it to our 50th but thinks 5 years is a long time! After the reunion she settled down to her usual life in Boca Raton.

Last September Kay Lowe Hall and her husband spent 2 weeks in Athens and in cruising through the Greek Isles, going as far as Istanbul. At home in Florida they are involved with church and civic affairs, Garden Club, golf, bridge, and swimming.

Ruth McKeever Slater for the past 3 summers has had their 3 grandchildren, one at a time during July, flying from San Francisco. This summer they hope the grandchildren and their parents, will all come to visit at one time. Ruth's husband is making a good recovery from a heart attack. In 1972 she received the National Braille Association's distinguished service award and diamond pin for her braille transcribing.

Kay McPeake Arnold's father was 93 when he died. She writes, "We sold our house in Canonsburg and moved to Tucson to be near our daughter Gretchen. We are building a house on 4½ acres of this vast desert land—and expect to move into it before Easter." In February she had word that Marybelle Carroll Emerick was in West Penn Hospital with a myocardial infarction, and will be completely inactive for several months.

Last summer Cass McRoberts Gunia, with her brother and wife, sailed on a Taiwan cargo ship for a trip around the world. In Singapore she fell, spraining her left ankle and fracturing her right arm, and thus missed seeing all the Far East. She is still having difficulty using her arm (but her writing was quite legible).

Nancy Jane Montgomery has no special news but pays a special tribute to Isabel Epley and Aunt Isabel. "I'll never forget their home was always 'open house' for any or all of the Class of '27, and always such wonderful hostesses." Jane keeps in touch with Bernice Keefer and Jean Thomas Iffert '26.

Eleanor Mowry McKelvey's badly sprained foot kept her from attending our Reunion and kept her sitting around the house for many weeks. She now is busy with Community and College Clubs, Delta Kappa Gamma, and church work. The McKelvey's enjoyed a trip to Hawaii.

Anne Negley Brunot wrote about Lois Hartman Wilson, Frances Ray Dunlevy and Isabel Epley's Aunt Isabel. Also about her husband's very serious eye difficulties, and about the Bairs going on a Caribbean Cruise. She wishes the Brunots were too!

Ray Stevenson Bair is fine and writes, "Our 3 children live in different states and each has 2 children. We all get together at least once a year when we camp for a week. It's great fun for Grandma to have all 6 grandchildren to play with at once! This year we plan to meet in Vermont."

Isabel Watson Druschel now lives in "a very old and small village" near the extensive apple orchards of Harry Byrd III. They now have 2 grandsons in nearby Leesburg, Va. Isabel is engaged in helping in 1st and 4th grades in the local school, and in other community projects.

Grace Wilson thinks she must be the Senior Resident of our 7 classmates who now live in Florida as she has been there since 1940. She loves her house, fishing, shell collecting, rose gardening, and the ever-growing number of volunteer jobs since her retirement from teaching. She enjoys excellent health. Her plans include a trip to Alaska.

News of 3 classmates not mentioned above came in at Christmastime: Irene Stout Carskadon wrote that the highlight of 1972 was a wonderful trip to Hawaii with a group of 40 friends. Suzanne Noble Nauman wrote that she has a new granddaughter to talk about. Virginia Glandon Hackett wrote, among other things, that her two Siamese and she "were joined about a year and a half ago by a 'Sooner.' (would sooner live here than elsewhere.) (She knows I like cats, too.)

Since space is of the essence I shall just add an appreciative "Thank you" for all your enjoyable notes and letters. 'Signing-off' now—until next year.

THE DAY NOTHING HAPPENED

It was a day when nothing happened.
The sun came up as usual
At its usual time and place.
Breakfast was oatmeal, honey, buttered toast
And cocoa steaming in thick mugs.

kids got off to school peanut-butter-jelly sandwiches apples in their lunch.
 chores were just the same old chores
 Bessie almost stepping in the milk, chickens, ducks and geese squabbling over feed.
 sprayed potatoes and hoed corn.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn says that last year ere were no trips, just kept her nose to the ndstone all the time. She is still tax assessor West Windsor Township (New Jersey) and es a course at Rutgers University now and then keep from getting rusty. EB's husband Dick died last August and is giving flight instrucn and towing gliders for fun and profit.

Ann Bateman Lewis and husband Ed have ved about 35 miles south of Chicago to a rural a where they can indulge themselves in their dening hobby, yet be close enough to Chicago return whenever they wish. Since Ann's hus-nd traveled a lot while he was working, they happy to have the peace and serenity of the ntry. Ann's four sons are all married and they ve four granddaughters. Two of the boys are Chicago; one in graduate school of the University of Illinois and the fourth is a resident in stic surgery at the University of Pittsburgh.

Last summer our loyal Alaskan, Edie Beale per, retired from her job with the State Office Vocational Rehabilitation. At first she missed e activity, but now is content doing occasional rk for her older son, Linn, Jr., and his partner, n, Sr., now to work a few more years, but her Edie nor Linn want to live anywhere else t Alaska. But they did enjoy a trip to the gin Islands.

Last year Martha Bradshaw Stout made several es, visiting Florida, Arizona and New Mexico. has given up her volunteer work to devote her e time to being President of the women of h church, which is a full-time job. Last June nger son Don was graduated from George ashington University Law School and in the l he passed the Virginia Bar. Older son Bill is out to publish a mathematics textbook and is l a member of the Math Department of the iversity of Illinois.

Elizabeth Brandon spends the winter in Florida d the summer at her home in Beaver Falls. Betty plans to return to Beaver Falls the early part of April, when she will be glad to have her car again.

Geraldine Brinley Leech has kept busy with church and women's club work since they gave up on business several years ago. For the past two holiday seasons, Gerry has worked part-time in a toy store, which was completely delightful.
 Gerry's daughter Linda lives in Tiffin, Ohio, and Linda's two daughters are a constant joy to grandma Gerry.

Sally Cecil Faisst has moved back to the West Coast. The Faissts put their household goods in storage in Richmond, Va., and set out for California where they rented an apartment in Palo Alto. Harold took early retirement and they had planned to spend several months in Spain, but they cancelled the trip when Harold was asked to be Secretary of the new Penn Central Board. Sally and Harold think they will retire in Richmond eventually. In May of this year Sally plans a trip to Russia with some friends. It's a Performing Arts trip that will take them to eight cities. Sally commented that the Tsars must have gone all over Europe to secure the Rembrandts, Impressionist paintings, etc., and not all of it is in Moscow and Leningrad. She is studying painting again, attending the symphony and accompanying her husband on skiing trips into the Sierras.

Last fall, LaVerda Dent Moran and Tom decided to come to Pittsburgh to see some friends.
 Unhappily, the nostalgic trip that was meant to last only a few days took three months! Getting out of their car in Pittsburgh, LaVerda fell and broke the main bones in her left leg. The surgical work was complicated by some necessary skin grafting. The pain of the accident was eased by the fact that all LaVerda's former doctors are at St. Margaret's Hospital, where she was hospitalized. She was also very pleased to receive a call from Chatham, offering to bring books and call classmates. She can now walk again without a walker.

Clara Falconer Simmermacher says she is "living a pretty slow life" but manages to keep moving.
 Last June she and her husband went to Houston to attend the christening of their third grandson.
 The remainder of the summer was spent with an infected foot. Clara says her husband has taken up square dancing and she watches from the sidelines. "It's fun," she says, and they love Florida.

Lida Fischler Lampe keeps as busy as she wants to be. She often goes to Allentown to visit her son Dick. Harry's widow and Lida's granddaughter live near by in New Castle and Lida spends much time with them. Lida says it's a pretty slow life, but that's what she likes. She sends her best to all the class.

Martha Coffe Lane and her husband have now retired and moved to Sarasota, Florida. They have bought a villa condominium in Village in the Pines. They are happy in their new location and enjoy the social activities there. Martha is happy to have Lois Sproul Hinckley in the vicinity and has gone to organization meetings with her.

Ruth Haddock is now Director of Student Assistance and Information (a new title) at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb and continues to be happy in her work with the students. Last summer she spent a week in Ireland and took a barge trip on the Nivernais Canal in France. Ruth goes to Theatre Guild and pursues her interests in athletics and reading. She says she hasn't heard from any members of the class for years and is happy that President Eddy has stayed at Chatham.

Lucile Laughlin Logan and Earl have plans made for a trip to Europe in October. They continue to enjoy their country retreat at Stoughton Lake, Jennerstown, Pa. Lucile says their road is marked "Private" just before you reach Green Gables Restaurant. Their house is the red brick with the red tile roof on the lake side of the road.

Kay James McCann remarked that she still keeps a lively pace. The McCanns did not take any extended trips but did go to Washington and to the Audubon Western Conference on Monterey Peninsula. Kay worked on an exhaustive study for the AAUW on the population explosion problem and had several recommendations accepted at the state level. She is still interested in local concerts, travel films, plays, opera, and bridge.

Florence Jones Maddox reports the birth of her sixth grandchild last November. Florence and William are planning a trip to the Canary Islands and Madeira in May and are planning to stay with Diane's two sons while Diane and Bill are in Japan celebrating Diane's Master of Business Administration—which she is scheduled to receive from the University of Cincinnati in June. Florence keeps active with hobbies, church work and social events.

Margaret Jefferson is still teaching science in junior high school in Charlottesville, Virginia, and serving on the Vestry at church. Last summer she vacationed on both oceans—Seattle and Martha's Vineyard.

Addie Lasner Sachs reports that she is "living in peaceful serenity" except when five granddaughters descend on her for holiday visits! Addie is social chairman for her building and plans all kinds of activities. The other day Addie had a visit from Sally Miller Brash '32 who's happily teaching.

Elizabeth Marshall reluctantly admits that she is getting older. She was one of several volunteers who agreed to submit to tests of memory, sensory perception and reflexes at the Department of Neurology of University Hospital (Cleveland). Betty said it was interesting to see the modern equipment used for testing. Last summer she took the Canadian Pacific across Canada from Toronto to Banff, then on to Vancouver and back home via Air Canada.

Elsie McCreery Longwell reports more surgery—this time a back fusion. She is still in a brace but free of the intense pain.

Agnes McKain spent nearly all summer completing the decorating of her new home in Mt. Lebanon. She and Eva Bowser '50 were hostesses to the June meeting of Salmagundi at Eva's summer cottage on Lake Erie. Eight members drove there for the week-end of Agnes' birthday.

Margaret Ray McDowell is content to be "plodding along as usual." Margaret's only diversion in 1972 was a quick trip to Denmark with her daughter Janet who is a graduate of Boston University. Margaret wondered whether those one-week trips to Europe were worth the effort, but now feels that a great deal can be covered in one week if you forget about shopping trips (she did take a half-day to shop for sweaters and Royal Copenhagen plates).

Anne Ritenour Harbison is recovering from the horrible experience of the sniper attack in New Orleans last fall. She says she feels almost like a prisoner in her own apartment because of so many purse-snatchings and carries a cane for protection.
 On the brighter side, Anne is looking forward to the National Convention of PEO which will be held in New Orleans in 1973, and wonders if any of our class belongs to PEO.

Beverly Robison Smith and her husband have sold their home and moved into an apartment on the Gulf at Naples, Florida, and they "love" their new location. Mort has had major surgery, but is doing well. Bev likes to read the news from the girls.

Kay Rockwell Potter and husband did a bit of cruising in 1972. When they came home from the Caribbean, they signed up for the Greek Islands cruise on the same ship, the STELLA MARIS. They flew to Athens via New York and boarded the cruise ship in Greece. From there to Sicily and then they disembarked for a side trip to Rome.
 They were overwhelmed in Rome by the "mobs of tourists and gray days," so they flew directly back to Miami and sunshine . . . "and to rest our weary feet." When they returned they had a test run from Hilton Head Island on their new boat, spending four days going down the Intra-coastal Waterway.

Betty Schultz Wise says her husband is now retired and they are liking it a lot. Betty's older son Roger was in the Air Force for three years and has now resumed his law studies at Pitt. The younger son George graduated from Pitt last year.
 Betty is content being a housewife and sends her best to the girls.

AAUW and other group work help keep Lois Sproul Hinckley occupied. Lois delights in the bright sayings and happy faces of her grandchildren, and the grandnieces, who live nearby.
 Lois comments, "It's a joy to see them develop," and sends her best to everyone.

Lou Turner Crookston and Mac became weary of the demands of their resort complex in Deerfield Beach and, when an attractive opportunity came along, sold their holding and moved to Hillsboro Beach. They are on the eighth floor of a nine-floor building on the Intracoastal Waterway "with a gorgeous view of the ocean." Mac was not too happy with retirement, so was delighted to accept a position with a local bank. He works eight hours a day, five days a week on "Business Development."

In October of 1972 Florence Wise Turner took early retirement after 30 years with the American National Red Cross. Since then she has been doing nothing special and likes it! In January she took a Caribbean cruise and in February she went to Hawaii. She plans to keep her home in Bakers-town and the summer cottage on Lake Erie. Florence said she would welcome any of the girls at any time, at either home. The cottage is at Lake City, Pa., and she is listed in the Erie phone book.

Olive Wycoff MacCarthy had several trips during 1972: Easter in Washington; back to Washington in July to help Marti move; Rehoboth Beach in August, and a vacation in the south in late October, after Olive's return from the hospital.

It was a delight to receive your letters and cards. I only wish it were possible to answer each one personally. Thank you, everyone, for your interest in replying. Two more of our class have moved to Florida. The total is now ten, as I count them, and if anyone wishes the address of anyone else, in Florida or otherwise, please let me know.

Our sympathy to Elizabeth Babcock Hull who lost her father last fall and to Margaret Ray McDowell, whose sister Frances Ray Dunlevy '27 died on November 1.

The Beatrice Lewis Memorial has received another gift, and we now have $670. At Commencement we will have a prize of $30 to award, the details of which are being worked out with the Alumnae Office.

Betty Graham Kirkpatrick (Mrs. John G.), 33 N. Emily Street, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15205.

Clara McClure Battis (Mrs. Walter T.), 5925 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15232.

Lillian Wilson Ruckel, (Mrs. R. William), 66 Chapel Drive, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15237.

Louise Metzgar Iams (Mrs. Charles W.), Ross Mountain Club, R.D. 1, New Florence, Pa. 15944.

Lilly Engel Rosenberg (Mrs. Albert A.), 731 Wyncote House, Wyncote, Pa. 19095.

Dorothy Gleason Van Wickle (Mrs. C. R.), 348 Dale Road, Bethel Park, Pa. 15102.

Helen reporting:

Many classmates expressed enthusiasm about our reunion. The official Reunion Brochure containing all the program details will be mailed to you in May. If you are unable to attend, a newsletter or pictures sent to your secretaries will be most appreciated. At our last meeting it was agreed that a class gift to the college should be considered at this time, so please give some thought to a monetary contribution.

The class expresses its sympathy to Jean Case Aikins, who lost her husband, John, last May.

No particular news, but greetings were reported from Jean Blair Hodgkin, Jessie Doudna Phillips, Charlotte Iams, and Genevieve Shibley Karn.

For the past four years, Clara Condon Bair has been teaching in special education.

Mary Crumay Kehew regrets that her two grandsons are still too far away, in Denver. Her two unmarried daughters continue to work in Boston. Nox is enjoying retirement and is busier than ever; Mary does some teaching.

Last summer, Marguerite Cunliffe Gape took a course in Comparative Education at Edinboro and earned six more credits toward her certificate. In grand fashion she finished the summer, traveling with a group in Europe.

Genevieve Davis Crawford's 93-year-old mother is still living in Ohio, and Gen often visits her for a few days.

Marjorie Hopkins continues to teach and write.

She recently had lunch in New York City with Sara Allison Allman, who "looks tops."

Phyllis Lelew MacArthur is looking forward to her retirement in June. She is considering moving to Florida, and while there this past summer, she saw Mim Young White. Because of a severe strep throat at Christmas, she missed a trip to Rome. Since she has used all of her sick leave, she may miss our reunion.

Gene Llewellyn Price claims she is doing much the same, and is planning to visit her son in Omaha, so won't be able to attend our reunion.

Last June, Ruth Ludebuehl Early made a three weeks' train tour to California, where she had never been. In December she attended a Salamagundi at Vi Sekey Jessop's, and stayed that weekend with Ruth Nirella. She isn't planning to retire yet.

At a regional meeting of over 900 United Presbyterian women, Edith McBane served as registrar last July on the campus of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa.

Louise Metzgar Iams reports that since her husband's retirement, they have moved permanently to the country, 13 miles north of Ligonier. The location is not new to them, as they have had the house for eight years and have many friends in the area. They love it and are busier than ever, but keep in touch with many Pittsburgh friends. While in the "big city," they stay at the University Club. This spring they intend making a trip to Arizona and New Mexico.

We were deeply grieved to learn of the death of Virginia Hall McAleese's husband, John. In the past two years John had suffered several coronaries and passed away on December 15, after being in the hospital in Savannah for three weeks. Ginny plans to keep the house on Hilton Head Island "as I do love it here." Daughter, Ginger lives in Houston, and her first child Anne Meredith Wardner, was born July 19. Ginny hopes to return for our reunion and is planning a trip to Europe in the fall. She still enjoys golfing.

Mary Johnson Crudner sends greetings but no particular news except about the death of Lois Hartman Wilson, our class faculty advisor. She thought classmates would want to know.

Our Sue is completing her senior year at William Penn College. At Christmas we announced her engagement to a classmate, but they have no definite marriage plans until 1974. Wes is still flying C-130 cargo planes from Thailand bases and hopefully will finish his Far East tour of duty in May. Last April I vacationed in colorful Hawaii and recently spent a few days in Philadelphia with Sally Miller Brash.

I regret that this issue will be my last contact as one of your secretaries. I have thoroughly enjoyed your warm personal experiences, sharing in your news and I thank you for a most rewarding experience. My very best to you all! See you at our forty-year-young(?) reunion!

Dorothy reporting:

Dorothy Newell is staying in Warren for the third winter because of her eyes. Last August, she had a cataract operation on the right eye and is trying to put off an operation on the other eye until the middle of June so that she can attend our 40th reunion. Then she hopes to travel the globe again. In the meantime, she is enjoying reading, watching T.V., and playing cards.

Ruth Nirella's big news this year, is that she is planning to retire in June. She thought the day would never come! Last summer, she traveled to the Caribbean on a cruise, and then went to Stratford, Ontario for the Shakespearean Festival. Sounds like an exciting month, as Ruth hopes to be off for the Orient, Australia, and New Zealand. Perhaps when she gets the travel bugs worked out of her system, (there is still South America and Africa) she may take a look at the theatre again. She is looking forward to seeing us at reunion.

Gertrude Ray Mann is looking forward to our reunion, plans to attend, and would like to "house" a few of the class of '33.

How happy we are to hear from Ruth Ross, who has recovered and is home after spending January in Columbia Hospital because of a bad heart. She hopes to attend our reunion, but it will depend on her health. Best wishes were sent to everyone.

Everyday is Saturday, says Helen Rowand Dunkle. Fred retired September 1 so they are back to being a "two-some." In October, they spent time in New England, enjoying the autumn foliage. Christina and Chuck are in Alexandria, Virginia, where he is presently stationed. Marianne and Philip are coming east from Utah, June and will locate in Buffalo where he will be working for the Evening News. Helen is hoping to see us in June.

Sallie Stevenson Foster plans to attend reunion as she and Joe hope to drive East. Retirement is agreeing with Joe. Susan is a freelance potter in Berkeley. Nancy and her husband spent the summer starting their home on acres of wilderness land in Idaho. Will is in 4th year of architectural school. Full time school work keeps Sallie busy.

Ruth Stewart Bernosky has retired after 25 years of teaching and is spending her time church work and traveling. For the last two summers, she and her husband have been in Alaska driving the famed Alaskan Highway both times. This summer they plan to go to Vancouver to take a cruise visiting all eastern Alaskan cities. At Christmas time, while on a Williamsburg tour, she met Mary Elizabeth Woodworth Nelan '30.

We extend to Lilly Engle Rosenberg our sincere sympathy on the sudden death of her husband, April, 1972. Living near her daughter's family is helping her adjust to a new way of life. She keeps busy being involved in Senior Citizens Conference of Christians and Jews, a board member of Kereseth Israel Sisterhood, playing bridge, attending concerts, theatre, antique shows, and book reviews. She hopes to go on a Mediterranean cruise, as she loves ship life and is interested to see the changes in Europe since 1933. Best regards were sent to everyone. How marvelous, Lilly, that you are now a svelte size 10.

Our sincere sympathies go to Dorothy Gleason Van Wickle whose only son Bob died on September 3, 1972 at the age of 39, of cancer. His wife and children are in Marshall, Texas where Bob worked as a Research Engineer for Alcoa. Dottie lives in Bethel Park, is still teaching piano—25 years now. She hopes everyone had a better 1972 than she did.

Ed and I, Dorothy Ballantyne Milliken, had some interesting experiences. We took the Amtrak Train to Florida and loved it. In July we had a week of our family home for one week. Sleeping grandchildren and parents can be fun.

Thank you for responding so willingly to our plea for news. For those we didn't hear from, I do hope I will see you at our reunion in June or receive some news about you to read.

MARRIAGE

Shirley Gordon Emley to The Reverend Canon Ralph E. Hovencamp, November 21, 1972.

NEW ADDRESS

Virginia Schweinsberg Hyde (Mrs. Edward I.), 7881 S.W. 141 Street, Miami, Florida 33155.

Eleanor reporting:

Last June saw the marriage of Sally Aldrich Schaefer's son, Milo, Jr., to a Wilson College 1967 graduate. The young couple is now living in Allentown where Milo is a metallurgist with Allentown Products. Sally and Milo Sr. are planning a trip to Arizona in March—a scouting expedition with a possible view towards retirement there.

Margaret Eichley Storer continues to keep busy with teaching and to enjoy her summer on Lake Michigan.

Only one of Jean Engel Reppun's seven is at home, their youngest, 14-year old Joshua. The rest are scattered, four in the States, Paul in Argentina working on an ecology project and attending the University of Hawaii Medical School. Jean and Fred had an interesting trip last fall to New York where Fred became a Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians, then a week in Russia and another in England. A SPECIAL REPORT

Can We Save the Individuality of Our Colleges?

Or will powerful pressures,
on and off the campuses,
homogenize higher education?

Americans have long prided themselves on the individuality of their colleges and universities. The special ambiance of each campus. The combination of people and purpose. Spirit. The sounds and smells that make it different from all others.

And more:

... The autonomy of each institution that enables it to choose freely its own goals—and the programs to attain them.

... The peculiarly American genius for promoting the existence, side by side, of public and private colleges and universities.

... A “system” of higher education, in the best sense of the word: a group of interacting, interrelated, interdependent elements, existing in a more-or-less harmonious relationship. But intensely individual, nonetheless. Certainly not “systematized,” if the word implies a lockstep, or central control, or dull uniformity.

The result is one of society’s major miracles: more than 2,600 colleges and universities, each one different from all the rest. Different, yet committed to the common idea that through diversity and individuality the needs of the culture will be met.

BUT NOW we are encountering forces that threaten the survival of all that. For the first time in a century, serious questions must be raised about the ability of our colleges to maintain their individual distinctiveness—and of the system to maintain its diversity.

The historic immensity of what is happening is only beginning to be clear. After an era of unprecedented confidence and expansion throughout higher education, there is now a widespread questioning of higher education's place in our culture, and of its claim on our resources. And growth—which for decades has been the hallmark of our colleges and universities—is decelerating.

With these developments have come crises of size and money and quality affecting the great diversity of our system of higher education—and the individuality of each college and university within it.

Individuality and the Changing Student Population

FOR the past 100 years, American higher education has been growing at an accelerating rate. Enrollments doubled every 15 years until World War II; since then, they have doubled every decade.

That is not likely ever to happen again.

The Carnegie Commission on Higher Education predicts that enrollments will increase only by one-half between 1970 and 1980, and not at all between 1980 and 1990. In the last decade of the century, they will go up by only a third.

Enrollments in private institutions actually will drop, the federal government estimates, between 1977 and 1980.

By the end of this decade, say statisticians in the U.S. Office of Education, private education's share of all college enrollments will fall from 22.3 per cent in 1972-73 to 17.5 per cent in 1980-81.

These reductions in growth hold profound implications for all colleges and universities. Notes Princeton's President William G. Bowen:

"This battle for survival [private vs. public colleges and universities] has very serious implications for American higher education in general, which draws much of its strength from pluralism; that is, from the presence of many strong private and many strong public institutions working in different ways together.

"If this diversity were to be eroded, American higher education would suffer significantly."

THERE is more at stake than survival: the serious question. Survival for what?

In the period of expansion, a college or university could set its goals and be reasonably assured that enough students would be attracted by them. It cannot be so confident in a period when enrollments are stable and resources scarcer. The tendency in those circumstances is to standardize, to avoid setting goals that are offbeat, to try to be all things to as many men and women as possible. Under such conditions, mere survival is not an attractive prospect.

Decelerating growth and "no-growth" have other ramifications. If enrollment levels are to be maintained, some colleges and universities will be forced to accept students who do not meet the traditional criteria for college admissions.

"Low academic ability [measured by traditional means] will be the distinctive characteristic" of many such students, writes K. Patricia Cross of the Center for Research and Development in Higher Education at the University of California at Berkeley.

"We have not yet faced the full meaning of this prediction," Ms. Cross says. Such students will require major changes in the curriculum, major new sources of financial support, and faculty members specially trained to recognize and reward the non-academic skills they bring to the campus.

Another development—the growing pressure to educate a far greater percentage of adults than presently—will change the character of many a college and university. Already, a significant number of flexible arrangements are under way—"open universities," external-degree programs, "universities without walls"—to meet the needs of those who cannot leave full-time employment to earn their college degrees.

Alterations in the traditional picture of higher education will be extensive. Says Ernest L. Boyer, chancellor of the State University of New York:

"The old model of a scattered collection of isolated enclaves, each jealously guarding its resources and minutely regulating its students, who must remain in confinement for a four-year term, is giving way to a far more complex, dynamic image—a network of learning resembling perhaps the human nervous system itself, intricate, continually pulsating, and totally interconnected."

The individual campus, as Mr. Boyer sees it, "is becoming less a fortress surrounded by its moat and more of a supermarket of ideas, a library with easy access, a base of operations to coordinate learning, not control it."

Few would quarrel with the aims of such programs. They offer the possibility of lifelong learning for many.

citizens who have not been able to afford a college education in the past. They permit vast numbers of persons to earn academic degrees in less time with more options.

Yet many observers are concerned.

Supermarkets, they say, are not very friendly places. While you may meet your material needs there, your spiritual needs may be unfulfilled.

Without precautions, says Stephen K. Bailey of Syracuse University, such programs "can lead to a parade of academic horrors: cram courses organized by for-profit buck proprietary schools, a deadly standardization of subject-matter, tutoring to the test."

State legislatures, others warn, could use the development of the new programs as an excuse for reducing support for the traditional colleges and universities.

Perhaps most serious of all, however, are fears that such programs might change the whole definition of education in our society. An individual experience, leading to the development of "whole men and women" or "good citizens," might become a purely utilitarian process of providing the credentials a person needs to earn a living.

One writer describes the new trends this way:

"We don't offer extracurricular activities; we eliminate most of the theory courses; we give practical applications; and we get the students through in one-third the time. We get them through fast."

Another observer deplores the prospect:

"This is the attitude of a new breed of educators, the big-business organizers, who are moving into education and turning out graduates on an assembly-line basis. Apparently they are being paid by the head count."

THERE are ways to broaden our commitment to educating as many people as possible, without sacrificing the best qualities of higher education that we have known in the past. They lie in more individuality for our colleges and universities, not less; more diversity in our system of higher education, not less. But as we shall see, other forces—in addition to those accompanying the new era of no-growth—may be putting those qualities in serious jeopardy.

Individuality and the Trend Toward Central Control

HIGHER EDUCATION's long period of postwar growth coincided with a long period of national affluence. As the economy boomed, tax dollars were more numerous than ever before in history—and, nearly everywhere, public colleges and universities received a top-priority share of them.

Most states still place higher education well up on their priority lists. But urgent new needs have developed in other areas—e.g., health care, aid for the disadvantaged—and the competition for tax dollars has grown.

The result: Public colleges and universities have been subjected to unprecedented demands for "efficiency"—some justified, others panicky and unwise. And to achieve that efficiency, many states are dramatically reorganizing their structures of public higher education.

Once-autonomous institutions, each seeking its own goals, are finding themselves incorporated in larger and larger "systems" of public colleges and universities, often statewide in scope. Decision-making is centralized. Duplicate functions are eliminated.

From an efficiency standpoint, the trend makes sense. "It seems to us," argue Paul L. Dressel and William H. Faricy of Michigan State University, "that higher education must be regarded as a national resource, that the roles of institutions must be determined by social need, and that resources must be allocated according to a plan and their actual use accounted for."

They add:

"In moving in this direction, we are permitting the public and politicians to make decisions about the character of institutions—and their decisions may not always accord with the views of those involved with higher education."

In 1959, fewer than half the states had formal, legal mechanisms for statewide coordination of higher education. Now 47 states have such mechanisms. "Besides this dramatic increase in numbers," writes one observer, "statewide coordinating boards have increased in power in their areas of influence and in coercive potential."

The trend away from campus autonomy and toward central planning is likely to encompass many private institutions as well, when—as is happening in many states—they receive increasing support from public funds.

"Why," asks one observer, "should the non-public institutions receive tax dollars and not be subjected to the same planning and operating constraints and criteria for accountability as the public institutions? While the initial small, indirect aids may call for a modicum of state control, once the amounts become substantial, the institution can be treated in no other way than as an integral cog in the coordinated state system."

It may even be that some national system of higher education will emerge from the upheavals now occurring. Clark Kerr, chairman of the Carnegie Commission, says that education is becoming a "quasi-public utility"—especially since it, like electric power and other utilities, has become essential in the lives of people. Just as utilities require regulatory agencies to protect the public interest, say some observers, so the prospect of government regulation of higher education cannot be ruled out.

WHAT happens to the colleges' individuality and diversity, in the wake of such developments?

The president of one public institution in Ohio, Miami University, says that as the state system has developed, "we have witnessed a lockstep progression, statewide, into a common calendar, into a common subsidy formula, into a virtually common fee pattern." He warns:

"If diversity is coming out of the public system and replaced with a pale, insipid sameness, and if there is simultaneous withering of the private sector, one can question what the future holds for the very fiber of our system of higher education."

The movement toward more centralized authority, however, seems inexorable. It is clear that the public and its elected representatives are no longer willing to let the colleges and universities, alone, decide what is educationally best for the society. "Education," says an observer, "is too important, and too expensive, to be left entirely to the educators."

How, then, can colleges and universities learn to live in the larger systems, while preserving their diversity and individuality? They must be ingenious enough to develop mechanisms to preserve flexibility within a highly structured whole—and that poses one of the major challenges for higher education and its supporters in the years to come.

Individuality and the Unionization of Faculties

UNTIL RECENTLY, the prospect of faculty members' joining unions and engaging in collective bargaining seemed foreign to both the spirit and the reality of life on most campuses. Colleges and universities were serene havens far removed from the materialism and economic competition of the industrial world, and faculty members were thought of (and regarded themselves) not as "employees" but as individual professionals.

Although thousands of faculty members and college administrators still recoil from the notion of faculties organizing in collective-bargaining units, unionization—and all that goes with it—has made major gains on the campuses in the past five years. Most observers expect the trend to quicken rather than to slow down.

Already, the faculties at nearly 300 colleges and universities have won bargaining rights. More than half of the institutions are two-year colleges, but unionism is also gaining significant footholds in many four-year institutions, as well. Faculties at the State University of New York and the City University of New York are organized collectively, and the California legislature is considering a move to permit public employees to organize in that state.

The movement toward faculty unionization was speeded by a recent decision of the National Labor Relations Board that private institutions with annual budgets of $1-million or more fall under its jurisdiction. In the past, the NLRB excluded such institutions, so that only the public colleges and universities in states that had laws permitting their employees to organize could develop unionized faculties.

THESE occurrences have combined to make the debate over whether faculty members should join unions irrelevant. The issue now is, What impact will collective bargaining have on the character of our colleges and universities—and on the relationships between faculty members, administrators, students, and governing boards?

"Almost certainly," says one observer, "collective bargaining in higher education will move to statewide or system-wide levels and, in the process, destroy much of the autonomy of the separate campuses." He adds:

"Collective bargaining in a state system of higher education will ultimately promote centralization of decision-making. Collective bargaining will contravene the individual and departmental autonomy for which many faculty members have battled so long."

Collective bargaining's advocates disagree vigorously.

"In fact," says one union official, "bargaining is a response to that trend. The only way faculty members can play a role, when policies are established on a statewide basis, is through bargaining and political action. Otherwise, it will just be done over their heads."

In addition, union leaders point out, they have vigorously opposed such steps as the setting of statewide work-load standards by some legislatures.

Nonetheless, warns William B. Boyd, president of Central Michigan University, the administration of a collective bargaining contract, "with its emphasis on legalism, its grievance-laden tendencies, and its use of adversary proceedings, will almost inevitably change the tone of university administration. The last remnants of collegiality are apt to disappear. Personal relationships are almost bound to change when personnel relations are altered so fundamentally."

Can the traditional character of a college or university survive such strains? Or will the changes wrought by the unionization of faculties be a further cause of declining individuality and diversity?

Individuality and the Money Crunch

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS in higher education has replaced student protest as the "big issue" in the eyes of the press and public. Where once the headlines told of 100 students arrested for their roles in demonstrations, they now tell of 100 colleges and universities confronting the prospect of financial disaster.

The money crisis is real and of major proportions. Some private institutions face the possibility of extinction.

The existence of other institutions—public and private—is threatened. The Carnegie Commission predicts that nearly two-thirds of the nation's colleges and universities are in financial trouble or headed for it.

One spectacular case is that of New York University—the nation's biggest private institution of higher education. After several years of backbreaking deficits, N.Y.U. announced last fall that it planned to eliminate more than 200 faculty positions, sell one of its campuses to the public system of higher education, and insist that, henceforth, every academic unit within the university be able to pay its own way plus its fair share of university overhead.

Higher education's financial crunch came on the heels of several years of student disruptions—and some observers have attributed the crisis to the loss of faith in colleges and universities that followed. But the roots lie deeper—in the end of the era of growth.

In its simplest terms, higher education's crisis has developed because costs kept rising while income did not.

(There is a limit to the amount of tuition a college or university can charge and still remain competitive.) At major universities, large research programs were initiated with federal funds. Those funds have grown scarcer as the government's priorities changed, leaving those universities with commitments they cannot afford.

The increasing costs hit both public and private institutions.

One observer says that the huge growth during the 1960's was itself one of the main causes of higher education's money troubles. Colleges and universities were all the more vulnerable, he says, because they were "undercapitalized, overextended, and moving into increased areas of responsibility without permanent financing."

Yet—while the financial crisis is real, and some institutions have been forced to close their doors—for the vast majority of colleges and universities, survival itself is not in question.

Even at New York University, with its appalling problems, President James M. Hester believes that the draconian steps he has taken will assure the university's survival.

"The disease has been diagnosed, the prescription has been made. We are taking the medicine," says Mr. Hester. "It is very painful, but it is possible."

Edward D. Eddy, president of Chatham College, puts it thus:

"Posting a death notice for all of private higher education is like shooting all the horses because some have the wheeze."

"The great majority of the institutions will survive," Mr. Eddy declares. "Despite the many predictions of their demise, surprisingly few have closed their doors. Institutions of higher learning do have a persistence and tenacity—but not necessarily a guaranteed quality. And there is the rub."

The nation's colleges, Mr. Eddy says, "by and large will survive. But the emerging question is clearly one of spirit, not just life."

THE economic crisis poses one especially nettling threat to the diversity of the system of higher education and the individuality of every institution: well-meaning but potentially damaging cries for heightened efficiency and productivity on the campuses. If taken too literally, such a movement could turn the nation's colleges and universities into faceless, spiritless factories.

* A recent study has shown, for instance, that in 1964-65 a group of representative private institutions was charging $657 more per student than a group of representative public institutions. By 1971-72, the same private institutions were charging $1,242 more per student than the public institutions.

Most observers agree that many colleges and universities can and must improve their fiscal policies. But, warns Paul C. Reinert, president of Saint Louis University, they cannot be run like businesses. "There is," he says, "more at stake than Kleenex."

"Efficiency in higher education remains a complex matter," warns Howard K. Bowen, chancellor of the Claremont University Center. "Society may be in danger of trying to restrict the functions of higher education too narrowly, and to convert institutions into mere assembly lines generating credit hours, rather than allowing them to function as centers of learning and culture."

"It would be a mistake, harmful to both education and to social welfare, to turn colleges and universities into credit-and-degree manufacturers and to judge them solely by their productivity in these terms."

Father Reinert sums it up: "We must keep in mind that there are substantive differences between a college and a business. Drive a corporation to the wall and it may make adjustments in its operations that enable it to bounce back. Drive a college to the wall and you can kill it."

EVEN more controversial than the cries for efficiency are issues raised by the variety of solutions that have been proposed for higher education's money troubles.

Virtually everyone agrees that major new infusions of public funds for both private and public institutions will be needed. But how those funds should be channeled—whether they should come from the federal or state governments, whether they should be in the form of institutional aid or grants and loans to students—produce deep divisions within the academic community.

The Carnegie Commission has argued against "lump-sum, across-the-board grants" from the federal government. They could lead to reduced state support and to the development of a "nationalized system" with strict government controls, the commission says. Instead, it favors basing federal support to an institution on the number of federally supported, needy students enrolled, with the states providing the bulk of the support.

Spokesmen for some institutions of higher education disagree. Direct federal grants to the colleges and universities, they argue, can make the difference between the survival and collapse of many of them.

Spokesmen for many other institutions have argued that new government support should come in two forms: outright grants to the most needy students and "income-contingent loans" to middle-class students. (Under such loans, how much a student must pay back would be determined in part by how much he earned after graduation.)

With most support going to students, these educators argue, both public and private institutions could raise their tuitions to a point that would more nearly pay for the actual cost of providing an education.

Such a system would best preserve the diversity of our system of higher education, says an economist from the Brookings Institution. We need, he says, "a shift to public support of students rather than the excessive reliance on institutionalized support that characterizes current public support programs." He goes on:

"Such a program of portable aid would free institutions to develop their own conceptions of the curriculum required to produce better people and, more importantly, would give student-consumers a right to choose among alternative conceptions. The government could and should scrutinize the academic offerings for which it is indirectly paying, but the nature of such investigations would change."

Officials at most public institutions oppose any major shifts of aid from institutional support to support of students. The necessary increases in tuition, they say, would end the nation's long-standing commitment to low-cost higher education, and would shift the major burden of paying for education from the society at large to the individual student.

That shift, they say, would represent an end to the belief that society as a whole—not just the individual student—benefits from the higher education of its citizens.

Switching from institutional support to loans and grants "constitutes a definite shift away from public decisions and responsibility for the support and control of higher education and toward a philosophy of private responsibility and private enterprise, with major consequences," says Clifton R. Wharton, Jr., president of Michigan State University.

"The shift would transform the goals, values, and conduct of the entire higher educational system," he says.

Decisions to be made soon in Congress and the state legislatures probably will determine how much new governmental aid will be forthcoming and what form the aid will take. Alumnae and alumni concerned about preserving the qualities of higher education could do higher education no greater service than keeping informed about the alternatives, and advising their representatives of their preferences.

THE economic crisis in higher education is, in a sense, the cause of all the other forces moving toward the homogenization and standardization of our colleges and universities.

Many observers suspect that neither the movement toward statewide systems of colleges and universities nor the trend toward collective bargaining among the faculty members would have gone so far if the era of great growth had not ended. Suddenly, in the economic depression that followed, higher education was no longer society's favorite place to spend money.

How, under such conditions, can colleges and universities provide diversity and individuality? Must they sacrifice their autonomy and individuality? Or can they find ways to live with the end of growth without giving way to drab uniformity?

Individuality: All the Threats Combine

THE end of an era of growth, the scarcity of new resources, the increased competition for them, and the public's changing definition of higher education's role in society have all combined to produce a major challenge for the nation's colleges and universities.

The task before them now is to meet the challenge while preserving the best of the past.

It is easy to be pessimistic about the prospects. Doom-sayers abound. Here is how some severe critics have described current conditions on the campuses:

► "Respect for universities [faculties and administrators] has been replaced by distrust and surveillance."

► "Informal procedures and policies based upon mutual respect and confidence within the university have been replaced by insistence upon due process and by formalized codes."

► "Collegiality based upon unity in goals has been replaced by identification and resolution of conflict."

Such concerns are not limited to severe critics.

Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame, speculates that "perhaps during that period of rapid growth, the institutions—the academic community—grew beyond the potential to be personal and human."

William C. McInnes, president of the University of San Francisco, says: "People will spend their money, contribute their money, pay their money for services and things in which they believe. What has happened in many cases is that people don't believe in education the way they used to."

As a result, many institutions feel more threatened than ever by the challenges before them.

One consequence has been that the conflicts between public and private higher education have been exacerbated. Once the expansion of the entire higher educational system ceased, the happy state no longer prevailed in which everyone was prospering. Now, one institution's gain may well be another's loss. Public and private education now often view progress for one as a possible threat to the other.

Says a former official of a state system of higher education:

"The pleadings of the private segment for state financial aid are gaining ground—not nearly enough to save from society to pursue knowledge disengaged from its social implications."

Ending that fundamental doubt, says Sir Eric, will require "a reevaluation of the relation between universities and American society."

IN SHORT, the American people must rebuild their faith in the colleges and universities—and the colleges and universities must rebuild faith in themselves. In doing so, both parties to the contract can assure the survival of both the vast system's diversity and the individuality of its parts.

Many colleges and universities have already begun the necessary reassessments and redefinitions. Commissions on the future have been established on scores of campuses. Faculty members, students, administrators, trustees, alumni, and alumnae have been enlisted to help define their institutions' goals for the years to come.

Those new definitions, now emerging, recognize the end of the era of expansion and come to terms with it. Some institutions have chosen to remain small, some large. Others have chosen to focus on specific missions, e.g., ecology, health services, the arts. Still others are moving into the preparation of teachers for the two-year colleges that, in the years ahead, will attract many new students to higher education. For their part, many two-year colleges are resisting pressures to expand into four-year institutions, electing to concentrate on providing the best possible educational opportunities to their own non-traditional student constituencies.

Whatever the role they define for themselves, such colleges and universities are seeking ways to make education more individual and more rewarding.

COLLEGES and universities still have a long way to go before they adjust to the financial stresses, the changing market conditions, the demands for reform that have beset them. Those that adjust most effectively will be the ones that survive as distinctive, individual institutions.

Chatham College's President Eddy notes that our institutions, "swinging into the troublesome '70's from the unusually affluent '60's, resemble a middle-aged and slightly portly man who discovers that he is panting heavily after climbing a quick flight of stairs. He doesn't have yesterday's bounce."

"He has a choice. He can become a first-class hypochondriac and, in all probability, bring on the attack by discouragement and tension. Or he can diet, cut out smoking, and start some consistent, sensible exercise. He must convince himself that life is worth living—and living to the hilt—despite an occasional long flight of stairs."

The end of the era of growth has opened once more the great debate about the role of higher education (of any education, for that matter) in the lives of individuals and in the health of society. The future, in many ways, is up for grabs.

Those who care deeply about the diversity and individuality of our colleges and universities must assure that—regardless of what they become—they preserve their distinctive spirit in the changing future.

"There is little profit in licking our wounds or feeling sorry for ourselves," says Father Hesburgh of Notre Dame. "We still represent the best hope for America's future, provided we learn from our own mistakes and reestablish in the days ahead what has so often testified to the nobility of our endeavors in times past."

"All is not lost. We are simply beginning again, and many always must, in a world filled with ambiguities the greatest of which is man himself."

Stock-broking didn't keep Dot Taylor busy enough, so she became a distributor for Viviane Woodard Cosmetics and now she's swamped!

Having a remarkable group of very responsive students makes teaching a delight for Eleanor Splane Trullinger this year. She had a lovely evening with Fred and Jean Reppun when they were in New York. Her vacation plans include Japan, Hong Kong, Macao, and back to Hawaii for a 3 week visit with her son Jim.

Dot Woodward Evans' daughter presented them with another grandson last year, so Dot flew out to stay with the two older boys. On their way home they stopped in Tempe, Arizona to visit their son George.

As for me, a trip up the west coast from San Francisco to Vancouver, British Columbia, and a cruise up the St. Lawrence, around the Gaspe Peninsula and down to Bermuda were the highlights for the year. Dick brought his family to spend Christmas week, which made the holidays a real joy, and we are looking forward to Barb and Walt's return from Spain in a few months.

The class extends its sympathy to Martha Branch Culbertson whose parents died within a week in June, 1972. Her son Alan, a first year student at Syracuse University Law School, plans to be married in June, and daughter Anne is a junior at Ohio Wesleyan. Martha enjoyed a visit with Mary Ellen Ostergard Lutz '40 in her new home in Camillus, N.Y.

Mildred Brown McIntyre reports that there were many changes for them in '72. They came back from Mexico in January, sold their home in Kent, Ohio in February, and Lowe decided to retire. In May they moved to Florida. With children living in Ohio, Michigan, California and Mexico, they do a lot of traveling in their Tia motor home. She extends a most cordial welcome to all who find that they are near Holmes Beach (Anna Maria Island).

For Shirley Berg Campbell '72 was a year of weddings. Geoff was married in May, is living in Milwaukee and is attending Medical School. Gretchen was married in October and is living close by in Melrose. Shirley's sister was married in New Mexico in November. She writes "I have no commitments except that Russell's mother lives with us and cannot be left for long periods alone. Aside from that I come and go as I please. That is liberation."

Congratulations, Helen. Helen Chabot Swartz completed her Master's in Social Work in June. After a year at the University of Maryland, and a year at the Circle Campus of the University of Illinois, she hopes to work in Akron. That is, after a Caribbean cruise.

With a son living in Switzerland, Nancy Diven Seagren and George plan their travels in that direction. Last year Italy, the island of Elba and southern France were visited. This year the Greek islands, Yugoslavia and Italy are on their itinerary.

Another motor home traveler is Helen Ferber Wikert and husband. They visited Florida in February and Oklahoma in the summer. Their daughter Diane graduated from LaRoche College in May.

The empty nest syndrome is not affecting Mary Follansbee Buck. It means that she and husband have two daughters and three grandchildren to visit in Hong Kong, which they did last fall, returning by way of Europe for a three week tour. Her third daughter just graduated from Finch College in N.Y. where she is living with her husband who is practicing law in the Appeals division of Legal Aid. Her twin brother is working in the Philadelphia area. Jay graduated from Rollins College and is now at the P.G.A. school in Palm Beach hoping to make it as a professional golfer. Lee is in his junior year at Lehigh University. Just writing to them keeps her busy, but she would find time to get together with other members of our class, outside of reunion, if any one is interested in such a meeting.

Martha Jane Gerwig Rial would expect to find snow in Switzerland, but not to find it snowing in June, as it was when they were there. Also had snow in Pinehurst in February, instead of golf. Fred is engaged to a Chatham girl, probably a summer wedding.

Betty Grace Hammer Maxwell sends greetings to all. She is remodeling and redecorating her home and at this point feels it is a never-ending job.

Marguerite Heggie Bryson has gotten rid of her brace and cane—she is now making up for lost time. She drove 1400 miles around Toronto with two elderly aunts. Glad you are feeling better, Peggie. Husband Alan after 49 years at Pitt—student to Professor Emeritus—has retired, and they will now be doing some traveling together.

We were sorry to hear at the reunion that Louise Johnson Purnell had to cancel her reservation because of an operation. Glad to hear that she is better now and already looking forward to 1977. If anyone has children or grand-children, attending any of the schools her sons are attending, she would like to hear from you. Son David is at the University of Florida preparing for a future in medical research. Son John won a Presidential Scholarship at Lebanon Valley College, where he will major in music.

As for us, we now have an empty nest, too. Son Robert graduated in June, and married a classmate in August. They are living in Maryland. Son John, wife and two sons live in Clarks Green, Pa. We had the pleasure of taking care of 22 month old Jimmy for a week. In some ways a baby around the house keeps you young, but in other ways you find out in a hurry just how old you are.

Izzy reporting:

Eleanor Marshall Watters reports that she was the only one from our class to attend the reunion dinner at Benedum. Eleanor had her entire family for the holidays—the first time since 1967. John was in the Peace Corps and Ned and his wife were in Africa for a year. Two little granddaughters also kept things merry on Turkey Day!

Dorothy Motheral Porter's youngest daughter will be entering Chatham this fall. The Porters find that they still make many trips to Connecticut.

Margaret McBride McMaster reports that son John is in training as a hospital corpsman at Great Lakes Naval Training Station.

Jane Phifer Gwyer reports that she has retired, her kids are on their own and is waiting for her husband to retire so they can start living again! Jane suggests a round robin newsy letter for our class.

Martha Potter Koerner's daughter lives in Chicago; one son will finish grad school in July after three years in the army with one year in Vietnam. The other son is in first year law school.

Helen Royston Hollingsworth reports that after 6 1/2 years in Portland, Oregon they are glad to be on the east coast again, although they all loved Oregon. With 14 year old Brad Jr., a freshman in high school Helen still feels needed and keeps busy.

Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott reports that John is retired from Exxon, but is working part time as an auto insurance adjuster. Elsa works part time for a manufacturers' representative. Daughter Susan has a 2-year old son. Son Johnny, unmarried, lives and builds homes at Ocean Pines. Elsa bowls and plays bridge a lot.

Lillian Taylor Franz reports that she was involved in an auto accident in August and spent a week in the hospital in Mt. Lebanon, suffering the loss of four teeth and a fragmented jaw. Lillian keeps up with the changes of pace in the Registrar's Office at CMU, visits her mother nightly at a nursing home and is a homemaker for both Bill and her father. Betty Grace Maxwell entertained for their Christmas gift exchange dinner party. This group includes Betty Bevan Winkler, Betty Lewis Williams, Betty Mahood Arthurs, Naomi Sayre Bartoe and Louise Leslie Fischer.

Mary Travers Scott reports that she was sorry to miss our reunion due to the arrival of a new second granddaughter. She keeps busy with grandchildren, church, community activities and gardening. She is also librarian for the cassette and slide library of the Spectroscopy Society of Pittsburgh.

Mary Trimble Brittain reports that last spring they took an around the world air-cruise which took them to such remote places as Burma and Borneo. There were just 30 on a chartered TWA 707 and they had the same crew for the entire trip. This September, they were delighted with a trip on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers aboard the Delta Queen. Mary and Ray will be on the go in February for a Caribbean cruise and hope to "keep going" as long as they are able to go together. Mary is still active on the Harmarville Center Board.

Mary Watson Seed feels there is still no place like New England after 36 winters there. Her son and daughter have fun traveling and operating the Gateway Travel Center in Salem, N.H. Her son is also an artist and an accountant. Mary continues to manage the Birches-Trailer Park Motel Office complex.

Dorothy Whitehead Heinig and Bill are still in Chicago—their longest tour of duty with DuPont. Son Jeff and family are in New Jersey, son Dan and his wife are in Albuquerque and daughter Suzanne is in Chicago. Dee keeps busy with church work, clubs, bridge and golf.

Olive Wilson has been busy writing and will tell us of her work at a later date.

Isabel Silvius Sterling reports as one of your secretaries that of 36 cards she sent for news only 12 were returned. For shame—you can do better than that! I keep busy with oil and pastel painting, some church and club work and writing to our children. Peter is leaving in February for his fourth trip around the world on WCA. He's 20 and a junior in college majoring in International Business out of Oregon State. Daughter Judy left in February for Zurich, Switzerland where she is working for the Swiss Government doing the same scientific computer programming that she did at Harvard Observatory in Cambridge.

NEW ADDRESSES

Ivy Huetter McLaughlin (Mrs. R. W.), 2424 Barnett Lane, Grafton, Wisconsin 53024.

Helen Archer Fardig writes that they hiked down into the Grand Canyon during a trip through the southwest last August. In order to have a family reunion with daughters Leslie, who lives in Albuquerque, and Marsha, who lives in Duluth, and 2 grandchildren they all camped together. Helen gave up her audio-visual job "out of sheer guilt about the pile up at home after being so busy in so many outside things." She now enjoys reading again but "no gung-ho fire about that attic and cellar full of junk." She and Ollie are still active with the senior high youth at church.

Last June 18 was a date Elva Bogren Goodwin and Bob will long remember. It was that night a major landslide occurred only 500 feet from their Hong Kong apartment, taking with it 3 apartment buildings and 2 houses and killing over 100 people. The Goodwins were safe but stranded on the 14th floor with no elevator or utilities. They had to climb down a mountain path in order to get to a hotel where they stayed for 17 days until a small access road was cut through the slide to their apartment. Bob was honored as the only American working with a Hong Kong based American company to be invited to China last November. Elva will be invited the next time he goes—in the spring. She is still busy running local and foreign tours for the American Women's Association of Hong Kong. She and Bob were going to leave shortly after Elva sent her news for another round the world trip with a stop in Pittsburgh the middle of February.

Besides working full time, golfing and gardening in season, the Women's Political Caucus continues to absorb Mary Cole's time. She finds it stimulating to meet and work with women of all ages and backgrounds in encouraging and training more women to seek political power.

Peggy Cooper Uptegraff thinks she and Roy surely must be the only Class of '39 parents with 3 in college in 1973. Twins Kathy and Roy III will start in September and Judy will still have one more year until she is a full fledged doctor of optometry. Hurricane Agnes left her water mark on the Uptegraff Manufacturing plant in Scottsdale. Kathy was presented at the Southern Club Ball in Pittsburgh this year.

Congratulations to Kay Cuthbert Hardee. She became a Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians at a convocation ceremony at Madison Square Garden in September. The past year has been busy for Kay, complicated by carrying another doctor's practice for nearly 6 months. She and her husband spent 10 days in Puerto Rico in April with the Pennsylvania Academy of Family Physicians.

Jennie Ferralli is still teaching in Washington, Pa. and writes, "I find the establishment never finds a dull moment as the kids keep doing their thing!"

Genevieve Gibson Hansen and John have been enjoying life at Manasquan, New Jersey since John took early retirement from U.S. Steel. The summers in a shore town are wonderful and winters are never dull, since it's a busy town. Gen gets to Ligonier to visit her 85 year old father.

With both married daughters back in Pittsburgh, Mary Gregg Stockton is enjoying the experience of getting to know her 2 sons-in-law. She says that she really looks forward to our class news in the Recorder.

A beautiful snow in Houston, Texas this winter turned into a mishap for Totty Hoyt Faison's son George. While just walking along he slipped on a piece of ice, fell on the curb and broke his arm. Now Totty is back to chauffeuring again just when she's gladly given up that job!

Ivy Huetter McLaughlin wrote her card the day before they left for a trip to the Canary Islands. They'd just moved into a brand new house, and she finds the real estate business terrific and quite satisfying.

Esther Jackson spent a couple of weeks in London last spring. When she planned the trip she thought 2 weeks might be too long a time to spend there. However, she enjoyed every minute of it and could have stayed indefinitely.

It was a busy summer for Jean Keenan Konet. Two of her children received advanced degrees and Jean and John had a trip to the Orient. Her son received a Master's degree from Cornell and her oldest a Ph.D. from Syracuse. While in the Orient Jean and her husband had lunch and spent the afternoon with Elva Bogren Goodwin in Hong Kong. At Christmas they had a trip to Australia and the Barrier Reef.

A month's vacation in December was a special one for Mary Jane Kerr Leonard and Rowland. They spent a week in London with daughter Jo, son-in-law and grandson. The other 3 weeks in Kenya with son David, his wife and 4 children. Besides 2 camping trips with the family while there, Mary Jane and Rowland took a 5 day climbing trip up Mt. Kilimanjaro with David. They got to the 16,000 foot level before the thin air sapped their energy. Their daughter Linda and her family are in Thailand and daughter Lou is in San Francisco after graduation from Whittier College.

Genevieve Love Smith wrote her card in February after coming in from a walk around their 5 acres in New Mexico in shirt sleeve weather. There were patches of snow above the 6,000 foot level in the nearby mountains—a result of their New Year's storm. They're settled in their home and are now working with landscaping and fencing their property. She says they are happy with many good friends, endless things to do and a beautiful home.

Letitia Mahaffey Andree is leading a busy life. She's still President of the United Presbyterian Children's Home Board, is also a member of the East End Book Club, a bridge club, goes to the Symphony regularly and is active in church work. Letitia has a step daughter at Allegheny College and one at Thiel.

Amy McBride Bell's news revolves around the Big Flood of 1972. They, personally, had minor damage, but 80% of Lewisburg suffered heavily. Their former house had 41 inches of water on the first floor! Both Amy and John worked hard in the days that followed; John at the University which had suffered damage and Amy at the Red Cross. Later, she was trained as a volunteer case worker to interview flood victims and distribute relief checks. Vacation plans were altered to an autumn holiday in South Carolina. Raising orchids is still an interesting hobby for the Bells.

Mary McCullough Abbott reports a quiet year. Daughter Jeannie is having her first one-woman art show in April at Newton, Massachusetts Library. Peggy Christy Graham and Barrie were guests at the Abbotts for Thanksgiving dinner.

Mary Milne Hanson, who continues to enjoy working as a decorator and furniture sales gal, has recently become involved in a new hobby, making ceramics. She and John have 3 grandchildren whom they see often. Both daughter Susan and son Johnny live in nearby Ohio.

Back in the states after living and working abroad since 1965, is Alma Mocker Bacon and family. Bill has returned to social work in Dayton, Ohio, and Alma is teaching junior high math at a suburban integrated school with many problems. Their Briget is 15.

Hortense Norton Seedlock regrets her stay in Pittsburgh is terminating before she had a chance to be in touch with old friends. Husband Bob is joining a private engineering firm, and their destination is still unknown.

Beth Pensom Fox moved back to Pittsburgh in August and "hopes to stay put for a while." Beth reports she met Peg Dunseath Wilson in November. It was the first time in 10 years. Son Charley is "a typical 12 year old, busy with basketball and chess."

Florence Ray Stier and Don had a happy reunion last summer with Kitty Irwin Barnum and Bob when the Barnums were visiting their son Robert in Bellevue, Washington. Flossie is working on the last revisions of her dissertation (Ph.D.) and teaching. We extend our sincere sympathy to Florence whose oldest sister Frances died in November.

Betti Rindlaub Lord has been involved in the Philadelphia school strike. She has gone "in" and is teaching 30 third graders instead of her usual 6 children per hour speech group. Beth visited Esther Jackson in Maryland, who has a museum of treasures she has gathered from all over the world." Last summer Betti attended the First Festival of Yoga and Esoteric Sciences in Montreux, Switzerland, then on to Spain. She also finds time for the theater. Her latest appearance was in "Dracula" at Plays and Players Little Theater on Delancy Street.

Mary Lou Weber McClenahan and Bill are searching for warmer climates away from Wisconsin's long, cold winters. Mary Lou's youngest is now a senior in high school, and she reports "only 2 grandchildren." Much of her time is taken up with retarded children and adults, and mental health in general. The McClenahans saw Nancy Cockerille Gleickert and Jim since they are back in Lake Bluff, Illinois.

Mary Beth Weibel McEwen's daughter Barb presented them with identical twin, redheaded grandsons. Sons Rich and Pete are both news minded. Rich was graduated from Purdue and is working at the educational TV station. Pete, a freshman at Iowa State and announces the hockey games on radio.

Rose Marie Weller Black reports life is so wonderful, "my cup runneth over." Daughter Marjorie is working in Denver, son Harry III is with the Pittsburgh Press, and 12 year old Rosemarie is a joy. Posie, Rosebud and Dr. Harry are planning a Scandinavian medical meeting vacation in May.

Doris Chatto Kimball writes of a glorious vacation at Lake Tahoe and a visit in Nevada with Robert Kimball III and IV. Daughter Molly has been accepted at Southern Seminary. We extend our sincere sympathy to Doris whose mother and mother-in-law both died during the past year.

Your secretaries and their husbands enjoyed the Class of '39 Mini-Reunion at the Blacks (Rose and Harry) while Elva Bogren Goodwin and Bob were in Pittsburgh. Wonderful evening. Lucile Stoehr and Don's son Ray has graduated from Point Park College. Mary Jane and Scott, at this writing, are preparing for a trip to Hawaii in March.

Julia Wells Jackson (Mrs. Richard D.), 1067 Greenhill Road, Mt. Airy, N.C. 27030.

Veasie reporting:

The class wishes to express deepest sympathy to the family of Anne Lindsay York, who died after a long fight against cancer. Her talents were many and her cheerfulness an inspiration.

Jeanne Anna Ayres Widgery reports a bad year for Rolande, with several hospital stays and two casts for nine weeks. Carolyn graduated from Yale and is working for an architect's firm in New Haven. Catherine plans to spend part of year in Italy before finishing as an art major at Yale.

Anne Butler Stewart says that Harry is still a (and (and gravel) man. Dick is bringing his Thai bride home to Warner-Robins Air Base in Georgia. David is still working for L'Architecture d'Auburghui in Paris and John is at Georgia Tech.

Alice Chattaway Kittle reports that they are all well and have bought a new store and are opening a new Kittle Home Furnishing Center now. It sounds as though the family does most of the merchandising in Indianapolis. She keeps busy with church, Red Cross and Starlight Musicals.

Shirley Clipson Clarke is selling Doncaster clothes to keep busy. James and wife, Cindy, live in Atlanta and daughter, Cindy, and her husband live in Denver.

Jean Hammer Schoman says she just tries to keep up with Carl's busy schedule and survive Nancy's driving attempts.

Dottie Geschwindt Schieber says it has been a busy year. She had a wonderful trip to Mexico, Hawaii, Hong Kong, Japan, Djakarta, and Taipei last summer. Bob goes to Taipei twice a year. He has six grandchildren—two girls and four boys. Unfortunately, her daughter's new baby girl was born with spinal bifida and is not expected to live very long.

Jean Hill Camlin writes that they have weathered two years of crisis, ranging from an exploding dishwasher, two burglaries with thorough ransacking of the house, tiring and nerve wracking tour of jury duty in Criminal Court, Cal's unexpected trauma at retirement, and the death of dear friends both human and feline, but now things seem on an even keel.

Our deepest sympathy to Ruth Gracey Suttner whose husband died unexpectedly after surgery last May. Her twin daughters finish college in June and she continues to teach.

As a switch, while son, Carl, was at YMCA summer camp Beth Howard Smith and her husband spent their vacation in a motel in San Diego to see the city from a tourist's eye view. Beth has been elected to the executive board of National Association Of Gifted Children. She is President of 1,000 member San Diego chapter. She attended the national meeting in Washington, D.C. and was invited to luncheon honoring Senator Davis.

After all the illnesses last year, Pat Kent Alter says that things just have to improve. Her son, David, is to be graduated from Princeton in June.

Mary Kinter McEldowney managed to get daughter, Alice, and her family home from San Francisco so they were all together for Christmas. She and Bob just returned from a Caribbean cruise.

Margie Longwell Van Horn likes missing the winter weather in Florida but feels too far away from the children.

Carolyn Martin enjoyed an interesting vacation in North Carolina last summer and then toured Mackinac Islands and Wisconsin Dells.

Mary Linn Marks Colbaugh writes that she is completing a Cardiac Rehabilitation Program and it has worked! She will be riding bicycle ergometer every day forever but her doctor said, "Go back to serving the community any time!"

Jean McGowan Marshall says she has cut down on volunteer work and is working one day a week for Planned Parenthood. Apropos of that, she has just welcomed her first grandchild, Andrew Robert Burr.

Weasie McIntyre Casner still thinks Texas is great but it had the worst winter in fifty years. Sandy is at Southern Methodist, Chris is at Texas Christian. Ted married in June and they are both at University of Dallas. She and Bob are enjoying their life of leisure.

Our double sympathy to Eleanore Asp Stahl who moved to Vancouver last March only to have her husband die after surgery in September. Her father died in January, making it an especially tragic year for her.

Louise Caldwell Criss thanks you all for your newsy letters. I'm writing this just before Nick and I take off for a Caribbean cruise to celebrate our 30th anniversary, both of us quite a bit heavier, grayer, but hopefully wiser, after all those years.

Natalie reporting:

I missed 13 of you this year.

Jane O'Neill Shearer writes she became Mrs. Thomas P. Shearer December 1972. Her oldest daughter Margaret is a speech pathologist in Lenox, Mass. Her youngest is a sophomore at Pine Manor in Boston, Mass. Daughter Nancy is getting her M.L.S. at Pitt. State of Mass. wins!

Sue Wooldridge Fishburn says her life is "busy busy." Daughter Mary is doing Public Health work in Minneapolis; daughter Alice married Michael Brown in May and they live in Cedar Rapids. Son Jack graduated in December with highest distinction from U. of Iowa and is doing graduate work now. Son Bill is a sophomore at the U. of Iowa. Sue and John are rattling around in the big empty house but they keep busy doing farming and working in John's law office. They visited Pittsburgh last summer, the first time in three years.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz sends greetings and says she is just managing to survive the challenges of her teen ager—but she has learned to play pool!

Sara Louise Finkelstein Hirschberg's news sounds lovely to me. All her children have flown the coop. Her husband has retired so they have turned into "middle-aged hippies" establishing a new carefree life style, following their own feelings.

Ruth Strickland Clark files a like report of lovely retirement, in Tampa, Florida. She and daughter Pam spent the summer organizing for a September 9th wedding. Now she and Chet are hoping for good news about his novel.

Mae Oettinger Schweinsburg says her son John is getting married in February and moving to Ft. Lauderdale. She and John are enjoying country living, community suppers and all!

Mary Bertha Richards reports from Detroit that she occasionally sees Caddie Lou Kinzer Trapp '40 at Episcopal "shindigs" and she sends greetings to us all.

Jane Shidemantle Cross has a daughter at Chatham, freshman Barbara, who is living in Woodland Hall! Her Cathy is a senior at Country Day School hoping for good information re her college applications. Shiney is teaching now. They were hit by Hurricane Agnes last summer, a flooded basement. The Crosses have seen Mary Lynn and Jack Colbaugh recently.

Charlotte Wolf Beckman says she is a volunteer office worker in the Westminster Presbyterian Church, where her husband is the minister. Charlotte is enjoying her 2 grandchildren, courtesy daughter Mary and Geoffrey Wells. Her son Carl Jr. is to be married in September. He is now a patrolman for Sylvania Police Force and a reserve USMC man. Son Alan is a junior in high school. The Beckmans enjoyed a European trip to Germany, Sweden and England last summer.

Alice Steinmark Rightor says she enjoys the class news. She is busy doing substitute teaching, volunteer work in the library and working with her church group.

Julia Wells Jackson and I found we had the same good friend from Mt. Airy. Her son David graduates from medical school in June. Son Tom is in dental school and 3rd son Roger is a sophomore in college. The two oldest boys are to be married soon. Julia and Richard were in Florida, wandering in the Airstream Travel Trailer.

Elinor Weibel Stoltz, reporting from wonderful Colorado, says she just returned from Phoenix and is on her way to Florida! She hopes any "Chathamites" will call her if they are in Denver area. She says they haven't done any skiing yet this year but they were snow bound last April in Vail.

And from me, Natalie—Peter and I find our tree house gets better and better, (wish you all would come see us). Our Peter Otis and his Lois live in Peterborough, N.H. now. Douglas has just been made head of the history department at Thompson Academy in Boston. Lee transferred to U. of Colorado in Boulder and thinks he is in heaven this sophomore year. Peter and I have been skiing a few days this year and are hoping for a good week more in Vail in April, snow-bound I hope, such as Elinor had. I do volunteer hospital coffee shop work, belong to a wonderful book club based on The Great Books idea and I still go to New York for my Foreign Policy Off-The-Record lectures. In between I walk dogs and work on my doll house.

Lorraine Wolf Regan (Mrs. William C.), 6707 Dean Drive, McLean, Virginia 22101.

Arch reporting:

Being a housewife again pleases Ann Baker Cunningham. Susan is teaching art in Cincinnati, Tom is in New Mexico doing his second hitch in the Air Force as Air Traffic Controller, Don is a freshman at Ohio Northern University and Robert is a shutter-bug nut. Ann and Robert are going with husband Marvin to Scotland in February.

Pat Blue Byers writes that daughter, Kris, was married in April to Charles Davenport. Her oldest son, Paul, 23, is studying to be a professional photographer and Chuck, the youngest, will be ten this month.

Mary Campbell Eckhardt is traveling and having fun with antiques and helicopters—quite a combination! Lynn lives in Wilmington, Delaware and Robin is at Cornell working on his doctorate.

Travel, too, for Lucille Cummins Connor and husband—to Europe last fall. Patti was married to Bruce Bland Viva after graduation from Sweet Briar. They are living in Houston. Buz is a transfer student at the U. of North Carolina and Cynthia, a junior at the U. of Heidelberg next year.

No job or graduate studies for Jean DeWoody Bailey. She keeps busy with housekeeping, clubs and week-end farming. She and Dick leave for a vacation in Africa in February.

The rains came and flooded Peggy Dietz Abele's house to the second floor, so they are househunting. Ralph, Jr. is at the Imperial College of Geology in London working toward a doctorate, and Jennifer is at Massachusetts General Hospital working in the intensive care unit.

Peggy and Nancy, daughters of Nancy Doerr Wilson, are busy raising their families and Rich, a Lt. (jg) in the Navy has been to Viet Nam and back. Fred and Nancy enjoy travel and just being "two."

Jane Fitzpatrick McCough is busy with reunion plans and keeping up with the education of their four. She keeps telling herself she is liberated but can't recognize any drastic changes in her life style yet!

Almost full-time volunteer work with tape-recording for the visually handicapped keeps Florence Frey Burnite busy since she stopped working with the elderly.

Eleanor Garrett Gittings got back from a great business trip with her husband to Europe just in time to send in her news. Son Dan is a freshman at Grove City College and Nora had a son, Gary, born last August.

Janice Goldblum sends greetings and regrets that she will not be able to come to our reunion.

Louise Haldeman Richardson finds "no news good news" and life very beautiful. Cindy is in her junior year at Duke University and Barbara, her husband and beautiful precocious granddaughter, Monica, have moved to Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin. They will be missed but Wisconsin will be a fine place to visit in the summer.

A degree in hotel management has been unofficially earned by Barbara Heinz Barone keeping up with the comings and goings of her family. The first three will be through college in June, and the next three in college in September, a senior, sophomore and freshman! Lark was married to William Buzzi in May and Robert to Caroline Crothers in January.

Ginny Hendryx Shank and Chuck love their whole new life in the area where Washington still crosses the Delaware annually on Christmas Day. Chuck likes his new engineering job and the girls are getting used to new schools and friends. It really seemed like home when the college crew came home for the holidays. Kathy will be married in June and this will bring a big family reunion.

After twelve years of teaching kindergarten, Ruth Gilson Larimer has retired. Both boys were graduated from the University of Florida and were both married last summer. Dave is a sports reporter and Bob works at a home for the retarded in Gainesville.

Dottie Horne Mollenauer hopes to get to reunion as a side trip en route to Europe. Now that the children are gone, she gets to go along on Bob's business trips. Dave is a junior in high school and a good golfer. Bob, Jr. is finishing college in Business Management. Linda's daughter, Margot, is 2 1/2, and "quite a swimmer."

Dan and I, too, are enjoying the freedom of being alone. Next week we go to Mesa, Arizona to visit son Dan and his new wife, Hannah, married last summer. Dick is in law school at Catholic University in Washington and will be married this July. Patty is a sophomore at Bucknell. This summer Dan and I will take a long-anticipated trip to Japan, Thailand and Hong-Kong—but before that—our 30th reunion! I will certainly be there and Dotty Mollenauer, Eleanor Gittings, Pat Byers, Jane McCough, Barbara Barone, Jean Bailey, Ruth Larimer, Peggy Abele and Ginny Shank have all said they will try to come too. We had a few hopeful "maybes" too—so it should be a good one.

Marian reporting:

Claire Horwitz Klein is looking forward to our reunion. Husband Seymour is an investment counselor; son Alan, now 22, is going into the transportation business for himself; son Evan, 17, is entering W&J in the fall. Claire is still head over heels in community work, spending much more than a 40 hour week in volunteer services but "in so doing I feel I am paying a fair share of the rent due from my family for walking on this earth."

Elinor Keffer Hoon reports that after much thought, she and her husband closed the office last November. "We are now retired and spending the winter in Florida."

It's back-to-school for Nina Maley Ross who is a part-time student at Pitt's Graduate School of Library and Information Science. She is enjoying the work, finding it hard, but rewarding and challenging. She and Bob now have two married daughters, one son about to graduate in June, and their youngest is in high school.

Ginny Gillespie Albright reported she is teaching for the sixth year in a special program administered by the Mt. Lebanon Schools. Her children are scattered—Jack has his M.B.A. from Harvard and is living in Chicago; Kathy is in Kettering, Ohio; Nancy in Chester, Ohio and Anne is at home in 10th grade. Ginny can boast of four grandchildren.

And back teaching at Los Alamos High School after a year in Britain on a Fulbright Exchange is Elizabeth Maroney Aiello. She is in charge of the Humanities program there. Since she doubts that she will be able to make Reunion (school will still be in session) I am going into some detail about her adventure as "Assistant Mistress of Juniors, Pokesdown County Primary School, Bournemouth, Hampshire." She lived with, as well as taught her students, and an important part of the program was to acquaint English children about life in America. "I met weekly with each class at Pokesdown to show them films, to discuss geography and history, to support or clarify concepts they had about American culture. I also had regular sessions to teach American square dancing and Spanish-American folk dancing." Needless to say, Libby, herself, learned much about life in Britain. Husband Bill continues to commute between Los Alamos, Los Angeles and Cape Kennedy, still very involved in detector satellites. Son Bob will graduate from Hamilton College in May and Beverly is about to finish the eighth grade. Libby invites, "Our welcome mat is out to anyone who finds herself in the area. After twenty-five years I'm still enchanted with the rocky mountain scenery."

A cheery little note from Dorothy Marshall Aultre says that her family seems well; the girls are all in high school now and the boys at Linden elementary school. She is hoping to see us all at Reunion.

Inquiring about Reunion from way out in Washington is Janet McCormick McDole. She seems to be re-reading last year's Recorder . . . and has nothing special to add . . . just wants to be recorded as "answering."

Amy McKay Core, now a resident of Minnesota, writes that "Duluth is a beautiful city and there is a lot of community spirit and activity . . . my personal version of Women's Lib is time for art courses at the University of Minnesota, ice skating and cross country skiing."

Connie Meyer Waldschmidt and Charles are remodeling their summer home at Conneaut Lake into a permanent residence. "Lots of headaches, but fun!" Their older son, Chad, and his family are living in Wisconsin; Bob is now a senior at Hillsdale College.

"Reunion time again! I can't believe it," exclaims Dorothy Anne Minnici McCabe. Patti graduated from Chatham in May, was married to Lee Friesell in August and started her career as a member of the faculty at Winchester-Thurston in September. Dorothy Anne and Jack are delighted to have a son.

Marjorie Noonan Ladley's oldest son, Tom, graduates this year from W&J. Barbara is finishing her sophomore year at Chatham. Son Bob, in between football and basketball games, is reading the College Handbook and their youngest daughter, Jane, is in seventh grade, enjoying French and swimming. Marjorie is thoroughly enjoying her work as Director of Alumnae Affairs and adds, "I really am looking forward to Reunion—to seeing people, not to counting the years!"

Mary Schweppe Hoffman is another who is "looking forward to our 30th Reunion."

Peggy Suppes Yingling writes that their oldest daughter, Ann, has two sons; her husband has just moved to Delhi, New York as Pastor of First Presbyterian Church. June is working for Neighborhood Legal Services and Molly is a sophomore at Hofstra-New College. "Ed and I working at same old stands."

Barbara Steele Mangan who lays claim to being the first grandmother in our class, says she knows she has long been surpassed in numbers of grandchildren. "I still have just one darling seven year old granddaughter in Hartford, Connecticut." Their younger daughter, Kathy, graduated from Denison University and has a Teaching Assistantship at Ohio University's Graduate School in Creative Writing. Bill had a kidney stone operation this past year and lost his mother in January. The Mangans are hoping for a less traumatic year . . . and "very much hoping to make the Reunion."

Jean Sweet Bentley spent a "fantastic" three weeks in Greece visiting son Pete.

Marian Teichmann McKone points out that as we reach our 30th Reunion, Joe retires with 30 years in the Air Force. They are building a home in Philadelphia and making plans for the future. Their daughter, Marianne, is going to school in Paris this year.

And from Boulder, Colorado, Claranne Von Fossen Johnson writes, "1972 was one of the more exciting years in the Johnson family. Curt had his long-awaited sabbatical and with a chain of technical meetings, lectures and visits to universities we managed a five month round-the-world jaunt." Their daughter, Julie, returned recently from two quarters at the Stanford campus near London and in March heads for Africa for six months as an undergraduate research assistant to Jane Goodall at the primate research center in Tanzania.

The Arnheims, too, have put on a lot of mileage lately. Last Spring we flew Air France with Dan and Louise to meet David at Orly. After a few days in Paris, we all drove to Nice, eating wine-tasting and feasting on art (from ancient to contemporary). In October, Falk and I spent a week in San Francisco where we had dinner with Gloria Silverstein Goldberg and Dick. Our Christmas letter this year from Mary Evelyn Dugan Crabtree brought full details of the creative Christmas trees. She and Paul live in Crossville, Tennessee.

I do want to take the space to thank you for responding to our requests for news and our pleas for the Class Account which is most respectfully solvent. Hearing from you over the past five years has been fun . . . and somewhat reassuring. It has been especially great to write with Arch, who by this time answers my questions before I ask them! See you in June, I hope, our Reunion. As Arch mentioned, Jane Fitzpatrick McCough is chairman and Janet Ross is helping. Watch for details later!

NEW ADDRESSES

Marion Cohen, Cooper Valley Village, #9-N, Edgewater Park N.J. 08010.

Nina McAdams Handloser (Mrs. John) New Zip 93109.

Jane Murray Blair (Mrs. Robert A.), 702 Washington Apartments, 1680 Washington Road, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15228.

Mary Jane Youngling Tygard (Mrs. Ralph E.), 6215 Westover Drive, Mechanicsburg, Pa. 17050.

Virginia Alexander McKeag (Mrs. Charles E.), Mastogen Drive, Somerville, New Jersey 08876.

Alice reporting:

Lois Allhouse Harnack happily reports that Alan came home for Christmas from Vietnam waters where he was on a Navy destroyer. Robert is at Kings Point, U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, and sons #3 and #4 are in grade school and a junior high.

Dorothy Barrett Braden and Jim have a new grandson, Ryan, son of her daughter Sandra and Milan Bales who live in Hawaii. Dorothy is working with Ruth Demmler Benner '42 at the Avon Presbyterian Church Nursery School and loves it.

Janny Beck Jameson reports an eventful 1972 having completed a full year of art courses at Mansfield College; son Bill graduated from Penn State in June and was married in July; and daughter Priscilla presented them with their first grandson. Tim is a freshman at Penn State.

Marion Cohen loves her new condominium apartment 20 miles north of Philadelphia and handy to all transportation for many trips to New York and the traveling necessary to her pleasant profession of piano playing. After her engagement at The Fontainebleau in December, she rented a car and drove through Florida to Naples and Venice to visit friends.

June Collins Hopkins had a fine week's visit with her father in Sherburne, N.Y. after Christmas #3 back to Syracuse University after Christmas. (For those who knew Earl Collins when he taught music and was organist at PCW some years ago, we're happy to report he hasn't changed much. He has 40 piano pupils and directs the hand-bell choirs at the Congregational Church.) June's become an organic gardening advocate for the summer on the island (where they spend four months of the year)—a good break from running her gift shop.

Agnes Connor Davis is enjoying life in a small town northeast of Dallas and is working almost full-time setting up a small physical therapy department in a new general hospital in Greenville, Texas. Her husband continues his job in aerospace as an aerodynamics engineer.

Jack and Carolyn Cosel Lampi took their new 53' Hatteras boat down the Inland Waterway in Florida in January, sharing this wonderful new experience with two other couples, whipping together imaginative meals aboard, and catching up on many books. Jib is at Harvard and Joshua is a junior in high school.

No special news but greetings from Alice Craig Lynne, Miriam Davis Schellhaas, Harriet Fleming Iryn, Ruth Ford Woodward and Alice Hanna Irence.

Mary Lou Egan Fleming is president of flourishing Dunhill of Harrisburg (a national computer and personnel service) where most of her work is in executive placement. Both children are in college—Mike at Clemson University, Sue at Virginia Intermont, and both are star athletes while still "a swoot for me whose best piece of creative writing was always an excuse for gym."

Louise Flood Egan says "I'm holding down three part-time jobs, trying to hold my own in tennis and keeping up with those in this household under the thumb of all of whom have longer hair than I do!" Far from it, a senior at Scripps College, spent a semester in Dublin and vagsabonding her way through Europe; John is a freshman at Pomona; Clem and Charlie are in high school, Sandy in junior high and Molly a fifth grader.

Carla Gregson Dubs and Marne spent a month in Scotland last spring; then he spent the summer in Geneva as advisor to the State Department mission to U.N. Sea-Bed committee. Greg, third year at Johns-Hopkins, is in Paris for 6 months at the residence with the Wesleyan Program. Carla is president of Family and Children's Services in Hartford and board chairman of the Day Care Center she started in New Canaan.

Barbara Hansen Cummings' family are all healthy, happy and busy. Her daughter graduated from college last June and is now teaching kindergarten and the boys are a college sophomore and high school senior.

Nancy Herdt Hall files the following: "I haven't written for this publication in years because my ears sound so hum-drum when I read about the special things others are doing. The best I can do for this past year is to report that last summer went birdwatching for a week on an island off the east coast of Scotland and saw a pair of golden penguins, several hen harriers, and a long-tailed tit." That doesn't sound so hum-drum, Nancy.)

Emily Noll Zerbe's son Jeff became an Eagle Scout last June and also won the Kiwanis Award for having the highest scholastic average for a boy in the 8th grade.

Marjorie reporting:

As Jim now covers North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia, a new address will soon be forthcoming from Lois Lutz Pierce.

Nina McAdams Handloser has had a busy year, with John the Commodore of the Santa Barbara Yacht Club and Nina now in the real estate business. Son John is studying at Brooks School of Photography.

Jane Meub Evans is also busy, as always. Her eldest daughter is teaching school, her son was "pleased" to become a sophomore at Mt. Union, and her youngest daughter is a high school junior. Hope Jane succeeds in talking her into Chatham.

Carolyn Morgan Mellers enjoys substituting as library assistant.

Jane Murray Blair is still teaching 8th grade English. Lynne is a freshman at Hope College and Cindy will enter Ashland College in the fall.

Eleanor St. Clair Hurtt spent Christmas with her two grandchildren.

No special news from Gertrude Schmeichel Iutson and Patty Smith Joyner.

Patsy Speer Bradley's boys should soon be out of the Navy. Patsy and Charlie visited daughter Pam and her Air Force husband in England last summer. Pam is going to Cambridge full time.

Marion Updegraff Sunnergren is free lancing. Some stories on Spanish wines meant a return trip to Spain last October.

Polly Wilson Ackenheil's daughter Marty was married last summer. Polly and Al visited Pebble Beach and Hawaii.

While their new house was being built, Mary Jane Youngling Tygard had all their possessions in storage and lost them to the Harrisburg flood. She invites us to "Come see us—we're all new. A little exit of Turnpike."

Louise Yeiser Threan's son has returned from Vietnam. Daughter Nancy is teaching and Lucy is a sophomore in high school. Louise is also teaching. Earl and Louise vacationed in Bogota and Caracas.

My mother and I had another European vacation last year, mainly in Germany, Switzerland and Belgium. I have worked so much overtime this year, I have not even had time to edit my slides.

Laura Wiley Robertson (Mrs. William A.), 1980 Tarpon Road, Naples, Florida 33940.

Marian Arras Wallace, Lucy Beale Van Ness, and Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh are saddened by the sudden death of our roommate, Rosemary Hoge Milliken, from a heart attack. Our class has placed a book in the library in Hogie's memory.

Patti Balch Lando is enjoying her winter at the Jockey Club in Florida. Patti is our golf and tennis champ.

Elva Braziell Hively had a long vacation trip through the northwest. She's had a nice reunion with June Davies Rush and Ginny Toy Schenck.

We congratulate Jane Campbell Little on being a grandmother and send sympathy on the recent death of her mother. Jane keeps up with her music, as she told us at reunion time.

Another grandmother, Ellen Card Donnell, had a great visit with Babs Gill Maegher. Ellen is finishing her master's degree in guidance. She'd love to see Florida visitors. Her husband manages the Gulf Stream Hotel in Lake Worth. Babs finds time, with six children, to work as a medical social worker.

Margaret Cavanaugh Boylan is starting a new career selling real estate, now that her four children are older.

June Davies Rush is celebrating her 25th anniversary, and was just elected to a previously all-male Church board.

Elsa Gregor Miller sounds extremely busy with four teenagers. She is writing a newspaper column for the Philadelphia Inquirer and has had two articles published by Better Homes and Gardens.

Vicki Haverstick Myers would like everybody to visit their wonderful art museum in Raleigh, North Carolina. Vicki would like to hear from other Chathamites in her state.

Lee Hutton Sage helped pin the alumnae colors on seniors, including her own daughter Chris, at Chatham's closing convocation last May.

Alice Kells is another of our travelers. Alice teaches, but visited the Virgin Islands and spent six weeks in Europe last summer.

Marie Huot Little is a Canadian since her recent marriage and enjoying her retirement from working, at least for a while.

Hello, no special news from Ruth Arnold Harmon, Kathryn Ciganovic, Ann Lee Alexander, Marjorie Bennett Sherts, and Alice Burns Kasmirsky.

I sent out 50 cards and received 17 replies. We missed most of you at our 25th reunion. Let's start planning sooner for our 30th!

No class news was received from Gloria Molinatto Spellacy.

Jeanne reporting:

Marge Alexander Brinkworth is busily involved in the activities of her four teen-age daughters and 11 year old son, but has found some time to attend several alumnae meetings in the Philadelphia area. Marge also enjoys tennis, bowling, swimming and boating.

Eva Christy Frangoulis and her husband enjoyed a vacation in Nassau. Their son, Michael, is a freshman at Thiel College. Their daughter was married last September and will graduate from Robert Morris with a degree in Office Administration. Eva sends a hello to everyone.

This is the first time Patricia Fry has replied since leaving Chatham and she brought us up to date. She had been enrolled in the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York where one of her classmates was Princess Grace Kelly with whom she corresponds. Pat has been involved in summer stock, Army hospital shows, Red Cross benefits, off Broadway theater, and radio in Cleveland and Miami. Her second love is politics in which she was actively involved during the 1968 presidential campaign. Pat plans a trip to Europe this year. She divides her time between Cleveland and Miami.

Our family enjoyed a four week vacation through the western states. Our two sons especially liked their mule trip down the Grand Canyon. Then we spent a long week end in Washington, D.C. where Richard participated in the All-America Youth Bowling Championships. He is a freshman at Grove City. I hope to hear from more of you next year.

Jean reporting:

Mary Kay Fletcher Anderson reports that she is now a mother-in-law, thanks to Andy Jr. Karen, 19, is a freshman at Bowling Green and Nancy, 11, is a 5th grade Scout and 4-H'er. She is busy with a Junior Scout troop, Head Start, Meals on Wheels, and Andy is the same old happy Andy.

Jean Forward Frank reports that she has had some of her compositions performed (piano, choir, and instrumental) recently, and is doing a little arranging. The three boys are growing up nicely. Pete is a junior at Duke University, and Clint and Ken are in high school.

Jean Fraser Bailey had a wonderful California trip last summer. Oak was on the West Coast all summer so she tagged along. David, the eldest, graduates from the University of Wisconsin in May, which Jean says makes her feel her age.

Roberta Hanson Helm reports that Bill is now 20 and a freshman in the School of Architecture at Arizona State University. P.R., 17, hopes to go to Annapolis in June. Jane, 15, is a freshman in high school and John, 10, is in 4th grade. Bobby says that entertaining foreign visitors from Europe and Asia seems to be her pastime these days. They had a Spanish girl living with them for seven months, who taught them much. Both

P.R. and Bill have spent a summer in Spain and speak Spanish well. Bobby continues to work voluntarily at the hospital, and loves it.

Louise Heineman Harper is starting back to work part time now that the children are older. Donna will be in high school and Keith in middle school this fall. Louise hopes to get to our 25th reunion next year and hopes a good many of our class can do so.

Betty Junk Weltman reports that there is nothing new from the Weltman clan, but wishes to say hello to all.

Harriet Kerr Daye has taken the plunge after many years away from school to return to classes. She is enrolled as a grad student at Clarion, working toward a Master's in Special Education, along with Supervisory Certification. Next September she will be taking a sabbatical and going to school full time.

Jane Linton Smith reports that they planned a trip to Florida for spring vacation. She is still teaching corrective reading. Meg is a tall 5'8" 7th grader. She says that Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth and she have taken on Judy and Meg's Cadette Troop and could entertain for hours talking about that first tent camping trip.

This is the first time I have had to report the death of a classmate but I received a letter from Robert N. Sipe stating that his wife Mary Jane Ewing Sipe had died suddenly of a heart attack on January 21, 1973.

Carol reporting:

Marilyn Marks Zelt reports that they remain a busy, active family with son Roger a freshman at Harvard and son Fred in eighth grade.

Peg McGeary Fels and her husband Ray are planning to complete the Appalachian Trail, a 2,000 mile foot trail from Georgia to Maine by their twenty-fifth anniversary in 1974. Brett and Bryan are both in college. Since her father's death in December, Peg has taken over the responsibilities of Co-Director of the Erie Business Center. We are sorry to hear about your father, Peg.

The East Liberty "Renaissance" surprised Joan Morledge Michaelian on their Christmas visit to Pittsburgh. She still struggles on as P.T.A. president with forced integration the main problem.

Joan Nusbaum Cone has been chosen by the National Rifle Association to speak for them on "Women Can Hunt, Too." She attended the convention in Portland, Oregon last summer and will attend various others to speak on this subject. They also made a movie of her. In March, she and Art will visit London and in June, she will go to Minnesota to speak to the Outdoor Writers of America. They have bought a 17 foot boat for fishing. And Jo also plays lots of bridge, hunts and is active in Mortar Board. Their son Steve is working in Boston. Art III is a junior at William and Mary and the twins are still in high school.

It is hard to believe Shirley Patterson Kroske and Bill are grandparents—their Debbie had a baby January 4. Shirley is still Director of Music, teaches piano and organ and does secretarial work for Bill. She really enjoyed her visit with Russ Wickmann last summer at the Montreal Music Conference.

Peggy Quick Gibson says hello to all from Mexico. They have three sons, 15, 13 and 10. A 40 acre ranch in Guadalupe keeps them busy. Here they keep the majority of their 34 registered quarter horses, with new foals arriving soon. They are building a small ranch 20 minutes from Mexico City, where they will live and keep about 16 horses. Peggy also has 2 tack shops, one in the city and the other in Guadalupe, and many varieties of roses and African violets. She does find time to relax occasionally in front of their cable-vision, direct from the States.

Jane Reed Shaffer's daughter is 17 and will enter Indiana University in June to major in rehabilitation work. Her son, 16, is a sophomore and is enrolled in a Vo-Technical program.

Carol McCollough Stride says "hi" and was disappointed she didn't have more news from her list of gals. Unbelievable but true, she's assistant Brownie leader this year for Margot's troop. Christy is a sophomore at Chatham and hopes to go to Rome next year via Loyola. Cyndy was thrilled to be an early decision acceptance at Kenyon College for next year. Megan, in sixth grade, is busy with piano and learning to manage our 2 horses well since Cyndy is leaving us. Bud continues to cope with his harem and U.S. Steel!

Katie reporting:

Joyce Robinson Hauck's daughter Janet is a junior at Salem College in West Virginia. Daughter Kate, a sophomore at Chatham, is currently appearing in Don Brockett's review at Ben Gross's Canterbury Theater in Irwin. Son Charlie will be graduating from high school in June. Daughter Liz is in ninth grade, Claudia in sixth, and Suzanna in fourth. Father Charlie is traveling 80% of the time, and Joyce is involved full time in real estate and has just become rental manager for the firm that she works with. She hopes that there will be a reunion in 1974.

Ann Shane Perkey is still teaching kindergarten and will go to school this summer. She and Nevin are enjoying their grandson, already a year old! With Dave married, Doug a sophomore at W&J and Tim 13, they are beginning to feel middle-aged! She would like to get together with her old classmates and hopes that the next reunion turns out better than the last.

Barbara Shields Sullivan moved into their new home at Christmas time. It is only eight minutes from downtown Johnstown. She walks to work and home for lunch in the rain and snow and might lose some weight by doing this every day. Mary Ann, 9, survived her heart surgery well last year and is now beginning to grow and put on a "little" weight. She loves being "Bus Child," will start to play the violin in the school orchestra this spring. She is already helping Barbara as "Mother Nature" to all the Girl Scouts in the area.

Beverly Stein Johnston still enjoys teaching fifth grade at Winchester-Thurston, where her daughter, Debbie, is a ninth grader. Bruce has transferred this year to Shady Side Academy after being away from home for two years at Mercersburg Academy and they are happy to have him home. Art is still with U.S. Steel. She feels that our days at Chatham seem so long ago, although she doesn't feel any older.

Martha Sutton Amman's husband, Jim, took an early retirement and they have been traveling ever since. They spent seven weeks driving around France last summer. It was fabulous, especially the food and wine. They are going to "do" England this summer while their daughter Sarah 16, tours Europe and David 13, goes to camp. She has been busy in the peace movement and doesn't know what she will get into next.

Dottie Swanson Fey has been working with her husband and their seven year old son building their new home. She has been busy with hospital auxiliary work and the Republican Women of Pennsylvania. She sees Randy Doig occasionally.

Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth and Bob had a great trip to Scandinavia last spring and wondered why they returned to the polluted air of New Jersey. Norway is truly a magnificent country and looks just like the pictures. Summer found the four Ellsworths camping in Canada and New England. Her 13 and 21 year old daughters decided that it's never too late and so she has become a skier. She found muscles that she didn't know that she had. Mary Lou and Bob, assisted by J. D. Linton Smith and Bud are heading up Girl Scouts again with the fathers going on the overnites.

Jean Tsagaris Karidis remembers how much fun we all had at PCW and finds it hard to believe that her daughter Cindy will be graduating from Chatham in May. She went to Pitt for two summers so she's finishing in three years. Their George is a freshman in engineering at Penn State, and John is a high school freshman. Meanwhile "Mom" is staying the same! Pete and Jean are having a great time teaching an adult Sunday School class which is something new in their church.

Virginia Van Scoy Armin says that Jennifer is 5'6" and is in the sixth grade. Pam is in third and Bob is going to nursery school in the mornings. Perry is still teaching American History at Bemidji State College.

Candy Walker Hyser enrolled their oldest son, Chris at Washington & Jefferson this fall. He's quite happy with his choice. John, 15 year old sophomore, plays varsity basketball on the #2 rated high school team in the state at the present time. They see a lot of basketball games! Mark, five, started kindergarten and enjoys the new reading program.

Joan Swannie Ruch and Mary Wiles Knight had no special news but just said hi.

Your secretary's family had a lovely vacation last summer at the shore, then on to Disney World. It was great! Lynn is a sophomore this year at Clarion State in education and Mark is a sophomore in high school. I am still enjoying teaching kindergarten for North Allegheny School. Thank you for all the responses to my cards.

NEW ADDRESSES

Eleanor Balent Young (Mrs. Paul R.), 124 N. 17th Avenue, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida 33301.

Anne Crouse Harvey (Mrs. Roland D.), Rt. 1, Cedar Hill Road, Bridgewater, CT 06752.

Narcissa McLeod Scalise (Mrs. Robert F.), 2 Quaker Hill Road, Warren, PA 16365.

Nancy reporting:

Last summer, Eleanor Balent Young moved to Ft. Lauderdale with her three youngest children: Carol, 16; Nancy, 14; and Alvan, 12. Eleanor taught "Earth Science" for one semester at Coconut Creek High School in Pompano Beach, but has decided to change to Medical Technology. This semester, she is a full time student at Barry College in North Miami taking organic chemistry, parasitology, and microbiology. Busy, busy; but she takes time out occasionally to go to the beach.

Marilyn Black Aucherlonie's older boys continue at college; Jim at the University of Michigan, majoring in economics with an eye to law school, and Rich in electrical engineering and on a co-op at General Motors' proving ground. Robert, ninth grade class plans a three-day trip to Toronto in May—and Amy loves kindergarten.

The Suzanne Blair Murrays are all essentially well even though both Suzi and Roger had operations last year and Edie had mono. "We are hoping 1973 will be a better year for us," she writes. Edie will attend Lassell Junior College, Boston next fall. Kim, a high school junior, is undecided about college. Jennifer is a seventh grader and thinks she might like Chatham. Suzi is teaching nursery school five mornings a week at Sunset Hills Presbyterian Church. Roger is Manager of Sales Administration at Sutton Engineering Company.

From snowy New Hampshire, Barbara Claus Samuelson writes that it is beautiful, though not appreciated—all fluffy eight inches of it. She doesn't like the hundred and one trips she must make in the snow, carrying the five athletic Samuelson children to their basketball, skiing, hockey, swimming, and water polo matches. Last fall, Ann Crouse Harvey visited the Samuelsons the first time Ann and Barb had seen each other in more than 10 years. (David Harvey really enjoyed "all those kids.")

Even though they, their furniture, and Hurricane Agnes all arrived together, Ann Crouse Harvey and family are alive and living in Connecticut. Their new house is just two years old, but cedar shingled and looks like one of those old New England homes. The Harveys have about twenty acres—still wild, and they plan to leave it that way.

Anne de Shazo Robertson is still in San Francisco—and loving it! She continues to work at the Community Mental Health Center as a senior psychologist in parent education and family therapy. "Why do we get so little education for the hardest job in the world?" Anne is trying to remedy that and enjoying it. Her oldest son, Scott (19), is off roaming around Europe and "presently 100 miles north of the Arctic Circle" working on a Norwegian fishing boat. Chris (16) is working on a local ranch; Mark (16) is more concerned with ski racing than academics; and Perry (10) is holding his own against three older brothers.

Shirley Elliott Johnson's younger son, Jeffrey, is among her 25 cherubs at the Zion Lutheran Church kindergarten this year. Jill is 15 going on 30. Jay Tommy (11) has two loves—his new ten-speed bike and Boy Scouting.

Maddie Englehardt Sayles is still busy as parent volunteer in the local grade school, tutoring reading two mornings a week. Daughter, Penny, is college hunting. Sons John, sixth grade, and Gregory, third grade, are doing fine. In other words, life goes on.

Eldest son, Jeff, won a four-year scholarship to Purdue and is a freshman this year. Three other teenagers keep Shippa Hoy Dibble tres busy. Shippa is also keeping up her social work on a small scale by helping to start her father's musical therapy program at the local hospital and nursing homes. Shippa plays bridge with Marilyn Lopez Dalton ('50) and they tell their friends that they graduated in '56. (We're getting younger every year—thanks, Shippa!)

"No news, really," writes Lois Frank Lee. "My family is healthy and happy (I think)." 'Lois' older daughter, Karen, has started nurses' training at Los Angeles Medical Center School of Nursing. Jim (16) and Suzy (14) are involved in the usual teenage activities. The legal ones, that is!

The Mooneys are well and busy. The printed Recorder post card some of you received was courtesy of Firethorn Press, the name that Jim and Dillon have given to the small printing press now located in our garage. We refer to the two of them as Ben (Franklin) and Gute (nburg). I have been involved in a number of lost causes such as Planned Parenthood (taking blood pressure, weighing in people, etc.) and the McGovern campaign. A school strike enabled us to take a fall vacation to the Finger Lake Region and the Taylor Winery. The rest of the trip is a bit hazy!

Ann reporting:

Peggy Grove Marks is a school nurse and health educator at the elementary school level. Her son, Jeff, is a freshman in high school and daughter Tracey is in second grade.

Early in September Cissie McLeod Scalise and family moved to Warren, Pa., from Naperville, Illinois, a company move. Cissie had a trip to the Los Angeles area with Bob in February.

A nice note from Pat Meyers Kovacs tells of her part time job in public relations of a wall covering firm. Son David is a freshman at Tufts University and Lynn is in high school.

Nanna Moore Pollitt plans to move to the Pittsburgh area this summer. Craig is at the Army Language School at Monterey, California; Kathy graduates from high school in June and 2 younger daughters are at home.

Caught Pat O'Keefe Beede just before they left for a Florida vacation, to break up the long update New York winter! Son Scott is a freshman at Harvard.

Love hearing about the marvelous trips Rosella Petraglia enjoys each year. Last summer her relatives joined her for a tour of Europe. She met Shirley Kirchner on Via Veneto in Rome!

Mid-year had a nice note from Jean Pudney Fulton. In January "Pud" and Jack visited their daughter in Rome. She is a sophomore at Chatham, but studying art history at Loyola University's Rome center. Pud has 2 other daughters 17 and 14 and a son 10.

Mugs Sullivan Hannon keeps busy with 4 children plus being an officer in her husband's company, Maynard Research Council. They had business trips to North Carolina, Florida and Washington, D.C. this past year.

Bert Thompson Thompson had no "Headlines" just the usual family activities with 2 teenagers.

Peggy Tucker Thompson had big news—she graduated with a master's degree from Bryn Mawr College, School of Social Work. She now has a part time job at a child welfare agency.

In April Joan Young Drugmand and Norvan had a trip to Arizona planned. Their oldest son attends William and Mary and they have 2 daughters at home.

Working as a librarian, taking courses toward a master's degree and keeping house fully occupies the days of Lois Young Flyte.

Last summer Laura Miksch Diaz and her family traveled south into Mexico, Louisiana and Texas in a motor home. Last summer the Moore family took a month's auto tour of the historic east coast, south of Williamsburg and north to Bar Harbor, Maine. Spent several days with the Pollitts and a short, but gabby, overnight stay with Cissie McLeod Scalise. In October Don and I celebrated our 20th with a "second honeymoon" in the Phoenix-Scottsdale, Arizona area.

Fran reporting:

Gloria Palmer Hadsell reports the purchase of a home in St. Lucia, W.I., a year ago and loves to get down there as often as possible. Judy Layton and Gloria still correspond and are now working on how to solve the "over 40" syndrome as we all are.

Kay Litzenberger Merge sends greetings to us all and also informs us of the unexpected death of her father. The class extends deepest sympathy to Kay and her family.

Barbara Logan Brown has finally fulfilled an aged dream. She has received certification as a brailist from the Library of Congress. So between running the home and chauffering her four active children, she is transcribing books for the Library of Congress, the Western State School for the Blind and currently for a blind graduate student at Pitt. Barbara says she loves the work and wishes she had more hours in the day to devote to it. Her son has been accepted at Muskingum College next fall and will be playing first chair french horn in a concert at North Hills High School Symphony Band concert, under the direction of the famous Sir Arthur Fiedler. Congratulations!

Marie Timothy Obermann has no news to report but sends greetings to us all.

Alice Snook Kalla has been over her head in things to do with classes and organization work. But says most of her time has been devoted to music. She has been playing in a trio, a quartet and a string orchestra

Jane Smith Morgan and her family vacationed this past year on a cruise around the lakes from Cleveland to Thunder Bay, Ontario. Her husband has been made Divisional Manager and Jane complains about not seeing him, but that goes with the job, of course.

Susan Smith Schweitzer reports they are now living in their new lake front home. Daughter Sandy, is now enjoying kindergarten. She is also taking swimming lessons and gymnastics and loves it. The class extends its deepest sympathy to Sue and her family on the death of her father.

Elaine Vincic Berman is still greatly involved in school and community activities. She has taken up pottery with Helene Crow Johnson '54 and is having great fun making lumpy pots.

As for me, I am ever busy with the farm and children. Becky has become quite interested in the piano and plays very well. Charlie is now in nursery school and seems to like to help the teacher manage it.

Your contributions to the class treasury are greatly appreciated. So until the next newsletter, good luck, good health and God be with you all.

Diane reporting:

With Elizabeth now 16 and Sarah 14, Ellie Bailey Reese is well into the teenage scene which she reports is bringing much more pleasure than pain. Youngest daughter, Julie (10), is absorbed in riding and music. Ellie recently attended a day-long meeting concerning patterns of education for women at Chatham and was greatly impressed with the work being done by the college.

Mana Balter Marcus still loves New York City with all its variety and opportunity. Husband Bruce is now Senior Vice President and Manager of Eastern U.S. Operations, Financial Relations Board, Inc. Joseph is in first grade now and Lucy is almost two years old. Mana saw Charlotte Saul Davis at Killington, Vt.

From Lou Colburn Dobbs: "Middle age, suburbia and a bunch of children make all our stories the same." Her number 1 son is at Franklin and Marshall this year.

It was a busy year for Thelma Fiori Lacerte and family. Suzanne (a high school freshman) and Judy (7th grade) are both involved in their high school bands which means a lot of band concerts. Fortunately Linda and Lisa (3rd and 4th grades) are still leading rather uncomplicated lives. A Lacerte family reunion at Thelma's in October was a highlight. Thelma sends wishes to all for a happy and prosperous '73.

Betty Frantz Purdum is treasurer of the Southeastern Connecticut Association for the Retarded, Navy-Coast Guard representative to Southeastern Conn. Child and Family Service Agency, and still finds time for oil painting and a crash course in weight watching. The other Purdums are also busy and well.

After 20 years Marion Gallup Drummond has decided to go back to school to earn her certification to teach vocal music in public schools. In addition, she keeps busy with 23 private piano students, rehearsals and performances, master classes in Pittsburgh, club, civic and church activities and, of course, family obligations and fun.

Lois Glazer Michaels is a Health Planner with the Health and Welfare Association of Allegheny County. A Chatham student did her field placement with her and Lois thoroughly enjoyed the experience. Eric (16), Marian (15) and Jay (13) are healthy and happy. Our sympathy to all the Michaels on the recent loss of Milt's father.

With daughter Lynn a Chatham freshman, Lynn Hann Baxter is finding it difficult to adjust to "the changed scene" at the college (which she feels must be the first sign of old age). Lynn received her master's from Westminster last summer and in November was elected to the Mercer County Government Study Commission.

From South Dakota comes news that Nancy Hegan Wadsworth's husband and 2 older boys were backpacking with their Scout troop in the Black Hills the night of the Rapid City flood disaster. They worked to aid the survivors of the city of Keystone and came home safe but tired—and with many stories of the flood and its victims.

Ann Matlack Wieland's son Jeffrey is a freshman at Stanford studying pre-med. Mark and Linda are in high school.

Now that she has all 4 children in school for the first time, Catherine Cornish Montgomery has time to be church organist and do lots of sewing.

I, Diane, lost my father at Christmas-time after a terrible 9-month bout with cancer, and we're currently trying to pick up the pieces and get back to normal living. I finally have all children in school full-time and am enjoying it to the hilt. In case anyone watched it on TV, our oldest boy was one of the 1976 bodies in that 2-block-long marching band in the Inaugural Parade. Chat with Lou Colburn Dobbs and Helen Halpern Berkson occasionally and had a great phone visit with Don Lester DiSanto while going through Harrisburg last summer.

As you may have heard, the Class of '53 was scheduled to have a reunion last June. Don't know what happened but somehow the only person who showed up for the luncheon was Sally Crum Ferrell. Hope we can do better at our 25th. Since we had no reunion, one item of business couldn't be taken care of—the matter of new class secretaries. This is the 5th and last year for Fran and me and while we both have enjoyed it, another 5 years seems a bit too much. We'd love to spread the joy around and would welcome any and all offers. If you would like to volunteer for this illustrious position, just get in touch with one of us. PLEASE! Have a good year . . .

Angie reporting:

In addition to Scouts, Brownies and Church choir, Pat McCormick Goodrich won an award in painting.

Barb McVicker Martin reports it's much easier to have a new baby with three helpers. Danielle, the oldest, is thinking of college in a year and really likes Chatham. Barb was a nurse at day camp last summer.

Joan Monahan McFalls is taking graduate courses and plans to return to teaching. Tom is working on his doctorate at the University of Massachusetts. Joan met Leslie Mulvihill Brockett and husband Don in New York City for their first reunion in seven years. When I heard from Leslie, she and Don were leaving for Spain where Don was doing an industrial show for Corning Glass Co. They expect to travel and sightsee after the show.

The view of mountains and ocean at Malibu are breathtaking where Mary Kay Moseley Kamath and family moved. Sanjiv is a research scientist with Hughes Research Laboratory. They welcome a visit from any one who might come their way.

Molly Lenhardt Rowden is busy with tennis, piano and three very pretty little girls (if you received a Christmas card from the Rowdens you know they are adorable). Molly was meeting Ruth Levison Kalish for lunch the day I heard from her.

Carla Norberg Gaut and family vacationed at St. Croix and spent much of their days under-water. With both boys playing basketball, Carla and Charles attend four games a week.

Rather than buy each other Christmas presents, Ruth Oberheim Webb's family takes a Christmas vacation. Last year they toured Florida.

Jill Robertson Quick and family are temporarily living in Alabama where husband Col. John Quick is a student at Air War College. Jill is teaching medical technology and handles publicity for A.W.C. wives group.

John and Sally Seiple Tullai spent two weeks in the Scandinavian countries and Leningrad. All five Tullais just returned from a skiing trip to Stowe, Vermont.

Natalie Stern Miller and Craig traveled 4,000 miles through eight countries last September. A new beach condominium at Monterey Peninsula and decorating it took up most of the year.

Besides teaching English to 8th graders and playing "taxi driver" for her children, Nan Walker DeWard went back to school and through her children is active in 4-H and Scouting. She loves living in Oregon and is planning a trip to the East in a year or so.

All three of our girls are now at Winchester-Thurston. Last year we spent three weeks vacationing in Georgia and South Carolina. Also, last year Henry Koerner painted our three daughters and we are delighted with the result. It was truly a joy hearing from all of you. I hope that next year all the gals will drop a line if only to give their regards.

Zoe reporting:

Kay Avers Headley and family camped on the Outer Banks of North Carolina last summer. They enjoyed the new sites but had 9 inches of rain in 24 hours. She has just been elected as a Member of Church Council for a three year term.

Barbara Braun Bajoras reports keeping busy with the children and their usual activities. It was discovered last fall that their 4 year old Jill had a congenitally dislocated hip. She has had surgery several times and will begin therapy in March. Everyone hopes she will be walking by summer. Barbara reports talking to Lorraine Hix-enbaugh Haas and plans to visit her this spring.

Sandra Blumberg Sonneborn claims Brenda Starr never had to fold laundry for seven people in the corner of a noisy playroom while conducting a telephone interview with a VIP for a front page story. But in spite of her unorthodox working conditions she's enjoying her part-time job as reporter for Pioneer Press, a subsidiary of Time, Incorporated. She writes all the front page news and an occasional feature for the Lake Bluff Review, a weekly community paper. Sandy is also co-leader of a junior Great Books course.

Anne Cohen Winkleman claims they are old parents, kind of very young grandparents and it's the greatest having a new baby around. They have built in baby sitters with the older children and highly recommend it.

Nancy Follett Waichler reports a fantastic year of loving and growing, exhaustion and chaos! They now have eight children ranging in age from 16 to two to 3 year olds.

Marcia Glazer Arnold is working toward the completion of an MPH at the Graduate School of Public Health. She is working as Project Coordinator for an International Committee of The Association for Voluntary Sterilization. Marcia is to head an international conference on the subject in Geneva, Switzerland in February. As a family they had a ski trip to Aspen over the Christmas holidays. Marcia says with all her activities and the activities of her family, life is anything but dull.

Jean Graham Rhodes writes they spent their vacation last summer sight seeing in Florida. They visited Kennedy Space Center and Disney World. Jean also visited Margie Mounts Hartz and family in St. Petersburg.

Janet Hoy Sterling is teaching full time this year. She is teaching Developmental Kindergarten for immature children. She is also getting her master's degree in education at the University of Connecticut. Janet and her husband are enjoying singing in the local Gilbert and Sullivan productions. Her four daughters are growing fast.

Joanne Hoy O'Roark says nothing is new but she is interested in having Mr. Storey's address, if anyone knows it. She thinks he may be in California.

Barbara Kelley Linkous is well again after spending part of October in the hospital with pneumonia. For Thanksgiving the family drove east for a family reunion with George's folks. In January they headed west to California. Barb and George had a "second honeymoon" at Laguna Beach.

No news but greetings from Jill Burnham Bowser, Rosalind Case Avrett, Winifred Dickinson and Marie Kibler Gaertner.

As for me I continue to do volunteer work at school, teach Sunday School and try to keep up with the children and their activities. Ted and I spent a week in California in November and found it very beautiful. We had a pleasant evening with Sally Beck Lee and Bill when they were in Washington in early December. Thanks for all your responses—it was fun hearing from all of you.

Grace Ervine Cherry (Mrs. Murch A. King).

Sandy and Hannah reporting:

THIS IS IT—REUNION YEAR! Haven't enough years passed for us to start reminiscing? Reunion day is June 2—please come!

What must be the most exciting trip reported this year is the one taken by Pat Alogna Rie and her husband to Nepal, Sikum and India including Kashmir! They stayed overnight in a few ancient palaces and in a houseboat in Kashmir.

Barbara Baker Kreindler started teaching nursery school this year. Their two sons are busy skiing and Barbara is preparing for their daughter's Bas Mitzvah this spring.

Lynn Backus Wilson is busy taking figure skating lessons now that the children are in school full time and is planning a trip to Montserrat in February or March.

Dorothy Dieckmann Harman reports a quiet year except for the June flood from "Agnes" which was in their drugstore and basement of the home.

Polly Fleming Wharram reports a holiday in Spain in the rain.

Marcia Froimson Baum sends happy news of adoption of 4 day old Rebecca.

Nancy Kasper Nixon reports she has the birth of two worlds—still riding their show horse! Adding some free lance writing to her activities. She said she has taken to sidesaddle in order to improve her image—and if she changed out of levis in time—the whole family was taking a trip to Europe.

Ginny Ladish Angulo had to come to the U.S. to see Mildred Schulte Pastor and Dottie Dieckmann Harman. She's still waiting for the rest of us to visit her in Bogota.

Gail Miller Maiolo reports that she is "doing great." The whole group of Maiolos are planning their "second annual assault" on Florida for the weeks.

We were delighted to receive a lengthy letter from Steffi Ruben Klein. Steffi is a busy, bright, classmate. She is on the Board of Trustees of three organizations—League of Women Voters, Marin Child Development Center, and United Jewish Federation. The Kleins are very proud of their daughter Amanda who performed with a professional company of the San Francisco Bay Area Company as a soldier in the Nutcracker.

Mildred Schulte Pastor escaped the winter doldrums by spending a few days in San Francisco.

Rose Senoff Eisenstein is enjoying her freedom after completing state certification in Library Science. She is playing a lot of tennis and doing some exciting creative needlepoint. Rose and Mark traveled to Hawaii and Nassau and are looking forward to seeing more of the world in the near future.

Rosalie Stern Wolfe's moving has occupied a great deal of her time this past year. After a year in Cleveland, the Wolfes happily returned to their original home town of Michigan City where Dick has accepted the position of President of Northern Indiana Steel Supply Company.

Sally Schmidt Gregerson plans to attend a reunion and "wonders how we've all changed." Then on to Germany for Gregersons in the summer.

Nancy Teeters Bunce has an expanding career. This past Christmas she decorated the banks and has a regular job doing windows decorating them, not washing them."

Carol Vogel Scrivens has a great job as Public Relations Officer for the New Jersey State Library. Carol sends her good wishes and hopes that '73 will be a good year for all of us.

Rhoda Weitsman David says she often thinks of Chatham and all the fun we used to have. She is hoping to attend reunion. Rhoda is very active in Girl Scouts and "not so active subbing." The kids spent the summer in Wildwood Crest and are enjoying in Disney World.

It has been a year of changes for Lynn Wilner. She started working this summer as program director for the North Area YWCA. Lynn had some weaving in last summer's Three Rivers Festival and the Twin Towers Art Show is fall. The Hawkers in the fall visited with Stocker Burfoot in Washington, D.C. Their biggest news is their move from a new contemporary house to a 60 year old ten room house.

I (Hannah) am occupied with Chatham Region, United Jewish Federation, a twice weekly modern dance class, and keeping pace with the activities of my family. We thoroughly enjoyed our trip to Washington, D.C. with the girls at Thanksgiving and have been loving our jaunts to Fort Lauderdale this winter.

I (Sandy) had a quiet year, but am looking forward to a trip to London in the spring. No news, just a hello from Marlene Valentine, Lougherty, Joan Long Pahl, and Eleanor Skinner who took a part time job as secretary to the editor of a weekly magazine.

We are very sorry to report the death of Carol Frees Sykes' husband Edward. Our deepest sympathy to Carol and her daughter in their loss. We also extend our sympathy to Rose Senoff on the death of her father; Carol Vogel on the death of her mother; and Nancy Peters Bunce on the death of her mother-in-law.

Debbie reporting:

Sorry to say it was a poor response again, only four of fifty-four.

Marty Jo Campbell Lane informs that they had a dream come true. Just before Thanksgiving the Lanes moved into a magnificent 200 year old Georgian house along the Connecticut Valley. The house is complete with a tobacco barn which will be used for horses and some rich land where they will garden to their hearts content. Down the street is the Jonathan Edwards burying grounds and Cal is on home territory with the literary associations that name brings to mind. They are collecting antiques with renewed fervor now that they have an authentic house for them.

Jinnie Nabors Kearney is busy at home with her three boys, and gets out for La Lache League which she enjoys. Also trying to keep one step ahead of her kids is Lynn Hughes Mayer who can't quite believe she has two teenagers and a third not far behind. Lynn wrote that she was planning to attend a Chatham Alumnae Pot Luck dinner in March. I hope it was fun. Come to reunion in June and have two days of fun with familiar faces.

Bobbie Einhorn Chester has had a happy and sad year. Happy over the addition to the family but saddened by the death of her father in October. All our sympathies, Bobbie. Bobbie is taking a biology course this semester at Seton Hill and is being badgered by the children who want to go to the lab so they can see the cat she is dissecting. Ah yes, the aroma of Buhl Hall and the looks of other passengers on the street car when we took our cat skins home! The Chesters spent some fun time in December with Bev Fleishman Pimsleur and family who are now living in Albany.

The Bernsteins spent a good part of the year travelling. I took the kids to Chicago by train, for their taste of yesteryear. We may try it by sleeper this year. Then we also went to Arizona, Nevada, North Carolina, and Washington, D.C. area. All the while I carried a programmed text on neuroanatomy and even learned a bit.

Sue Allardice Neff, who is now teaching art in the Sewickley Schools, is Class Reunion Chairman this year and some great things are planned in addition to the regular college schedule, so make your plans now and come to Reunion June 1 and 2. See you then.

Susie reporting:

Harriet Lipscher Felman is going into business for herself with a new concept in a syndicated cartoon, and never felt better in her life! Harriet has a 15 year old daughter and a 12 year old son which allows her more time now to do "her thing."

Susie Quad Croel and husband Phil spent a week in Arizona in February, touring the state and enjoying the change of pace. Susie is in the "chauffeur" years with her four children now, and recently taught a drama course to a pre-teen group at their club house. She welcomes all Chatham alums to visit when in Chicago.

Elinor Roeger Nyhus loves Guatemala, the rich Mayan Indian culture, gorgeous scenery of volcanic peaks and lakes, and ideal spring-like weather. Elly and Paul were immersed in intensive language training in Washington, D.C., before moving to South America. In D.C., the Nyhus family got together often with Marie Smith Smith and family.

Elayne Rosen is enjoying working for the United Jewish Federation of Pittsburgh, and recently completed eighteen months work setting up a new community organization known as the Squirrel Hill Urban Coalition. Elayne went to Israel and Europe last summer, and has been studying Hebrew. She will most likely go to a five week seminar for social work professionals at Hebrew University in Jerusalem this summer. "So," writes Elayne, "life is full—but for a husband, although I take heart when I see alums are still getting married, like Claire Tober. So while there's life, there's hope."

Marie Smith Smith loves her new home in Ridgewood, New Jersey. Susie Quad Croel's hometown. Marie says daughter Therese began junior high, and son Tony started kindergarten. Marie is substituting in elementary and junior high school and has a small group of private piano students. She is active in the League of Women Voters, and has redecorated their new home. She has been in touch with Bette Jo Greenburger in New York City, and Elly Roeger Nyhus.

Danna Vance Mitchell is finishing her master's degree in counseling at Syracuse and is working full-time as a Rehabilitation Counselor Supervisor for the New York State Education Department. Danna visited with Anne Smith Wright '60 in Athens, Georgia this past summer.

Joan Winters George has started to do some traveling with her three children. They spent Christmas on Sanibel Island in Florida, and have plans to visit Washington, D.C., Arizona, New Mexico and Texas in June. Joan stays away from clubs and community involvements, preferring gardening and cooking. She is in touch with Danna Vance Mitchell.

LOST

Benita Acheson.

Marianne reporting:

Two of our classmates Susan Childs Matheson and Sue Engel Golden are enjoying the return to baby care especially since their older children aged 10 to 7 are such fine "little mothers" and an appreciative family. The Mathesons spent 5 weeks in New York City, then visited Washington, D.C. to see Gerry Reisker Edwards and Ellen Clark Bode '60. Another 1960 reunion on their list was with Bobby Freeman London in the local Palo Alto grocery store.

Nigar Abbasi Husain is going to find out how the old mind works by starting an M.A. course in English Literature at American University. She keeps commuting between Pakistan and Washington, D.C., spending the summers with her family in Karachi and the school year in the States.

Two classmates report that there is never enough time in a day and they are very busy on the home front with guests and "homeownership" plus extracurricular activities. Robin Askin DeKleine is teaching 12 students private piano lessons and taking guitar lessons herself. Her "big" achievement of the season was to arrange for two chorus parts to three songs from "The Grinch Who Stole Christmas" by listening to the recording, since the music has not been published. Joan Cercone Gilson spent an exciting year watching their house being constructed only to have the "bottom fall out" a week after moving in. A water break in the front yard drowned a skunk under the foundation . . . three months of professional deodorizing and the perfume is lingering.

I am happy to report that in March we broke our longevity record and will have been in the Northwest for 18 months! We are busy with house projects now that we are settled and I am finding my way in the community through the League of Women Voters, as finance chairman, the American Chemical Society for intellectual stimulation; and spearheading construction of covered tennis courts at our neighborhood club. That along with children aged 2 and 3, is keeping me in good physical condition.

Jess reporting:

The poor response to my letter this year was most disappointing; only five answered. Of those, Marge Hanson Honig and Libby Jones Gadd sent along greetings. Marge didn't give out a bit of information on her forthcoming journey to Israel, which leaves us nowhere but to our speculations.

It doesn't always happen to somebody else. Last year it happened to Mary Booth Fassett Roberts. She reports that they did survive Hurricane Agnes last June but that the Elmira, N.Y. experience was devastating. In her own words, "Floods are nasty and most frightening, especially when they hit your home and most of your family and friends too."

I had a wonderful letter from Suby Hocker Bal-lay. Joe is not only head of the Department of Design but also Associate Dean of Fine Arts at Carnegie Mellon, and Suby is an associate member of the Weavers Guild. The Ballays along with all their neighbors also garden organically, complete with compost, praying mantises, and ladybugs. Then Suby and several neighbors get together to "put up" the harvest. Last year they canned 54 quarts of grape juice, 50 quarts of applesauce, and Suby herself did 20 quarts of tomatoes. Suby gets the Rodale-Davis award for outstanding nutritional achievement! I, for one, am admiring.

Marty Sanner Grover and Elliot combined business with pleasure during a European trip last October. Among other things, they did some weekend hiking in the Alps. Hiking, I gather, is one of Marty's hobbies along with horse shows, fund raising drives, the Junior League, the Housing Board, and so forth. You must be better organized than the likes of me, Marty.

I, Jess, am still muddling about. Recently, I did start singing again, tenor—what else—with a symphony chorus and we've just had a performance of Verdi's Requiem. I'm also involved with our town's tercentenary this year. Having helped to write a town history, I'm now in charge of all publicity for the celebration, from press releases to window placards. It's all a lot of fun and foolishness which will culminate in a weeklong binge of chicken barbeques, beard growing, outdoor pageants, bunting draped houses, parades, long dress wearing, kangaroo courts with stocks and pillories, firemen's muster and like that! All the stuff that city slickers like me thought was strictly comic strip antics. So if you happen our way between May 26 and June 3, we'd love to have you attend Northfield's 300th birthday party and be treated to some genuine Americana.

Donna reporting:

Ruth M. Jones plans to be married this spring to Heasi Bin Helah Siamis, and hopefully will take a belated honeymoon trip to see her in-laws in Somalia before the end of the year. Ruth still works for Catholic Social Services in the Lawrenceville neighborhood, switching this year from group worker to community developer on the agency's new Community Chest grant. She finds time for classes at Pitt's Graduate School of Social Work. Ruth participated in the Inauguration

Day demonstration in Washington, D.C. of the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice and says she's working privately on developing plans for an on-going "Congress for People Project" for Pittsburgh's Peace and Freedom Center.

This is Mary Louise Kaylor Maury's last year in Alaska. The Maurys leave this summer and, as Mary Lou reports, "we plan on driving down the Alcan Highway in our camper. It should be an experience, good or bad, I'm not sure which." Mary Lou and Jim don't know where the Air Force will send them next. Although they've enjoyed their Alaskan experience they admit they've had enough. "As I write this," reports Mary Lou, "it's —25° and hasn't been above zero for at least two weeks." Brrrrr!!! In spite of the cold, the Maurys and their two daughters are fine and lead an active life.

Paula Keizler Cramer is having fun chairing a study committee at the new "open school" in Merion Station. "We're now partially into the New York scene," enthuses Paula, "as Gil is with CIT Financial, a New York holding company. He commutes daily." Paula sends regards to all.

Church-related activities consume much of Shirley Lewis Minner's time. Shirley's worried that the world and our generation are turned off by the church. To express her concern she worked as a counselor at the Billy Graham Crusade in Cleveland.

Getting back to Pittsburgh occasionally from Maryland are Carol Lemke Keil and family who hope to visit more friends in the city this summer. Son Jack is in nursery school three mornings a week. "This gives me a little free time for sewing and reading," writes Carol. "I help at the nursery school one morning a week and am active in the local branch of AAUW." Carol joined a garden club this past year. "All this," she says, "with a little 'Sesame Street' thrown in for good measure keeps me busy—just the way I like to be."

Judy Luttrupp spent a week on Martha's Vineyard last September. According to Judy, "It's still fairly unspoiled and very nice but traffic and new developments are creeping in." Judy's still "secretarying" with the Worthington Company in New Jersey.

Adjusting to a new area are Jacqueline Nadolny Rosenberger and husband Karl who took a new job last fall in Ohio as manager of administration and accounting at B&K Instruments, Inc. Since moving to Berea in September, the Rosenbergers have had lots of company, including Karlana Glemser Warnock and family, Shirley Lewis Minner who lives nearby and friends and relatives from Pittsburgh. Jackie writes: "Scotty started nursery school and Todd just had his second birthday. Karl and I have continued our interest in small group Bible studies. With this, getting acquainted with neighbors, decorating our new house and activities with the children, our days go by quickly and happily. We're a block from a swimming pool and near lots of lakes for our canoe." Obviously the Rosenbergers will be looking forward to summer.

Adair Sidforth Alworth, who will be recording secretary for her Junior Woman's Club next year, is running for a state office in the organization. Besides being civics department chairman, Adair is busy with church activities and finds time to work on a crisis hotline which has expanded from a mere telephone service to a walk-in center. She provides short-term counseling for persons including dope addicts and those who have attempted suicide. Adair "called in" her news saying, "We spend our summers on Cape Cod. And I'm very busy with club work, boating, fishing and keeping up with four boys, who are Jeffrey, 11, Roger, 9, David, 6, and Cameron, who will be 2 in May."

Yours truly discovered a second "career" last spring with my first art exhibit at Mountain Playhouse in Jennerstown where patrons visit the theatre's art gallery before, after and in between performances. My art display—strictly needlecraft—include knitted afghans, needlepoint pictures, crewl pillows and pincushions. A month prior to the art venture I enjoyed the scenic wonders of the deep South, southern mansions and all. The atmosphere of the trip—pleasant; the hospitality—the best; the food—obviously excellent because I have added the pounds to prove it. Best to all in '73 and here's hoping more classmates will reply next year.

Joyce reporting:

Travel is in the news this year for Brenda Stober and Judy Rubenstein Rubinstein. Stober family, except Liz age 8, went to D. Land and the Bahamas. Meanwhile Liz is traveling with Brenda's parents and fell in with London. Brenda reported she is looking forward to skiing again when she and Bob chapel a church youth group on a ski weekend. On way to the Barbados and sailing in the Caribbean. Judy contacted Marlene Schweig Hart and sent us her news.

Elizabeth Waite, also a traveler, continues teaching 7th and 8th grade Spanish. Betsy stayed the summer with a children's beach mission at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. With her sister she then toured Finland, Sweden, Norway, and England. Stops included Edinburgh for the International Festival which "was great."

Anne Putnam Mallinson sends "greetings" is looking forward to next year's reunion. Don Seif Kapp, serving on the Alumnae Board, reports we need not wait until '74 by reporting missed seeing classmates last year and hope to see more this year. This year has found Mary at the bank and Duquesne University, Kindergarten and Dottie and Scott in nursery school. Dottie finds teaching such little quite a challenge. Township and county environmental group and church activities also keep Kapps busy.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Sendeck Jakabcsin on the death of her mother Jean Thonen Nickel on the death of her father. While Mary and Jake are happy to have returned to Pittsburgh where Jake has a position at Gimbel's Department Store, they are planning trips to Florida and Quebec.

Arlene Sinkus Lewis, Chatham's alumnae representative for Boston's South Shore, finds that with today's applicants very interesting. Arlene served as chairwoman of volunteers for a Republican Congressional candidate. Unfortunately he lost in a heartbreakingly close race.

Susan Smith Balika, who was chairwoman of the annual Antique Show and continues in the Writers Group, reports the building of a home on 3 1/2 acres, including a lake. The Balikas had Jean Thonen Nickel, Nick and their children for a weekend visit in the mountains and had a pleasant evening at the Nickels' when Bill sang in a regional barbershop contest in Pittsburgh. Sue reports the Balikas see Anne Putnam Mallinson and Bill quite often.

Carroll Spelke Smaltz, working in public relations at the Huntington Library, Art Gallery and Botanical Gardens in San Marino, California, is busy doing everything from "lemon slicing" teas to press releases and pamphlets. "Sam" educates the girls 11, 9 and 6, seem adjusting to mother's liberation, but she wonders if mother Dan, as busy as ever, still teaches a course in advanced criminal procedure while writing a book for the course.

Nancy Wright Miller sent a summary of changes. Nancy is divorced and has three children, ages 8 and 10. She has worked as a nurse at a Y camp for three summers and has begun working as a substitute school nurse. Future plans include returning to school in the fall and working in community health field or returning to teach student nurses.

Sally Williams Vasse and Bill visited Bill's mother in California and plan a trip to New Orleans when Bill attends a conference there. Sally reports she feels more "liberated" at home and is busy enjoying 4 year old Mary, running the library, studying and playing the flute. Taking a children's literature course to keep up with Mary, Sally began reading in psychology, sociology and arithmetic courses. Bill, Chairman of the Academic Planning Board, has been planning course programs and helping plan buildings for a new urban university campus to be developed in Flint.

I talked with Karen Tiedy Ream between unpacking after a delightful summer family vacation in Michigan and preparation for a round of visits from family. Hopefully Sheila Rush Okun will tell us how it feels to be an author for the next Recorder. Your reporter has changed individual counseling to group work and finds quite challenging.

Nancy reporting:

Where is everybody? The mail can't be that bad this year . . . or maybe it is. Always a cheery and busy word from Meg Alexander Sprengle: "Last fall I took a nursing course at Dutchess Community College, but don't know if I'll continue with the program. Still volunteering at the library, PTA, etc., and now am in the midst of a training program for reading tutors." Sue Bradley Trayser's been busy too—Sally Mercke Heym's November wedding which sounds like one of the great all-time reunions to boot. Sue says, "Mal and I are finally settling down in Duxbury—on the seashore, but within commuting distance from Boston." Then she writes that they're off snorkeling in Columbia for a few weeks. That's settling down?

Pat Burda Sliwinski sounds a bit more settled: "After ten years of marriage we're finished with Stan's medical education and have settled here in Greenville where Stan has established his practice in eye surgery. We have a big old house with a three-horse stall barn . . . we just love it. I keep busy with our five year old Staley and working on local horse shows."

Mary Ann Conti Sheline sends all her regards. Same happy words from Judy Adler Elitzky, who's busy with two little girls now.

You all can find me this summer enjoying the good life—from pasta to the ballet, my new love—in Italy. It's something I've been saving for and dreaming about for so many years, I can't believe it's coming true. Peace to all, and ciao!

Gail reporting:

The most newsy letters ever from the largest number of 1963 alumni greeted me this year. Thank you! Lucile Davis Wareing reports that new son Edward and older brother Willie keep her hands full. She and Guy got to spend an "all too short" week in Venice in November. Lucile described it as a magical city, but she was saddened by its condition and that of its art treasures. The Wareings are traveling to Moscow in February to follow up on all the Russian history Lucile studied. All in all, sounds like a great way to perk up January!

Nancy Fleming Demoise answered me while "knee-deep in plaster dust" as she and the family are remodeling their newly purchased thirty-seven year old house in Bethesda, Maryland.

Mickey Kammerman Kurzbard answered that "nothing's new" and sends hello to all. Wendy Decker Ginsburg echoes Mickey's words, adding that "things are hectic as ever and we're all getting older." How true!

Bobbie Fellabom Emerick reports no "new" news. She's still working part-time as a "teacher" (which covers everything from janitorial to teaching duties.) Bobbie recently took up tennis and discovered her freshman tennis course stuck after all. She also ran into classmate Lois McCune Flowers at a California hotel while the Emericks were driving through the area. Lois and her husband, both now from Monterey, have lived in varied locations in the U.S. because her husband's in the Coast Guard. Lois has her master's in Information Science and works as a librarian in Monterey.

Lissa Karp Hirsh reports the birth of Erin and that's all. Not bad!

Bonnie George Switzer reports she'll finish her master's in June. Her letter mentioned acquiring a potter's wheel last fall and she's now messing up her basement with a smile. The Switzers took a summer vacation in Minnesota that included lots of canoeing—sounds great!

Sue Herb Reichard reports that they've moved—again! The new address is five miles from their last location, and they now have room for houseguests, etc. Sue's reaction to six moves in ten years was like mine—oh!! The Reichards hope someday to remain somewhere long enough to put down ten-foot roots.

After a long silence, Doe Freedman Hentschel returned a questionnaire and I'm delighted. Now that Doe's little ones are no longer little, she's chomping at the bit to return to work. She's presently serving as adult co-ordinator for a 3000-member congregation where she handles the studies program for school age youth and adults. They offer short-term courses on just about anything. Doe's other interest is Planned Parenthood, and she is one of five local organizers of the group. She gives speeches to numerous groups and so far reports she has not incited any riots.

Husband Tom is general manager of Richardson Printing Ink, Chicago branch. Brian, age seven, is in a multi-age class with independent learning program and loves "everything but his phonics book." Daughter Karin, age 4, attends nursery school, plays "go to meeting," and will probably run for President in 2008—a budding feminist as reported by Doe! What a great letter!

Pam Johnson Fenner's news included a quick move to California and lots of traveling, especially between Boston and California. Trips kept Pam and the whole Fenner clan occupied, including a vacation in Hawaii. Husband Paul is in architectural landscaping and Pam is considering a return to work part-time once her children are older and the job market is less saturated. Seems the Fenners traded "snow shovels for sponges" as their arrival during winter, 1972, was in the midst of California's wettest winter in a century. As far as snow, the Sierras provide all that a former Bostonian could want, for a start.

Ah yes—the Verlin household! We're spending all of February in Florida hopefully escaping the cold, gray weather of northern winter. We've traded it for sunshine, surf, and yes . . . SUN-BURN. I'm even now recovering from my first three days of "sunning" as I write our class news—oh well, it has to be tan sometime. Joel, now 3½, is a 100% beach bum. Michael is finally "on vacation," having passed his Internal Medicine Boards last year. We are, however, "in limbo" as to our plans for 1973-1974, since Mike has officially finished his Fellowship in Hematology as of June, 1973. The Navy still awaits and so we also wait and wonder. I am active in our congregation, being its membership chairman and music teacher in its religious school. That's where I see a lot of Barbara Shullman Young. I am also involved in the University of Michigan Medical Wives' Group as well as trying to finish up numerous personal and household projects that seem to accumulate over the months. Before the next move, I'm bound to get to them.

A special thanks to those who returned this year's questionnaire so promptly, especially considering my very early deadline. I wanted to make sure I would have time to get everything done before our trip, including getting the class news written. Next year, I'll stick to the regular deadline. In the meantime, I'm off to my new-found haven of tranquility . . . I may never go home!

Martha reporting:

Practically the only thing my respondents had in common this year was new addresses for everyone (except me). Otherwise we all seem to be "doing our own thing."

Judy Paulsen Webb took time to answer in the midst of preparing for a move back to Pittsburgh three weeks later. This is move #5, and Judy has the feeling they're in the Army and Dick hasn't told her! Otherwise, says Judy, there is no earth-shattering news, and she expects to go into severe depression after reading the exploits of our classmates. I can't quite believe that!

It seems that Diane Phillips had another one of those good years. A promotion came through early in February, and she continues to enjoy Washington and her job in labor relations training. She writes that Betsy McGregor Cooley ('66) works just down the hall from her. Outside of Washington, there was a trip home to Cincinnati in September which included a detour to Cleveland for a visit with Lillian Steiner Levine and her family. "It was wonderful to find that we still have much to share, much more than simply old times."

Sue Rockwell Coen wrote a long newsy letter from Nebraska where they moved last summer. Jim is now involved with the computer program at SAC Headquarters, and is in a master's program in the evenings. Sue's activities center around the home, but children do grow and she finds more time to get out now. She writes that it has been a satisfying year, "filled with the joys of being a growing family, learning about a new part of the country, making new friends and finding out more about ourselves."

I (Marty) seem to be the only one still rooted in the same place. 'Twas a good year though. We became grandparents at 31! In January we decided to take part in a shelter care program for teenagers 12 to 18, under the auspices of the juvenile court system. This involves giving a temporary (1 to 21 days) home to teenagers with various problems. We ended up having a pregnant foster daughter who stayed with us until her baby was born six months later. It was, at first, scary, then interesting, challenging and frustrating, but we were gratified to learn that she had also profited from the experience. She and her baby are now in another foster home until she reaches age 17.

In another area, Bruce resigned his job of nine years at Talon to open, in October, his own business—Suzuki of Meadville. It involves snowmobile and motorcycle sales, service and accessories in a really beautiful new building. The bookkeeping and jumble of tax reports are in my experienced hands (I'd never even done my own income tax before!). I've fired off my first batch of quarterly whatses and a couple other goodies—now to sit back and see who lands in jail! In other ways also it was a satisfying year. Rob is enjoying kindergarten, and Karen has grown from a baby into a girl. We are surrounded by a delightful hodgepodge of neighbors and friends, and I've finally become accustomed to the three-ring circus that ensues every day as kids of various shapes and sizes congregate in a seeming effort to drive me insane.

I'm very sorry there were so few replies this year. I know how disappointing it is to look for news of a particular person and find not even a whisper. I hope these first ten years following graduation have been good to everyone, and the next ten are even better. Peace.

Fender reporting:

It is with a certain sense of horror that I realize suddenly that it has been ten years since I have seen the Chatham campus and, with few exceptions, that I have seen fellow class mates from the class of 1963. We have all gone our separate ways, in many cases both physically and mentally. Still, with pride, as I read the many responses to the questionnaire, I could without exception remember every one's face vividly . . . and believe it, voices too.

When I opened Helen Moed's letter I realized with chagrin that we have both been in New York City close to ten years without seeing each other once. Helen's description of her very demanding and fascinating job as producer of the C.B.S. Morning News explains why one does not just run into her on the streets of this city. She is a journalist in the absolute sense and this job sounds absolutely exciting. Helen reports that in addition to the very demanding job as producer, she goes out into the field doing film stories for C.B.S. . . . these travels have taken her to Viet Nam; to Washington for three months on the Selling of the Pentagon; to Key Biscayne to interview Bebe Rebozo; and, to the Republican Convention. It was wonderful hearing from Helen, I only wish she had said more.

Barbara Kessel Bloxson and husband Ray have certainly had an action packed 1972 . . . in the space of one year they built a new house, adopted a two day old baby and had their own baby boy five months later. Barb writes that while shopping she gathers lots of attention, after all it's not often that one sees a woman with two boys five months apart. She is loving every minute of her jam-packed life of mother and wife, still finding time to work three nights a week and to make her own clothes and those of her daughter. The very thought makes me exhausted.

Rita Ippolito Hazen wrote from Dunkerque, France where she was accompanying Tom while he was consultant to an electrical engineering firm. She said she had taken a vacation from her teaching job so she could go with Tom—with Paris, England and Scotland on the itinerary, I couldn't help but agree with Rita more when she said this trip was just what they needed to solve the mid-winter hum-drum!

Jane Martin Crawe had the opposite problem. She and Roger are settled in New Haven, and are acclimating themselves to the American ways and machines and gadgets after several years in Kenya. Roger is studying economics at Yale and Jane is at the Child Study Center at Yale working for a psychiatrist studying behavior genetics. Welcome back, Jane, maybe some of us will get to see more of you now.

It was fun to hear from Judy Launer Palkovitz who wrote from her new home in Squirrel Hill in Pittsburgh. They moved in July and Judy says that since then she's been kept busy decorating and running after her small boy and keeping tabs on their daughter, four.

Sue Hill Warner sends greetings from Raleigh, North Carolina. Sue substitute teaches in kindergarten and is quite active in a local cooperative playschool, and in a neighborhood garden club.

In November, my husband Lee and I spent a wonderful weekend with Sue Bradley Trayser and husband Mac in their new home in Duxbury, Mass. The raison d'être for this gathering was to rejoice with Sally Mercke and Rick Heym on their wedding day. Sally and Rick had a lovely evening ceremony in the M.I.T. Chapel and afterwards we all had a marvelous fun time at their reception where I had a chance to reacquaint myself with Arlene Sinkus Lewis '62 after all these years. Sally just wrote having returned from their delayed honeymoon in Tobago. And, Susan and Mac Trayser are at this writing preparing for their ten day interlude on another island in the sun . . . San Andreas, Colombia.

Janet Greenlee Rohanna and husband Kay have become full time farmers. Kay has left teaching school after eight years to devote full time to his dairy business. Janet reports they have 40 Holsteins and lots of milk! Her comment that life is never boring and that nature is great is exactly the feeling that the Shaws have been having vis our farm in up-state New York. More and more frequently we talk and examine our life here in New York City in terms of whether this is what we really want over the long run for our life style . . . i.e. New York City during the week and nine hours each weekend commuting back and forth to the farm. Who knows, some year I too may be corresponding from "the farm." In the interim I am still trading euro-dollars for Morgan Guaranty which in these times of monetary crises makes for very lively days in the money markets. We're planning on a fifteen day trip to Nassau in early March and then on to London for me in April on bank business. Hopefully I will squeeze in some vacation time while over there.

That's all for this year. My thanks to all of you who responded so enthusiastically and my regrets to the others . . . I hope to hear from you next year. We're all interested in at least keeping in touch once a year through the Recorder.

Jane reporting:

Ten years, folks! The less said about that, the better. In honor of this milestone of sorts, some long, chatty letters came back in lieu of the ever-popular pink sheets, which was a welcome approach, indeed.

Filling us in on ten years' worth of news, Anne Topham sends greetings from Atlanta, where she's science editor for the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation. This move occurred in the fall of 1971, and prior to it Anne had been engaged in various ventures in publishing and medicine in New York City, as well as having spent twenty months working in Europe. In her current position, she is involved in a broad spectrum of health education efforts, the most interesting of which have been in genetics research and counseling.

Nancy Welsh Lees also summarized what appears to have been a whirlwind decade of activity, centered around the development of a small harem with the arrival (one at a time) of four daughters. The Lees moved from Wilmington to Parkersburg, West Virginia, for three and a half years, only to return to a home in Wilmington just a block away from the one they had built, lived in for three months, and left. A pleasant event, a year ago, was a mini-reunion at Mickey Folino Huff's home with Sue Hunt Roose, Barb Mueller Siegel, and their families. Nancy hopes to join Joe on a business trip to Europe in July.

Barb Shullman Young, having reached the both-children-in-school stage, has entered the job market. She's a Program Consultant in Multi-Ethnic Studies for the Ann Arbor, Michigan, school district. The Youngs continue to love the "ski all winter, sail all summer" life in Michigan.

Joan Salay Green writes that they are enjoying their home, doing some gardening and building a game room, but it hardly sounds as though they are spending enough time there to get it done! They spent four weeks in Europe last year, when John addressed the Electrochemical Society Congress in Stockholm. Next month, they're heading for San Francisco and Disneyland. Son Brian, at 2½ years, has become a seasoned traveler. In addition to all of this, Joan has kept busy this winter with bridge, bowling and volleyball every week, ice skating on their back yard pond whenever possible, and an evening class at the local college. Hearing something like that makes me feel incredibly lazy!

Dianne Rubin Newman is enjoying her year-old twins, but would welcome hearing from others who have twins or are twins. She claims there's very little literature available for mothers of twins, but that she's getting enough first-hand knowledge to write a book of her own.

January can be a pretty dreary month in Lima, Peru, so I was not particularly gripped about a nine day business assignment in Mexico City last month. I had to make two short presentations at NCR's annual sales convention, attended by about two thousand men and five or six women, leaving plenty of time for sun, sight-seeing, Kaluha, and mariachi music.

Special thanks for the extra little efforts put into your responses this year.

San reporting:

News is sparser this year than last. Hope my last cards reached everyone.

Becky Bennett Wallace is working for the local venue court and singing in the public schools weekly. Husband Jim is involved in a lot of anti-ust cases and local civic groups. The Wallaces had a wonderful vacation in Japan, Hong Kong and Thailand last summer. Becky has also had me fun reunions with Ingrid Van Datten Detweiler and Sally Brown Lincoln who have moved nearby.

Pat Baisler Van Amberg sends greetings but no news.

Sheila Bennett Harris wrote just after her return from a Florida visit with Pam Stirba Russell and family. Joel has now gone into the lamp manufacturing business himself. He prefers that to the constant travel involved with being a manufacturers' representative. Sheila is busy singing with a semi-professional group and taking drama courses. She says that it is good to be singing again.

Linda Breitel Paetz called from nearby Laurel, Maryland to report the birth of young Jonathan and other news of their hectic year. Mario completed his Ph.D. at North Carolina State and is now an Assistant Professor of Electrical Engineering at the University of Maryland. They are now in the process of buying a house close to Chesapeake Bay where they can use their new boat.

Sally Brown Lincoln writes from their third place of residence in a year. In 1972, they bought and sold two houses: one in Philadelphia (where they lived one week) and one in Houston. They loved Texas but are glad to be back in New England again. John is now with Corning Glass Works in the Boston area. Sally also enjoys having Becky Bennett Wallace in nearby Worcester.

Diane Brutout Neimann got the news of her daughter's birth in under the wire. She is also doing some consultant work for Science Management, Inc. for Hennepin County (Minneapolis) in the area of criminal justice planning, especially in the courts. She still doesn't know how she will be able to juggle two small children, a job, and the temptation of cross-country skiing with Paul. Diane also reports bumping into Suzie Callas and Lancy Warner (a former Chatham student of hers) in a Minneapolis department store.

Sarah Corwin Brady writes that the move from San Francisco to San Jose was a tremendous let-down for both her and Mike. Fortunately, they feel that their new jobs made the move worthwhile. Sarah is the director of a pre-school in San Jose. She also writes that she was surprised to see Carol Pogash on educational TV last year as a news commentator. Sarah feels that it would be fun to see any Chathamites who are in the San Jose area.

Pam Davis McGee writes that 1972 was a good and busy year. Hugh graduated from law school, survived the bar exam, and is now with a firm in Hartford. This summer they spent a month sailing on their sloop and seeing old friends. After endless searching, they finally found a house and settled down to await the arrival of James Andrew, whom they are enjoying very much. Pam thought she would miss her job after working for so many years but, so far, she finds being home very satisfying.

Linda Berg Samuels called from nearby Alexandria to report the arrival of Kim. She now has two girls. The Samuels expect to be transferred from the Washington area this summer. They are still in doubt as to where they are going as her husband's orders for Vietnam were cancelled quite recently.

Francie Darr Alely finished her Master of Library Science in June and now is the first elementary school librarian in Weymouth, Mass. She adores the work but it keeps her hopping. Her three children are all in school now. Last summer the Alelys moved into their 'dream' of a big old house—circa 1830. Francie met Ingrid Van Datten Detweiler in the kitchen of a mutual friend. The Aleys see Mike and Jane Tobey Eden often and welcome Sid and Patti Papp Bremen back to New England.

1972 was a hectic year for me, Sue Atherton Kleine, and Doug. In April we welcomed our second daughter, Hilary, another blue-eyed charmer; spent the summer and fall working in a series of losing Democratic campaigns; and took a trip to New Orleans and San Antonio to recover. I've become involved with a League of Women Voters' local study on correction and have visited some detention facilities and interviewed corrections officials. My 'retirement' from teaching lasted exactly one year as I have just started to teach part-time at Madeira School, a private girls' school. Reston seems to have some Chathamites in its midst. I ran into Bette Watson Merchant '64 at a nursery school parents meeting. Many thanks to all who answered. Hope to hear from everyone next year.

Joan reporting:

It's been a busy year for all of us. I only wish we could print all the wonderful letters I received.

Penny Embry McGoey sends a "hi" to everyone and says she is "busy, busy, busy" with three little ones. Judy Goslee Diaz reports "not much new" but notes Carol Craven Kratz' return to Pittsburgh and her new baby. Sara Heslep, though currently unemployed, is involved in making a quilt and researching the history and practice of quilt-making.

From Susan Haas Nordby comes word that David was made a Mellon vice president last fall and that, as a junior board member, she is quite busy setting up the classes taught at Kingsley House in East Liberty and also is learning to sew when the family is sleeping.

Carol Hartman Elden recently enjoyed a marvelous experience singing in a children's opera portion of a concert series. The Eldens are in the process of remodeling their house and will soon have two of the three girls in nursery school.

Elaine Hillman Moroney enjoyed a pleasant year, busy with work on the new house, child-rearing, a women's organization, and swimming, which is her new hobby. For almost the first time since Chatham days, Elaine saw Lynne Jack Porterfield and later Myra Hull Gillum when they both visited in Canada.

Myra Hull Gillum has been kept more than busy with rug and furniture shopping, entertaining, cycling—Myra finds winter cycling very invigorating with enough layers on—and the bicycle club for which she edits the club newsletter. Besides "gorging on food and friendship" on the fall visit to the Moroneys, Myra had a great time cycling with the Porterfields earlier in the summer and lately has been renewing acquaintances with Philadelphia area alums Martha Repman, Toba Schwaber '64, and Gail Brooks '68.

Heather Johnston sends the good news of a new doctorate in political science from the University of Iowa. Still teaching at Purdue, Heather is doing a little ice skating, a bit of serious cooking, and trying to get back to serious research after her thesis (and we all know what that's like, don't we?). She must pare the thesis for a presentation at the Midwest Political Science Conference in May. After observing super-engineering Purdue, Heather feels—and I support her position—that she wouldn't trade her liberal arts education and the invaluable exposure it gives to the problems of human values generated by our "technotronic" era.

The highlight of last year for Linda Kates Meyer was John's becoming a partner in the law firm with which he's been associated for three years—and the resultant weightier law cases. The rest of the year revolved mainly around the children and several family trips, with one afternoon sent with Lynn Schreiber Glasser and family.

What a year for Bridget Kumutat Allen! For five months she and Dick traveled the western states in a 25-foot motor home running area capital campaigns for Dick's job as Bucknell's Associate Director of Development and doing much sightseeing. Just after their return Agnes visited their home on the banks of the Susquehanna, and, needless to say, they are still quite busy dedecorating, although fortunately relatively little was lost. The Allens spent much time on the race circuit—Dick driving a Formula Ford and Bridget writing of their adventures for local press and radio. They spent some time with Betsy Unangst while indulging in their new hobby of photography.

Janie Lanigan, now a children's wear buyer for Lansburgh's Department Store in Washington, D.C., is pleased with her move from New York City as she finds a more relaxed and pleasant atmosphere in Washington. Janie shares quarters with Marty Wilson, who is still working for the art gallery in Georgetown.

Linda Lanius Tomlins and family are looking forward to Jack's next sabbatical in a year, when they will travel to Florida where Jack will study Hebrew in the new Judaic studies program of the University of Miami, and then the Tomlins will travel to Spain and Portugal in the summer.

Another exciting letter came from Julie Mamolen who has returned from two years in Europe where she worked for an organization assisting people wishing to emigrate. Julie then spent several months traveling across Europe, through Yugoslavia, Greece, and Turkey, and on to Afghanistan and Pakistan. Since returning, Julie has been trying to write of her experiences while looking for a job in the Boston area, catching up on her reading, and renewing old friendships.

Ann McClure Hall is kept busy with two young sons and has taken up tennis seriously, expecting to be a "respectable" player by the summer. Jack is now a junior partner in the law firm where he is a busy trial lawyer. Jenia Royster Brown visited Ann while on a visit to Pittsburgh last spring.

Your reporter spent a fairly calm year—holding the same job, getting a bit more redecorating done, and working in the yard. I spent some time helping my parents clean up after Agnes and have gotten a bit more involved in alumnae affairs.

Mary reporting:

I must say I am quite upset with all of you who did not answer . . . every year people complain about the form for class news stifling their creativity. This year, with no form to return, most of you didn't bother to send ANY news.

Connie Morey Perrucci wrote to say that her family is getting older all the time. The family has welcomed a Siamese who rounds out the group.

Pat Orleans Siegel traveled across the USA and back in a Winnebago. She has been a "girl Friday" for her husband, who is again involved with lobster boats and other interesting ventures.

Patti Papp Bremen is back in the Boston area—lucky girl. After Sid received his MBA from Pitt last year, he decided that he did not want a career with an automobile dealership and accepted a position with Lybrand, Ross Bros. and Montgomery. So the Bremens landed back in the Boston area not far from Janie Toby Eden and her husband Mike. They see Francie Darr Alely and Tom. Patti admits that she and Sid are doting parents!

Janice Paterson wrote from sunny Florida. This past fall she went to Miami-Dade Junior College to "plan and implement a Fashion Merchandising Program. Talk about an offer you can't refuse! The combination of academic challenge and winter sunshine just couldn't be ignored." Sounds exciting . . . I wonder, though, if Janice will have ANOTHER new address again next year.

Jinny Powell Hargrave and Ron have returned to the States. She reports that Ron is adjusting well, he is "even used to our beer now." They found time for a jaunt to Florida and Texas to show Ron a bit of the states. Jinny finds time, after caring for their 1½ year old son, to teach pottery classes two evenings a week. She reports that the wandering Julie Mamolen stopped in for a visit.

Politics keeps Marsha Richards Bingler busy as usual. She is the Finance Chairman for the League of Women Voters, Allegheny County Council. John is "busy working on a non-partisan City Government Study Commission. He was elected Chairman—so he is extra busy. They have a year to study and recommend changes in the City Charter." The Bingle's two children also manage to keep Marsha busy.

Congratulations to Barbara Schneider on her engagement. Dick is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and has a master's degree from M.I.T. Although they haven't set a definite date, Barb and Dick think a summer wedding would be nice. Dick is a navy fighter pilot who is assigned to a tour of duty in the Pittsburgh area for the next few years. Barb reports she is trying to find a permanent job in the Pittsburgh area. Meanwhile she works part-time as a Kelly Girl.

This has been an eventful year for your reporter. We started the year by finishing a trip to Europe. In April, David finished his Ph.D. thesis—I got to type it! Two days after he had his orals, the movers were at our door. David is now working for General Motors Research Labs near Detroit . . . and we still drive a Saab. They love us. We have become very active in our small town's chapter of American Field Service, and I am Bulletin Editor for the local League of Women Voters. During the summer I worked part-time in a local bookstore . . . very educational. I have found a full-time job as Head of Reference/Interloan at the Wayne County Federated Library System. I drive 42 miles just to get there, but the pay is good! The best thing about this part of Michigan is that my "old" roommate, Beverly Miller Blessinger, and her husband Ken live about 20 miles north of us. We see them regularly . . . just like old times. We are also taking craft courses at Greenfield Village; David has learned how to repair and refinish clocks and their cases, and I have learned(?) how to arrange and collect dried flowers, and am working on the family crest in needlepoint.

Beverly reporting:

Judging from your responses this year, the class of 1965 is busy being mommies. Perhaps some who did not reply are actively engaged in professional work or perhaps these are just the years when many in the class have pre-school children, but staying at home with the toddlers appeared to be a popular activity this year.

Ronya Sieg McMillen writes that she and her family are enjoying Shaker Heights, where they have now been living for one year. Ronya worked on the Alumnae Fund drive during the past few months and enjoyed talking with old college friends.

Rina Sigal Segal sends greetings and reports the birth of her daughter, Lila.

Jan Simpson Prescott comments that there is nothing really new this year; she is going to school at Pitt.

Jill Squire Popish sounds like a contented mother. She reports that she is happy doing all the things that mothers of toddlers do; she plays a lot of "Candyland" and "Cootie" and pushes a lot of swings. Thea is now four and Daniel is eighteen months. Jill is also helping the Temple Sisterhood. Paul, a pediatrician, is working on a board, trying to do something about child abuse in their area.

Pam Stirba Russell took advantage of Miami being the Convention City and applied for a volunteer job. As a driver for the Republican VIPs, she was assigned to Louise Gore, the ambassador to UNESCO and newly elected national committeewoman from Maryland. Pam enjoyed the experience even in as controlled a convention as the Republican one was. In the autumn, Bill and Pam spent a week in Spain and Portugal. Pam writes that she still can not get over seeing so many castles in the middle of nowhere.

Ginny Stretton Smith is continuing to substitute teach this year and her husband Doug is still in residential building. Dougie Jr. is a live-wire at two and a half. Living in the country, Ginny and family are experimenting with the "back to the land" lifestyle. Besides their usual big vegetable garden, they have added two goats and about twenty-five rabbits to their "homestead."

Tina Swansen Cummings joyfully writes that she has been busy being happy as a mother and wife. "There is such satisfaction in watching a husband grow and attain the business and personal goals he is after and watching a five-year-old son and a four-year-old daughter grow, both as two independent individuals and as two close friends." This year has been filled with car pooling, taking youngsters to parks, field trips; Tina finds all of this "great."

Lynne Swartz Jacobson is keeping busy with Larry, now four and in nursery school, and with Teddi, two years and into everything. Blair is still studying, working hard and should complete his C.L.U. in June. They plan to go to Mexico this summer. Lynne says that she is still a "knitting nut" and loves to make things for the children.

Ellen Tilles Weil had brief but important news to report this year: she had a baby girl in March.

Jane Tobey Eden writes that it is wonderful to have an infant in the home again. It is especially fun watching three-year-old Jeff as he gets acquainted with his brother. Mike has been very busy with Polaroid's latest project. Jane enjoys having the Bremans (Patti Papp) and the Aleys (Francie Darr) in the area.

Jane Tremble Baumann writes of renovating their home and returning to college for her B.A. in political science. One child "attends college" with her; one goes to a local babysitter; and, one fends for herself after school. Jane says that it is fun for all of them and has become essential for her.

Betsy Unangst remarks that she has "absolutely no news, but that no news is generally good news." Life has been basically quite pleasant and busy for Betsy this past year.

Susie Vansant Bartz writes that she has been nursing the baby, baking bread, building onto their house, and hiking. But what she has really been waiting to do is to get out her potter's wheel!

Ingrid Von Dattan Detweiler has joined the League of Women Voters in Holden, and is observing the Holden Selectmen meetings for the League. Ingrid is finding it a fascinating way to familiarize herself with the workings of local government. Sean, now an active eighteen-month-old, is also keeping Ingrid busy. Ingrid lives only ten minutes from Becky Bennett Wallace and has seen her a couple of times.

Marcia Webb Buxton recently moved into a small house in Kirkland, which overlooks the northern end of Lake Washington. She enjoys being a housewife and tending both her rose garden and bonsai forest. Tom is busy working out the special financial arrangements needed to help foreign countries buy Boeing Company airplanes.

Diana Wirsig Gerrity is now legally Diana Newell Rowan. Newell is her suffragette Methodist grandmother's maiden name and Rowan is taken from Irish mythology. Two years ago, after leaving her editing job at the Atlantic Monthly, her corporation president husband, and the general Beacon Hill Boston atmosphere, Diana traveled in Ireland, France North Africa and Italy. She lived for awhile in Ireland and England, and started to write her own things again. Last summer, she worked in a ghetto area of Boston, writing a case study on a community anti-crime project. She did some reporting for Time magazine and public relations writing for a new experimental school in Boston. Diana is now doing research writing on projects in various cities for a Boston-based consulting firm. She is going back to Paris in March. Her plans are to spend the summer wherever the writing mood strikes.

This year, Ken and I have continued to enjoy ourselves. Ken is still teaching high school English and I am still a reading consultant. We are avid hockey fans, enjoy traveling, particularly during our summer vacation, and like to entertain close friends. We get together frequently with Mary Krein Howarth, now a fellow Michigianian.

booky reporting:

Penny Anderson Gladwell, Dave and Jennifer have moved to the country and greatly enjoy being close to nature. Dave has been promoted to Assistant to the General Manager of Computer Science and Services of Ashland Oil and is currently pursuing his MBA at West Virginia College Graduate Studies. Penny had a children's story published in the December 1972 issue of Children's Playmate entitled "The One and Only Christmas Ghost." Penny is tutoring in reading, attends a Bible Study group, is part of a prayer group, and she and Dave are still active with South Fellowship.

Heather Bastow Weiss is dividing her time between the preparation of her qualifying paper on women's labor force participation and the Center for the Study of Public Policy's alternative child-rearing study. She requests that members of the extended Chatham community who are trying out play groups, communal living arrangements with shared child-rearing, day care centers, or any other method to divide child-rearing responsibilities to facilitate working contact her. Heather has become a member of the editorial board of the Harvard Educational Review; her husband John is with Harvard's history department.

Maggie Berman Guzinsky has joined the ranks of full-time mothers with the birth of Hal and is never been happier. Bonnie Birks O'Connell reports that Tom has accepted a new job with Matt and Whitney Aircraft in West Palm Beach, Florida. They'll be moving as soon as they find a house and someone to sub-lease their Pittsburgh apartment.

Bev Blazey Palmer drives each day from her home on the outskirts of Los Angeles to UCLA where she is analyzing data and writing articles for the children's health research project for which she has been the psychologist for the past two years. Because of her interest in community psychology she is supervising graduate students in community psychology at California State University, Long Beach and the California School of Professional Psychology. Bev and Richard, who is completing his residency in psychiatry, still work fulltime at the Harbor Free Clinic.

Barbara Buxton Van Sciver is helping to organize the National Figure Skating Championships which are scheduled to be held in Providence, R.I. in February, 1974. Her husband Stephen is Assistant Vice President and Principal with Anasett Corp., an investment management and advisory firm.

Betsy Crone, still with Matt Reese and Associates, a political consulting firm, has spent a hectic election year working on a variety of campaigns from a gubernatorial race in Puerto Rico to a fund raising program in Southern California. After all her traveling she finds Washington relaxing.

Zayde Dotts Antrim is working for Planned Parenthood and is teaching Human Growth and Development at two Richmond high schools. Mary Anton Fosler divides her time between caring for Michael and writing/illustrating children's books. She and Scott had a visit from Vivian Lowery Perryck, her husband Dennis, and their son David. Lolly is active in producing African art materials for 5th, 6th, and 7th grade curricula.

Jo Ann Eustace Walther is entering her sixth year of teaching English at Cambridge High. Fred is about to be released from the Air Force and evaluating job offers in the Boston area. If things go according to plan, they will begin house hunting very soon. Lenore Fellner Lessall, Kenneth, and Matthew have moved to a new home in London's Kensington area. Kenneth is Vice President in charge of European Operations for Glemby International.

As for me, I changed jobs the first of the year to take a position as an Associate Consultant with Advanced Systems Associates, Inc., a management consulting firm in Wellesley, Mass. Since then I've been traveling to exotic places like Tulsa, Oklahoma. Philip has completed his course work, passed his qualifying oral exams in December and is now preparing his dissertation topic. This summer we were visited by Iris Raskin Snyder and her husband Al after their trip to Europe.

Jo reporting:

Janet Washburn Grana came right out and said it, "I seem to have found myself this year" but the same thought echoed from most of the letters I received from alumnae this year.

Motherhood is being experienced by Bobbi Subow Greene, Jane Weigel Hubley and most recently, Judy Siegel Sweet. While Judy may be returning to her job at the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration within the next few months, it will be on a part-time basis, giving her time to enjoy her new role. Her husband, Dick, is a tax specialist with the IRS and is working on a master's degree in tax law.

Bobbi has her hands full with just-about-walking Shelby, the Philadelphia Chatham Alumnae Club, and European traveling. She wrote that on New Year's Eve, she and Fred cruised down the Seine in a glass-enclosed boat. Sounds beautiful! Bobbi and Ann Greenhouse Klein '66 have been arranging a spring seminar for prospective students in the Philadelphia area; it will center on a theme of "role models," and Bobbi has been talking with area alumnae on their current roles in an attempt to arrange for some of them to speak to the prospective students.

Jane Weigel Hubley's life got very hectic last summer when she somehow managed to move into a new house, wind up her job and give birth to a baby girl within a two-month period. She is now a "full-time mother" and enjoys watching Karen grow and develop.

Still very much thrilled by their careers, and they have jobs which sound fascinating, are Susan Whitfield and Evi Tamm Metcalf. I don't know how either of them finds the time for everything they do. Susan's love for horse racing came in handy last summer when she was asked to serve as a staff member of the Governor's Commission to Study the Future of Horse Racing. The commission was established to study the ills befalling the racing industry and particularly to determine the effect of off-track betting. When the study is concluded, Susan will return to the management unit of the New York State Division of the Budget for another assignment in one of the problem areas confronting either the legislative or executive branch of the state government. In her spare time, she is taking courses in auto mechanics and German, playing tennis, going to the Health Spa, dating and, of course, going to the races!

Evi, another sports fan, shares season tickets to Pittsburgh Steelers and Pittsburgh Penguins home games with husband Jack. In the summer, she devotes much time to golf and tennis. She works as ticket manager and director of customer relations for the Penguins (a good thing to know when you want tickets to a home ice hockey game). Also, Evi learned to drive a car, which she considers one of her greatest experiences.

Janet Walker and Mary Schlitt Kostalos are teaching. Janet is in her third year at Chatham, teaching French. She also continues to work on her Ph.D. thesis on 18th century French literature. Mary hopes to begin teaching on the college level in September. This year she is at Ellis School, teaching seventh grade life science, tenth grade biology and ecology.

Two alumnae who enjoyed the snowy storms of North Carolina this past winter are Sandy Stewart Shasby and Carol Swenson Foss. Swens is chasing toddling Eddie around the house and, as I well know, is in a stage of motherhood which is very demanding. By the way, for do-it-yourselfers, Swens attributes the secret of instant decorating success to wallpaper and likes the "easy" change wallpaper makes.

Sandy sends word that Mike's studies at medical school end this year, and they are anxious to learn where he will serve his internship.

Marty Sebastian Moyer is very involved in volunteer work in and around her adopted hometown, Dobbs Ferry, N.Y. She works in a local women's prison as a volunteer and is starting a lower Westchester County chapter of NOW. In addition, Marty and George have taken up cross-country skiing. Last spring they took their hiking boots to Europe and saw much of the continent, including a gypsy festival in southern France. Marty would like to pose these questions for class consideration: Why are we listed by our husband's name in class mailings, and would alumnae who want three or more children reconsider their plans in light of the earth's over population problem?

A week's vacation on Nantucket last summer was just what the doctor ordered, according to Janet Washburn Grana. She visited there with Dara Murphy and really "got away from it all." Janet's been very reflective this year and has begun to piece together who she is. As I said before, it sounds like most of us have done the same thing. It isn't that we are "in a rut," as some-or-all of us might think at one time or the other. Instead I think that our roles have become established or at least foreseeable. We know, if we are ever going to know, who we are and what we want to give to and to get from life.

I, for example, am a lawyer's wife (and that is a significant role; have you ever eaten dinner with a man who weighs every word you utter?) and a demanding mother. Poor Jake can only say three words, but he sure does know how to "put that back" and let's go in the car." My career will probably be resumed on a part-time basis in a couple of years, since my husband and I recently became associated with his father's law firm in Williamsport. It will be great to see what I can handle professionally.

May I add that during the past two years, two alumnae have reported to me that they are expecting babies. The Recorder has a policy which excludes such news in the event something tragically would go wrong with the pregnancy. I agree with the policy and hope that you who have been directly affected by it see its merit and understand why such news cannot be included until after the birth of the baby.

Until next year, I wish you all a good 1973, full of excitement, happiness and relaxation.

(Editor's note: If the news of the class of 1967 seems skimpy, it is! Carol Mason, thanks to the vagaries of the U.S. Postal Service, did not receive her part of the class list to solicit for news until too late to do anything about it. No information at all was received from Elizabeth Claytor or Tegner McAteer Stokes.)

Lois reporting:

It seems that each year my section of the class is more scattered over the world than the year before. Bobbi Franklin McKenna is currently spending a year in South Korea courtesy of the U.S. Army. While enjoying a Korean house "which looks like something out of a movie set," she's wondering how one year old Jaimy will react to such conveniences as indoor plumbing when they return to the states in May. Bobbi's planning on going to grad school next year, but is still at the mercy in terms of Bob's reassignment so isn't sure where she'll resume her studies.

In another corner of the world, Risa Ellovich is spending the year in Africa doing field work for her doctoral dissertation. Ginger Getman is back from her stay in Africa with the Peace Corps. She returned from Sierra Leone in summer '71, spent a year traveling around to New England college campuses recruiting for the Peace Corps and Vista and is now with the Teacher Corps, teaching at a bilingual kindergarten in San Antonio and commuting eighty miles to Austin once a week for courses at the University of Texas. She writes of exciting and rewarding experiences with her 50% black and 50% Chicano students, particularly a current venture with the kids taking photographs with her camera and with some help producing their own prints in the darkroom.

Jackie Emery Flynn is still in California, but has moved into a new house. She's on maternity leave from her teaching job and after being a "lady of leisure" for a few months is now busy with her newborn daughter. As an Air Force Judge Advocate, husband Ned is now editing a book dealing with the legal problems of POW/MIA's and their families.

Also taking a break from teaching is Jane DeLucia Simms. Differentiated staffing has been introduced in her school system which eliminated her half-a-day position. She says she was disappointed, but is keeping busy with her inquisitive two year old and new baby. She and Richard are looking forward to the summer when they plan to continue spending every free weekend and vacation time exploring the U.S. in their truck-camper.

Congratulations to Judy Drooz Yoffie who has passed the Delaware and Washington, D.C. bar exams. After having the opportunity to clerk for the Superior and Chancery Courts of Delaware, in June she will become a Deputy Attorney General for the State of Delaware. Her husband Alan is currently an Assistant U.S. Attorney. Jody says they both enjoy their work and that in their spare time they've been antique hunting and collecting.

Jennifer Gearhart Grason has taken on an exciting new responsibility as Chairperson of the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary Task Force on Women. This group will be working to have women accepted by the seminary community as candidates for the ministry rather than just as students there for their "intellectual enlightenment." Jennifer continues as periodicals librarian at the Seminary. She and her husband spend their leisure time putting their "personal stamp" on their new six bedroom house.

A brief note from Evelyn Goldsmith Kitay says that she loves her new job working as a paralegal at the law firm of Covington and Burling. She also loves Washington.

Biri Fay continues to combine grad school and full time work at the Brooklyn Museum. Her work took her to Mexico City for museum conferences and to Europe for study and museum business this past summer.

I understand that another section of the Recorder will cover the activities of poetess Andrea Dubs Moorhead. She writes that her husband Robert is now teaching sculpture at Union College and currently has a one man show at the Schenectady Museum.

My busy year centered mainly around serving as Volunteer Coordinator for the McGovern campaign in our county and becoming a new mother. I also managed to fit in some work on our anti-war congressman's unsuccessful bid for re-election, volunteer work for Planned Parenthood and activity with Right to Choose, a group concerned with saving New York's liberal abortion. Somewhere in there we also managed to m... Thanks to all those who responded to my... for news. Wishes to all for a lasting peace.

Barb reporting:

New babies, interesting jobs, and grad study seem to be the most common news it this year.

Ann Judson Ratcliffe is teaching eighth grade English while working on her master's in secondary education at George Washington University. Temple is still in the Coast Guard. Ann hopes to complete her master's this summer. Congratulations, Ann.

Another dedicated student is Sally Hamilton. Sally has completed her master's in German, is now working on her Ph.D. Sally writes Lynn Osterloh visited her in Germany last year and that she spoke to Kay Camage while en route to Hawaii for Christmas.

Other members of our "group" have new jobs. June Marshall Werrin is teaching English in Belgium. Ron is a medical student there. Mary H. Deitch is presently teaching at the Learning Resource Center at Bonsall School, Bonsall, California. Mary's new husband is in the Navy, working at the Naval Drug Rehabilitation center. I wishes to Mary and Harry. Congratulations to Marion Lefebvre Burge and new husband Christopher.

Mimi Majewski has a new position as Secretary Programmer at New England Merchants National Bank. Before starting her new job, Mimi traveled in Scandinavia and visited London. Mimi has a new family. Nancy White Dixon and her family, and Jane DeLucia Simms and her family at Christchurch. Marion Lefebvre Burge and husband Christopher will be moving to New York City in the near spring. Christopher has just been made Director of Modern Paintings for Christie's in the United States. Joyce Kass Eisenstein writes that Bob is finishing his internship at North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

The joys of, and the change of lifestyle brought on by, motherhood seem to be occupying the minds of Bonnie Lombardo Ilch and Harriet K. Bachman. Congratulations to them, and to Eleanor Levinson Peris, who is now the mother of four little boys.

Holly Meck Hunsicker is now working as an advertising writer for an agency in Norfolk, Virginia, their fifth move in 2 1/2 years. Dennis is out of the Navy in a few months and then plans to work on his master's in music. When he finishes Holly would like to go back to school—just for fun, she says.

Greetings come from Diane Himes Ambrose who will complete her master's degree in Library Science in June.

The Platz family has moved again. Joe is presently establishing a pharmacy in the expanding Lewis County General Hospital. While enjoying being the mother of 1 1/2 and 3 1/2 year old boys, I decided that I was vegetating, so I am presently the bacteriologist at our area hospital. At the moment we're house-hunting. We're the heart of ski country, and we welcome anyone who wants to visit.

That's all for this year. Thanks to all who answered the questionnaire. My best to everyone.

Merle reporting:

Again this year there are "comings and goings" from Europe. Kathy Perrone Van Wassen, and Beth are living in Germany for three months. Wheelabrator-Frye's air pollution division asked Bob to serve in a liaison capacity with a "silica plant" in Frankfurt. The Van Wassen's week-end excursions to neighboring countries more than compensate for the difficulties they are having in setting up housekeeping. Ann Rosch Duffield is back in the States after two and a half years in England. Her sculptor husband, Tim, has decided to put his art into the environment. The Duffields are in Philadelphia where Tim is working on an M.L.A. in Landscape Architecture at the University of Pennsylvania. Ann is very busy working as the sole technical writer for Moore School of Engineering at Penn, doing freelance writing—currently, working on an environmental study for several professors at Penn, caring for her two stepsons, Timon, 11 and Thomas, 7.

Greetings come from Jean Robinson Anderson

ean is teaching kindergarten in White Plains and loves it. Bob is in his third year at Columbia Dental School. Lucky Bob! Only one year to go! There are new students among us this year. Kathy Randall began as a graduate student and teaching assistant in the Department of Speech and Theater Arts at Pitt in September, 1972, after spending the summer camping in her Starcraft tent-trailer. Kathy is still raising and showing miniature poodles. Ann Posner Fox is back in school getting certification to teach high school social studies. Art is in his last year of medical school so now the Foxes are anxiously awaiting April when they will find out where he will be attending.

Alison Oakes has just returned from Chatham where she was a visitor at a seminar on "Women Today." Still living in Chicago, Alison is at the same job—consultant for Development Youth services at the Y.W.C.A.

Helen Pollock Starr is leaving Chicago. In early March she is transferring to EPA's New York City office. She does not have her new address yet but her business phone is 264-2515.

After a several issues' absence, Judy Rogoff has resurfaced as Judy Katz. Judy's husband, Jim, is a Wharton graduate and a New England shoe manufacturer. They live in Boston. Judy saw Laurie Gould Grad at a mutual friend's wedding in September. Skiing occupies a good deal of Judy and Jim's time in the winter. It must be nice to live somewhere that has snow this winter. New York has had no snow so we have done very little skiing.

Ellen Newman Edelstein also has a "no snow" problem. Ellen and Aaron ski but there hasn't been much skiing in the Pittsburgh area either. Ellen is still with the Veterans Administration and occasionally sees Diane Himes Ambrose, as Don Ambrose works in Ellen's office.

This year has been an interesting year for the partners. Richard left his job with Price Waterhouse in April because he decided one day that he hated public accounting. In July, Richard went to work for the New York City Bureau of the Budget. That lasted until December when Richard joined the ranks of corporate executives of R. H. Macy's and plans to stay there for at least a couple of years. My days are spent helping Scott make the transition from baby to little boy. I thought it was difficult being a mother to an infant—boy! did I have a lot to learn. I spend my free minutes reading advertisements for houses and perusing graduate bulletins. Both efforts seem to be rather fruitless. We cannot decide where we want to live and I have not found a program that excites me.

Those of you who did not respond this year—you can always send the post cards back early or next year!

Dottie reporting:

Hearing from those who replied was certainly appreciated. It gives me some copy to fill in the "Dottie reporting" space and it's fun to hear what's happening anyway! Most people have been in grad school, now they are reporting completion of degrees, new jobs, and family life.

Kathy Williams Myerburg, Sue Trees Juliano, and Faye Singer Rosch send greetings while extolling the virtues of home life. Kathy is enjoying her new role as a mother while Rick continues to work for the John Wanamaker Department Store. Faye and Jeff plan to be in Pittsburgh at least one more year while Jeff completes his internship at Children's Hospital. Sue and Jim have a new home which they have been decorating.

Ann Turnock visited the States for the first time in two and one half years last June, then returned for her sister's wedding in February. She visited with Kathy Cochrane. Back in Colombia she's head of the foreign language department at her school.

Lynn Stewart received her M.A. in English in May of 1972 from John Carroll University, plans to begin law school this fall at night, and enjoys a new job as a claims representative for the Transamerica Insurance Group.

Laura Weill Brown and Jack are quite pleased with their active life, constantly on the go—playing tennis, traveling, and taking advantage of NYC's extensive repertoire of events. Laura teaches French and really likes it.

Bette Wallenhorst Kellam has a job in training and employee development for estate and business planning. Her husband, Fred, is with Texaco.

April Wooden Salada and Gary are enjoying living in Pittsburgh and often see Chatham girls at the symphony. They bought some land in Colorado and are planning a vacation there this summer.

Mary Siltan is venturing out west and will be looking for a new job in the vicinity of Manhattan Beach, California. She previously worked for Harper's Bazaar Magazine in New York.

My apologies go to Kathy Wright Mueller and her husband, Donald. Somehow, a correct first name for him is repeatedly overlooked. Donald is finishing his Ph.D. in organic chemistry this summer. Kathy completed her M.S. last June in micro-biology. She is a research assistant in the department of dairy science at the University of Illinois. They visited Europe last summer and had a "fantastic" time. Kathy reports that Joyce Kass Eisenberg and Barry are living in North Carolina where he is interning.

Marsha Weiss Bramovitz is doing paralegal work in corporate securities for a L.A. law firm. She received her M.A.T. in history from the University of Chicago. Alan is a fellow in cardiology at the UCLA Medical Center. They were married in Pittsburgh with Connie Weiss Sukernek, Merle Pollack Intner, and Gail Hart in attendance, a regular Chatham reunion!

To round out my reporting section, I'd better report my own news. My Ph.D. only lacks its dissertation for which I already have a topic. Hope to finish at the end of this year. Just accepted a full time position as Coordinator of Evaluation for Follow Through at the Learning Research and Development Center of the University of Pittsburgh. Follow Through is a federally funded program fed into by former Headstart students. It's quite an exciting endeavor. Hope to hear from more of you next year. Have a good year!

No 1969 class news was received from Susan Brown Weeks.

Nelle reporting:

Three classmates in my group are in law school. Diane Berman is a second year student at the University of Pittsburgh. Debbie Buchdahl Bacharach works with Congressman Clarence D. Long at his district office in Baltimore and goes to the University of Maryland Law School at night. Rosemary Gross Rubin attends the University of Akron School of Law. In addition, she teaches third grade at Temple Israel Religious School in Canton and is leader of a youth group at the Jewish Center. Rosemary's husband, Bob, is an attorney and works part-time for the City Solicitor in Canton.

Paula Ambler Kavchak is giving piano lessons. She says, "A Chatham education does pay!"

Betsy Aufderheide got her M.A. in German from Penn State last December. She is currently teaching German and Spanish at Carrick High.

After finishing their work with VISTA, Sue Belkin Glaser and Richard made a trip to San Francisco, where they visited with Hinda Kattrosser Kimmel and Kitty Alport. Back home in Cleveland, Sue is teaching trainable mental retardates, and Richard is an accountant.

Robin Bernstein Roth is Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of Personnel for Governor Shapp of Pennsylvania. Her husband, Barry, is Assistant Counsel for the state Department of Public Welfare. Robin reported that Debbie Lamm was a bridesmaid in her wedding last September. She also said that she has heard from Leonard Friedman (ex-Chatham French professor), who is the proud father of a little girl.

Debi Block Rubin and Fred share a 12-room, 150-year-old farm house with friends in Hershey, Pennsylvania. When I heard from Debi in February, the sheep which her landlord keeps were having babies—a pretty amazing thing for a city girl to witness. Debi is in charge of an occupational therapy shop at a state mental hospital near Hershey. In addition, she is a board member of the Harrisburg Free Clinic, which Fred was instrumental in setting up.

Marno Doczy is still a 4th grade teacher in the Baldwin-Whitehall area of Pittsburgh. She is soon to enter a master's program in elementary education at the University of Connecticut.

Peggy Evans is soon to be a Master of Music. She's working toward her M.M. at the University of Michigan, concentrating on the organ. Peggy is also the organist at a small Methodist church.

Vicki Falco is the Assistant Director of Admissions at the Community College of Allegheny County in Pittsburgh. She is also studying part-time for an M.Ed. at the University of Pittsburgh, with an emphasis on Higher Education, Student Affairs. Vicki is still active in the theater. She is currently working with a community group called the Colonial Manor Theater.

Sue Gilchrist is living in St. Louis. She said that Katrine Geha Kinn '70 is also there, and that the two of them get together every so often. Sue plans to enter architecture school in the fall.

Carolyn Olbum teaches ceramics part-time at the Arts and Crafts Center in Pittsburgh. She also does ceramic designs in her studio.

Betsy Hennings is in the first year of a master's program in Art History at Penn State. This coming summer, she, Mary Hennings, and Lisa Wanderman plan to go to camp together—as counselors, mind you.

As for those of us living in the last colony—well, I hardly know where to begin. I'm sharing an apartment with Deborah Patton. Deborah works at the main Government VD clinic (all cases confidential). She says, "It's something to do until I decide what I'm going to do when I grow up." To keep her sanity, Deborah does volunteer work at the Washington Free Clinic, where Federal bureaucracy and VD aren't the only things she has to deal with. Prue Merton has an apartment not far from us. She is a sales assistant with a land title insurance company. Prue says she wishes she were living in a commune in North Carolina, or California, or Vermont. . . . Sallie Heidenreich Webster and Andy live just outside of Washington. Both of them work at the Armed Forces Radiobiology Research Institute. (Andy is finishing a two-year stint with the Army.) By the time you read this ditty, Sallie and Andy will be off traveling in Europe (sigh).

We all saw Gloria Frei-Kim when she and Willie came from Venezuela for the Christmas holidays. A gang of us (including Della Snyder and Barb Studenmund, who is in the class of '72) went off to the Kennedy Center to a sing-along of Handel's Messiah. The last I heard, Gloria and Willie were on their way to Switzerland, where Gloria plans to study music under a famous woman conductor.

I just found out that Nina Blum is in the Washington area. She had been in Israel for quite a while, teaching English as a foreign language. She is now taking courses at George Washington University, and is waiting to hear from graduate schools in Marine Biology.

I went to Jan McGiffert Uehlinger's wedding last June. She was a gorgeous bride. She and Gerry live in nearby Baltimore, but the gang here doesn't get to see them much. They both keep quite busy with their studies. Jan is pursuing her M.S.W. and Gerry is in law school.

Chris reporting:

Hello . . . hello! Thank you to all of you who sent news and/or money for the class treasury. First of all, news from the teaching contingent of our class: Maggie Lyson received her master's degree from Duquesne University and is now teaching chemistry at South Hills High School. In addition, she teaches classes in physical education and swimming at Kingsley House in East Liberty. Free-lance photography occupies her spare time. It was really great to hear from Sherry Joseph. Sherry took a leave of absence from her studies in French literature at Indiana University in Bloomington because of poor health, but plans to return. In the interim, she is awaiting word about a substitute teaching job. We all hope you are feeling fine now, Sherry! Ellen Jackson Diamond completed requirements for a master's degree in education in December and is teaching kindergarten at Northview Heights Elementary School. Ellie's husband, Mark, is in his second year at Pitt Medical School. Joan Klopp Roy is still substitute teaching in German and French, primarily, at the junior high and high school levels and has also begun work on a master's degree in German at Kent State, where her husband, Byron, is also completing a degree.

Lorna Kent wrote from Florida, where she is entering her fourth semester in law school. Last summer she worked with ACLU to organize legal observer programs for both political conventions. She's still working with ACLU as well as clerking for a Miami firm. Lorna is planning a trip to Europe this summer to visit friends—she invites anyone traveling south to visit her. Cynthia Linhart Williams is completing her master's degree and starting doctorate work in Educational Research at Pitt. She presented a paper at the National Council on Measurement in Education convention, in New Orleans in February. Cyn and Todd are still dorm parents in Pelletreau. Jo LeVan is completing a master's degree in epidemiology at Pitt. Suzanne Maloof is in her fifth semester of nursing, doing public health and psychiatric nursing; she will graduate in August. Suzanne plans on moving to Boston to begin work as a staff nurse.

Jan McGiffert Uehlinger will receive her master's degree in social work in June from the University of Maryland, where Gerry is in law school. Frank and Diane Reilly, Andy and Sallie Webster, Nina Pahl, Nelle Sandridge, and Lynne Stauffer attended Jan and Gerry's wedding in Easton, Penna. last June.

Lael McGuigan Pritchard is looking for a job in the Philadelphia area, and I imagine she's busy now taking care of her one-year old son. Gail Lawson Campbell also chases after a one year old son, and she and her husband, Bruce, have just settled into a new house.

I am starting work on my thesis in audiology at Pitt, and I should have my degree in August. Gerrian Miller is in one of my classes. Gerrian received her undergraduate degree from F and M, and completed a master's degree in Maternal and Child Health from Pitt and is presently in the doctoral program in speech pathology at Pitt. I would especially like to hear from Marilyn Scaranino Jones, whose address I have misplaced, and whose wedding present is almost one year late.

Barbara reporting:

Perhaps the world news of this January, February 1973 have been so overwhelming to us that we do not consider the personal events of 1972 important enough to be reported to the Alumnae Recorder. The fact of the matter is that the response to this reporter's questionnaire was disappointingly very limited. I would like to thank all of you who responded, and ask the others to do so next year.

Mary Ann Shannon is really enjoying her second year at Temple University Medical School, which is keeping her quite busy, and she is looking forward to getting out of the classrooms and into the hospital clinics.

Lin Sigg spent a very pleasant Christmas vacation in St. Croix, and reports that for anyone who loves the sun, the sand, and the classroom, teaching jobs are in abundance throughout the Virgin Islands.

Beverly Swishelm has visions of being a permanent student. Apparently, she is enjoying her studies thoroughly, and she is pursuing her interests in angular momentum and in kinetics. Christmas visit with Peggy Evans and Dena Loscoski Boxler ('70) recalled some Chatham memories.

Nancy Vaughan is doing something quite unusual this year—she is teaching second year students in a non-graded primary school program in Millville, New Jersey.

Judy Weisenfeld Weinberg and husband Lee will be finishing up their stint as houseparents to 150 girls this June, and will be moving to Pittsburgh where they have already purchased a house in Squirrel Hill. Needless to say, they are looking forward to that very much. Lee is finishing up a Ph.D. in political science, and it appears that he too is becoming a permanent student—Lee is starting Pitt Law School this September. Judy will be finishing up a master's degree in education as well as teaching. The Weinbergs spent the summer of 1972 studying and touring Europe. Judy was observing the British Informal Schools in London and in Norwich, where she met with Sheila Rosenbaum ('72) who was also observing the system. Judy and Lee met with Sally Pierce Shaw and husband Dan in Germany where Dan is stationed in the Army. Shaw's apparently have an apartment on a farm where they really enjoy.

Moving right along, from Germany to California we meet Molly Williams Stephens and husband Mark who moved to Berkeley in December, 1971. Molly is working as a medical assistant for a physician, and Mark is doing graduate work at the University of California at Berkeley.

Peggy Yockey Marycz had a very hectic, enjoyable Christmas vacation at which time she married Richard, and subsequently vacationed and relaxed in Bermuda. The wedding was a regular Chatham reunion—Sis Rainka Lieberman, Pat Peterson Reilly, Liz Cotsworth, Kevin Cartwright Cornell '72 and husband Teddy, Lisa Shuman '71 and Phyllis Patrick '73. Mrs. Richman, and Mrs. Morgan were all able to be present. Peggy's roommate from years past, Barbara Broome came in from Boston, and apparently looks marvelous. Peggy and Richard are finishing up their studies at the University of Chicago School of Social Administration, and hope to be employed soon. They often visit with Kevin Cartwright Cornell and Teddy, who are neighbors, and Jo Soisson '72 who is also at the University of Chicago.

As for myself, I am finishing up the basic science education of medical school (University of Pittsburgh) and will be starting the full-time clinical experience this spring. This will be a very long-awaited change and hopefully a very rewarding experience. I enjoyed a dream vacation in Paris and in Spain this past summer. Summer of 1973 will hopefully be spent in Arizona working with the Navajo Indians under the auspices of the U.S. Public Health Service. This past year I spent some very enjoyable days with Jane Scher in late August in Philadelphia. Jane is now at a veterinary school at Penn, and now she is working for a veterinarian. During Thanksgiving vacation, while visiting in Manhattan, Lisa Wanderman and I recalled old times. Lisa looks well and is enjoying New York and graduate work at the N.Y.U. Institute of Fine Arts.

Ciao 'til 1974, and the best to everyone. No 1971 class news was received from Shirley Willard.

Tired of Keeping Your Intellect on the Back Burner?

CHATHAM

COLLEGE

Our new Gateway Program for mature women can offer you the opportunity to complete your undergraduate degree, update your present degree, or begin your studies with an introductory course.

- You will meet other women who may be planning ahead for a future career, building on established interests, or bent on personal enrichment.
- You may wish to start with one course at a time or assume a full-time academic program.

Visit the College for a planning session and learn about the resources available to you, including our recently established Office of Career Planning.

Call: Mrs. Marjorie Weinhold—441-8200, Ext. 218

We are now accepting inquiries for the Spring term (Monday, February 4) and for the Fall term in September.

Chatham College is a small liberal arts college where the individual counts.

Ample, free parking available
Master Charge and Bank Americard

The advertisement above appeared in a number of Pittsburgh area newspapers in January. The response was most enthusiastic. It is reprinted here to inform all Chatham alumnae of the excellent program available on campus for the mature woman who wants to begin, continue or complete her college education and for the benefit of those local alumnae who missed the announcement. As the advertisement states, the Gateway Program is also available for those women who may desire courses only for personal enrichment. A student admitted to the Gateway Program may enroll in her first nine courses at one-half the normal tuition charge. Full tuition will be charged for the final nine courses taken for a degree. Degree candidates may apply for financial aid.

A New Alternative:

The Program

In Communications

MARJORIE W. WEINHOLD is director of the Interim and Gateway Programs as well as instructor in English at Chatham College. She received her B.S. and M.A. degrees from Carnegie-Mellon University.

In the fall of 1974, Chatham plans to introduce a new program in communications, designed as a multidisciplinary major. In a sense, such a program simply institutionalizes something that has been pursued by an increasing number of students over the past several years. Students and their advisers have constructed individualized programs, based on course work drawn from such departments as art, English, drama, and political science, and through such supplementary resources as the Pittsburgh Film Makers Association and cross-registration at other Pittsburgh colleges. These students have gained experience through field placements at television and radio stations, publishing houses, public relations and advertising firms, and in audio-visual communication, and public relations divisions of businesses and social service agencies. A few have graduated by now and are beginning careers in the field. It has become increasingly clear, however, that much might be gained by bringing together the individual experiences to form a unified program.

That students are interested in exploring the field of communications on the undergraduate level, with an eye toward careers or graduate study, is obvious; that there is an established body of discrete knowledge to be mastered in the field is not. In an effort to discover some core of knowledge, several Chatham faculty members engaged in a year-long study, during which they drew upon the backgrounds and experiences of themselves and their colleagues, explored programs at other colleges, and consulted with professionals in the field.

The field of communications is a complex one, certainly defined in almost as many ways as there are persons involved in it. In one way or another, every traditional discipline rightly feels that it is engaged in a study of communication. As an independent, newly emerging discipline in its own right, it receives its thrust from a number of different areas of specialization, ranging from mathematics and computer technology, through linguistics, sociology, psychology, and political science, to drama and the visual arts. One conclusion reached by the faculty study group is that a solid, undergraduate program of study needs to draw upon these specializations, without itself becoming narrowly defined through a single perspective.

A second concern in the development of the program has been for the achievement of a right relationship between the academic context and the marketplace. Questions such as the following have needed to be answered: how does one preserve the philosophy inherent in the liberal arts and, at the same time, provide informed career preparation? how might a conceptual framework be brought to bear on actual experience? what is it that can best be gained in a classroom situation, and what is it that can best be gained elsewhere? what are the minimal skills that a student needs in order to enter the field? to what extent can the task of teaching those skills be delegated to those who know them best, namely, the people currently using them in the field? in short, is it necessary to spend a term on a course entitled "Writing Press Releases," or is it possible for students to learn that skill under the supervision of an expert, through the writing of releases at a public relations firm and, thereby, to retain the classroom for developing the analytical, critical, responsible mind that creates those releases?

Resolutions of these concerns are reflected in the program which the faculty study group has developed. This program is currently being discussed and revised by faculty and students. It remains, of course, subject to full faculty approval and administrative commitment before it becomes an actuality. The description of the program which follows, therefore, is necessarily tentative.

The program in communications aims to develop in each of its students the following: an understanding of the nature and function of language; a sensitivity to the public uses to which language is put and to the differences between those uses and the traditional academic concerns with language; an awareness of the practical professional opportunities in the various areas of communications; experience in the common activities of those areas; and an ability to bring critical and analytical skills to bear upon the field of communications. The substance and the methods of the program emphasize critical judgment rather than vocational training, liberal intelligence rather than technical specialization. The program affirms the belief that a liberal arts background provides the best preparation for any career; at the same time, it acknowledges that experience in the field is vital. Because the possible opportunities are so many and so varied, because the field itself is in a constant state of change, and because women themselves are so subject to change within their own life patterns, the program stresses the fundamental learning which should enable a graduate to enter any of many areas in the field and to change specific occupations several times while remaining in the same general field.

The program aims simultaneously to develop a systematic cooperation between the college and the communications media in the Pittsburgh area for the following purposes: to alert the faculty to the practices, achievements, and current developments in the field; to alert those in the field to the critical and analytical approaches encouraged by the college; and to sustain a more effective and continuing exchange of information, ideas, and work experience between the two. The program hopes to support the same vitality and interest in faculty members and in men and women in communications that the students themselves derive from their own participation in the program.

The program in communications is a tripartite program, composed of a faculty-student component, a student-media component, and a media-faculty component. The three components interact with one another to create a developmental sequence of courses, seminars, symposia, field placements, research, and colloquia.

The faculty-student component begins with an introduction to the multi-faceted nature of the field, and to the fundamental questions important to the field. Students spend observation periods in the field and learn from persons in the media, as well as from faculty. Course work in advanced written exposition, two-dimensional design, and verbal-visual exposition are also required at the beginning of the program. The latter course is designed to include an open laboratory, with instruction in such basic technical skills as polaroid photography, cassette tape recording, and the use of projectors and video-tape equipment. Further requirements include courses in linguistics and in the nature of critical evaluation, problem solving, and decision making, with the aim of developing in the student the necessary critical awareness and depth of understanding from which to make the judgments demanded by her work in the field. Finally, a symposium gathers instructors, senior students engaged in tutorials, and visitors from the media, to discuss topics generated throughout the program and to attempt to put the parts of the individual student's program into an appropriate perspective.

In addition to these core courses, students are expected to choose from selected courses offered throughout the college that bear a direct relationship to the program. Such courses may well reflect particular interests of students in such areas as filmmaking and propaganda. Students are also expected to develop some fluency in a foreign language and to establish a solid liberal arts background by taking courses in all of the divisions of the college.

The second component, the student-media component, brings the student into a participatory relationship with the field. Each student has several field placements, each in a different medium. These placements include discussion meetings with faculty members, students who are concurrently engaged in such placements, and media sponsors. The placements are designed to fulfill several aims: to provide the student with the opportunity to discover whether or not she is seriously interested in the field as a career possibility and, if so, in what areas her interests lie; to enable the student to learn the necessary skills and techniques under the direction of a professional currently engaged in using such techniques; to give the student contacts in the media, evaluations of abilities by professionals, and concrete experience for career advising and for future employment; and to provide practical experience against which to make theoretical judgments. This component also contains the provision for a panel of women and men who work in the field to meet with students several times during each year, in order to discuss the nature and range of career opportunities.

The student-media component obviously relies heavily upon the Office of Career Planning and Field Placement. This office locates and arranges the field placements, matching students with appropriate placements, and it conduct evaluations and maintains student files for career advising and placement. It is also the repository for information on careers in the field, in general, and on the status of women in the field, in particular. It provides counseling on career choices and helps students with the planning of their interviews and applications for positions in the field.

The third component of the program, the faculty-media component, aims to strengthen the relationship between those who are concerned with the academic aspects of communication and those who are involved with its pragmatic applications. The faculty who are teaching in the program will enroll a panel of practitioners to meet with them during the year to advise the college on the strengths and weaknesses of the program and to advise the faculty on the nature of the professions which their students will enter. Such a panel, working with the faculty, will also explore the possibility of an annual colloquium, in which faculty, students, and men and women in the field may explore current issues in communications.

Periodically, as opportunities seem productive, members of the faculty will themselves engage in field placements with one of the organizations sponsoring the student field placements. Such placements might involve working with a member of that organization or doing work of the faculty member's own devising in the context of the sponsoring organization. The college will also bring to the campus members of such organizations to assist in the teaching of courses, to participate in the seminar or symposium, or to aid in the administration of the program.

We have become accustomed to thinking of undergraduate majors almost solely in terms of the programs of the students, and of those programs as occurring primarily in isolation from the marketplace. The program in communications, however, posits that all three of its components are vital to the growth and development of the students, of the faculty, and of the field of communications itself. It is this multiple growth and development that ought to be of major concern in the formation of any such program.

"Louise Brown, The Fact Of The Successful Career Woman."

BY SHERI NASSAR '75

Parts of society will accept the myth of the successful career woman. Dressed in a dated, tailored suit, she spouts only information pertaining to her occupation, for her job is her life. She is efficient and productive, but in a mechanical sort of way. This woman is thought to be a hard-nosed women's libber, who achieves only by manipulating legislation and/or her wiles. Unfortunately, the myth of this woman is a reality. However, the facts are quite different; Louise Royster Brown is a fact.

Ms. Brown, a 1967 Chatham graduate, plays a vital role in Pittsburgh's city government. The first woman administrator appointed by Mayor Peter Flaherty, she is the Director of Parks and Recreation in Pittsburgh. She is aware, vivacious, and talented. It takes only a quick glance at her credentials and a few sentences of conversation to realize that Louise Brown does not fit into any standard mold.

Ms. Brown's success is a result of hard work. Unlike the mythical "successful career woman" who used the power of legislation and femininity to succeed, Ms. Brown relied on her abilities and experiences as elements of her success. After graduation from Chatham as a political science major, she enrolled in the master's program for public administration at the University of Pittsburgh. Early phases of her career included work in the Mayor's office and with the Poverty Program, involvement with the Vocational Rehabilitation Program and the School Board and, most recently, planning director of the Manpower Program. Obviously, Ms. Brown's formal and practical education was extensive.

The duties of Ms. Brown as the Director of the Parks and Recreation Department are diverse and equally demanding. The department is divided into four major areas of city development: the recreation program staff, grounds and buildings, the engineering division and the special buildings division. Ms. Brown directs the functions of the sub-departments. The function of the recreation program staff is to organize the recreation programs carried on throughout the city. The division of grounds and buildings includes management of city forestry and the care of city buildings. Planning new improvements and programs is the function of the engineering division. Finally, the proper utilization of Pittsburgh's special buildings, such as the zoo and the aviary, is the final function of this department.

Ms. Brown is constantly involved with new program proposals and revisions of previously accepted programs. Although her job is demanding of her time and mental energies, she allows time for other people. Her conversation is interesting and interested, a rare quality in a busy person. The mythical "successful career woman," who relies on methods other than her own abilities and is interested only in work, could not efficiently maintain Ms. Brown's position.

When the news of Director Brown's appointment first made the newspapers, many people thought of it instantly as a great stride for the Women's Movement. Newspaper reporters bombarded her with feminist questions. Very few people appeared to be interested in her new duties. The myth of the successful career woman had taken effect. The fact was that Louise Brown thought very little about the effect her womanhood would have on the job or the effect her job would have on her femininity. In either case, a choice between femininity or success was not necessary.

Perhaps this is the key to her success. Rather than preoccupying herself with visions of achievement, she achieves. The reporters who deal solely with feminist questions think in terms of Ms. Brown's image. The myth of the successful career woman deals with images. Both cases of imagery are rejected by the reality of Louise Royster Brown. And that is a fact.

CAST

BY KATHRYN ROBERTS '72

Last summer Georgena Terry, class of 1972, suggested to some of her fellow alumnae, "Why don't we start a summer theatre at Chatham?" Everyone laughed. But the girls (most of whom were theatre majors anyway) wholeheartedly agreed it would be great to have a summer theatre.

Georgena persevered. She got her business mind in gear and drew up a budget proposal complete with flow charts and diagrams. Meanwhile she bounced ideas off Cookie Ingar '70 in New York City, Cathy Young '73 in Washington, D. C. and a Pittsburgh nucleus of Sherry Landsman Steiner '70, Laurie Berman '73, Nancy Hirsch '73 and Dr. Jerry Wenneker.

Now comes the anticlimactic revelation — yes, we have a summer theatre program.

The College has agreed to let us use the new theatre and to help with start-up funds. Dr. Wenneker, the Director of the Theatre, is faculty overseer for the project. Three plays will make up the season which is scheduled to begin around the third week in June. Each play will run for three consecutive weekends.

Most of us were in a tizzy of disbelief. But then we were hit by the hard reality of just how much work this enterprise is going to entail. Like any red-blooded Chatham alum we screamed for help. Vicki Falco '71, already based in Chatham's admissions office, will handle box office reservations. Donna Beiswenger Riggs '67 says she'll lend a technical hand. Letters have been sent to Susie Farr '69, Lisa Thompson '71 and Betsy Jackson '70. Jake (Connie Jacobson '72) has designed the logo pictured here and CAST refers to Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre, first season.

I mention all these people so you'll get the idea that it's an alumnae team effort. (Don't worry, there will be male actors.) But it's not a Cinderella story by a long shot. There's a catch. (That means brace yourself for the out-we-need-your-help-pitch.)

We do need your help. First, if you're in town you can come to see the plays. We'll keep you posted as to the dates. Second, you can help us out of the financial red by making a donation. Checks should be made payable to Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre. Of course, all contributions can be chalked off your income taxes. This does not take the place of your obligation to the annual Alumnae Fund. Please join in making the Summer Theatre a successful alumnae venture.

By way of conclusion, the French have a delightful little expression, "Cherchez la femme." Roughly translated it means, "Look for the woman." In this case, the Chatham woman in the Summer Theatre.

Peter Brook, one of the directors for the Royal Shakespeare Company in England, proclaimed, "I can take an empty space and call it a bare stage." Well, Chatham has taken an empty space and built a theatre. It is known as the Chatham College Theatre and is in its own building connected to the Jennie King Mellon Library.

This sumptuous space is a modified thrust stage, which in layman terms means it sticks out a little bit. At the proscenium it measures 30 feet across, 40 feet deep and about 17 feet high. The stage floor conceals three trap doors. Roomy side wings for storage flank each side of the stage. The grand piano, for instance, is tucked away back there.

Spectators sit in 285 comfy, cushioned, day-glo red seats arranged continental style with all horizontal — no vertical — aisleways. Anyone who has contorted to the white chairs in the studio will rejoice at the new-found leg room. Carpeting is a muted reddish-orange. (This description doesn't do it justice, it really looks quite charming.)

Lighting is all tip-top equipment — no tin can lights here. House lights ease gently to illumination on a dimmer. The lighting booth claims a spanking new sound system as well as facilities to operate a film projector.

Backstage harbors three dressing rooms, complete with sink, toilet and make-up mirrors.

But that's enough of that. You'll probably never see the dressing rooms, lighting booths or even the trap doors. What counts is that all of these make up the totality known prosaically as 'theatre'. And this theatre has a myriad of uses. Concerts, lectures, classes and guest performances also are slotted in there. Actress Viveca Lindfors presented her hit off-Broadway show "I am a Woman" for three nights in March to a full house each night.

The Drama Department does have a histrionic foothold, though. Dr. Jerome S. Wenneker staged a revue in November and since then several tutorials have made their debut. Dr. Jack H. Neeson is scheduled to direct an original musical this May. Of course, the motley Chatham alumnae will be producing there starting June 21.

A bare stage doesn't stay bare for long, does it, Mr. Brook?

Philosophy And Feminism In The Androgynous Revolution

BY NANCY JAY CRUMBINE
Assistant Professor of Philosophy

I have dreams . . . day dreams. I indulge them, I suppose, more than most. They are dreams born of the present, yet permeated with visions of the past and ideals for the future. Whether it is the grandeur of the past or the decadence of the present which so compels me toward this dreaming, I do not know; but sure it is that I continue my indulgences, indeed, foster and nurture these visions. As I fill them in with detail and search out new ways of articulating them, I find that, for unknown reasons, the visions of the future and the nostalgia for the past seem ever closer; indeed I find my dreams to be of returns, even, I shudder to say it, of repetitions.

Clearly the past can never be repeated, if we mean by the past some static "thing." If, however, we understand history as fluid, as the river of Heraclitus in which every new wading meets different waters, and if we extend that meaning to include the fact that every new regard for history, every retelling, tells a different tale, then we might well say that I long for historical repetition, where this means necessarily repetition with change.

I dream of a return to the river of civilization but with a novel approach to the shore and its invitations, to the new waters which present themselves on this return, and to the new personality who enters here. Repetition here means a return to the same river in recognition of responsibility toward its new waters.

The river to which I refer is as it has always been: humanity, life, energy, nature, civilization. In some sense we have indeed the same limits and underpinnings, the same restrictions of language, death, and ourselves, which we have always had. We are poised on no different shore of reality than were any revolutionaries before us. What is new is the water into which we step, and the "we" who risk it.

There is evidence, in this decade, of a return to a view of culture long forgotten, a view which is an over-view, a re-viewing. We are beginning to take culture seriously as something in itself, requiring our care, our nurturing, and perhaps, at points, our gentle destruction. In this return to a concern for culture as a whole (a concern which has not been apparent since the ancient Greeks), it is already evident that the waters have changed and that they are colored with new shapes and hopes. In particular I speak of the shape of feminism, the hopes of an androgynous culture, and the feminists and philosophers who are now viewing the culture in its newness and promise. I write of my dream, of the hopes for a cultural revolution in which androgyny is a primary goal and feminism and philosophy play significant roles in bringing this dream about.

CULTURE

Culture is a word meant to connote the realm of customs, traditions, perceptual structures, language, and visual make-up of a people. Culture is all of that which underlies and grounds our activities and thoughts. It is the realm of perceptions and values which are passed on from one generation to the next. The substance of this realm is most easily communicated through myth. Indeed, we mean by the word "myth" precisely this: the reflection and articulation of culture. The growth and sustenance of a particular culture might well be described as circular, in that the concerns of humanity are articulated in myth, while myth, in turn, precipitates and sustains the concerns of a given humanity.

At the beginning of our Western Culture stood a primary concern: physical survival, bringing with it the priority to preserve the species through procreation. The consequence of this was, naturally enough, the assigning of the uppermost significance to biological distinctions of gender. The primary focus on procreation, that of assuring the survival of the species, was then reflected in fertility myths and an exaggerated status of the masculine, the sperm having been understood as the sole source of life. As late as Aristotle there was still no concept of the egg, and the womb was thought to be merely a place in which the sperm grew. Survival meant procreation, meant sperm, meant male . . . Read: Patriarchy.

This difficult term, "patriarchy," must be understood if it is to have any meaning at all, as a mythology, a framework which supports and controls the entire culture. It is not merely a belief but a structure of unconscious assumptions and perceptual limitations which influence activity and thought. When I suggest that the need for physical survival developed into patriarchy, I mean to suggest that it took on proportions of immense consequence, no longer merely in the realm of survival itself, but in all realms of the culture which are supported and sustained by mythology. No less a thinker than Aristotle used biological analogies, structures, and value-laden gender differentiations in his metaphysical and ethical landscapes. Not only did he not question the primordial significance granted to gender and procreation, but he forever employed this framework in attempting cosmic descriptions.

Mythology must always reflect primal concerns, and at the beginning of our culture, the primary concern was fertility and gender provided not only the substance of particular myths and rites, but, through the gradual development of a mythology which reflected this concern, it became the form of every perception for even the freest thinker of the age. From the mythology of fertility (masculinity) proceeded the ordering of Western Culture evident on all levels from Aristotle's masculine ethics to the divisions of labor, sex role differentiation, and down to the very capacity for self-awareness. The myths, once established, sustained the survival of the culture by continually re-enforcing the primary values and means of achieving them. Established as a direct outgrowth of primitive biological beliefs, mythology took on an identity of its own and independence of its own, passing on to generations, values, priorities, and fears of the ancestors. And this has continued to occur whether or not these priorities and fears have been relevant to the changing relationship of man to nature and truth.

Without mythology, without this passage of values from one generation to the next, the human being is an impoverished present, having no history, no continuity of insight, no community. Through myth humanity is preserved, enabled to stand supported, and freed to grow within the necessary limits of its culture. Yet, this reverence for myth must be handled with the greatest of care, for the structure of values can, as easily as not, dictate the realms of our perceptual ability to such an extent that we are no longer working for the survival to which we are committed.

We are faced today with precisely this situation. While our myths were founded on, and dictate to us, a concern for physical survival, we are finding to our horror that it is a far different sort of survival that is in question. The over-riding concern of our culture is no longer maximum procreation, but rather the quality of that life which is already abundantly present. Our concern has clearly shifted from the realm of sheer physical well-being and procreation to psychological and spiritual survival; and we stand now with a need for a new focus, as yet only beginning to be reflected in myth. Although the psycho-spiritual quality of life has always been of concern (especially to the leisure class), it has never before been a question of survival per se.

Yet today we see the struggle for sanity reflected everywhere about us. Our daily battle is one of preservation in a world which, while protecting us from the physical threats of nature, is threatening us on all sides with mental deprivation and spiritual starvation. We are now no more protected from the ravages of the psyche than was primitive man protected from the physical threats of nature. And just as man could have perished long ago but for his structuring of values geared to biological procreation, so, likewise, is our survival in danger if we cannot structure our values and myths to reflect our present needs.

Since a shift of primary concern necessitates a shift in mythology, I foresee a new mythology wherein fertility is replaced by a psychological and spiritual humanism. And one among the many changes in basic structure which has and will come from the shift of humanity's primary concern is, I venture to say, the elimination of the sex-role dichotomy. This distinction, which was so important in the old mythology of procreation, has become a significant and obvious barrier to psychospiritual survival of individual men and women and to the culture as a whole. Indeed, this seems so obvious, that where survival now means preservation of the human spirit, freedom from sexual roles must be one of the first steps. Where biological concerns no longer dominate, androgyny must and will become an understatement for what will be a true obliteration of sexually based moral, political, and perceptual distinctions.

ANDROGYNY

Androgyny means "of both sexes," a condition under which sex roles are not strictly assigned. It means being free from the decapitating limit of dictates to be only half human. It means taking seriously the concept of freedom itself whereby we would no longer be limited to a partial vision, to an either/or response; whereby we would no longer be limited to one half of the possible modes of acting and doing. Androgyny means the freedom to be human, where human now is redefined as a fullness of possibilities for both genders, never before realized.

A culture reflecting this condition of psychic freedom would imply, firstly, a culture in which individuals are free to be human to their fullest capacities regardless of anatomical make-up. Secondly, an androgynous culture would be one in which not only individuals, but institutions, groups, and communities, are likewise free to utilize and create within the norms and virtues of both the "masculine" and "feminine" elements (as they are now called) — a culture in which the social structures are imbued and guided not by merely half of the human potential. Thirdly, this culture would be one in which the arts, philosophy, and other self-conscious reflections of human nature and the cosmos (other roads of mythological expression) are free of sexual morality and sexual politics — free to view the human and the cosmic as each exist, without the imposed structures of an anatomically-based mythology. Indeed, an androgynous culture means a culture in which the very terms "masculine" and "feminine" are meaningless.

FEMINISM

Among the many indications that humanity has shifted its primal vulnerability from the physical to the psychic, and that this need is beginning to be reflected in culture, is the rise of interest in those things which are thought to influence and determine personality and the self. Physical security is a pre-requisite for this interest, because it assumes the protection of community in its focus on the individual's internal needs. Even more indicative than this concern for the psychological, however, is the recent emergence of a new communal sensibility directed almost solely to psychic rather than physical protection. Today this sensibility is most clearly evident in our own consciousness-raising groups and in the vast spirit of sisterhood in general. The feminist movement is the first expansive community movement aiming at the present day primary concern. For this reason, feminism has the potential for leadership in a new mythology which can save us from a culture which has, thus far, failed to recognize its changing vulnerability.

To explain this, I wish to mention two strengths of feminism which point to the movement's role in bringing about the androgynous culture which I envision. The first strength of feminism which harbors the hopes of a truly cultural revolution is quite simply the self-awareness which is the movement's fundamental aim. From the most casual discussions among the most traditional of women, to the total commitment of the radical lesbians, we see a concern for questions of humanness and freedom, questions of roles, socialization, and culture. Never before has so vast and so heterogeneous a group raised these questions together. Although the answers are as diverse as the individuals concerned, it is the questioning itself which is significant, for it is in the questioning that possibility is explored.

Because of their oppressed social status, women have had to gain self-awareness on their own. They have had to explore roles and limits and find ways to overcome their oppression. With this exploration has come change on many levels, not the least of which has been a new and genuine openness to stepping beyond the traditionally "feminine" into the realm of what I have called androgyny: the realm of full humanity. It seems that feminism (concerned as it is with psychic and spiritual survival) leads in one way or another to a view of nature which will eventually be understood as androgynous. Speculative as this may sound, I am convinced that with the questions raised and the future finally open, the human being will be revealed in her/his fullest potential as a whole, androgynous being.

The second strength I see in feminism lies within the separatism of the movement (by which I mean every exclusively female activity), from the partial separatism of women's colleges and businesses to the more profound separatism of the lesbian feminists. To whatever extent, and on whatever level, individual women find separatism a viable life style, their dedication to other women must be understood as an essential step toward realizing women's potential.

Given the definition of androgyny as "male" and "female," it seems clear that we need both "masculine" and "feminine" components functioning within the culture. Up to now our myths, and subsequent values, have been created and governed by primarily "masculine" forces, and it is no mystery to any of us what actualized "male" potential means. If we are now to expand our understanding of the human, the "feminine" potential must be brought forward and nourished. If androgyny is to be possible, we must discover what potential lies within the "other half;" and this must be explored on all levels from that of the individual to that of the culture as a whole. Without the authentic rise of women in independence, their potential will remain unknown, and a claimed androgyny will be but an extension of patriarchy. In order truly to realize the possibilities of women who are no longer defined within the mythology of patriarchy, separatism is not only an aid, but a necessary foundation for such realization. For here genuinely independent strength and value can first be understood. Here, within a community of women — any community of women — can power be first realized and believed. Here among ourselves we have learned, and continue to learn, that freedom which is frightening yet desired, threatening yet supporting. Androgyny can become a realizable dream only with the rise of women in community with each other, their identity conceived without patriarchal trappings, conceived in the freedom offered between women.

PHILOSOPHY

I am speaking of a cultural revolution which is already underway in the feminist movement. This revolution, however, is likewise grounded in a humanism which has always been with us, however obscured, in those activities of thought and art which have attempted to transcend cultural determinations. When I speak of returning through revolution, I mean finding the seeds of our androgynous hopes in the flickers of humanism which have escaped moral and sexual prejudices. It is here that I see philosophy playing an extraordinary role in our development. Although philosophers themselves are by no means free of the temporality, the activity of philosophy itself is one in which a thinker is engaged in inquiry which is apart and beyond, which concerns unconcretized possibility. The concerns of wisdom have, as a rule, focused on precisely that which transcends culture. So although philosophers have been in some way part of patriarchy, philosophy (the love of wisdom) itself has not. This delicate relationship between culture and philosophy provides a unique position for inquiry, and we can thus understand not only the value of studying the philosophy of the past, but the value of pursuing it in this transitional period between two vastly different cultures.

Our present culture began in large measure with the Greeks, their mythology and rationality providing form and content from which we have been nourished these past 2,000 years. The dream of which I have spoken is of the next 2,000 years, perhaps only possible with the arrival of a philosopher on the level of Plato who will attempt a vision of the whole which Plato attempted, but with the contemporary concerns of humanity guiding her/his wisdom. We need a philosopher who can provide us with the necessary support, structure, and mythology, one who can articulate a cosmic and metaphysical faith which can sustain and maintain the growth of a new culture. I envision a new age of philosophy, one parallel to the Greeks', in which wholeness is again the goal, and wherein we are given the subtleties, complexities, genius, and power of a philosophy on the level of the Platonic dialogues.

For the origins of our new culture, there must be not only a mass movement toward freedom, but also evidence of a return to the river of civilized reason and dialogue. Reverence from the realms of nature and divinity, inseparable, a return to the humanism of the Greeks, is required. This humanism now no longer reads "male-ism" but will be understood as a true and complete "androgyny."

With the insights of past philosophers, and the innovations of the "existential" philosophers of the present, we have a revolution already underway within the intellectual leadership which influences culture indirectly but decisively. With feminism and other liberation groups, we have revolution already underway within the mass of humanity which is culture itself. These two vastly different sorts of revolution are intimately interwoven and can no more do without each other than can culture survive without change. And our culture can no more survive without change than can philosophers exist without visions... though I indulge them, I suppose, more than most.

Alumnae Use of Employment Credentials from the Career Planning Office

The credentials folder you compiled as a student at Chatham has limited usefulness. Employers are far more interested in your recent experience and in the references of colleagues and supervisors than in your academic work and teachers' evaluations. Although these folders are kept in the Career Planning Office for five years after graduation, you should seriously consider whether the documents in them are appropriate to your job search before asking the CPO to send them to a prospective employer. A well-written resume is far more effective than the credentials, and many books on resume writing are available.

Guidelines for Use of Employment Credentials-

Beginning September, 1974 the Career Planning Office will charge a fee of $2.50 for each set of credentials sent to prospective employers or to graduate schools. (Credentials will not be sent to employment agencies.) This action has been necessitated by the continuing increase in the cost of preparing and mailing credentials and the increased use of the service. To minimize the cost to you and to the Career Planning Office, the following guidelines have been established.

1. The $2.50 fee includes updating credentials.
2. Alumnae planning to use the service should notify the Career Planning Office by letter at least one month in advance to allow time to update the file. Telephone requests will not be accepted. Your name, including maiden name, must be typed or printed.
3. Credentials consist of the following:
 - a. Data sheet — the personal information form used to identify the applicant. Individual resumes will not be substituted.
 - b. Course listing — the record of your academic background. This list is not a substitute for the official college transcript required by some employers. Transcripts must be obtained by you from the Registrar's Office.
 - c. References — a maximum of six. With the request to mail copies you should indicate the references to be sent. It is your responsibility to have references sent to the CPO.
4. Alumnae should be certain that an employer wishes to receive credentials. You will be billed for this service if the request comes from the employer.
5. Alumnae requesting credentials to be sent should include the $2.50 fee for each set to be sent.
6. Credentials will be destroyed when five years have elapsed.

Let's Care About Corrections

BY EILEEN RADEN KOBRIN '65

"What's a nice girl like you doing in a place like this? Why should you care what happens to this bunch of criminals?"

All too often, this is what I have heard over the past few years when I have gone to inspect a jail or children's detention facility. And the person asking the question is usually a warden, a sheriff, a guard, a matron. What these people are really asking is, "What is a nice, white, well-educated, upper-middle class, suburban girl doing meddling around in my jail? Why don't you go home and let us professionals deal with these criminals? We know how to handle them."

Do you know that there are several different types of jails, or correctional facilities? Let's look at them. First, there is the local lock-up. This can be anything from a set of leg irons mounted to a floor or wall to a number of comfortable holding cells in a municipal police station. Persons may be brought here for questioning or until a formal arrest is made. From this point, they are transferred to a county jail (if an adult) or to a juvenile detention facility (if they are under 16 to 18 years of age, depending upon the laws of the state).

The county jail (sometimes referred to as a local jail) is generally a holding place for persons charged with either criminal or civil crimes and who are unable to post bail as a guarantee that they will appear in court on certain specified days. If a person can post his bail or find a bail bondsman to do it for him (by paying part of it himself) he is released and is free to be "on the street" until his appearance in court is required. Some persons actually do serve out their sentences in county jails, but these are sentences which are set at less than one year. At least 95% of persons confined in a county jail are untried — that is, they have not been adjudicated as guilty of anything. They are in the county jail because they are too poor to post bail.

A juvenile is also sent to a holding facility. His is either called a detention center, a children's shelter, or some other fancy name. It is a children's jail. Here, a child is held temporarily until the juvenile court judge decides what to do with him. Here there is no question of bail, but if his parents can convince the judge that they will be responsible for him until his court appearance is required, he will probably be released to their custody. If the parents say that they cannot control him, that he constantly disobeys, that he won't go to school, he will undoubtedly remain in the holding facility.

Eventually, some type of court appearance is held. The accused is either found innocent and released, or found guilty and sentenced. The sentence may be suspended, the guilty person may be placed on probation, or the sentence may be incarceration. If a person is found guilty of a state or federal offense, he will probably be incarcerated in the State Training School (juveniles), State Reformatory, or State or Federal Prison.

It is much better to be sentenced to a Federal Prison. Conditions, facilities, services, and staff at a federal institution are the best of any correctional program in the United States. It seems that the more serious the crime committed (a Federal offense) the better the treatment one receives. While the county jails and children's shelters are crowded with thousands of misdemeanants and untried persons, they are by far the worst of all correctional facilities in our country.

Let us go back now and look at just what kind of people we find in jail. Linda is 27 years old. Her husband is holding down two jobs to pay his past debts. Linda gets very lonely being constantly at home with a two-year-old and EILEEN RADEN KOBRIN graduated from Chatham College in 1965 and received a master's in Rehabilitation Counseling from Temple University in 1970. She is currently Chairman of the Board, Prison Service Committee of Southern New Jersey and Adjunct Faculty Member at Camden County College, Department of Sociology and Law Enforcement. She is married and has a two-year old child.

three-year-old, and a husband who is never there. She runs away. She is in the county jail as an unfit mother and for child abandonment. She has been waiting for a hearing for months.

Sally is 18. She has been a drug addict since 15 and a prostitute since she was 12. She was first sexually used by her father (an alcoholic) who sold her to get money for booze. She was arrested for soliciting and has been waiting for her court hearing for 5 months.

Michael is 7. He was arrested for carrying a gun. He is in need of supervision. He is in a juvenile detention facility and is awaiting a court placement. He has been confined 2 months.

Eugene is 43. He is in the state prison for the third time. This time his charge is breaking and entering. He is a "hardened criminal." He will be eligible for parole in 4 years.

William is 15. He ran away from home three times because his father beats him. He is slightly retarded. He lived in a Goodwill Box in a shopping center parking lot for 3 months before being picked up for vagrancy and being in need of supervision. He has been waiting for a foster home for 6 months.

Lois is 25. She is in jail for shoplifting. She is unmarried and on welfare. She has 3 children. She wanted a new Easter outfit for her little girl. She is serving a 90-day sentence and her three children have been placed in three different foster homes.

Not a particularly pretty picture, but generally a realistic view of whom you would find in jail. These are the dregs of society. They are always poor. These are people who come from backgrounds where there are so many problems to deal with in just existing that they are unable to cope at any age.

Now for the question: Why Should I Care? I have no connection with any of these people. Why try to make me feel responsible for these criminals? There are many reasons why we should care. One of these is purely humanitarian. Why should Linda have to run away from home in order to find some companionship and some needed mental health services? If she could have had someone to share her feelings with, she might not have felt so desperate. And why is a 7-year-old in jail for carrying a gun? Where did he get it to begin with? And what is so terrible about wanting your child to look pretty for Easter? Should Lois need to hoplift or is there another way to dress her children?

No, I am not condoning the actions of these people, but I am trying to look beyond the individual criminal acts. Somewhere along the way, something could have been done to save most of these people the horrible experience of being in jail.

Another reason why we should be concerned with these people is that 95% of them will eventually get out of jail. When they do, they will be more hostile, more desperate, and more skilled in the ways of crime. They will be walking on our streets, driving on our highways, and eating in the same McDonald's restaurant as we use. If we act toward them with such inhumane treatment as they get now, how can we expect them to be "cured" or "rehabilitated" when they are released?

A third reason why we should care is financial. It costs us $3000 to $5000 a year to keep one person in a state prison. And that figure is higher in a federal prison. This does not include the cost of supporting this person's family and the loss of tax dollars from the wages he is not earning while he is confined. We pay for salaries for all correctional and court staff and for building maintenance. And all this money comes from our taxes.

Not all correctional officials are typical "Blue Meanies."

They have their problems too. First of all, they usually lack enough money to hire good personnel. This means that the guards, matrons, wardens, etc. are usually poorly trained for the important job of human reclamation. The average county jail guard earns between $6000 and $7000 annually. Many of them receive supplemental income from welfare and also need to buy food stamps in order to feed their families. If we offered higher salaries, we would attract more qualified persons to the job. Lack of money for the institution also means that there will be poor food and very few services to provide to inmates of the institution. This can lead to boredom, unrest, resentment, and eventual rioting.

No correctional institution can choose its inmates. The courts decide who goes to jail and the warden must find a place for each person who is sent to him. I have been called by a warden in more than one situation to see what I could do to get someone out of his jail who didn't belong there. In one instance we were able to get a suicidal prisoner to a mental health facility. This woman had been arrested for attempting suicide. In another case we had to get the legal services office to work out a release for a woman eight and a half months pregnant who was in jail for driving without a license. She was being kept in the county jail for 80 days because she could not pay the $400 fine. If we had been unable to secure her release, her baby would have been born in jail and turned over to the state, even though she was married and her husband wanted the child.

And let us not overlook the obvious fact that politicians do not want to spend money on jails and prisons when a new park or highway will bring more votes. That is why the local jails are far more lacking in services than the Federal prisons.

Today there appears to be some degree of public interest in the field of law enforcement. This may be due to what appears to be spiralling crime rates in our cities, widespread government corruption, the poisoning of our youth by narcotics and alcohol, or public outrage at our unsuccessful criminal justice system. Whatever the reasons, ordinary citizens must become involved in making necessary changes in the system. There are a variety of ways to do this. Volunteer your services to study the problems in your community and then put your findings into action. All phases of the system need help — courts, probation, parole, foster parents, county jails, children's jails, schools, and other community groups.

Make an appointment and talk with a juvenile or municipal court judge in your community. Question your county's Chief Probation Officer or Supervising Parole Officer. It only takes two or three interested people to start a meaningful program in order to begin reforming our current system. Do not begin with the attitude that you must tear down everything and rebuild from scratch. You will get much better cooperation if you have an organized plan for dealing with one item at a time. Do not attempt to undertake more than you can realistically expect to handle.

Your citizens' group can take definite steps to improve things in your community. Here are some suggestions. Encourage qualified people to take jobs in your correctional system. Interest competent lawyers in becoming public prosecutors and public defenders. Try to set up a program for victims of crime. Take homeless children into your home. Establish drug and alcohol treatment programs — particularly for youth. Tutor children in your local schools. Send your jail guards and police officers to school for more training in human services. But above all, believe in the right of every individual to have self worth and self respect.

Bits and Pieces

Dr. Norman W. Chmura, the Provost of the College for the past four years, has requested that he be allowed to return to his first love: classroom teaching. In recognition of his decision to return to the classroom, the Trustees of the College have named him the Mary Helen Marks Professor of Biology for a term of three years. Mrs. Doreen E. Boyce, presently Dean of Studies and Associate Professor of Economics, has been named to succeed Dr. Chmura as Provost of the College, effective next August. The new Provost will continue to teach two courses in each academic year.

The two informal non-credit courses offered last fall by Chatham were so well received that the College offered five similar courses which began in April. Frank Lackner, Professor of Psychology at Chatham, taught two courses: "Understanding Abnormal Behavior" and "Understanding People — Psychological Principles of Human Behavior." "Exploring Modern Art" was taught by William Sterling and Jerry Caplan, Associate Professors of Art at Chatham. Stephen Borsody, Professor of History, Chatham, taught "Everything You Always Wanted to Know about Russia and the Soviet Union." The fifth course, "Intelligent and Profitable Investing," was conducted by John R. Farrish, investment advisor, C. S. McKee & Co.

Laleh (Mary Nell) Bakhtiar '60 and her husband Nader Ardalan of Tehran, Iran were on campus in February to present personally to the College a copy of their new co-authored book, "The Sense of Unity." This book is handsomely illustrated and is the first work of its kind to examine the architecture of Persia as a manifestation of Islamic tradition and demonstrate the synthesis of traditional Persian thought and form. Laleh continued her studies in Iran after graduating from Chatham as a history major. Her husband is design partner of his own architectural firm in Tehran and is associate professor in the Department of Architecture of Tehran University.

One of the most popular and successful ventures of the Admissions Department during the current academic year has been the inauguration of prospective student "live-ins." So far this year six live-ins have been attended by about 120 students representing 12 states ranging from Maine through Michigan. The live-in is a 24-hour in-depth visit to the campus beginning on Sunday afternoon and ending Monday afternoon. During their stay prospective students tour the campus, have dinner with faculty, staff and current students (often in faculty homes) on Sunday evenings, meet in informal discussion groups and on Mondays they visit classes and meet with Jody Johns of the Career Planning Office to discuss future goals. Somehow they even find time to swim, bowl, play pool and just chat with current students. It has been a known fact that students who visit the campus are more likely to enroll than those who do not. The help is most important in spreading this word to high school juniors and seniors and in sending their names to the Admissions Office. An interesting note to this program is that a majority of the high school students who participated in the live-ins have submitted applications and were admitted under the Early Decision Plan.

Faye Atkinson McCune reports that she and Charles are enjoying life in their small community. They have given their car to their daughter as neither Faye nor Charles can drive now. She sends best regards to all.

Lucile Atkinson Baker regrets that she cannot send in any real news but she has fond memories of C.W. days and still retains great interest in all her college friends.

Christine Cameron Bryan was in Pittsburgh for a short visit with her sister Betty Frank '15 but was unable to get around to do other visiting. Her old time affection for her 1913 classmates is as warm as ever and she expresses pleasure at the thought that we can still be united in heart.

Her jaunts to the South Pacific and Europe in 1973 were punctuated by a long period of idleness for Helen Craig Culley. Now she has bought an apartment in a retirement residence and after May 1 will be at the new address.

Emma Geiselhart Osterloh did not try to go on any vacation after the exertion of moving so her children came to visit. It was cheerful news when her eye doctor for the first time in years reported improvement in her left eye. She sent her love to all.

A nice note from Jeanne Gray Orcutt says she has no news worth reporting. She feels she is slowing up and I am sure she has lots of company when it comes to that. She sends lots of love and mentions the good times we all used to have together.

Louise Fletcher is again in Sarasota for the winter. She reported that Esther Rosenbloom Buka's son, Donald Buka, had the lead in a play in Sarasota last fall and Louise had an enjoyable conversation with him. Lois Hinckley '31 is still proving a good friend to Louise and entertained her both Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Grace Wilson reports herself a regular "Flat-shutee" now; says she hasn't been to New York for so long she would feel like a tourist. Unfortunately arthritis prevents Grace from doing all she would like to do.

From Martha Young McKeon comes word that her family is well, busy and happy and Martha says they look after her well. She has made friends in the group with whom she is living and they enjoy bridge games and symphony concerts together.

Our sixtieth anniversary was marked by the attendance of Laila Clark Ament and yours truly at the alumnae luncheon in June. As it happened that was the last meal to be served in the Woodland Hall dining room. Laila and I meet at Decade Club meetings and have occasional chats by phone so we keep in touch. As I am writing this I am looking forward to flying down to Florida in a few days where I have been invited to visit by Spanish friends, two sisters, who are spending the winter in DeLand.

Mary Ruth Jeffery send her best wishes to everyone. She is looking forward to a late winter trip to Hawaii hoping to escape some of the wintry blasts.

Mary Estep Starr enjoys the activities of her three teenage grandchildren, of college and high school age. She had a pleasant winter vacation in Nassau. She is grateful for good friends and so are we all.

Olga Losa and Betty Cameron Frank each report nothing out of the ordinary but send greetings.

DEATH

Louise Frazier Byrum died of a heart attack in September 1973

Martha Crandall Noyes and Charles have escaped from the accumulations of 50 years and outdoor cares of property and are at ease in an apartment near wooded hills, with an outlook over the city of Butler. Young Martha is first cellist in the Erie Philharmonic Orchestra. They went to Yale for Charles' 60th reunion and are now glad to stay put.

Mona Crytzer Nagel sends greetings to all from Pittsburgh. She also journeys to Florida and to Stone Harbor, N. J.

Martha Dunbar Say, Pauline McCaw Patterson and Louise Reinecke Thorne also send greetings from their homes where they do good works and enjoy their offspring, including Louise's 13 grandchildren.

Edna Evans Peterson wrote from her apartment near Greensburg, Pa., where she cares for her sister and enjoys some young relatives. She herself has impaired eyesight.

Despite an injured heart, Ruth Gokey Walters keeps in close touch with her children and 13 grandchildren plus a few great grandchildren. Her summers still are spent near Lake Chautauqua.

Elizabeth McClelland Crawford and Helen Pardee Nichol attend College events and report on developments. They attended the Open House in the fall and admired the new Library and the Mellon dining hall. They learned that our gift of $1,130 at reunion time will now be invested in redwood and concrete benches to be placed in the newly-created Forum. Helen's children celebrated her 80th birthday with a dinner party with all her grandchildren plus college friends and others totalling 100 guests.

Dorothy Stoeber Markell and George suffered a great loss when Tommy, aged 22, their only grandson, was killed in an automobile accident. We are all saddened by this tragedy.

Your secretary lives now in one of 224 individual cottages in a retirement village on an old farm, near to Kennett Square and also to her old home. The land adjoins a part of Longwood Gardens. She is near friends and young relations and is constantly meeting new neighbors.

The sympathy of the class goes out to Gladys Sullivan Peters, whose husband died in October.

Helen Treloar McGarrity is carrying on as usual, but admits to being a Senior Citizen, and isn't she in good company! Home, church and grandchildren occupy the time of Mary Reed Reeves.

Lois Farr Hamilton enjoys the casual, easy living of Arizona, and "to give purpose to my days, I keep up my volunteer work with the Tucson Red Cross Blood Center. Four of my grandsons are in college, and another and two granddaughters in high school." Edith Pew and Stella Espy again took a theater trip to New York together.

Mabel Shaffer has added another service to her busy schedule, making artificial flower arrangements for the hospital Gift Shop. She also has been doing paintings by request, twelve in the past year and orders waiting.

California life agrees with Edith Monsaker Schumacher and her husband they have had a rather active year, especially enjoying having a daughter and family with them for a month.

Florence Fast McIntyre visited her girls in Texas and Arkansas, and keeps as busy as she wants to be. So do Ella Martin and Ada Lou Andrews Day.

Marcella Collier Desjardins writes, "the family is indeed fortunate, being well and prosperous. Norm and I are at the Surf Club in Pompano Beach until April. Last spring we had an exciting trip to Greece, Turkey, etc., though all our luggage was lost for nine days, rather a nightmare. Summer at our cottage in northern Michigan."

Elizabeth Murphy Walter suffered a broken hip, but with an artificial replacement is walking again. I, too, have found a stainless steel and plastic ball and socket a vast improvement over an arthritic hip joint.

Betty Sprowl Spragg spent the summer and fall in Wyoming with her elder son. One grandson will graduate from the University of Wyoming this year and another is a junior there.

Marcella Geary and Lucile Long Haseltine send greetings, and wish they were as agile stair climbers as they used to be when late for an eight-thirty class!

Freshman Memories....

A FIFTIETH REUNION POEM

by Marjorie Patterson Kaiser '23

What plans for success, for fulfillment and fame,
What roseate dreams as we Freshmen became,
But the faculty suddenly brought us to earth,
And of problems and study there was never a dearth.
Doctor Lawson maintained too much work would destroy
The delight of our learning, which we should enjoy.
He promised good times in his class in Room A,
Where we studied the Bible in a most modern way.

For Miss Beebe we wrote compositions and rhymes,
And slaved on mathematics for hours at a time,
As we of Miss Bennet's sharp tongue were afraid.
While sweet to her birds, she would oft us upbraid.
"There is naught to be done if excuse is 'I can't,' Admit that you didn't," Letitia would rant.
Since lights went out promptly at fifteen past ten,
We rarely could finish our lessons by then.

Miss Craig taught Art History, and Earl Wild and Mae Instructed piano and organ each day.
Mabel Rockwell inspired us like thrushes to sing,
And at concerts with Tech, we the welkin made ring.
For Grace Williams we harmonized sweet lullabies,
While our history was taught by Miss Lillian Wye.
Spoken English we had with Miss Kerst and Miss Paull,
Who directed our plays on the stage of Berry Hall.

In middies and bloomers to gym we repaired,
For Miss Gifford some dazzling athletic feats dared.
With Luella Meloy, Social Service pioneered,
And her students in Settlement work volunteered.
In chapel John Atchison lectured each week,
And often of movie stars' high fees would speak.
"While each year I beg money," he said bitterly,
"To improve education and pay faculty."

The front row in French class we sought to avoid,
As with Victor Cortina recordings we toyed.
Our rooms were inspected by Miss Green on fourth floor,
Who Greek taught Leola and Peg what is more.
If we were too sleepy to rise with the bell,
A roommate or friend would sneak toast and not tell.
We all carried fountain pens, bottled ink, too,
Except Ginny Stevenson, who this would not do.

On our morals the faculty checked night and day,
Recommended behavior so natives could say,
"P.C.W. students are ladies always,
Whose parents, genteel, did them properly raise.
They don't smoke, they don't drink, their hair they don't bob,
They attend church and chapel and never play hob."
In East Liberty, Saturday nights were taboo,
"That's something," warned Florence, "best people don't do."

Madame de Neuville once at dinner was dressed
In a red satin gown which exposed her white breast.
"Tut, tut," said the Dean, "such example don't dare
To set for the innocent girls in our care."
Sometimes we signed out for a theater date,
But instead danced at Fort Pitt Hotel until late.
To Reymer's and Joyce's for sundaes we went,
To McCreery's for frog legs when Dad a check sent.

Miss Ely peeped out from her blinds one midnight
And beheld an alarming and most shocking sight.
A Senior was kissing her fiance goodnight,
Never doubting that such was her natural right.
In robe and curl papers Edith reached the front door.
Where she sputtered and raved and inside Frannie bore.
"You've disgraced Woodland Hall and the whole Senior C With conduct and manners indubitably crass."

"Girls, you must wear your corsets when dancing, be sure
So your beau won't excited get, and act like a boor," Admonished Miss Root in an ominous tone.
Had she had experience? 'Twas never known.
We stole sugar from Berry Hall kitchen at night
To make fudge in the tower without any light.
But the worst thing we did, so Miss Winters has said,
Was put carbon disulphide in Micky Gray's bed.

Our mothers sent Janet the names of young men,
Permitted to call at our dorm until ten,
Or approved as escort for a Saturday date,
Which should end at midnight, (we dared not be late),
As Miranda or Hilda, waiting up, locked the door.
Woe betide the poor girl who was not in before.
It was best to avoid by Old John being seen,
As campusing followed when he told the Dean.

Once quite late when Miss Brownlee was taking a bath.
Ann and Dot hid her nightgown, and roused Janet's wrath
For dinner required to dress, never be late,
And sit at the table while faculty ate.
Were expected to walk for an hour each day,
And sign on our honor this truth, yea or nay.
A Berry Hall parlor date never was fun
When Miss Brownlee sat there to get news reading done.

To her office Miss Root called "Pud" Titzell and said,
"Obscene books, I am shocked to know, are being read.
Collect them for me, please, as soon as you can."
That night most took light cuts to read the books banned.
Oh, those were the days, my dear college classmates.
Do you think that the Chatham girls now on dance dates
Enjoy them as much as we our Schenley Prom,
When the college made students go in taxies to and from?

Returning to Berry Hall after the dance,
We had just five minutes our beaus to romance,
With faculty glaring at us all the while,
Which our dates did embarrass, annoy and then rile.
The times are now changed, but I'm sure that the lasses
Enrolled in the college's present day classes,
Are no worse, and much better, perhaps they may be Than we of P.C.W.'s Class twenty-three.

onze plaque attached, which stated it was given by the class of 1923 in honor of Miss Vanda Kerst, our culty advisor. The lectern has been placed in the new theater. Three of the class saw the lectern at Open House held at the College in October. It is white oak, and is equipped with a light, microphone rack, controls for two slide projectors, illuminated pointer, and light dimmer switch. It is very lovely, and I wish all of you could see it. The class sent a birthday card to Miss Kerst on her 97th birthday in October. (ED: The College received word from Airhaven Home that Miss Kerst died in December, 1973.)

Sincere sympathy of the class is sent to Martha McKibben Tatnall, whose husband passed away in August, and to Mary McKinney Wilson, who lost her mother in September.

Harriet Barker Thompson was most successful in making our fiftieth reunion such a memorable and happy occasion, and we owe her many thanks for the time and effort she took to help us enjoy the event. Harriet saw Martha McKibben Tatnall and reported she is well and very active. For the REORDER Harriet said, "In retrospect the success of our 50th Reunion was due to the individual interest and loyalty of the seventeen who came to enjoy it. Illness or poor health were the reasons for those unable to come. Till we meet again in 1978."

Harriette Bowers Sime is very busy with work pertaining to the College Board Examinations. She travels frequently, including trips to Russia. Illness in Russia, and continuing after her return to New York, prevented her from keeping her reservation for our reunion. The last word from her was, "Off to Russia, and then moving to Connecticut."

Jean Bumgarner is active in club work, having served as president of her Garden Club, the Civic Club, and Tarentum Book Club.

Alice Margaret Foster Bergstrom reporting from Florida, said they are enjoying their retirement, including reading, golf, bridge, and group activities.

From Martha Leslie Stewart, a note in the summer saying she was very disappointed in not being able to attend the reunion. I did not hear from her recently.

Elizabeth Mason Richards wrote that her husband is still very active in his business. Their children and grandchildren live near.

Julia Matthews Kirk and her husband enjoyed a trip to Hawaii. Judy said the times to get in touch with friends and classmates always seem to be the wrong times for them. She sent best wishes to all.

Marion Moffet Barnes said that their big event was a trip to the South Pacific. Over the holidays they visited with the grandchildren, and are now in Georgia for a rest.

Marie Ohle Craig is busy singing in the church choir, editing a monthly newsletter, and raising two sons.

Marjorie Patterson Kaiser and her husband (who on leave this year from the university), are going to Arizona for three months. She is busy with her violin music, playing in a small theater orchestra for our Mikado performances, solos and teaching.

Edith Wilds Clark has sold her home, and is building in Sun City, (near Phoenix) Arizona. She was to leave Pittsburgh in January.

Lyda Hamilton, Eliza Peterson, and Dorothy McCormick Means all said they had no startling news to report, but had enjoyed the reunion very much. They sent greetings. Dorothy and I went to Open House at Chatham in October, and had a personally conducted red carpet tour of the theater, and a "close up" view and explanation of the lectern by two of the librarians, Mary Wilson and I had a phone visit. She moved to another apartment (#H), but in the same building. The extra work started her thrills again and she could not keep her reunion reservation.

My younger son and I had an enjoyable air and motor-coach trip in August to the West Coast. My thanks to all of you for sending your letters and news for the Recorder.

Amelia Aiello Cangi, Helen Ahlers Patton, Louise Graham Brown, and Mary Shane Muir all send greetings to the class, and write that they are enjoying (selves and/or husbands) the pleasures of retirement and indulging their past yearnings for doing their favorite things, as is yours truly.

Catherine Dashiell Roberts is recovering from surgery in her middle ear with the help of the Florida sun and surf.

Sally Hunter Drake has been keeping an eye on her blood pressure so that she can hopefully take a cruise with her son in the near future.

Word has come from Frances Rolfe that she had a lovely visit with friends in Italy in 1969, and a trip through Spain in 1972 — lucky gal.

The deepest sympathy of the class goes out to Elizabeth Stevenson McQuiston in the recent death of her husband, Bryce.

DEATHS

Mae Jones Proesel, March 13, 1973 in DuBois, Pa. To her family we wish to extend our sympathy; also to Sally Davies St. Clair, whose husband, Floyd, died November 4, 1973, and to Virginia Glandon Hackett whose husband, Thad, died December 31, 1973.

Ruth Allman Jones and her sister still keep "open house" for their families and provide "built-in" baby sitters. Her main outside interest is "Common Cause."

Marybelle Carroll Emerick is now recovering from the heart attack a year ago. Her "highlight of 1973" was being able last July to attend with Burley her 50th H.S. Class reunion. She is looking forward to our 50th year reunion, having enjoyed the 45th especially seeing Marian Connelly Bowers and Emelyn Taylor Rohlfis whom she had not seen for so long.

Before Christmas Sally Davies St. Clair wrote that Eleanor Boal Thomas had been to lunch and to spend the afternoon; that Eleanor's mother would be 98 on Christmas Day. Sally has 2 children and 6 grandchildren.

Unfortunately Ella English Daub broke her leg January 5 while staying at the College Club in Pittsburgh. She had to spend a week in Shadyside Hospital and was glad to be back in Florida, "walker, wheel chair and all." She will be laid up for a long time. She missed the bridge club meeting at Isabel Epley's to boot.

Harriet Evans' interests are still Meals on Wheels, animals, books and reading. During a visit by Dulcina Marshall Walker they spent most of it sightseeing in Albuquerque.

Sallie Everson Bright who was hospitalized (when my card reached her) with pneumonia, says it is nasty stuff and avoid it! She is still at work on a history of the organization from which she is officially retired and her husband is "busy as a bee" designing country houses in Dutchess County, N. Y., where they have a house, dividing their time between it and a New York City apartment. They have 2 children and 4 grandchildren.

Ruth Green West "cannot understand why women want to be liberated to take on additional chores." Her days are full with church and garden club activities, painting, teaching piano, writing poetry, and household tasks. She also has 2 children and 4 grandchildren.

Virginia Glandon Hackett says she is "all right, just bone-tired;" has wonderful friends in Santa Barbara, and "a great deal to do."

Louise Hazen Melicke is continuing her travels in Guatemala and Costa Rica; living and painting on Sarasota Bay; going to Pennsylvania for the summers; visiting children and grandchildren in Denver and Indiana; and expressed interest in the REORDER to see what the other gals are doing.

Pegg Johnston McClintock says she sounds like a broken record — enjoying every day, playing golf and bridge. Her "big event" was returning to Pittsburgh to attend her H. S. class reunion.

Dulcina Marshall Walker says for her "retirement is a mixed blessing." She is looking forward to a trip to the Orient in June. She spoke of Miss Vanda Kerst's death recently. Miss Kerst could always make her (Dulcina) "sit up straight and pay attention." She has 2 daughters and 4 grandchildren.

Kay McPeake Arnold is enjoying her new home and desert gardening in Tucson. She and Marybelle had a good visit last October when the Arnolds were back in Pennsylvania on business.

Cass McRoberts Gunia is "stunned to find I have done nothing world-shaking or news-worthy" in 1973 and sends greetings to fellow classmates.

Nancy Jane Montgomery says "nothing new or exciting" to write about. She went to Minnesota last July and spent a month in Chautauqua.

Anne Negley Brunot has been waiting for some "world-shattering news" to write but had to give up on that as nothing happened. Nor has she been to any "exotic places." Nevertheless life has been pleasant except on the question of gasoline. She and Ray Stevenson Bair were conferring on some "strategy" to get to bridge club in Pittsburgh. (This was back in February.)

Inez Wallis recalls being in Florida February and March 1973 and talking with Kay Lowe Hall and lunching with Ella English Daub. In the summer she was in Toronto for Quasta International Convention; then "tripping around Canada." She "had a jaunt to Chautauqua" and a "fine autumn trip across Pennsylvania." She expects to see Mildred Douthitt Luttrupp in March in Sarasota and remarks, "As you see I keep busy."

Grace Wilson suggests to the 'Florida gals' that they might have a 'mini-reunion' at some central point. Her recent trip to Alaska was enjoyable and her next venture will be to the South Pacific, especially New Zealand and Australia.

At Christmas (from those not mentioned above) a long note from Irene Stout Carskadon who wishes she "could help solve the world problems." She visits her daughter nearby whose husband is a "hard-working doctor." There are 4 grandsons of college or high school age. A short note from Suzanne Nobel Nauman says she has had an uneventful year. And a one-liner from Marian Connelly Bowers.

Your secretary has no wise (or otherwise) comments to make "at this point in time." I would like to add a word of appreciation to Margaret Woodridge Fifer '29 for her poem in the 1973 Spring REORDER, entitled The Day Nothing Happened. And my gratitude to all of you who responded to my request for news.

Traveling and retirement plans seem to occupy the 1929'ers most of all. Among the travelers are Dorothy Appleby Musser and her husband who are making a return trip to Hawaii and Tahiti as well as some of the outer unexplored islands of French Oceania. Lucretia Bond Wagner, Ellen Conner Kilgore and Mary DeMotte Sutphen all have been enjoying Florida. Elsie Duncan Harrison and her husband went to Europe after his retirement. Enid Fruth McFarland is still enjoying the Arizona sunshine.
